
A. Oh, there were quite a number of people present. Claude Smith and his wife were the host and hostess; and Bob [3992] Camozzi and his wife were there; Nat Honig was there. I can't recall all the people who were there.

(Testimony of Ruth E. Givan.)

Q. Can you recall any others?

A. I don't know that I can. I think probably Ellen McGrath was there.

Q. Any others?

A. Oh, there were several other people whose names I don't know.

Q. Was your husband there?

A. No; my husband was not there.

Q. Did you say it was a social affair?

A. It was.

Q. What kind?

A. It was just a gathering. There was a speaker there and we had refreshments afterward, and sat and talked.

Q. Who was the speaker?

A. I don't recall the speaker's name.

Q. What did he speak about?

A. He was talking about Communism in Russia, about the Red Army, I think.

Q. Was it announced that he would speak?

A. Yes. That is why I went. I went to hear him speak.

Q. And do you remember anything else he spoke about other than Communism in Russia?

A. Well, they talked about the Consumers Union, which I [3993] was somewhat interested in, and somebody had some copies of it for sale and we talked about that. There was a general discussion about how you could buy things for less money if you observed the Consumers Union carefully.

(Testimony of Ruth E. Givan.)

Q. Was there more than one speaker?

A. No. There was only the one speaker that I recall.

Q. Who was the Chairman of the meeting?

A. Why, I am not sure that there was a chairman. It seemed to me like Mr. Smith had something to do with it.

Q. Did he call the meeting to order?

A. I don't know that it really was called to order, or he sort of led the discussion.

Q. Did he speak?

A. He didn't make a speech, no. This other man made a speech.

Q. Did Mr. Smith make an announcement, did he say anything before the speaker spoke?

A. I think he introduced the speaker. I really don't recall very definitely what transpired.

Q. Can you recall what he said substantially?

A. No, I can't recall anything in particular that was said, excepting a discussion, as I said, of the Red Army. I just remember that.

Q. How many people were present?

A. How many people?

Q. Yes. [3994]

A. There might have been eight or ten people present. It was a small living room and we were sitting around on extra chairs.

Q. Did the speaker stand up?

(Testimony of Ruth E. Givan.)

A. Yes. He stood up while he was talking.

Q. I don't know whether I asked you this or not. Was there more than one speaker?

A. Only one that I recall.

Q. Did Mr. Honig speak?

A. We had a kind of a general friendly discussion and he chatted with us and discussed, but he didn't stand on his feet and make a speech that I recall.

Q. You were discussing Communism?

A. We were all talking about Communism.

Q. Did you attend any other meeting of the Communist Party?

A. No, I never attended any other meeting.

Q. Did you participate in any Communist demonstrations there in Seattle?

A. Demonstration?

Q. Parades or demonstrations?

A. Never.

Q. Do you know Dr. John Lake?

A. No, I don't.

Q. You know, do you not, that Mr. Camozzi is being [3995] investigated by the Immigration and Naturalization Service as an Alien Communist?

A. No, I never heard that.

Q. What? A. I have never heard that.

Q. You never heard that? A. No.

Presiding Inspector: That is what she said.

Mr. Del Guercio: I didn't hear her. I repeated it only because I wasn't sure that I heard it.

(Testimony of Ruth E. Givan.)

Presiding Inspector: Very well. Speak a little louder.

The Witness: Thank you, Judge.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, who served the subpoena on you, Mrs. Givan?

A. A man who said his name was Schwandt—S-c-h-w-a-n-d-t I think—U. S. Marshal.

Q. Did you have any discussion or any conversation with him at the time he served the subpoena on you? A. Again, please?

Q. Did you have any conversation with him at the time he served the subpoena on you?

A. Yes, I had a brief conversation with him.

Q. Did you tell him of this incident that you are now testifying about?

A. Yes. I told him that I thought I was being called to [3996] testify to what I had seen across the street.

Q. And did you tell him that you saw two detectives arrest one of the men who was a witness for the Government?

A. Yes. I think I told him something approximately in those words.

Q. And did he, Mr. Schwandt, ask you how you knew that these people were detectives?

A. I don't recall definitely. He probably did ask me that.

Q. And didn't you reply that you didn't know?

A. I told him I was personally acquainted with one of them and that she was a detective and always had been a detective for Frederick & Nelson.

Q. And didn't you also tell this Mr. Schwandt that these so-called detectives might have just stopped Honig and talked to him?

A. I did not say that.

Q. And didn't you thereafter say that you had a notion not to say anything about the incident?

A. I told him that I regretted having to mention it; that it had forced me to make the trip under subpoena.

Q. Did you tell him that because you weren't sure of what had occurred, or what you saw, that you had a notion not to say anything about it?

A. Oh, no, I didn't say that. I was perfectly positive about what I saw, but I regretted what I saw had forced me to [3997] make this trip.

Q. As a matter of fact, didn't you say to persons in the Post-Intelligencer Building that you were glad of the opportunity to come down to San Francisco?

A. No, I did not. I regretted having to leave Seattle at this time.

Q. Didn't you express yourself in this way, in the presence of a number of people: That you were glad of the opportunity to take a trip to San Francisco at Bridges' expense?

A. I did not say any such thing.

Q. Did you ever have any quarrels with Mr. Honig?

A. What?

(Testimony of Ruth E. Givan.)

Q. Did you ever have any quarrels with Mr. Honig? A. No; no personal quarrel.

Q. Are you friendly with him?

A. I am acquainted with him, yes; I speak to him.

Q. How many persons have you talked to concerning Mr. Honig's reputation for truth and veracity?

A. It would be hard to give you an exact figure. I could estimate it.

Q. Will you do that?

A. Oh, I have discussed it with 15 or 20 people.

Q. All employees in the Post-Intelligencer Building? A. Right.

Q. Did you discuss it with anyone outside the Post- [3998] Intelligencer Building?

A. Yes; with Mr. Margolis, the attorney.

Q. Anyone else besides anyone connected with the Bridges defense?

A. Well, with Mrs. Amo—A-m-o—the house detective at Frederick & Nelson.

Q. You say you discussed this with about 15 or 20 people in the Post-Intelligencer Building. Will you give me the names of those people, please?

A. Well, I will try. That is just a guess, because we have talked about it so much and among so many of us, but I will endeavor to give you as many as I can name. Miss Lee——

Q. (Interposing) These are all employees of the Post-Intelligencer, in the Post-Intelligencer Building?

(Testimony of Ruth E. Givan.)

A. Right. Miss Hoover, Miss Bernstein, Mrs. Stark, Miss Bertucci, Mr. Thomas——

Q. (Interposing): Mr.? A. Yes.

Q. Thomas?

A. Right. Mr. Erickson, Cliff Noble, Marie Pearl, Frances Webster.

Q. I didn't get the first name.

A. Frances Webster.

Q. Is that a woman? A. Yes. [3999]

Q. Anyone else?

A. Oh, I think that is all I can recall definitely. We have discussed this in groups and singly around the building, so it has been a matter of general conversation.

Q. Is that since Mr. Honig has appeared here to testify in the Bridges case?

A. No; since we saw him picked up.

Q. Since you saw him picked up, this incident that you testified about?

A. Since the incident I described.

Q. Did you talk about Mr. Honig's reputation prior to that time?

A. Oh, we didn't have any particular reason to discuss it. I don't know that we did.

Q. Did you have any recollection of having discussed Mr. Honig's reputation for truth and veracity before the incident that you speak of?

A. We discussed him as a potential Executive Secretary for the Guild. He was running for that position.

Q. I am not asking you for a conversation. I am asking if you discussed it. Will you answer that "Yes" or "No"?

A. He was discussed; yes.

Q. You say he was discussed. My expression was, did you discuss it with anyone, Mr. Honig's reputation for truth and veracity, prior to the incident that you have testified to [4000] here today?

Presiding Inspector: Your question should be: Did you discuss his truth and veracity as well as his reputation?

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: The fact—what his character was in that respect?

A. I can't give a "yes" or "no" answer. I may say that his character and his reputation were discussed. We did not specifically discuss his truth and veracity.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did Mr. Honig ever hold any office in the Newspaper Guild?

A. Yes. He was a member of the Executive Board.

Q. He was a member of the Executive Board for how long a period?

A. Oh, I think about two years.

Q. And what years were they?

A. I should think probably 1939 and 1940. I am not sure about that.

Q. Is he a present member of the Executive Board of the Newspaper Guild in Seattle?

A. No.

(Testimony of Ruth E. Givan.)

Q. When did his services as such terminate?

A. He wasn't reelected last time.

Q. And do you know when that was, you said——

[4001]

A. (Interposing): January.

Q. 1940 or——

A. (Interposing): January 1941.

Q. Then up to January 1941 he was on the Executive Board of the Newspaper Guild of which you were and are a member?

A. That is right. I wouldn't be sure that he was a member during 1940. I know that he was a member previously during the time that I was a member. I haven't paid so much attention to who were the members there last year. [4002]

Q. Well, you say he was on the Executive Board for pretty nearly two years?

A. On the Executive Board during the time I was a member of the Executive Board. I am not sure whether he was a member in 1940 or not. I know he is not at the present time.

Q. That he is not at the presnet time?

A. Yes.

Q. What was his reputation for truth and veracity during the time that he was on the Executive Board? A. Oh, it was never Discussed.

Q. You served on the Board with him?

A. Right.

Q. You attended social functions with Mr. Honig? A. No.

(Testimony of Ruth E. Givan.)

Q. At no time? A. No.

Q. Then, this meeting that you described at Mr. Smith house was not a social affair, was it?

A. That was a social affair. Generally, that sort of an open meeting was a social affair.

Q. Mr. Honig was there?

A. He was present.

Q. How long have you been a member of the Consumers' Council?

A. Of what organization? [4003]

Q. Are you a member of the Consumers' Council? A. I am not a member.

Q. Are you a member of the Washington Commonwealth Federation? A. No.

Q. Have you ever been a member?

A. No.

Q. Of that organization? A. No.

Q. Did you ever attend meetings of that organization?

A. I went to one of their conventions once.

Q. One of their conventions. When was that?

A. Oh, they held it over in the Music Hall Theatre about 1937, I think.

Q. In what capacity did you go to their convention?

A. In no capacity; as an auditor, listener.

Q. Any other meetings of that organization?

A. No.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is all, your Honor.

(Testimony of Ruth E. Givan.)

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mrs. Givan, you mentioned in answer to one of Mr. Del Guercio's questions that you had a conversation with Mrs. Amo, the store detective?

A. That is right. [4004]

Q. When did that conversation take place with relation to the actual incident that you have described?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I object to that. I didn't go over the conversations.

Presiding Inspector: No, but you asked about it, so we will find out when it took place.

A. About one hour afterwards.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Where did it take place?

A. In Frederick & Nelson's department store.

Q. Who was present?

A. Mrs. Amo and myself.

Q. At that time did Mrs.—withdraw that.

Mrs. Amo, is she one of the store detectives?

A. She is.

Q. At that time did Mrs. Amo tell you that Mr.——

Mr. Myron (Interposing): I object to any private conversation.

Presiding Inspector: I think——

Mr. Gladstein (Interposing): I withdraw that.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Will you tell us in substance what that conversation was only in so far as it concerns Mr. Honig.

(Testimony of Ruth E. Givan.)

Mr. Myron: I object to that.

Presiding Inspector: I will sustain the objection.

Mr. Gladstein: Then I make an offer to prove that if the——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): You will have to [4005] produce Mrs. Amo; you will have to produce Mrs. Amo.

Mr. Gladstein: We will?

Presiding Inspector: Yes. You can't show what Mrs. Amo said as original proof when she is within your power to produce here.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, you see, for example, Mr. Del Guercio raised the question as to what Mrs. Givan has told——

Mr. Myron (Interposing): No, there is no such testimony.

Mr. Gladstein: I haven't finished yet, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Go on, Mr. Gladstein. Don't interrupt. Let's find out what Mr. Gladstein has to say. Go on.

Mr. Gladstein: Mr. Del Guercio raised the question, which, at least, had an inference, an implication, when he asked Mrs. Givan whether she hadn't told this marshal, who was serving a subpoena on her, that the two detectives had seized Mr. Honig, and I wanted it very clear in the record that one of the detectives was this woman, Mrs. Amo, and, I think, we are entitled to the other name if Mrs. Givan knows it and also to the balance of testimony in order to bring out the details which have been asked for on cross examination.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think you can have the original proof of what happened to Mr. Honig through a conversation which Mrs. Amo had with this witness. The only thing [4006] that she said, as I recall it, was that she had discussed this with Mrs. Amo, and Mrs. Amo was a detective.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: Now, what difference does it make what Mrs. Amo said?

Mr. Gladstein: Well, I think I am entitled to make an offer of proof, at any rate, so the record will be clear.

Presiding Inspector: No, I don't think so. You can call Mrs. Amo if you think it is of importance enough.

Mr. Myron: If the Court please——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): Not to affect the credibility of this witness.

Mr. Gladstein; No, I understand.

Presiding Inspector: But to prove what happened on the incident.

Mr. Gladstein: The incident itself but not the conversation. All right, I see, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: It would be too remote.

Mr. Gladstein: Of course, lots of hearsay has been allowed.

(Testimony of Ruth E. Givan.)

Presiding Inspector: That is true.

Mr. Del Guercio: Your Honor, I have in mind the witness before her. I didn't read into the record what that arrest report showed or make any offer of proof as to it.

Presiding Inspector: No.

Mr. Del Guercio: It is the same circumstance here. [4007]

Presiding Inspector: Not quite the same.

Mr. Del Guercio: Similar, of course.

Presiding Inspector: Merely to his credibility. This is as to a matter that you yourself brought out, Mr. Del Guercio.

Mr. Gladstein: That is correct. Not only that, on cross examination Mr. Del Guercio asked Mrs. Givan as to who the people were she talked with, and so on, concerning Mr. Honig.

Presiding Inspector: It was to bring out how her recollection was so firm, that is all.

Mr. Gladstein: Does that mean we are not entitled to go into the actual conversations that Mrs. Givan had with the people whose names she has given in response to Mr. Del Guercio?

Presiding Inspector: That is an entirely different matter.

Mr. Gladstein: I see.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, you were asked by Mr. Del Guercio

(Testimony of Ruth E. Givan.)

whether a Mr. Camozzi, I think, had been accused of being a Communist. I think you said he had been by Mr. Honig. A. That is right.

Q. Will you state whether or not Mr. Honig had made similar accusations against other members of the Newspaper Guild, and if so, what proportion of that membership?

A. I would say he has probably accused about half the Guild of being Communists.

Q. Now, you were asked if you had ever been discharged [4008] from the Post-Intelligencer and you said "Yes, in 1937." What were the circumstances under which you were discharged?

A. I was discharged, as the Labor Board later found, for organizing the Newspaper Guild in my department, and I was reinstated under a Labor Board order and paid my back pay for the two years that I was away.

Q. Do you know what the official title of that case is, Mrs. Givan?

A. Well, it is National Labor Relations Board case against the Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

Q. And was there a finding by the Labor Board that your discharge had been discriminatory for union activities?

Mr. Myron: Is this leading, or are you going to ask the witness if she has knowledge of——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): I don't see that is very material. You have got in all that is material in this case.

(Testimony of Ruth E. Givan.)

Mr. Gladstein: They brought out the fact she was discharged.

Mr. Myron: Well, now, it is all right to ask questions.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, but you got into the case the cause of the discharge, that there was an investigation of it, and that she was reinstated and paid the back pay. I don't see anything more that you could possibly want.

Mr. Gladstein: All right, that is sufficient.

[4009]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. And since that order and reinstatement have you remained continuously employed by the Post-Intelligencer?

A. I have been employed there continuously ever since I was reinstated to my position.

Q. What are your politics, Mrs. Givan?

A. I am——

Q. (Interposing) What is your political affiliation?

A. Oh, I am a member of the Democratic Party.

Mr. Del Guercio: Your Honor, I object to that and move that the answer be stricken.

Presiding Inspector: Well, you asked her if she was a member of the Socialist Party and I think I will take it, therefore.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. And are you a member of any other organization besides the Newspaper Guild and the Democratic Party?

(Testimony of Ruth E. Givan.)

A. Yes; I am a member of one other organization, the D.A.R.

Q. The Daughters of the American Revolution?

A. Right.

Q. Mrs. Givan, have you ever met Harry Bridges? A. Yes, I met him once.

Q. What was the occasion?

A. Well, I met him in Mr. Boettiger's office on the [4010] occasion of negotiating a labor contract for the Post-Intelligencer. Mr. Bridges came in to assist in getting a good contract.

Q. Who is Mr. Boettiger, please?

A. Mr. Boettiger is President Roosevelt's son-in-law, the publisher of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

Q. Was the occasion on which you met Mr. Bridges one merely of attempting to negotiate a union contract? A. That is right.

Q. You have had no other personal contact with Mr. Bridges of any kind?

A. Never had any. I think I met him once at a Guild banquet. I think he was a speaker once several years ago, but I can't remember.

Mr. Gladstein: No further questions, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Anything further?

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes, if your Honor please. Counsel has brought out a new line of inquiry here.

(Testimony of Ruth E. Givan.)

Recross Examination

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. What reasons did the Post-Intelligencer give for discharging you in 1937?

A. Their reasons which they gave were inefficiency.

Q. And did they also give a a reason that you were "a busy-body"?

A. That was never mentioned.

Q. Now, did you testify before the National Labor [4011] Relations Board?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Under oath? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Didn't you admit that certain statements made by you under oath before the National Labor Relations Board were not true?

Mr. Gladstein: One moment. I think I will object to that question for this reason: If counsel is referring to anything in writing I think the witness is entitled to confrontation with the specific statement which she is supposed to have made.

Mr. Del Guercio: I am asking the question.

Presiding Inspector: He wants to show that there was an admission of false testimony.

Mr. Gladstein: You mean at some subsequent time?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Gladstein: I see.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it, I think.

A. I can't recall any.

(Testimony of Ruth E. Givan.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Well, do you want some time to——

A. (Interposing) No, I don't recall any time. I don't recall any time ever having been accused of having given any false testimony whatsoever.

Q. I didn't say "accused". [4012]

Will you read the question, please?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as follows: "Q. Didn't you admit that certain statements made by you under oath before the National Labor Relations Board were not true?")

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. What is your answer to that?

A. My answer is "No."

Q. Now, in answer to Mr. Gladstein's question you said that you belonged to a Democratic Club at the present time. A. (No response.)

Q. To a Democratic Club?

A. I belong to the Democratic Party.

Q. Party. Are you a member of any Democratic Club?

A. Yes, I am a member of the Democratic Precinct Committeemen's Organization in the 34th District.

Q. 34th Precinct, isn't it?

A. 34th District.

Q. In Seattle? A. Yes, right.

Q. Now, that organization is dominated by Communists, is it not?

(Testimony of Ruth E. Givan.)

A. That is the official organization of the Democratic Party and it is not dominated by Communists.

Q. Do you know of any persons who are members of that [4013] club that are members of the Communist Party? A. Not to my knowledge.

Presiding Inspector: Now, did you understand that question?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Presiding Inspector: You do not?

The Witness: The members of that club are all Democratic Precinct Committeemen elected in their Precincts. I do not know of any of them whom I know to be a Communist.

Presiding Inspector: I misunderstood the question.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you ever attend a dinner at which Mr. Bridges was present? A. A dinner?

Q. Yes.

A. There was a banquet given in the new Washington Hotel at which, as I said, I think Mr. Bridges was one of the speakers. I attended that dinner.

Q. Is that what was called a Victory Dinner in 1936? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And do you remember anyone else being present other than Mr. Bridges?

A. Mr. Boettiger, Mrs. Boettiger, practically the whole Guild were there, all of their friends around Seattle. It was [4014] a very large dinner.

Q. Did you meet Mr. Bridges there?

A. I didn't meet him; I just saw him there—I think I saw him. I don't remember for sure whether he was one of the speakers that day.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is all.

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. This 1937 Victory Banquet—withdraw that. Was it in '36 or '37, do you recall?

A. Well, that was in—it was a celebration of the original victory of the Guild in the P. I. strike, and, I believe, it was in the year of 1936.

Q. And when you say victory in that strike, what do you have reference to?

A. Well, the Guild had been on strike against the Post-Intelligencer and the paper was closed for three months, and we won the strike and succeeded in getting the Guild recognized as the union.

Mr. Gladstein: I think that is all.

Presiding Inspector: That is all.

(Witness excused.)

Presiding Inspector: Can you make any progress in the next five minutes?

Mr. Gladstein: No, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: We will recess until two o'clock. [4015]

(Whereupon, at 12:25 o'clock P. M. a recess was taken until 2:00 o'clock P. M. of the same day.) [4016]

After Recess
2:00 o'clock P. M.

Presiding Inspector: All right, Mr. Gladstein.

Mr. Gladstein: Your Honor, our next witness is Henry Schmidt.

I wish to make a statement before I put him on the stand.

On the day that Mr. Honig testified—that was April 21—in the afternoon of that day Mr. Schmidt was in the court room as a spectator. Mr. Honig pointed Mr. Schmidt out from the stand. This was on page 1473 of the transcript. I mention this simply to show that it occurred about 30 pages before the end of the day's session.

As the testimony will reveal, your Honor, Mr. Schmidt could not have anticipated that he would be mentioned and that he would have occasion not to be present in court on that occasion.

Since that day, on Tuesday of this week, I believe, Mr. Schmidt, close to the noon recess, came to this building for the purpose of seeing Mr. Bridges and, believing that the session had ended that morning because there was no line of people outside, he came into the court room and a guard told him to sit down. And he did sit down during the testimony of Mr. Graham for five or ten minutes.

I make those statements frankly because we want it under- [4017] stood that no effort has been made to violate the rule that your Honor has laid down.

Mr. Del Guercio: Was that the only occasion that he was in the court room?

Mr. Gladstein: Have there been any other occasions?

Mr. Schmidt: Prior to Tuesday I was here three times, I believe.

Mr. Gladstein: When?

Mr. Schmidt: I can't remember the dates.

Mr. Gladstein: Seated in the court room?

Mr. Schmidt: Yes.

Mr. Gladstein: Do you recall who you heard testify—was it during the testimony of any witness who mentioned you, outside of Mr. Honig?

Mr. Schmidt: No.

Mr. Del Guercio: Weren't you sitting there at counsel's table several days?

Mr. Schmidt: Yes; three times I believe—four times all together.

Mr. Del Guercio: Didn't you come in on a pass from counsel, at the request of counsel?

Mr. Gladstein: He came in as a member of the Longshoremen's Union. We have extended the same courtesy to other members of that union and to its Negotiating Committee.

Mr. Myron: Who are going to be witnesses?

[4018]

Presiding Inspector: We had better take the testimony. We won't exclude this witness. Have him take the stand. He can explain this on the witness stand if anyone deems it material, and it may be.

Raise your right hand.

called as a witness on behalf of the Alien, having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Presiding Inspector: Give your name and address to the reporter.

The Witness: My name is Henry Schmidt, S-c-h-m-i-d-t, 1156 Sanchez Street.

Direct Examination

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. That is in San Francisco, is it, Mr. Schmidt?

A. That is right.

Q. How long have you lived in San Francisco?

A. Almost 24 years.

Q. Are you a man of family?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What does your family consist of?

A. Wife and one daughter.

Q. And you reside with them, do you, at the address you have just given? A. That is right.

Q. What is your occupation? [4019]

A. I am an official of the Longshoremen's Union.

Q. Of what city? A. San Francisco.

Q. Before becoming an official of the longshoremen's Union did you engage in the work of longshoring? A. That is right.

Q. When did you begin doing longshore work?

A. Either '27 or '28.

Q. 1927? A. That is right.

Q. Or 1928? A. Thereabouts.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. And in what city did you begin to do longshore work? A. San Francisco.

Q. Have you since that day been continuously employed as—not continuously—but been doing the work of a longshoreman except for those periods when you were an officer of the Union?

A. That is correct.

Q. You know Mr. Harry Bridges?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember when you first met him?

A. My best recollection is 1933.

Q. Do you remember where you met him, where generally, that is?

A. This wasn't exactly a meeting between us. It was— [4020] the first time that I recollect seeing him was at a meeting of the Longshoremen's Union in the Building Trades Temple where he took the floor and made some remarks.

Q. Did you become personally acquainted with him after that meeting?

A. Yes; my recollection is that after the meeting was over I went to him and we discussed some of the matters that were discussed during the meeting.

Q. Now, before obtaining the position with the San Francisco Longshoremen's Union that you have just mentioned had you previously held other Union offices?

A. Yes. I have held several positions in the Union of the Longshoremen, such as Executive Board member and so forth.

Q. When did you hold your first Union office?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. I was elected as a member to the Executive Committee of the Longshoremen's Union in San Francisco in 1933, about August or September of that year.

Q. For how long did you serve in that capacity?

A. Well, that would be a term of twelve months.

Q. And when you say you were elected will you please state by whom?

A. By the membership of the men that—by the membership of the Union.

Q. Which union are you referring to? [4021]

A. At that time it was known as the International Longshoremen's Association, Local 3879.

Q. Did you hold any union office or position during the 1934 Maritime Strike?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What position or positions did you hold?

A. I was a member of the local's Executive Committee. I was assigned, or, rather, elected to the Publicity Committee that functioned during that strike. I was a member of the Strike Committee and the Strike Committee elected four others and myself as delegates to the Joint Marine Strike Committee.

Q. What was the Joint Marine Strike Committee?

A. It was a body that was representative of all the striking unions in San Francisco.

Q. In that year of 1934 did you represent your Longshoremen's Union at any convention?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. Yes; in February of 1934 there was a Pacific Coast Convention of the International Longshoremen's Association—that was held in San Francisco—and I was a delegate representing the Local Union.

Q. When did you first become President of the San Francisco Longshoremen's Union?

Mr. Del Guercio: No evidence that he was President.

Mr. Gladstein: I will withdraw that.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Have you ever been President of that Union? [4022] A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you first become President of the Union? A. I believe 36 is the year, 1936.

Q. Is that the Chief Executive position of that local union? A. I would say yes.

Q. And how is election to the office obtained?

A. The method that we follow is that one must be nominated by presenting to the membership meeting a so-called nomination blank which is signed by 50 members in good standing. If the nominations are approved at a membership meeting the name of the candidate so nominated then appears on the ballot and thereupon a secret or referendum election takes place. Sometimes, we have used the ordinary paper ballot, but during recent years we use the voting machines which we rent from the City of San Francisco.

Mr. Del Guercio: I move that the last part of the answer be stricken.

Presiding Inspector: Well, I don't think it is very material. I think I will let it stand for what it is worth.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. How many longshoremen were there in the San Francisco Longshore Union in 1936 as of the time when you were elected President?

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that question.

[4023]

Presiding Inspector: Let me hear that question.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

A. I think there were in excess of 3000.

Presiding Inspector: I presume you are going to connect this up in some way?

Mr. Gladstein: That is for the purpose——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Of identification.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What was the answer, please, Mr. Schmidt?

A. I think the number was in excess of 3000.

Q. And has the membership of that Union since that date been substantially the same?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. No; there are approximately 4000 members now.

Q. For how long were you elected as President of the Union in 1936? A. Twelve months.

Q. And what was the official name of that union at that time?

A. International Longshoremen's Association 38-79.

Q. Local 38-79? A. Right.

Q. What does the "38" refer to? [4024]

A. That was the number that was given to the Local by the International Convention of the ILA, I believe; and there appeared between the number "38" and the other number "79" a dash; and the "79" indicated the Local number.

Q. Did the "38" refer to the Pacific Coast District?

A. That is right. All the locals on the Pacific Coast were known as "38" and in our case, "79", and in the case of the San Pedro Local, "81".

Q. Now, in 1936 did you hold any office or position in connection with the strike that took place in that year? A. Yes.

Q. What position or positions did you hold?

A. I was President of the Union. I was Chairman of the Local Union Strike Committee. I was a delegate representing the Local Union to the Joint Marine Strike Committee. I believe that at that time I was a member of the Pacific Coast Executive Committee and also a member of the Negotiating Committee.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. What was the Negotiating Committee?

A. The Negotiating Committee attempted to negotiate with the employers a contract.

Q. How would a person be selected for a position on the Negotiating Committee?

A. At that time I believe the method was that the Coast Executive Committee were designated by the Convention as the [4025] Negotiating Committee.

Q. How did one secure a position on the Coast Executive Committee?

A. First one had to be a delegate to the convention.

Q. A convention of the entire Pacific Coast District?

A. That is right. Then one had to be nominated in the convention, and the name of the candidate was then referred to the entire membership on the Coast.

Q. You mean there was an election?

A. There was an election held and naturally the candidate receiving the highest number of votes would be elected to the Executive Committee.

Q. Now, the convention that you mentioned was of the ILA District 38, is that correct?

A. That is right,

Q. Were such conventions held annually or semi-annually, or when? A. Annually.

Q. Then do I understand that in 1936 at a convention to which you were a delegate you were nominated to become a member of the Pacific Coast District Executive Board?

Mr. Del Guercio: Who is testifying, the attorney or the witness?

Presiding Inspector: He is repeating it. I suppose it is improper. [4026]

Mr. Gladstein: It is preliminary to the next question.

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Would that be correct?

A. To the best of my recollection, yes.

Q. And the elections that were held returned you to an office on that committee, is that correct?

A. That is right.

Q. Are these secret elections?

A. Yes. The Pacific Coast elections are secret, I believe, inasmuch as every member receives a paper ballot and he has an opportunity to step into a booth and mark it as he wishes.

Q. In a general way will you state who the people are who participate in such elections, the men who vote at these elections, who they are, and over how broad an area do they cover?

A. Well, all of the longshoremen and warehousemen, scalers, bargemen, ship clerks, who are members of our organization up and down the Pacific Coast, from the Canadian line to the Mexican border, in all the ports.

Q. And all of them participate in the elections?

A. That is right.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. And what is their total number, or what was it as of, say, 1936? [4027]

A. I can only estimate it, guess at the number; there may have been 15,000.

A. Did you hold any union office in 1937?

A. Yes. I was still President of the Union.

Q. Well, when your term expired, the one-year term, did you run for office again?

A. Yes. I ran again in the Fall of 1937 and was reelected.

Q. In that year did you hold any other Union office?

A. Yes. I was elected President of District Council No. 2 of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific.

Q. What was the Maritime Federation of the Pacific?

A. The Maritime Federation of the Pacific is an association, an amalgamation or organization of all maritime unions on the Pacific Coast.

Q. Which unions specifically are included that you can recall at the moment?

A. Well, first, there was ours, that is the then ILA, now the ILWU, the Marine Engineers, the Sailors Union——

Q. (Interposing) . That was as of 1936-1937?

A. Yes—the Masters, Mates and Pilots, the Marine Firemen, the Radio Operators, and I think that is all that comes to mind right now.

Q. Now what, if you know, was the total membership represented by the Maritime Federation?

[4028]

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. It must have been well over 50,000.

Q. You mentioned District Council No. 2. Were there several District Councils of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific?

A. Yes; there were four—one in Seattle, another in Portland, another in San Francisco and still another in San Pedro.

Q. And which was the one designated as District Council No. 2?

A. The one in San Francisco.

Q. And how did you secure your office in that Council?

A. The delegates who represented the several unions that were a part of the Council elected me.

Q. Well, did all of the unions that belonged to the Maritime Federation have the right to send delegates to each District Council?

A. Yes; they were required to send delegates.

Q. Did the delegates, upon assembling, select their own presiding officers? A. Yes.

Q. Were you elected to that position?

A. That is right.

Q. For how long did you hold it?

A. One year.

Q. Were you in that year a member of the Labor Relations [4029] Committee?

A. During the years that I was President of the Union I was not a member of the Labor Relations Committee; during the years that I was not President then I was a member of the Labor Relations Committee.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. What is the Labor Relations Committee?

A. The contract under which we are functioning has a provision which requests the parties to the contract to set up a so-called Labor Relations Committee, a representative of employers and the Union. There are in San Francisco six persons on this Committee; three of them representing the Union, three of them representing the employers, and they meet once each week to adjust any dispute that might have developed during the week between meetings.

Q. Now, I think you said that you were re-elected in 1937 as President of the Union for a one-year term. That would take you into 1938, is that correct? A. Right.

Q. When, in 1938, did your term expire?

A. In September or October.

Q. Did you run again for election for President? A. No.

Q. Was there a reason? A. Yes.

Q. What was it? [4030]

A. There is a provision in the Constitution of the Local Union which says that you can be a paid officer of the Union for two consecutive terms provided you are reelected for the second term. Upon the expiration of the second term it is compulsory to not run again for any paid office.

Q. That is at the next succeeding election?

A. Right.

Q. You don't mean to say that once you held the office of President for two terms that you can never again hold it?

A. That is not what I mean to say.

Q. Then between—withdraw that. During the year from September or October 1938 to September or October of 1939 you were not President of the Local? A. That is right.

Q. You were on the Labor Relations Committee during that period?

A. I was on the Labor Relations Committee and on the Executive Committee.

Q. Now, at the end—withdraw that. Coming now to September or October of 1939, did you again run for any office in the Union?

A. I ran for President and was elected.

Q. Was that also for a one-year term?

A. That is correct.

Q. And at the conclusion of that term in the fall of [4031] 1940 did you again stand for office?

A. I did.

Q. For which office?

A. The office of President and I was re-elected.

Q. And you now hold that position?

A. That is right.

Q. Have you held any other union positions?

A. I may have skipped some, but that is all I can remember right now.

Q. Have you held any position with Labor's Non-Partisian League?

A. Oh, yes, as a member of the State Executive Committee.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. And what, in general, is Labor's Non-Partisan League?

A. Labor's Non-Partisian League might be called a political organization that attempts to, or, rather, does interest itself in legislation and occasionally sends lobbyists to the State Capitol to look out for Labor's interests so far as legislation is concerned. [4032]

Q. Is it a national organization? A. It is.

Q. Your connection with it, was your connection one direct to the national organization or to some subdivision of it? A. State.

Q. State of California? A. Right.

Q. Have you ever held any office for or with any Industrial Union Council?

A. You mean here in San Francisco?

Q. Anywhere?

A. Oh, yes. I was Secretary of the San Francisco Industrial Union Council for a short time. That was temporarily while the regular Secretary was ill and was on vacation.

Q. What is the San Francisco Industrial Union Council?

A. It is a body that represents all of the CIO unions in San Francisco.

Q. A central body? A. That is right.

Q. It would correspond, would it, to a central labor council? A. Exactly the same.

Q. And in what period did you act as Secretary of that union council? [4033]

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. I believe it was in 1939. It was that particular year when I was not President of the union.

Q. Now, Mr. Schmidt, when you were in Court Mr. Honig was on the stand. Had you ever seen him before? A. Never.

Q. Had you ever met him in any meetings?

A. Never

Q. Had you ever attended any meetings during the 1936 and 1937 strike at which Mr. Honig was in attendance? A. Never did.

Q. Did you ever sit in any meeting with Mr. William Schneidermann?

A. Never sat in any meeting with him except that he came to a meeting of the—membership meeting of the local union on one occasion.

Q. When was that?

A. It was in 1939, I believe. Anyway, it was shortly after the so-called Russian-German non-aggression pact was signed. It developed in this manner: I think one of our union members, having read about the pact, came to the meeting with the intent to make a motion that union go on record condemning both the Hitler and the Stalin regime, and he actually did make that motion. Somebody pointed out that we should hold action in abeyance until we arranged for a debate on that particular question, and the motion to defer action carried, and the officers of the union were instructed by the membership to arrange for such a debate at the next meeting, or the one following that, and that was arranged.

The debators on the question of the Russian-German non-aggression pact were Mr. Schneidermann of the Communist Party and Mr. Paul Smith who, I believe, is—I know he is connected with the Chronicle but, I think, his capacity is managing editor.

Q. Who invited the speakers to debate?

A. I did.

Q. And how did you go about it, Mr. Schmidt?

A. I phoned them.

Q. How did you go about phoning Mr. Schneidermann? A. I looked in the telephone book.

Q. For whom?

A. I looked for the Communist Party in the telephone book.

Q. Had you ever met Mr. Schneidermann prior to the time he debated?

A. I had never met him although I had seen him.

Q. Did the two speakers actually debate the question? A. They did.

Q. Were you at the meeting? A. I was.

Q. And it was a meeting of the Longshoremen's Union, is that correct?

A. It was a meeting of the membership of the Longshore [4035] men's Union, that is right.

Q. Did you preside?

A. I did. There were a few people admitted who were not members, who had heard about this interesting matter—I guess they thought it was of interest—and they asked permission to come, so they did.

Q. In general, it was a meeting of the Longshoremen's Union and some outsiders were allowed, is that the point?

A. It was a membership meeting of the Longshoremen's Union.

Q. How large a group attended? Could you give an estimate?

A. The hall was filled. There must have been 1600 men there.

Q. What hall?

A. Eagles Hall on Golden Gate Avenue.

Q. Is that hall normally used by the Longshoremen? A. Every Monday night.

Q. Is that where you have your regular membership meetings? A. That is right.

Q. Have you ever met Mr. Schneidermann on any other occasion than on the evening that he debated with Mr. Smith? A. No.

Q. Do you know a man by the name of Richard St. Clair? [4036]

A. Well, I must admit that I know him in a sort of a way, although his name never imprinted itself on my mind until I read in the newspapers that he had been on the stand here.

Q. How did you come to know him? What was the extent of your acquaintance with him?

A. Well, I recollect that he is a waterfront

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

character that doesn't work any more and has no visible means of support. He is——

Q. (Interposing) Do you recall—excuse me.

A. He is very deaf and his conversation is certainly not very intelligent.

Presiding Inspector: Very talkative?

The Witness: That is right.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did he ever come into your office?

A. Yes, I believe he did, but I couldn't remember what he came for.

Q. Did he ever make any impression of any distinct character on you, when you say that, I mean?

A. No impression other than I thought the guy was screwy.

Mr. Myron: Well——

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. (Interposing) I mean as to his speaking to you on any particular subject?

Mr. Myron: Of course, that is objectionable.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, I suppose it is. [4037] Strike it out.

Mr. Gladstein: All right, I will withdraw it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. St. Clair testified in substance that at some time in 1935——

Mr. Myron: (Interposing) Are you quoting?

Mr. Gladstein: I am stating in substance—I am not quoting. I have a right to state it as introductory to the question I wish to ask, your Honor.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Presiding Inspector: I can't tell without hearing it.

Mr. Gladstein: All right, then, I will start the question again.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, I didn't hear the question.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. In substance Mr. St. Clair testified that sometime in 1935 he saw you, Harry Bridges, John Shoemaker, Lawrence Ross, Elmer Hanoff and either William Schneidermann or Sam Darcy—I am not sure of the record on this—meeting at 121 Haight Street.

Were you ever at a meeting of that character at 121 Haight Street?

Mr. Myron: He is apparently quoting, your Honor, from some testimony. We would like to get it very definite— —

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) You mean were those [4038] people, or a majority of them?

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Were those people at such a meeting?

A. Never at such a meeting.

Q. Were you ever at a meeting at 121 Height Street with anybody?

A. There was a large public meeting there one time which I attended but I couldn't for the life of me say what year that was.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. What kind of a meeting was it?

A. I think it was advertised that a Miss Anita Whitney would speak there. There were placecards around the town, notices in the papers, and dodgers were being thrown around the waterfront.

Q. Was this a public meeting? A. Yes.

Q. Did you go? A. I did.

Q. To what extent, if any, did you participate?

A. I participated to the extent of sitting in the chair and listening to what was being said.

Q. How many people were present?

Mr. Del Guercio: If he counted them.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, Obviously he didn't. I am simply asking for an estimate. [4039]

Presiding Inspector: No, he asked for his estimate, whether it was a small meeting or a large meeting, whether there were ten, a hundred or a thousand or what?

Mr. Gladstein: That is right, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Your best recollection.

A. Well, it seems to me the place is, perhaps, twice as large as this room and it was filled. There may have been 300 people; maybe, the capacity was 500; I don't know.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Do you remember what took place at that meeting?

A. Yes, my recollection is that this Miss Whitney made a speech.

Q. Do you remember what she spoke about?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. No. It had something to do with elections. I don't know whether it was state elections or national elections.

Q. Where in the building at 121 Height Street was that, do you recall?

A. Yes, in the basement.

Q. Did you ever attend in that building a small meeting of six or seven people or thereabouts?

A. No.

Q. Have you ever been in 121 Haight Street on any occasion other than the one that you have mentioned?

A. I was there one time when they had a New Year's celebration and I went down there to have a look at that.[4040]

Q. What kind of celebration was it?

A. A New Year's celebration where people drink and dance and make merry.

Q. Did you attend any meetings on that occasion? A. No.

Q. Do you know a man named Maurice J. Cannalonga? A. No, sir.

Q. In substance, Mr. Cannalonga testified that shortly before the 1936-1937 strike he attended certain, what he called, fraction or top fraction meetings at which he said William Schneidermann, Harry Bridges, you, Mr. Schmidt, he, and one or two others, I believe, were present. Did you attend any such meetings? A. No, sir.

Q. Have you ever been in a meeting with Mr.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Cannalonga at which any of those people named were present?

A. Will you repeat the names, again, please?

Q. Yes. Mr. Brides, Mr. Schneidermann, Mr. Cannalonga—there was one other name there.

Presiding Inspector: Do you want the reporter to read the question?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, I think I mentioned one other name. That is my recollection anyway.

Mr. Del Guercio: Is there a question that the witness may or may not have attended meetings of some of these people? [4041]

Presiding Inspector: There is an uncertainty as to whether he mentioned someone else.

Mr. Gladstein: That is right.

Presiding Inspector: I suggest that we have the question read to refresh counsel's recollection.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Mr. Gladstein: I think I have heard those same ones.

Presiding Inspector: "One or two others."

Mr. Gladstein: I don't recall that he mentioned who they were. I will take a look and see.

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead with those you have got.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Well, with those names, Mr. Schmidt, can you state whether you ever attended any such meetings with those people present?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. I did not, because I don't know Mr. Cannalonga. I have seen his pictures in the newspapers since this hearing has started. I know positively that he and I have never met.

Q. Now, Mr. Cannalonga testified in substance that in March or May of the year 1937 in a private dining room in a hotel known as the Gowman Hotel in Seattle, Washington, he said a top fraction meeting occurred at which you, Harry Bridges, Morris Rapport, Al Bristol, Harry Jackson, Eugene Dietrich, Matt Meehan, Bruce Hannon, Burt Nelson, Ernie Fox, [4042] Harry Pilcher, Ed Fisher and Laddie Houe were present.

Did you ever attend such a meeting?

A. No.

Q. To be a little more specific, Mr. Schmidt, I want to ask you this question: Mr. Cannalonga testified in substance that in the year 1936, shortly prior to the strike in that year, he attended a meeting at a private home in San Francisco, which he called a top fraction meeting, at which he said were present the following: William Schneidermann, Harry Bridges, Walter Stack, Henry Schmidt, Eugene Dietrich, Sam Telford, David Saunders, Brown, and Pyle.

Did you ever attend any such meeting?

A. I couldn't have been there because Cannalonga and I have never seen each other.

Q. You have already stated the circumstances under which you made the acquaintance of Mr.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Schneidermann. I want to ask you whether you know Walter Stack?

Mr. Del Guercio: Just a minute. May I ask what counsel is reading from whether he is reading from the transcript or photostats?

Mr. Gladstein: This is a photostat of one of the statements of Maurice Cannalonga which the Government introduced in evidence.

Mr. Del Guercio: How were photostats——

Mr. Gladstein: (Interposing) We were allowed to have photostats made. They are statements.

[4043]

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) They are in evidence.

Mr. Del Guercio: We had no notice they were making photostats of the evidence. How many were made? Who were they distributed to?

Mr. Gladstein: They weren't distributed to anybody. We asked Mr. Johnson to make photostats of Government's Exhibits 208, 209 and 210, which were the statements of Mr. Cannalonga that were read into the record by Mr. Del Guercio and introduced as evidence. Now, we are entitled certainly to make copies or photostatic copies. We asked him to make those photostats. I think we paid for them. I don't see that we have done anything wrong and we haven't distributed them to anybody.

Mr. Del Guercio: I think we are entitled to know how many copies were made and who they were distributed to.

Presiding Inspector: I suppose they could be distributed to anyone they wanted to give them to.

You would have a right to ask about that.

Mr. Del Guercio: To ask about it, certainly.

Presiding Inspector: That is all right. Go ahead. I think Mr. Del Guercio would be entitled to know.

Mr. Gladstein: All right, I have given him the answer. [4044]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. One of the men that was mentioned was Walter Stack. Do you know Walter Stack?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you first become acquainted with him?

A. I think it was in 1935 when the Maritime Federation of the Pacific held its first convention at which time we organized it in Seattle.

Q. Was Mr. Stack—excuse me.

A. (Continuing) I think he was an official of the Firemen's Union at that time, and I think he was a delegate to that convention.

Q. When you say the Firemen's Union, are you referring to the Marine Firemen's Union?

A. Yes—Marine Firemen's Union of the Pacific Coast.

Q. Do you remember whether Mr. Stack has, since you first met him, been a member of or an official of that Union?

A. I am sure that he has been a member of that particular union continuously, and he has been an official also. My recollection is that at times he was not an official.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Do you know whether he is now an official of that Union?

A. Yes; he is a patrolman for the San Francisco headquarters of the Marine Firemen.

Q. The name of Eugene Dietrich was mentioned by Mr. [4045] Cannalonga as being at this meeting. Do you know Eugene Dietrich?

A. Very well.

Q. When did you first become acquainted with him?

A. 1933 when the International Longshoremen's Association was organized in San Francisco.

Q. What is his union affiliation at the present time, if any, if you know?

A. As far as I know he is so-called International Representative of the International Longshoremen's Association. He makes his headquarters in San Francisco and pretends to represent longshoremen, but I don't know who they are. I don't think he has any.

Q. He is a representative of the A. F. of L., is that correct. A. That is right.

Q. Have you ever sat in any top fraction meetings, or Communist meeting with Mr. Dietrich?

A. I haven't been at any top fraction, or fraction meeting, or Communist meeting.

Q. With anybody? A. That is right.

Q. Sam Telford was mentioned by Mr. Cannalonga. Do you know him?

A. Yes. I remember him as a man who had something to do [4046] with the organization of the

Marine Workers Industrial Union in 1933 or 1934. with the organization of the Marine Workers Industrial Union in 1933 or 1934.

Q. Did you ever have any personal contact with him?

A. He was somewhat of a strike leader in those days, during the strike of 1934, and that group organized seamen and there was cooperation and collaboration between the striking seamen and the striking shore workers.

Q. Do you know whether Mr. Telford remained a member of that Union?

A. Well, the Union, that particular Union, went out of existence some time later so I don't know how one could remain a member of a union if it dissolved.

Q. Do you know whether he became a member of any other union?

A. I think that he, like the others, became members of the then International Seamen's Union, which was affiliated with the A. F. of L.

Q. Did you ever have any contact with Mr. Telford after the 1934 strike?

A. My best recollection is that I haven't seen him in the last five years.

Q. Dave Saunders was mentioned by Mr. Cannalonga. Did you know a man by that name?

A. Yes.

Q. What does he do, or what has he done? [4047]

A. He is a longshoreman, has been a seaman.

Q. Pardon?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. He is a longshoreman at the present time and he has been a sailor in the past.

Q. Brown, a man by the name of Brown was mentioned. Do you know a man by the name of Brown who was with the ARTA? A. Yes.

Q. What was his full name, do you know?

A. His initials are Z. R., but I still don't know what they stand for, what the "Z." stands for, nor do I know what the "R" stands for.

Q. Did he ever hold any union positions?

A. Yes; he was Secretary of District Council No. 2 of the Maritime Federation while I was president of that body.

Q. Of what union was he a member, or from what union was he a delegate?

A. He was a delegate from the ARTA, which later changed its name to ACA.

Q. And what did the designation ARTA refer to?

A. ARTA stands for American Radio Telegraphists Association.

Q. And ACA?

A. American Communications Association.

Q. Do you know a man named Pyle?

A. Yes. [4048]

Q. What is his full name?

A. Roy Pyle.

Q. And from what union does he come?

A. The same union, ACA.

Q. Was he an officer of that union?

A. I wouldn't be sure whether he was a branch agent or a President of the local union, or a Secretary.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Have you ever met Morris Rapport?

A. Who?

Q. Morris Rapport. A. No.

Q. Did you know a man by the name of Al Bristol? A. Never heard of him.

Q. Did you ever meet him?

A. If I haven't heard of him how could I meet him?

Q. Do you know a man named Harry Jackson?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you first meet him?

A. During the strike of 1934, or shortly prior to that.

Q. Do you know what position, union position, or otherwise, Mr. Jackson had at that time, if he had any?

A. He had some connection with the MWIU, the same as Sam Telford.

Q. Do you remember the circumstances under which you became acquainted with Mr. Jackson?

A. No; no recollection. [4049]

Q. Have you ever been in meetings with Mr. Jackson?

A. Well, there was an attempt by Mr. Jackson, made by Mr. Jackson to attend some meetings of the Joint Marine Strike Committee during 1934. He came there as a representative of the MWIU. I was a delegate to that body. The Strike Committee wouldn't recognize him, or whoever came with him, as delegates to the Joint Marine Strike Committee.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Is that how you became acquainted with Mr. Jackson? A. Yes.

Q. Let me see if I have this straight: You say Mr. Jackson, representing the MWIU, sought, to be seated on the Joint Strike Committee——

Mr. Myron: (Interposing) That is repetition.

Mr. Del Guercio: Also suggestive.

Mr. Gladstein: I will withdraw it.

Mr. Del Guercio: You are putting words in the witness' mouth that he hasn't testified to.

Presiding Inspector: I think you have got, it Mr. Gladstein.

Mr. Gladstein: All right. Mr. Myron says it has been covered, and then Mr. Del Guercio says I am putting words in the mouth of the witness that he didn't use.

Mr. Del Guercio: You are doing both.

Mr. Gladstein: I don't know what the record is like now.

Presiding Inspector: It is not necessarily inconsistent. [4050]

Mr. Myron: Full of speeches.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did Mr. Jackson get seated on the Strike Committee?

A. No. There was considerable argument about their being seated or not seated. Eventually the group voted not to seat him.

Q. Since 1934 do you recall ever seeing Mr. Jackson?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. It seems I saw him walking down Market Street one day about two or three years ago. I was driving and he was walking.

Q. Have you ever been in any meeting with him?

A. Other than the one that I just described, none.

Q. Other than that one, you have not?

A. None.

Q. Do you know Matt Meehan? A. Yes.

Q. Who is he?

A. At the present time he is Secretary-Treasurer of the ILWU.

Q. What do those initials stand for?

A. International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union.

Q. Will you please state briefly what the relationship is between the ILWU as of today, and the ILA as of the years when you were using that term?

A. It is exactly the same group of men who have belonged [4051] to both of those unions using first the initials ILA and today the initials are ILWU. When they were in the ILA they were members of the American Federation of Labor and since 1937, when the affiliation changed, the same men have made up the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, known as the ILWU.

Q. And the ILWU is affiliated with what national organization?

A. Affiliated with the Congress of Industrial Organization.

Q. How long have you known Matt Meehan?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. I first met him in 1933, I believe.

Q. What kind of work was Meehan doing?

A. At that time?

Q. Yes.

A. I think he was a Portland longshoreman working there on the waterfront. He came to San Francisco to either address our Executive Committee prior to the strike, or he might have come to address the Strike Committee during the strike. I don't remember that.

Q. Is that how you became acquainted with him?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you been in meetings with him since you first met him?

A. Meetings with Meehan? [4052]

Q. Yes. A. Dozens of them.

Q. What kind of meetings have they been?

A. ILWU meetings, and prior to that ILA meetings, Maritime Federation Conventions, and such.

Q. What offices, union offices, has Mr. Meehan held during this period of time since 1934 that you can think of?

A. He has been the Secretary-Treasurer for quite a number of years, five, I believe.

Q. Of the Pacific Coast District?

A. That is right.

Q. Do you know a man by the name of Laddie Hope? A. I don't know him.

Q. What is your recollection as to whether you have ever met him?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Mr. Del Guercio: He said he didn't know him, your Honor.

Mr. Gladstein: All right. I am satisfied with it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Do you know a man named——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) Unless the witness wants to change it—I don't know.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Do you know a man by the name of Ed Fisher? A. No.

Q. Do you know a man named Harry Pilcher? [4053]

A. Yes.

Q. Who is he?

A. He is a longshoreman, now a member of the Portland local, and prior to that he was a member of the Local in Everett, Washington.

Q. When did you first meet Harry Pilcher?

A. He was a delegate to the Emergency Convention held here in San Francisco in February 1934 and there I met him.

Q. From what was he a delegate?

A. He represented the Longshoremen's Union in Everett, Washington.

Q. Have you been in meetings with Harry Pilcher since you first met him?

A. Every time he would come to a convention, we would be in a convention meeting, or maybe a convention committee meeting, or caucus.

Q. What kind of caucus?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. A caucus that they usually organize at conventions in order to talk over what the particular groups intend to bring up at the next session of the convention.

Q. Do you know Ernie Fox?

A. Yes; he is a Seattle sailor.

Q. When did you first meet him?

A. I haven't the slightest idea.

Q. Do you know whether you have ever sat in any meeting [4054] with Mr. Fox?

A. I think he was a delegate to a Maritime Federation convention one time. I think it was the first convention of the Maritime Federation that we held in 1935 that he was a delegate.

Q. Have you met him on any other occasion except when he was a delegate to that convention?

A. He was a fellow who breezes up and down the Pacific Coast quite a bit and whenever he happens to be in San Francisco he usually pays me a visit and we go out and have a couple of drinks together.

Q. Do you know Burt Nelson? A. Yes.

Q. Who is he?

A. He is a Seattle longshoreman.

Q. When did you first make his acquaintance?

A. Two and one-half or three years ago.

Q. Do you remember the circumstances?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Do you know Bruce Hannon?

A. Yes.

Q. Who is he?

A. He is also a Seattle longshoreman and has been the Secretary-Treasurer of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific.

Q. Do you remember when you first met him?

[4055]

A. I believe at that particular convention where he was elected secretary; and he came there as a delegate from the Seattle longshoremen. I think that convention was held here in San Francisco.

Q. In what year was that?

A. '38, I believe.

Q. That is the year in which he was elected to that office? A. I think so; yes.

Q. Have you ever been in meetings with Mr. Hannon since you first met him?

A. Mr.—who?

Q. Hannon, Bruce Hannon.

A. Dozens of meetings with him, during conventions and so forth.

Q. Were these trade union meetings?

A. Yes.

Mr. Gladstein: Does your Honor want to take a recess while I look through this?

I might report that I have had that appointment postponed.

Presiding Inspector: So we can go right on to four o'clock?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes.

(Whereupon a short recess was taken.)

Mr. Gladstein: Are you ready, your Honor?

Presiding Inspector: Yes. [4056]

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Since the debate at the Longshoremen's Union between Mr. Paul Smith and Mr. William Schneidermann have you ever seen Mr. Schneidermann?

A. Oh, yes; at the funeral of J. B. McNamara about four or five weeks ago.

Q. Who was J. B. McNamara?

A. He was a man who was incarcerated in San Quentin Penitentiary for about thirty years and, according to newspapers he had something to do with blowing up the Times Building in Los Angeles, and I believe at that time he was an official of some trade union—I don't recall the name.

Q. And did you see Mr. Schneidermann at that funeral?

A. Yes. He was sitting in the auditorium. There were hundreds of people there. Lots of people were asking how they could find transportation to the cemetery, which happened to be in San Rafael, which is about, oh, 27 miles from San Francisco. Among others Mrs. Rena Mooney asked me if she could ride with me. I told her she could, and she did.

Q. Who is Mrs. Rena Mooney?

A. The wife of Tom Mooney.

As we were about to drive away I saw Mr. Schneidermann and a lady standing on the curb. I stopped and asked him if they wanted to ride with me; they said they wanted to ride with us so they rode with us. [4057]

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Who was the lady?

A. Mr. Schneidermann's wife.

Q. Had you ever seen her before? A. No.

Q. Now, Mr. Honig testified that during the 1936-1937 strike, and for a period of several months thereafter, meetings took place—this is in substance—generally on Sunday nights and sometimes week nights, at which he said you, among others, were present, together with a man named Elmer Hanoff. Did you ever attend any meetings with Mr. Hanoff?

A. I heard this man, Honig, make that statement as I was coming in the court room and it was on the tip of my tongue to call him a liar, but I remembered that I was in a court room.

Presiding Inspector: Don't you think it would be better if you answered the question directly?

The Witness: Repeat the question.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did you ever go to any meetings with Mr. Hanoff? A. No.

Q. Do you know Mr. Hanoff?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Do you know a woman by the name of Betty Gannett? A. I don't know her.

Q. Do you know a man named Lawrence Ross?

A. No, sir. [4058]

Q. Do you know a man named Sam Darcy?

A. I have heard of him.

Q. Have you ever met him?

A. I don't think so. [4059]

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Have you ever been in any meetings with him?

A. I recall a meeting in Dreamland Auditorium here in San Francisco at which he made a speech, but it is so long ago. It might be seven years ago; it might be eight years ago; it might be six years ago.

Q. What kind of a meeting was it?

A. Oh, I think it was what you would call a political rally.

Mr. Gladstein: You may cross examine.

Presiding Inspector: All right, Mr. Del Guercio, the witness is yours, to cross examine.

Cross Examination

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you get orders from anyone to appear here to testify? A. Did I get orders?

Q. Yes. A. No.

Q. Did you get orders from anybody from the Communist Party to appear here to testify?

A. No.

Q. Did you get orders from Morris Rapport to appear here to testify? A. No.

Q. Did you get orders from Harry Bridges?

A. No.

Q. You say no one gave you any orders? [4060]

A. No one gave me any orders.

Q. Now, Mr. Schmidt, the purpose of this hearing is to determine whether or not Harry Bridges is a member of the Communist Party. Testimony has been given to the effect that you, among others, are members of the Communist Party, and that as members of the Communist Party you sat in Comunist Party meetings with Harry Bridges.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

The question that I am about to ask you is material to the issue in this case. It is: Are you a member of the Communist Party?

A. I am not.

Mr. Gladstein: One moment before the question is answered, and I have no objection to the question. I move that all of the statement of counsel be stricken up to the word "are", and the question "Are you a member—"

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I think it is improper.

Mr. Del Guercio: What?

Presiding Inspector: But I don't think there is any use striking it from the record.

Mr. Gladstein: All right.

Presiding Inspector: The question is: Are you a member of the Communist Party?

The Witness: I already answered it, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I didn't hear the answer.

The Witness: I am not, I said. [4061]

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. You are not. Have you ever been a member of the Communist Party?

A. The answer is the same, I have not.

Q. Your answer is you have never been a member of the Communist Party?

A. That was my answer, yes.

Q. Now, are you familiar with the doctrine of the Communist Party, or one of the doctrines of the Communist Party which is when it serves the best interests of the Communist Party members of that Party should appear in Court and give false testimony?

A. You are asking me if I heard this?
Q. Yes. Are you familiar with that doctrine?
A. No.
Q. Are you following that? A. No.
Q. Where were you born?
A. In Germany.
Q. When. A. 1899.
Q. And what is your father's name?
A. I didn't hear you.
Q. Your father's name?
A. My father's name? [4062]
Q. Yes. A. My father's name is Gustav.
Q. And your mother's?
A. My mother's first name?
Q. Yes. A. Adrina.
The Reporter: Spell it, please.
The Witness: A-d-r-i-n-a.
Presiding Inspector: A-d-r-i-a-n-a.
The Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. What is the date of your birth?
A. I didn't hear you.
Q. You gave the year of your birth?
A. Yes.
Q. What was the month?
A. February 9th.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. When did you come to the United States?

A. My father and I came to Canada in 1911. I believe it was in 1915 when we came to Minnesota.

Q. You and your father remained in Canada from 1911 to the time you came to the United States in 1915?

A. Yes. My parents came to Minnesota before I did and I followed several months later.

Q. Well, now, when did you come to the United States? A. In 1915. [4063]

Q. What month?

A. Oh, I can't recall the month. It was in the winter time because there was snow on the ground.

Q. Through what port did you enter?

A. Well, I came to the City of Minneapolis. I don't know whether you can call that a port or not.

Q. Well, how old were you? Don't you recall through what port of entry you came to the United States from Canada?

A. Where we crossed the line?

Q. Yes. A. No recollection.

Q. How old were you at the time?

A. Well, 1915? That would make me 16 years old.

Q. Were you alone? A. I was alone.

Q. How did you enter into the United States?

A. On the train.

Q. Were you inspected by Immigration Officers?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. Well, my recollection is that I came to Winnepeg. You see, I had been working on a farm in western Manitoba, about 200 miles from Winnepeg, and my mother had written to me and said that my father had made some kind of arrangements in Minneapolis for me to proceed to Minnesota, and I came to Winnepeg and, to the best of my recollection, I went to some American office and got some kind of paper, which I don't [4064] even know what you call it, but——

Q. (Interposing) Well, were you questioned by any United States Immigration officers while you were on the train as a passenger from Canada into the United States?

A. I recall the train stopped and the baggage was searched. Other than that I have no recollection. This is over 25 years ago.

Q. And you went to Minneapolis directly?

A. Directly to Minneapolis.

Q. How long did you remain in Minneapolis?

A. I lived there until December, 1917.

Mr. Del Guercio: Will you repeat that?

(The answer referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. With your mother and father?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did your mother and father come to the United States from Canada?

A. Well, my father and I came together; my father and I came in 1911.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Oh, no, from Canada. When did your father and mother came from Canada to the United States?

Presiding Inspector: From Canada to the United States?

A. My father and my mother and my brother, they came to Minnesota in 1915 in the summer time, I believe. [4065]

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. How many brothers do you have?

A. One.

Q. What is his name?

A. The same as my father's name, Gustav, G-u-s-t-a-v.

Q. What is his last name? Schmidt also?

A. Certainly.

Q. Was he also born in Germany?

A. Who? My father?

Q. Your brother?

A. No; my brother was born in the Netherlands.

Q. What were you doing in Minneapolis from 1915 to December 17, 1917?

A. Oh, I worked in a machine shop for a while. Later on, I worked in those flour mills.

Q. What machine shop did you work in?

A. Oh, I can't recall the name.

Q. Then you worked in a flour mill?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. For how long did you work in the machine shop? A. Six or seven months, perhaps.

Q. Do you recall the name of the flour mill?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. Yes; Washburn-Crosby Milling Company.

Q. And for how long a period did you work in that flour mill?

A. I think about a year. [4066]

Q. Then, what did you do?

A. Then I departed for San Francisco.

Q. Alone? A. Alone.

Q. When did you arrive in San Francisco?

A. The day before Christmas, 1917.

Q. Did you obtain employment? A. Yes.

Q. When? How soon after you arrived?

A. Oh, a couple of days after I arrived I started to work in a San Francisco flour mill, the Globe Mills.

Q. Doing what?

A. Warehouse work, packing flour and sewing, running sewing machines and such work.

Q. Then, for how long a period did you work for the Globe Mills?

A. Oh, not very long; several months. It might have been three; it might have been five.

Q. Then what did you do?

A. I went to work in another flour mill.

Q. Do you know the name of it?

A. I don't recall the name but it was located on Bryant Street here in San Francisco.

Q. Do you know when your employment began with that mill?

A. At this second place? [4067]

Q. Yes.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. Well, it was then 1918 but I don't recall just when.

Q. Summer? Fall?

A. Oh, spring, I think.

Q. The spring of 1916? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And how long did you work at that mill?

A. I think I worked there the better part of that year.

Q. Then, what did you do?

A. I quit again and I went to work in another mill.

Q. Do you know the name of it?

A. San Francisco Milling Company.

Q. When did you start working for the San Francisco Milling Company?

A. I don't recall the date but I know that we were working there on Armistice Day, November 11, 1918.

Q. For how long a period did you work at that mill?

A. It is impossible to recall. I worked there several years.

Q. Did you register for the draft in 1918, during the last World War? A. Yes.

Q. Where? [4068] A. In San Francisco.

Q. Were you interned as an alien enemy?

A. No.

Q. Did you state that you were born in Germany? A. Certainly.

Q. Do you remember when you registered?

A. You mean the day?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Yes. A. No, I can't remember.

Q. Do you know if there is a record of your arrival in the United States from Canada?

A. I have no way of knowing that.

Q. What?

A. I say I have no way of knowing.

Q. Have you ever had occasion to have it checked by the Immigration offices?

A. Never had any occasion.

Q. Have you ever applied for citizenship?

A. Yes, I am a citizen.

Q. How?

A. You mean how did I apply?

Q. How did you become a citizen of the United States?

A. I was naturalized, I believe, in this very room.

Q. When were you naturalized?

A. Well, it might be 1926 or '27, thereabouts.

Q. You have your certificate, of course. [4069]

A. I haven't it in my pocket.

Q. Now, I believe the last place you said you worked for was the San Francisco Milling Company and that you were employed there on Armistice Day, November 11, 1918. How long did you continue in that employment?

A. Oh, I don't remember. I know the place burned down one time and it was rebuilt and I worked for them again after it was rebuilt at a different location.

Q. What was your next employment?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. I started to work for a portrait photographer on Post Street. I was interested in photography.

Q. When did that begin?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Approximately, the year?

A. Oh, it may have been 1919; it may have been 1920; it may have been 1921.

Q. Well, can you recollect any other employment between 1918 and 1919 and 1920?

A. I worked for another photographer.

Q. Do you know his name?

A. Yes; his name is Moulin, M-o-u-l-i-n.

Q. Do you know where he then had his studio?

A. At that time he was located on Kearny Street and he has now a larger place on Second Street.

Q. And how long did you continue in his employment? [4070]

A. It might have been eight months or a year; I don't remember.

Q. What was your next employment?

A. I went back to the San Francisco Milling Company.

Q. Do you remember when that was?

A. Oh, it was about the same time.

Q. What year?

A. '20 or '21, thereabouts.

Q. How long did you continue with the San Francisco Milling Company this time?

A. I can't remember.

Q. Less than a year or more than a year?

A. I think it was more than a year.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Then, what did you do?

A. Well, I know I worked for the Globe Milling Company again after that.

Q. For how long a period?

A. Gosh, I don't know.

Q. Approximately?

A. It was a long time, two or three years, I believe.

Q. What was your next employment?

A. Then, I worked for a man by the name of J. H. Scott.

Q. Are you giving these in order now?

A. I am giving them in order, to the best of my recollection. [4071]

Q. What kind of work did you do for J. H. Scott?

A. He built a small milling establishment somewhere here south of Market Street; I had charge of that.

Q. How long did you work for him?

A. Oh, I think a year or so.

Q. Then, what did you do?

A. Then, I went to the waterfront and I worked in the Islais Creek Grain Terminal on Third Street near Butcher Town.

Q. Is that the first time you worked on the waterfront? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What year was that?

A. This must be '27 or '28, thereabouts.

Q. For how long a period?

A. Oh, I worked there a couple of seasons.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Then, what did you do?

A. Well, then, I made contact with the waterfront and I have been there ever since.

Q. Did you join any organization when you first went to the waterfront in 1927?

A. Not immediately. There was an organization down there which was known among the men as a company union, and later on I was practically forced to join it.

Q. Well, forced to join what union?

A. It was known as the Longshoremen's Association of San Francisco.

Q. Is that the first union you ever joined?

[4072]

A. No.

Q. I mean on the waterfront?

A. On the waterfront, yes.

Q. And what was the date of that?

A. I didn't hear you.

Q. What date? A. I can't remember that.

Q. Do you know the year?

A. I can't remember.

Q. By whom were you employed when you joined this Longshoremen's Union?

A. I think the stevedoring contractor's name was Pacific Lighterage Company.

Q. That was what then was known as a company union?

A. Yes sir, it was known as the blue book union.

Q. Who forced you to join?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. Well, a rumor spread along the dock that the Business Agent of this union would appear as of a certain hour and anybody who was not paid up in the union, why, he would be knocked off the job.

Q. How long did you remain a member of this so-called blue book union or company union?

A. Until we organized the ILA in 1933.

Q. Was your membership continuous until that time?

A. No, I don't think I could say yes to that because [4073] nobody paid any attention to this outfit and nobody wanted to pa*id* dues to it because it didn't do us any good, so every once in a while everybody would lapse in the matter of dues, including myself.

Q. Did you ever hold any offices in that union?

A. You couldn't hold any office in that union. They never held any meetings.

Q. Well, did you ever hold any offices in that union?

A. Well, I say you couldn't hold any office.

Presiding Inspector: Well, you can answer it directly, did you or didn't you?

The Witness: Oh, no, I didn't.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you meet Harry Bridges while you were a member of that union?

A. I may have. An organizational campaign started. There was a certain period when we were just getting out of one and going into the other.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Did you ever meet him in any of the meetings of this company union? A. No.

Q. Were there any other unions in existence at that time with regard to longshoremen?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. While you were a member of this blue book or company [4074] union were any efforts made to organize other unions?

A. There was no attempt made until the middle of 1933, and that is when the——

Q. (Interposing) The first time?

A. The first time that I found out about——

Q. (Interposing) Did you know Harry Bridges then in 1933?

A. Well, it was sometime in 1933 that I noticed him at one of the membership meetings of the newly organized ILA at the Building Trades Temple. I believe I stated that earlier here this afternoon.

Q. You say there was some organizational work being done to form another union about 1933?

A. Yes, the ILA of which we all later became members started its organizational work in that year.

Q. Did you take an active part in starting this new union, the ILA?

A. No, I didn't. I was interested in a new organization but I didn't take an active part immediately.

Q. Did you take any part at all?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. To the extent of becoming a member as soon as I could.

Q. Did you become a member? Did you take any part in organizational work in getting the union started? A. No. [4075]

Q. Well, when did you become a member of the ILA? A. Either in June or July, 1933.

Q. June or July, 1933? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was your membership solicited?

A. No, it was not.

Q. How did you join?

A. I went to the office of this new union at No. 10 Embarcadero where there was a man sitting at a desk and I asked him if this was the place where one could join the ILA and he said "Yes." I said "All right, here is my 50 cents."

Q. Who was the first president of the ILA?

A. In San Francisco?

Q. In San Francisco?

A. A man by the name of Lee J. Holman

The Reporter: Spell it, please.

The Witness: H-o-l-m-a-n.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you know him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you know him at that time?

A. You mean the day that I paid my initiation fee in this union?

Q. Yes. A. Oh, no.

Q. How long after that did you become acquainted with [4076] him?

A. There was a membership meeting of this union in the Labor Temple at 16th and Capp Street and he appeared on the platform and made some remarks and everybody knew that he was the organizer for that union.

Presiding Inspector: How long about after you joined was that?

The Witness: Oh, just a few weeks.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you become friendly with Holman?

A. Did I become what?

Q. Friendly? A. Yes.

Q. Now, did you hold any offices in the ILA during the first year of its existence?

A. Yes, late that year there was an election and I was elected to the Executive Committee.

Q. That is in 1933?

A. It must have been, yes.

Q. Do you know who brought about your election to the Executive Committee?

A. Who did what?

Q. Brought about your election to the Executive Committee?

A. The men who voted for me. [4077]

Q. Who proposed or who nominated you?

A. I don't recall who nominated me.

Q. Was the question of your becoming a member of the Executive Committee discussed between anyone before your name was put in nomination?

A. Yes, there was an organizer helping Holman: in fact, there were a couple of them, and, I believe, it had been decided in a general membership meeting that there would be elections. The date may have been set.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Did Holman ever tell you that he would put you on the Executive Committee?

A. No, I don't think so.

Q. And how long did you remain on the Executive Committee of that ILA union?

A. I think that I have been a member of that Executive Committee ever since except for those years when I was a paid officer.

Q. Now, who are some of the—or can you give me the names of all of the members of the Executive Committee for the first year; the year 1933?

A. Certainly not all of them.

Q. Well, all that you can remember, then.

A. There was a man by the name of Harry Curtis, Alvin Kullberg, K-u-l-l-b-e-r-g; Bridges was on the Executive Committee. [4078]

Q. Dietrich or Richards?

A. Bridges. I believe Joe Johnson; I was on it. That is all I can remember right now. I believe Dietrich was on it.

Q. Do you recall a group of persons who were then known as the Albion Hall Group, connected with this ILA union at that time in 1933 or '34?

A. I recall the group but I didn't know anything about it that early.

Q. When did you know about it?

A. Oh, it might have been very late in '33 or very early in '34.

Q. What was the Albion Hall Group?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. It was a group of longshoremen who were working on the waterfront, who sometimes got together and discussed the problems of the union.

Q. Discussed the problems of what union?

A. The International Longshoremen's Association.

Q. Was it a group that was authorized by the ILA union?

A. Authorized? No, we didn't ask anybody for permission.

Q. What?

A. I mean, if you mean if we asked somebody for permission, why, no.

Q. Well, did it have any official connection with the [4079] ILA union?

A. The only connection that comes to my mind is the fact that the fellows who came, they were members of the union.

Q. They were all members of the union?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did they hold meetings, this Albion Hall Group?

A. Well, if you can call it a meeting; they got around a table.

Q. Well, didn't it get its name because meetings were held in this Albion Hall?

A. Did it get its name because meetings were held?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, they were usually referred to as meetings.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Well, were meetings of the ILA union held in the Albion Hall, regular meetings?

A. No, no.

Q. Where did this group of which you speak, the Albion Hall group, hold their meetings?

A. In the Albion Hall.

Q. In the Albion Hall?

A. Of course, that is not the correct name. The correct name is Equality Hall.

Q. Equality Hall or Albion Hall?

A. That is right.

Q. All right. Now, who were the members of this Equality Hall or Albion Hall group? [4080]

A. They were men who belonged to the ILA.

Q. Well, what were some of their names? You were one of them? A. Pardon?

Q. You were one of them?

A. Yes. Some of the men who belonged to the Executive Committee of the union were on it such as Kullberg.

Q. Kullberg? A. Yes, and McKenna.

Q. Who?

A. McKenna, myself, Bridges, a man by the name of Heiner, H-e-i-n-e-r.

Q. Is that Fred Heiner?

A. Yes; Dietrich.

Q. That is Eugene Dietrich?

A. Yes; Mann, M-a-n-n.

Q. What is his first name?

A. Herman, I believe.

Q. You are sure it isn't Lawrence?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. I didn't hear you.

Q. Lawrence? A. No; I said "Herman".

Q. Herman? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mallan, did you say? M-a-l-l-a-n? [4081]

A. No, I said "Mann." Mallen was another, M-a-l-l-e-n, Ralph Mallen.

Did I mention Kullberg already?

Presiding Inspector: Yes, I think so.

The Witness: Oh, there was a man there by the name of Ferreira.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. How do you spell that?

A. Well, I wouldn't be sure. It is a Portuguese name. The man has been dead for five or six years. But, I think, it is F-e-r-r-e-i-r-a.

That is all I recall right now. [4082]

Q. Was John Shoemaker a member of that group? A. Yes.

Q. W. Christianson?

A. Yes, Willie was there.

Q. Henry Morisse? A. Henry what?

Q. Mo-r-i-s-s-e. A. Yes; he was there.

Q. What was the purpose of this group?

A. The purpose was to make an attempt at organizing some kind of a program that we could introduce in the local union that would be of some benefit to the workers that belonged to that union.

Q. How many of those that you named were members of the Communist Party?

A. I don't know.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Do you know whether John Shoemaker was a member of the Communist Party or not?

A. I don't know.

Q. How often would meetings be held by this group?

A. Oh, sometimes every second Sunday, sometimes there would be three weeks before meetings, sometimes one meeting would follow the other; there would be a meeting this Sunday and there might not be one the following Sunday, and there might be one the following Sunday. [4083]

Q. Who was the leader of the group?

A. Bridges was there; he usually acted as sort of an unofficial chairman.

Q. Did he assume leadership? A. Yes.

Q. Was there an election?

A. No. They never were that formal.

Q. Now, the meetings that were held by this group, were they open meetings or were they secret meetings?

A. You couldn't call them secret meetings.

Q. Would you call them open meetings?

A. Well, I mean that they were not exactly open meetings because the group didn't shout it from the housetops they were going to get together there.

Q. Could anybody attend that was not a member of that particular group?

A. Yes; the fellows would sometimes bring some other longshoremen along.

Q. Can you tell me of one instance where that was done?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. Well, the only way I can describe that is by saying that maybe I noticed certain individuals at last Sunday's meeting who would come again, and later on, and then there would be a new face; so apparently somebody had contacted this man and invited him to come.

Q. And who would lay down the program in the meetings [4084] of this Equality Hall or Albion Hall group?

A. There was no laying down of any program. It developed out of the discussion or remarks that were carried on.

Q. Somebody must have suggested a program?

A. Yes; sometimes it was Harry Bridges and sometimes I had an idea, and sometimes another fellow had an idea. We kicked the idea around quite a while and either discarded it or adopted it.

Q. Were any of your ideas ever carried out?

A. I believe so.

Q. What ones?

A. I don't recollect. That was seven years ago.

Q. These were ideas in connection as to what should be done at the regular meetings of the ILA union then in existence, is that correct?

A. Yes. We came to several conclusions there which were brought to the union meetings.

Q. Would you decide as to what was to be proposed at the regular union meeting and by whom it was to be proposed?

A. Yes; roughly, that was the method.

Q. And at most of these Albion Hall meetings would what Bridges had suggested be proposed, or be carried out, or be adopted by the Albion Hall group?

A. Not always. I remember that his proposals were, well, the fellows seemed to pay more attention to his proposal than [4085] they would, for instance, to mine. He seemed to have a better understanding or grasp of the situation.

Q. Now, was there a group inside of this group that met secretly?

A. I don't know about that.

Q. Were you on the inside group?

A. I was a member of the group, but I wasn't a member of any inside group.

Q. Well, as a matter of fact, you know, Mr. Schmidt, do you not, that there was a group inside of the group, consisting only of Communist Party members, and that you were one of them?

A. No, sir. I recall one time one of the fellows hinted at that and raised heck about it, but everybody just stared at this guy.

Q. Who hinted that?

A. A man by the name of McKenna.

Q. When did he hint there was a Communist group within the group of which you and Harry Bridges were one? A. When?

Q. Yes.

A. At one of these gatherings; I don't recall just which one.

Q. It was during the time that this so-called group were meeting?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. Yes, sir; that is what I said. [4086]

Q. What did McKenna say?

A. I don't think that he even used the word "Communist." He said, "There is something about this group that I don't like." He indicated that he didn't like what was going on, or he was going to get out. And he batted a few ideas around and they made no impression on my mind as to what he was driving at.

Q. Did he drop out of the group subsequently?

A. Yes. He did come a couple of times more, though.

Q. And would it be a true statement to make that every decision that was arrived at by this so-called Albion Hall group was put before the membership of the ILA and approved, and ultimately concurred in by the membership of the union, at a regular union meeting?

A. No, I don't think so.

Q. Huh? A. I don't think so.

Q. How many decisions would you say were ultimately approved? A. I don't remember.

Q. What?

A. I don't remember. Sometimes I wouldn't be present at the next membership meeting so if any proposal were made——

Q. (Interposing) Would you discuss, among other things, the nomination of officers in the ILA? [4087]

A. It may have taken place. I have no recollection on if. As a matter of fact, I didn't go to every one either.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Was this group formed to fight Holman?

A. What?

Presiding Inspector: For the purpose of fighting Holman?

A. Not specifically; no.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Was Holman a member of that group?

A. No.

Q. What was his connection with the ILA union at that time?

A. He was at first, the first organizer that apparently was appointed by the International President, Joseph P. Ryon. Later on there was an election and he became President.

Q. Wasn't it one of the objects of this group to get rid of Holman?

A. Later on it was discussed in this group that apparently Holman had no program whatsoever, and they thought if an election was in the offing he should be opposed by someone.

Q. And wasn't Holman at that time fighting Communists? A. I don't think so.

Q. Didn't he go on record as being opposed to Communists?

A. I never heard him mention it.

Q. Wasn't he trying to get rid of Communists, weed out Communists, from the ILA union? [4088]

A. Never heard him mention it.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Before a decision was made by this Albion Hall group was it put to a vote?

A. You mean by somebody saying, "All in favor say 'Aye'; opposed 'No'?"

Q. Yes, either formally or informally.

A. Sometimes it was done in that manner; and at other times the Chairman would say, "If there is no objection," or "Are we in agreement—O.K." and let it go at that.

Q. It had no standing at all as a union, or part of any union, did it?

A. No. that is right; except that the fellows who were there were members of a union.

Q. And there was a union existing at that time, the ILA, of course? A. Yes.

Q. And the ILA was then affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, is that correct?

A. It was affiliated; yes.

Q. Who obtained the first charter for the ILA in San Francisco?

A. It must have been Holman.

Q. And did the Company union, so-called Company union, go out of existence about the same time? A. About the same time; yes. [4089]

Q. How long did the Albion Hall group remain in existence?

A. My memory is vague on that. It may have been six or seven months, and it may have been a little bit longer.

Q. Six or seven months, you say?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. It may have been a little longer; perhaps a little bit less.

Q. What happened at that time?

A. Nothing happened. It just sort of dissolved.

Q. Was Holman still the President of the ILA when it was dissolved?

A. I couldn't tell you. You mean was Holman still the President at the time the group dissolved?

Q. Yes.

A. I have no recollection of that whatsoever.

Q. How long did Holman remain President of the ILA?

A. Well, he was elected President. First he was a temporary officer, acting as an organizer, and presided at the meetings. Then we arranged for an election and he was elected. That was in 1933, the fall of that year. Some time in 1934 he got out.

Q. 1934? A. Yes.

Q. And this Albion Hall group broke up about the same time?

A. That may be so, but I don't remember. [4090]

Q. Who became the next president of the ILA?

A. Well, since Holman got out why the Vice President took over. His name was Joseph Johnson.

Q. Joseph——

A. (Interposing) Johnson.

Q. How long did he remain in this office?

A. He held the President's position throughout the 1934 strike. In the fall of 1934, after the strike, there was another election, and he was succeeded by Bridges.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Now, you say you met Harry Jackson, first met him during the 1934 strike, is that correct?

A. That is my best recollection.

Q. When did the 1934 strike occur?

A. I didn't understand.

Q. When did the 1934 strike occur?

A. May 9.

Q. May 9, 1934? A. Right.

Q. And you now say that you have not met Harry Jackson prior to May 9, 1934?

A. My best recollection is that during that strike, or shortly before that strike, he was a prominent figure on the waterfront connected with the MWIU. It is possible I may have seen him and not have realized who he might have been.

Q. Did you work with Harry Jackson on any matter prior [4091] to the 1934 strike?

A. To the best of my recollection he never worked as a longshoreman.

Q. I don't mean worked as a—did he ever work at anything?

A. As a matter of fact, I have never seen him work.

Q. You knew him to be a member of the Communist Party, of course?

A. Well, he was pointed out as such.

Q. You knew him as an organizer for the Communist Party, didn't you?

A. I knew him as an organizer for the MWIU.

Q. Was Harry Jackson a member of the MWIU? A. I took it that he was.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Didn't he have to be employed to be a member of the MWIU?

A. The MWIU was organizing seamen at that time.

Q. Was Harry Jackson a seaman?

A. I took him to be a seaman.

Q. You said he never worked, that you didn't know that he worked, isn't that your testimony?

Presiding Inspector: He said he never saw him work. You may ask him further if he knows about his working.

The Witness: Are you waiting for an answer now?

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. How do you reconcile those two statements?

[4092]

Mr. Gladstein: What two statements?

Mr. Del Guercio: One statement he said he never worked and in the other he said he was a seaman.

Presiding Inspector: He said he took him to be a seaman. Isn't that right?

The Witness: I took it for granted he was a seaman because he was connected with an organization that organized seamen. There were thousands of them milling around the beach. I certainly didn't ask each one if he had ever been a working seaman, or just a beachcomber.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you assist Harry Jackson in soliciting members in the Marine Workers Industrial Union?

A. No.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Did you assist Harry Bridges in soliciting membership in the Marine Workers Industrial Union? A. We were busy with the ILA.

Q. Who do you mean when you say "we"?—Harry Bridges and yourself?

A. Harry and I were busy in the ILA.

Q. Were you together all the time during the 1934 strike?

A. During the 1934 strike I saw Harry almost every day.

Q. And do you know if Harry Bridges, during the 1934 strike, solicited members for the Marine Workers Industrial [4093]

A. That wasn't necessary during the 1934 strike.

Presiding Inspector: He asked you whether or not you know about that.

A. I don't know.

Presiding Inspector: He has no knowledge on the subject.

Mr. Del Guercio: Do you want to continue? We can't get through with the witness.

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead a. little bit longer.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you ever hear of a mimeographed sheet called the "Waterfront Worker," Mr. Schmidt?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Huh? A. Oh, yes.

Q. Were you ever connected with its publication, or editorship?

A. I wrote some stuff for it.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. And when did you become associated with the Waterfront Worker?

A. I don't know whether it was '33 or '34. I think it was early in 1934.

Q. In any event it was long before the 1934 strike?

A. No, I don't think so because the 1934 strike took place in what you might call early that year, May 9. My best recollec- [4094] tion is that shortly before the—you see the strike was scheduled to take place in the first instance on March 22, I believe, and it was postponed. It may have been April 22. It was some time before that.

Q. Was it some time before the 1934 strike that you became associated with the Waterfront Worker?

A. It was some time before the 1934 strike.

Q. How long before?

A. That I wrote some material for it?

Q. How long before?

A. Well, it may have been a couple of months, and it may have been three months; I can't recollect exactly.

Q. You can't recollect exactly. We might refresh your memory. And how did you become associated with this Waterfront Worker?

A. Well, I wrote an article for it, and I signed my name to it.

Q. To whom did you submit the article?

A. To the Waterfront Worker.

Q. To whom?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. You mean where did I send it?

Q. To what person?

A. I didn't mention any person's name.

Q. I know you didn't. You said you submitted it. I am asking you to whom you submitted this article? [4095]

A. I sent, wrote the material on a piece of paper and placed it in the mail box.

Q. Under your name? A. Yes.

Q. And addressed it to whom?

A. To the Waterfront Worker, the post office box.

Q. You knew the post office box number?

A. The post office box was publicized in the sheet itself.

Q. Did anyone ask you to write an article for the Waterfront Worker?

A. No. The spirit moved me and I wrote.

Q. What spirit?

A. Well, I think you understand my answer.

Q. No, I don't understand your answer at all. Do you mean you were drunk at the time?

Presiding Inspector: It is perfectly evident that he means that there was no suggestion that he write it; but he wrote it from his own impulses. Is that what you mean?

The Witness: It occurred to me I might make a contribution to this paper so I sat down and wrote it.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Was that your first article? A. Yes.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. You wrote more than one article? [4096]

A. Yes.

Q. And you signed your name to the article?

A. Yes.

Q. And did it appear in the Waterfront Worker under your name?

A. The article appeared, but my name wasn't on it.

Q. When did you write the first article for the Waterfront Worker with regard to the 1934 strike?

A. Well, it was prior to the strike, comparatively early in the year.

Q. Would you say it was in the same year, 1934?

A. Yes. That is the year we are talking about; yes.

Q. It wouldn't be in 1933, the latter part of 1933?

A. No. I recall that down on Pier 16 and 18, where I was working, the latter part of 1933 the fellows used to discuss this paper that had appeared. I would ask several, "Where the devil can I get it?" Somebody would say, "The next time I get one I will bring you one." Then it was weeks and weeks before I ever saw a copy.

Q. Well, now, can you recall now, state definitely, that it was not in the year 1933 that you wrote the first article for the Waterfront Worker?

A. It was in 1934 that I began to write.

Q. Did you know who the editor of the Waterfront Worker was at that time? [4097]

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. I didn't know anybody.

Q. Didn't you know that Harry Jackson was the editor of it?

A. I didn't know anything about it.

Q. When did you find out, if at all?

A. I didn't find out that Jackson was the editor.

Q. Who did you find out was the editor of it?

A. I didn't know as there were any editors.

Q. Do you know whether Harry Bridges was the editor of that paper at any time?

A. He contacted me about it on account of this article that I had written with my name signed to it.

Q. Did he contact you when you wrote the first article? A. Yes; that is my best recollection.

Q. Then it was Harry Bridges that suggested that you write the article for the Waterfront Worker? A. No, I had written it before.

Q. What?

A. He contacted me after I had written an article.

Q. How long after?

A. Several days; maybe a week.

Q. And where did he contact you?

A. I think it was around the hall, the ILA hall, at 113 Steuart Street.

Q. What did he say to you? [4098]

A. Well, he said, "I see you wrote something for the paper on the waterfront." I think he made some complimentary remark about the material I had written.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Did he tell you that he had read your article also? A. That he had read it?

Q. Yes. A. He must have read it.

Q. And he complimented you on it, you say?

Presiding Inspector: Yes; that is what he said.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did he say anything else?

A. Well, he asked me what I thought of the paper, and what I had heard about it on the waterfront. I told him that on the dock where I worked that the fellows had been talking about it and it seemed to be quite popular, and that whenever I heard the fellows talking about it I would try to get a copy and had some difficulty in getting one.

Q. Anything else?

A. That is about all.

Q. That is all the conversation that occurred between you and Harry Bridges at that time?

A. After all these years—well.

Q. Did Harry Bridges at that time tell you what connection he had with the Waterfront Worker?

A. With the Waterfront Worker? [4099]

Q. Yes.

A. He said he was one of the fellows who had something to do with it, and several others.

Q. Did he mention the names of the others?

A. No. I wasn't interested much. I just took it for granted it was a paper that, according to what I had heard, it had appeared for some time and was sort of a waterfront institution already when I got acquainted with it.

Q. By "Waterfront institution" what do you mean?

A. Well, I mean by that, that the longshoremen who had read it, they apparently took it for granted that this paper was going to continue to come out.

Q. Now, you had seen copies of it prior to the 1934 strike, had you not, prior to the time you had written your first article for it?

A. Yes. I finally got hold of a copy.

Q. Did you also read the masthead—what did it say on the masthead?

A. At the top it said "The Waterfront Worker."

Q. Is that all?

A. I don't know whether "The" was on there, but it said "Waterfront Worker."

Q. Did it say who published it?

A. I think right underneath that there was a post office box. [4100]

Q. In the early part of 1934?

A. Yes; that is as well as I can remember it.

Q. Did it give the name of the editor?

A. Did it give what?

Q. The name of the editor.

A. There were no names.

Q. Now, you wrote your first article, you say, about the early part of 1934. When did you write your next article for the Waterfront Worker?

A. It is impossible to remember. It may have been a week later, and it may have been two weeks later; and maybe I waited longer than that.

Q. And did anyone tell you to write the second article? A. Did anyone tell me, you say?

Q. Yes. A. No.

Q. The spirit moved you again?

A. The spirit moved me again.

Q. And you wrote another article?

A. That is right.

Q. What did you do with it?

A. What did I do with it?

Q. Yes.

A. I placed it in an envelope and mailed it.

Q. Mailed it to whom? [4101]

A. To the box, post office box, the number of which appeared in the paper itself.

Q. In addressing the envelope for either the first or second article, did you give the name of anyone, show the name of anyone on it, or did you address it to a particular person?

A. No; I just said "Waterfront Worker."

Q. And the post office box?

A. That is right.

Q. San Francisco? A. That is right.

Q. Did you also sign your name on your second article? A. I don't think so.

Q. Now, why didn't you sign your name on the second article?

A. Well, Harry explained to me that it wouldn't be wise; that we were a union not getting recognition, and we had no job control, and no contracts with the employers, and if the shipowners were to find out who put the paper out we would probably be knocked off the waterfront for good. That seemed logical to me.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Was your second article also published?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Huh? A. I don't remember. [4102]

Q. When did you write your third article?

A. No recollection.

Q. How many articles all together did you write?

A. I don't remember. [4103]

Q. What? A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you ever sign your name to any of the articles after the first one?

A. I doubt it very much.

Q. Well, do you want time to think about it?

A. You are asking me if I want time to think about it?

Q. Do you want a little time to think about it before you answer?

A. No; I think that is correct. I didn't sign any more.

Q. Did you ever visit the place where the Waterfront Worker was mimeographed or printed?

Mr. Gladstein: Did he say Western Worker or Waterfront Worker?

Mr. Del Guercio: Waterfront Worker.

A. No, I never did, although I heard that it was published in or printed in one of the fellows' homes.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. In whose home?

A. Well, I think they said it was Shoemaker's home.

Q. John Shoemaker? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who said it was printed in John Shoemaker's home? Who told you?

A. I don't recall. After Harry and I got together about [4104] the paper, in due time we got acquainted with a third and fourth fellow who also wrote for it. I think Shoemaker was the next one that I got acquainted with as one of the writers.

Q. Now, when did you learn that the Waterfront Worker was being mimeographed and printed in John Shoemaker's house?

A. When? I don't——

Q. (Interposing): Yes.

A. I don't recollect.

Q. With relation to the 1934 strike?

A. Well, it seems to me it was——

Q. (Interposing): Was it before or after?

A. It was before, I believe. I mean, the particular strike date was just around the corner, but I can't fix it definitely in my mind.

Q. Who told you that it was mimeographed at John Shoemaker's house?

A. It may have been John Shoemaker himself. It may have been Bridges himself; I don't know.

Presiding Inspector: I think we will stop here until tomorrow morning at ten o'clock. Recess until tomorrow morning.

(Witness temporarily excused.)

PROCEEDINGS

Presiding Inspector: Is the witness here?

HENRY A. SCHMIDT

called as a witness on behalf of the Alien, having been previously duly sworn, testified further as follows:

Presiding Inspector: Now, Mr. Del Guercio?

Mr. Del Guercio: Are you ready to proceed?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Cross Examination
(Resumed)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Mr. Schmidt, we were on the Waterfront Worker last night when we adjourned. I believe you testified that you submitted many articles, but you were unable to recollect how many, is that correct? A. Substantially correct.

Q. Now, your testimony is then also that you never submitted any articles to the Western Worker prior to 1934 is that correct?

Mr. Gladstein: Are you talking about the Western Worker?

Mr. Del Guercio: Waterfront Worker.

A. Prior to 1934?

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Yes.

A. I believe that is what I testified; yes.

Q. Now, at the time you were with this so-called Albion [4107] or Equality Hall Group, the Waterfront Worker was used by that group, was it not?

A. It may have been. It is rather vague in my mind.

Q. Well, don't you know whether it was or not?

A. I said it is rather vague in my mind. A lot of water has gone under the bridge since then.

Q. Yes. But what is your best recollection on that point?

A. I really can't make it any clearer than that.

Q. Now, what your first article about?

A. I don't recollect that either.

Q. You don't recollect that either? A. No.

Q. Now, Mr. Schmidt, as a matter of fact, weren't you known on the waterfront and elsewhere prior to 1934 as Editor Schmidt of the Western Worker—of the Waterfront Worker?

A. No. Some people may have seen fit to call me that but I don't know whether that makes me——.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. (Interposing): You have heard that before, then, have you? A. You mean the term?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. Yes, I believe some fellows used that term.

Q. When did you first hear it?

A. It is impossible to remember. [4108]

Q. It might have been prior to 1934?

A. Well, it might have been during '34.

Q. Well, I asked you if it might have been prior to 1934?

A. It is impossible for me to remember that.

Q. If Harry Bridges testified that you were connected with the Western Worker prior to 1934 would he be lying?

Mr. Gladstein: Just a moment.

A. Not with the Western Worker.

Mr. Del Guercio: With the Waterfront Worker.

Presiding Inspector: Just a moment. I will exclude it. We can't have testimony by one witness as to the truthfulness of another.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will withdraw the question.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, you testified yesterday that one of the purposes of forming this so-called Albion or Equality Hall group was to get rid of Holman; is that correct?

Mr. Gladstein: I think that is a misstatement of the testimony, your Honor. I object to the question.

Mr. Del Guercio: It isn't a misstatement. It is a misunderstanding.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Mr. Gladstein: Well, I don't accuse Mr. Del Guercio of deliberately doing it. I simply say it assumes something which [4109] is contrary to the evidence.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will withdraw it. Let me ask this question:

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Was that one of the purposes of the Albion Hall group? A. To do what?

Q. To get rid of Holman as the President of the ILA? A. No.

Q. Didn't the Waterfront Worker conduct a campaign about the same time against Holman?

A. Well, it seems to me that later Holman was placed on trial by the Union.

Q. Well, I haven't asked you about that. I was asking you if the Waterfront Worker conducted a campaign in its paper against Holman about July 1933?

A. There was some material that appeared in the Waterfront Worker with regard to Holman, but as to the date, that is impossible for me to remember.

Q. Well, now, this Albion Hall group was organized prior to 1934, was it not?

A. Yes, I believe so, but it was rather late when I got acquainted with it.

Q. You were one of the leading figures in that Albion Hall group, were you not?

A. Well, I don't know whether I was or not.

[4110]

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Well, you know that you were a leading figure in the Union there, in the ILA subsequently. Now, can't you tell—you have so testified—can't you tell us whether you were a leading figure in this Albion Hall group?

A. I was not a leading figure anywhere in 1933 nor '34 either, until, well, I guess everybody knew me by the time the strike was over.

Q. Everybody knew you by the time the strike was over? A. Well, it seemed so.

Q. As a matter of fact, Mr. Schmidt, weren't the policies of the Albion Hall group and the editorial policies, if I may call them that, of the Western Worker similar?

A. Yes; that would be correct.

Q. That would be a correct statement. And was it not also the policy of the Waterfront Worker, and of this Albion Hall group, to agitate for a meeting of representatives of the Longshoremen from all West Coast ports prior to 1934, say, from the latter part of 1933 to the latter part of 1934?

A. Yes. As I recall it, some time in 1934, very early in 1934, due to the fact that we were going regularly to union meetings and nothing was taking place so far as any objectives were concerned, we thought that it would be best to develop some kind of a program that would be beneficial to the workers in our industry, and we did come to the union meetings and agitate for a coastwise program, a coastwise organization. [4111]

Q. By "we" whom do you mean?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. The Albion Hall group that you are talking about.

Q. Was that done through the regularly organized ILA union then in existence?

A. That is the only union that I belonged to at that time.

Q. Well, did you agitate for this meeting, or convention of the longshoremen from all West Coast ports through the ILA union?

A. Yes. There are two things that stand out in my mind: First, we proposed to the union that we ought to have a little more information from the Northwest as to what was going on there; and we proposed to the union that a couple of men be sent to the Northwest by our local to take a look around and report back. That proposition was accepted and Eugene Dietrich and Bridges were sent north by the local union.

Q. When was that?

A. It seems to me it was in '34.

Q. The early part?

A. Well, it was certainly before this convention, and this convention took place late in February, I believe.

Q. So that this was before February, then, 1934, is that correct? A. Yes, I think so.

Q. Now, you knew that from the period, that for the period between February 1933 and July 1933, the Waterfront Worker was [4112] published, had its publishing address at room 421, 830 Market Street, San Francisco, California, did you not?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. I thought we were talking about the year 1934?

Mr. Del Guercio: Read the question, please.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. I knew nothing about that because I had no connection with anybody, I had no connection with the ILA until June or July, 1933.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. And for the period between July 1933 and February 12, 1934, you knew that the Waterfront Worker had its publishing address as 3470 19th Street, San Francisco?

A. No, I didn't know that.

Q. You knew that that was the home of Walter Lambert, did you not? A. No, sir.

Q. You knew Water Lambert, didn't you?

A. Yes, I have heard of him, but I didn't know him then.

Q. You knew that he was one of the leading Communist figures on the West Coast at that time, did you not? A. No, no.

Q. You didn't know that? A. No.

Q. And you were on the waterfront during all this time? [4113] A. Yes.

Q. When did you know that Walter Lambert was a leading Communist figure?

A. I have never interested myself to find out whether people are Communists or not.

Q. You were never interested in learning who were Communists and who were not Communists?

A. No, no; it doesn't bother me at all.

Q. And I believe you testified that during all this period you were very active in union matters?

A. During what period?

Q. From about 1933 to the present time.

A. No, I didn't say that: I said I didn't become active until '34.

Q. Well, from 1934 to the present time you have been very active in union affairs?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, you testified that you were on the Strike Committee during the 1934 strike, is that correct?

A. That is right.

Q. Who was on the Strike Committee?

A. Who was on the Strike Committee with me?

Presiding Inspector: Besides yourself.

A. I think there were a group of at least 35 or 40. I couldn't recall all the names. [4114]

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Who was the Chairman of that Strike Committee? A. Bridges.

Q. What was your position?

A. I was a member of it.

Q. Now, you were very close to Harry Bridges at that time, were you not?

A. I didn't know him so very well then.

Q. When did you become close to Bridges? Do you know what I mean by the word "close"?

A. Yes. You mean friendly and close in daily association.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Yes.

A. No, I wouldn't say that I was very close to him at that time.

Q. Well, did you meet him every day—were you with Harry Bridges almost every day during the 1934 strike? A. Yes.

Q. Did you become friendly with him during that time? A. Surely.

Q. Have you continued that association with Harry Bridges ever since?

A. Oh, yes. We don't agree on everything sometimes.

Q. What?

A. Sometimes we don't agree on everything and we sometimes have some violent——

Q. (Interposing): Would you say you have been a very close friend of Harry Bridges from the 1934 strike to the present time? [4115]

A. Yes; I would be glad to say that.

Q. What were the duties of the Strike Committee of which you were a member during the 1934 strike? A. What were the duties?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, the Strike Committee was authorized by the membership to, well, to say it in a very few words, to run the strike to the best of their ability and to carry on on behalf of the membership of the Union to the best of their ability. Among other things, the membership authorized them to spend the Union's money between meetings and make a report on the money that was spent at the next membership meeting, and organize pickets. The Strike Committee was divided into sub-committees. There was a Publicity Committee; there was a Defense Committee, and various things that are usually done during a strike.

Q. Were you on any of the committees?

A. Yes, I was on the Publicity Committee.

Q. Any other Committee?

A. No. On the Strike Committee, the Publicity Committee, and, then, I was on the Executive Committee of the Union.

Q. Well, were you on any other committees of this Strike Committee?

A. No, I don't think so.

Q. Now, as Publicity—you were on the Publicity Committee, you say? [4116] A. Yes.

Q. Were you Chairman of that Committee?

A. No.

Q. Who was the Chairman?

A. A man by the name of Ralph Mallen.

Q. And did this Publicity Committee have an organ?

A. Yes, sir; they put out a memeographed sheet. I think, our instructions from the Strike Committee were to gather as much information on the progress of the strike and put out a memeographed sheet daily, but——

Q. (Interposing) Did you also use the Waterfront Worker?

A. No. We were not very efficient. We were green at the job and although our efforts of getting out this sheet daily was—we attempted to put it out daily. We didn't always succeed. Sometimes, we lapsed a day or so.

Q. Well, did you use the Waterfront Worker at all?

A. No. We were using the Daily—so-called Daily Bulletin of the Union which, I think, was entitled Strike Bulletin of the ILA or ILA Strike Bulletin.

Q. Did you adopt, this Publicity Committee adopt the Western Worker as its organ?

A. Yes, later on we accepted a proposition that they made us to put it out in print, and they put out a sheet that was about the same size as the one that we had been mimeographing, and they called it the—— [4117]

Q. (Interposing) Now, who made the negotiations with the Western Worker for that purpose?

A. I don't recall the person. It was a man, but the name I don't recall at all.

Q. You can't recall the name? A. No.

Q. You were on the Publicity Committee at the time? A. That is right.

Q. And just what arrangements were made?

A. As I recall it, he came to the Publicity Committee.

Q. Who came? A. This man.

Q. From the Western Worker?

A. He came to the——

The Reporter: I can't hear you.

The Witness: He came to the Publicity Committee. Then you said "From the Western Worker?" My answer was going to be he must have come from there.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. What did he say when he appeared before the Publicity Committee?

A. I don't recall the exact words. It would be impossible for me to quote him.

A. Well, substantially.

A. Well, he proposed that we do something to use their printing presses, and what have you, to put out a daily [4118] bulletin in print. I think he said something, that a printed job would look better than a mimeographed job.

Q. Well, did he say he was coming from the Western Worker?

A. He may have and he may have not; I don't know.

Q. Go on.

A. Well, the three or four men who were on the Publicity Committee discussed the proposition. Then, we said we have no authority to say yes or no to that; we will take it to the Strike Committee. Then, we took it to the Strike Committee.

Q. Now, who took it to the Strike Committee?

A. The Publicity Committee reported to the next Strike Committee meeting.

Q. Were you there when the report was made?

A. I couldn't say; most likely I was.

Q. Now, after you reported to the Strike Committee—you mean you reported to Harry Bridges?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. No; we reported to the Strike Committee which was a group of about 35 or 40 men.

Q. Of which Harry Bridges was Chairman?

A. Of which Harry Bridges was Chairman.

Q. Now, was Harry Bridges there when you reported? A. At the time we reported?

Q. Yes. A. I don't remember. [4119]

Q. You don't remember. And what was the outcome?

A. Well, they listened to the proposal and there was a vote taken and they accepted the proposition.

Q. Did you vote for it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, were any agreements reached as to whether you should pay the Western Worker anything for its assistance?

A. No, I don't think there was any—I don't think there was any money connected with it at all.

Q. The Western Worker was offering its services free?

A. Yes, I believe so; there may have been something.

Q. Did the Strike Committee have a Financial Committee?

A. I didn't hear the last word of your sentence.

Q. Did the Strike Committee have a Financial Committee? A. No; that I don't recall.

Q. And the Western Worker continued to be the organ of the Strike Committee throughout the 1934 strike, is that correct?

A. No; it is my recollection that the thing was stopped before the strike was over.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Now, do you know why it was stopped?

A. Oh, I think, some discussion developed in the Strike Committee by people who pointed out that this Daily Western Worker strike bulletin was connected with the Western Worker, which, in turn was the official organ of the Communist Party, [4120] and they thought that it would be inadvisable to continue that sort of relationship, and that matter was discussed by the Strike Committee for a while. I think they voted to discontinue the business and I don't know whether the proposition was referred to the membership meeting or not.

Q. Now, during that period of time was there in existence in San Francisco what was known as the San Francisco Labor Council?

A. The San Francisco Labor Council?

Q. Yes? A. Yes.

Q. Were you a member of that Council?

A. I don't know whether I was a delegate to that Council that year or not.

Q. Now, isn't it a fact that the San Francisco Labor Council passed a resolution about that time condemning Communists and directing that all members of the Union disavow their connections with the Communist Party, and that failure to do so would result in expulsion from the Union, substantially to that effect?

A. They may have passed such a resolution. I don't remember; I don't know.

Q. They may have passed, you say, such a resolution? A. Yes, that is what I said.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. You have no recollection of it? [4121]

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did this Strike Committee, of which you were a member, seek assistance from any other sources during the 1934 strike?

A. Oh, yes. They sought and solicited assistance from all over the countryside.

Q. Did they ask for assistance from the ILA and the International Labor Defense?

A. I don't think it was asked.

Q. Didn't you arrange to have Elaine Black address the convention on the assistance that could be given by the International Labor Defense if the longshoremen would go on strike, just prior to the 1934 strike?

A. When you say "you" do you mean the Strike Committee or I?

Q. You as either a member of the Strike Committee or an individual? A. No.

Q. Huh? A. No.

Q. In either capacity?

A. No, I certainly didn't. Maybe somebody else on the Strike Committee did.

Q. Well, did you have any knowledge of it?

A. Absolutely none. [4122]

Q. You know Elaine Black, of course?

A. Yes, I recall her addressing the Strike Committee.

Q. What?

A. I recall her addressing the Strike Committee.

Q. And who was Elaine Black?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. She said that she was a representative of the ILA.

Q. She was also a member of the Communist Party, was she not? A. I don't know. [4123]

Q. You never heard that she was?

A. No, I didn't know; I didn't even know what the ILD was at that time.

Q. I asked you if you had ever heard she was a member of the Communist Party?

A. Oh, yes; that is generally known around town.

Q. And did she speak at the convention?

A. Convention?

Q. Did she speak before the ILA longshoremen?

A. She spoke at one of the Strike Committee meetings.

Q. Spoke before the Strike Committee?

A. That is right.

Q. When was that?

A. It was a few days after the cops on the waterfront gave some people a terrific beating.

Q. What did she speak about?

A. That was what she came there for.

Q. What did she say about it?

A. She explained, or told the longshore Strike Committee, that she came there to ask the Strike Committee to go with a representative of the ILD, and other trade unionists, to the Mayor's office and there protest against the police brutality which had taken place either the day before or a couple of days before that. A bunch of young people, who were advertised in the papers as being Communists, came to the waterfront, and [4124] they were beat up and ridden down by horse cops, and knocked down all over the place.

Q. Did she speak about anything else?

A. No. She went into quite a bit of the detail to describe some of the wounds that these people had received, lacerated scalps, and a couple of girls had black and blue breasts, she said.

Q. Did she say anything about how you should conduct the strike, what steps should be taken?

A. Did she say to us how we should conduct the strike?

Q. Yes. A. No.

Q. Did she offer the assistance of the ILD?

A. I think that was at a later date.

Q. What later date? You mean she addressed the Strike Committee more than once?

A. I couldn't remember. It is my best recollection that is the only time she addressed the Strike Committee. There may have been——

Q. (Interposing) You said that was at a later date that she offered the assistance of the ILD. When was that?

A. I don't remember. You asked me if the ILD offered assistance. I said "at a later date." My best recollection is that she didn't address the Strike Committee again, but maybe some communication passed back and forth [4125] between the union and the——

Q. (Interposing) How did the ILD offer its assistance at a later date?

A. My best recollection is that our Defense Committee, that is the Union Defense Committee, came to the Strike Committee and made some kind of a report that they had been offered assistance by the International Labor Defense, and I think they recommended that we do not accept it.

Q. Was that turned down?

A. I am pretty sure it was. I remember Dietrich—he was a member of the Defense Committee and the other was Fred Heiner—I think those were the only two fellows on the Defense Committee—and they both recommended that they could handle the business of the defense and we required no assistance. I am pretty sure the Strike Committee adopted that policy.

Q. Do you know Sam Diner? A. Who?

Q. Sam Diner?

A. No. I read about him in the paper in connection with this hearing.

Q. Did he ever have anything to do with the Defense Committee?

A. I don't know; I don't know the man.

Q. Did you ever go to 121 Haight Street during the time [4126] that the 1934 strike was in progress?

A. No. I testified yesterday when I had been there; once to hear somebody speak and another time——

Q. (Interposing) Is your testimony that you did not go to 121 Haight Street for any reason during the, at any time during the 1934 strike?

A. I am sure I didn't. I went to a place on Grove Street, at the time it was smashed up by the vigilantes, to look at the damage.

Q. That is correct. It was not at 121 Haight Street. Where was the Communist Party headquarters at that time?

A. This was a place on Grove Street near the City Hall.

Q. That was the headquarters of the Communist Party during the 1934 strike?

A. Well, I don't know. There was a big sign over the door saying "Western Worker". I went there, after somebody started a reign of terror around here and smashed up everything, and, among other things, they smashed up that place, so I went up and looked at the place.

Q. At 37 Grove Street? A. Yes.

Q. How many times did you go to 37 Grove Street during the 1934 strike?

A. That was the first time I went there, to the best of my recollection, and it was never reopened.

[4127]

Q. You only went there once?

A. Yes. I went there to see what damage had been done.

Q. Did you go inside? A. Oh, yes.

Q. Who did you meet inside?

A. Men and women in there—I don't recall anybody.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Elaine Black? A. I don't know.

Q. What? A. Pardon?

Q. Elaine Black? A. I don't know.

Q. You might have met her?

A. I testified a while ago that she addressed the Strike Committee.

Q. You might have met her at the time you visited 37 Grove Street?

A. I may have, and I may not; I don't know.

Q. Sam Darcy? A. I don't know.

Q. You might have met him at that time?

A. He may have been in there, but I wouldn't know.

Q. There was no meeting going on there at that time, was there?

A. It was impossible to hold a meeting in that place; [4128] everything was smashed up.

Q. Was there a meeting going on when you visited the place? A. I can't hear you.

Presiding Inspector: Read the question.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. No; there couldn't be any meeting; there was no meeting.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, did the Strike Committee, of which you were a member, also cooperate with the Marine Workers Industrial Union during the strike?

A. I wouldn't say there was much cooperation there. Some of their people used to come over and ask us to place something in our bulletin with regard to their situation.

Q. Who would come over?

A. I have no recollection who it was.

Q. Can you give me the name of anyone who was connected with the Marine Workers Industrial Union at that time?

A. Yes—Jackson and Telford.

Q. Harry Jackson? A. Yes.

Q. And Sam Telford?

A. That is right. [4129]

Q. Would they come over to the Strike Committee?

A. I think Telford came sometimes, and sometimes somebody else would come.

Q. Do you know any others that were connected with the Marine Workers Industrial Union?

A. No, I don't.

Q. How often would Jackson come?

A. I don't recall him having come to the Publicity Committee of our Strike Committee.

Q. Does Harry Jackson have any other name?

A. What?

Q. Does Harry Jackson have any other name?

A. Not to my knowledge. That is the only name I ever heard.

Q. Did you ever hear the name of Glickshon—G-l-i-c-k-s-h-o-n? A. No.

Q. You never heard that name? A. No.

Q. But you did know Harry Jackson at that time?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Mr. Gladstein: That has already been asked and answered about three or four times.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. He said he did.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. That resolution of the San Francisco Labor Council [4130] that I spoke about a few minutes ago was passed about June 22, 1934, was it not?

A. Well, I was going to explain a while ago, but I didn't get the opportunity, that my best recollection is that during 1933 I was not a delegate to the Labor Council; but I recall, when there was a possibility of a general strike developing, that the unions were requested to send delegates, other than their regular delegates, to the Labor Council meeting. I was one of those delegates. I think we had six or seven regular delegates to the Labor Council. My best recollection is that I was not a member of that group. But when the——

Q. (Interposing) That would be——

Mr. Gladstein: (Interposing) Just a moment. He hasn't finished.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Have you finished?

A. No. I was going to add that when the Central Labor Council issued a call for a special meeting to discuss the general strike, then I went there to that general strike committee meeting as an official representative of our union.

Q. When was that?

A. That must have been, well, it certainly was after July 5, 1934 because that is the day that all the killing and shooting took place by the cops around here.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. This would be a matter of record, would it not, of the San Francisco Labor Council? [4131]

A. The resolution you are talking about?

Q. Yes. A. Yes.

Q. Now, after the 1934 strike did you ever hear Harry Bridges propose on the floor of the meeting of Local 38-79 that the union send a representative to the Soviet Union as a guest of the Friends of the Soviet Union?

A. The proposal was made, but to the best of my recollection it wasn't Bridges.

Q. Didn't you second that motion?

A. I may have, but I don't think——

Q. (Interposing) That would be a matter of record, would it not?

A. You mean who made and seconded the motion?

Q. Yes.

A. That is very doubtful. The Secretary was not in the habit of putting down in the minutes who made or seconded a motion, unless it was a resolution——

Q. (Interposing) Your testimony is that you may have seconded such a motion?

A. I may have.

Q. And didn't this motion, didn't Bridges make this motion as a result of a letter of invitation from the Friends of the Soviet Union?

A. I have no knowledge of that. [4132]

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. And didn't Harry Bridges say, in support of that motion, that Local 38-79 was the outstanding union in the world because of their successful termination of the Maritime Strike, and that the sending of a representative to the Soviet Union would enhance their prestige in the labor movement?

Mr. Gladstein: That is a compound question and the witness——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) No.

Presiding Inspector: The witness may separate it.

Mr. Gladstein: If he understands the question.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

The Witness: I understand it.

Presiding Inspector: You can accept part of it, if it is a fact.

A. As far as the first half of the question is concerned, I have heard Bridges say on numerous occasions that he thought that our particular union was one of the best and strongest in the world.

But as to the latter part of your question, where he may have said something about the prestige of the union, and so forth, in connection with this matter that you are talking about, I don't recollect that.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. About sending a representative to the Soviet Union?

A. I don't recollect that part of it. [4133]

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. You don't recollect that part?

A. The other part of the sentence, the first part of the sentence, has been stated so often, that is, that we have one of the strongest and best unions in the country, and I say that myself.

Q. Were you on the Executive Board of the local at that time, Local 38-79?

A. Well, it depends on what year it was.

Q. 1935.

A. If I was not a paid official I was on the Executive Board.

Q. Well, were you a paid official in 1935?

A. No, I rather think that I was on the Executive Board.

Q. You do recall, however, the union receiving, Harry Bridges receiving a letter from the Friends of the Soviet Union to send a representative to the Soviet Union?

A. No, I don't recall that. I don't remember how the issue hit the floor of the membership. I know I never saw any letter.

Q. Didn't you offer to pay your own expenses if you could be sent as a delegate?

A. That is a little bit ridiculous. I had no money.

Q. What is ridiculous about it?

A. To state that I said at that time that I would pay my own expenses if I were sent. [4134]

Q. Because you had no money at that time?

A. Of course I had no money.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. You were a paid official of the union?

A. No. Even if I had been I wouldn't have had any money.

Q. What were you doing at that time, in 1935, 1936?

A. I was a longshoreman—I was longshoring.

Q. Were you working?

A. That is what I mean, that I was working as a longshoreman.

Q. Was not a vote taken on that motion to send a delegate? A. Yes, there was.

Q. And didn't it lose by a vote of 16 to 14?

A. Of how much?

Q. 16 to 14, before the Executive Board.

A. I don't know what you are talking about now. I thought we were talking about a membership meeting.

Q. Is that your answer?

A. Well, my recollection is that the issue that you are discussing with me took place in the membership meeting which, at that time, was held in some other hall on Golden Gate Avenue. It wasn't Eagles' Hall. There were hundreds of men there, so when you say "16 to 14" it doesn't make sense.

Q. Was the matter ever taken before the Executive Board? A. I don't recollect. [4135]

Q. You have no recollection of that, but you have a recollection of the other matter?

A. Yes; because there was a big fuss about it in the meeting. It took up the entire time of the meeting.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Didn't you want to go to Russia about that time?

A. Why should I want to go to Russia? No. I have family ties here, my people live here, my daughter lives here, my father is still alive, so why should I want to go to Russia?

Q. Will you answer the question?

Mr. Gladstein: He said "No."

Presiding Inspector: I take it as a negative answer.

Mr. Gladstein: He already said "No" in the very beginning.

Presiding Inspector: I still take it as a negative answer.

Mr. Del Guercio: I move to strike the rest of his answer.

Presiding Inspector: I will let it stand as an explanation.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you ever at any time admit to anyone that you were a member of the Communist Party?

A. No. In our line of business——

Q. (Interposing) Is this in answer to my question? A. Yes.

Q. Your answer is "No?"

A. Yes. The answer is "No."

Q. Now, do you want to qualify that? [4136]

A. That is correct, I want to qualify it.

Q. All right.

A. When you are active in the labor movement, as I have been for the past seven years, seven or eight years, you are practically accused of being a Communist every day in the week and you——

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. (Interposing) Have you ever been accused of being a Communist?

A. On numerous occasions.

Q. By whom? A. The Hearst papers.

Q. By anyone in your own union?

A. Oh, some fellow might, in anger, run to the microphone and use the word.

Q. Who, in your union, has accused you of being a Communist?

A. Well, usually some fellow that hasn't much use for me.

Q. Are there fellows in your union that haven't much use for you? A. Definitely.

Q. How many?

A. Well, I think, if you put it to a test, they can raise 642 votes out of 4000.

Q. Do you know of anyone—can you give me the name of [4137] anyone who has accused you, in your own union, of being a member of the Communist Party?

A. Oh, yes. There would be Kullberg, and Julius White—those fellows are no longer in our union.

Q. Because they accused you of being a Communist?

A. No, no. There is a fellow by the name of Patrick O'Hannigan, whose real name is Joseph Harold Hendry. He runs around the waterfront every day in the week calling everybody a Communist.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. I am asking you for the names of those who accused you of being a Communist.

A. I have mentioned three.

Q. Any others?

A. That is all that comes to my mind right now.

Q. Did Elmer Hanoff ever accuse you of being a member of the Communist Party?

A. I don't know him.

Q. You never met Elmer Hanoff at any time, any place? A. Bruce Hannon, you say?

Q. Elmer Hanoff?

Presiding Inspector: Elmer Hanoff.

A. No.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Have you ever asked any person to become a member of the Communist Party? [4138]

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you ever advised any person to become a member of the Communist Party? A. No.

Q. Have you ever invited any person to become a member of the Communist Party?

A. There is one word that I didn't get.

Mr. Del Guercio: Read the question.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. Invited—no.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Have you ever induced anyone to become a member of the Communist Party? A. No.

[4139]

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Have you ever been in the Gowman Hotel in Seattle, Washington?

A. It would be difficult to say. I stayed in about five different hotels there. If I could look at the place I could tell whether I ever stayed there or not.

Q. Do you know there is such a hotel?

A. Well, I suppose there is, but—since you mentioned it.

Q. Did you ever stop there over night?

A. Well, I have to repeat I would have to have, —see a photograph of the place, or be in Seattle and walk around and I could recognize that I stayed at this hotel and I didn't stay at that one.

Q. Where do you usually stop when you go to Seattle?

A. Well, I was up there the last time in November. I don't recall the name of the place that I stayed at.

Q. How many times have you been in Seattle during the last—say, since 1934?

A. About a dozen times.

Q. And where did you stop?

A. The first time I went there was in '35, I think. I had been in Seattle before that, however, but I recall the New Richmond Hotel. I think I stayed at the Savoy another time, and if there is a Westminster Hotel it seems to me there is some such name.

Q. Any other hotel? [4140]

A. Yes; I know I stayed at more than two different hotels but the names don't come to my mind.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. And you can't recollect any others, the names of any other hotels you stopped at in Seattle?

A. I may have stayed at the New Washington; the New Richmond, the Savoy and the New Washington, perhaps; I don't know.

Q. Have you exhausted your recollection?

A. That is the best I can do.

Q. Did you attend an ILA convention in Seattle in 1937? A. Which year, please?

Q. 1937?

A. Yes. I have been at every convention so I guess I was at that one.

Q. Well, did you go to that one?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. When did that convention take place in '37?

A. Well, it was early in '37. It may have been April or it may have been May. There was a time——

Q. (Interposing) Did you go up to Seattle alone that time?

A. I think there was a group of us on the train.

Q. Was Harry Bridges with you in that group?

A. No. I don't think so.

Q. Well, who was with you? Who were some of the persons who were in that group? [4141]

A. I would have to check the list of delegates that we had that year in order to refresh my memory.

Q. Well, were they all from your Local 38-79?

A. Well, there is a possibility that there were others, because there are other—or there were other ILA Locals.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Can you give me the names of any of those that were from your own Union?

A. Well, Shoemaker might have been in the delegation. As a matter of fact, we may have driven to Seattle, I don't remember. I have been on the train numerous times and I have driven there and I have taken the plane there.

Q. I am talking about this 1937 convention.

A. Well, that is just it. I can't—if you want some names I can go to our office and check who were the delegates at that particular time.

Q. How long did you stay in Seattle during the time of this 1937 convention?

A. Well, until it was finished. My recollection is that it lasted three weeks or so.

Q. Now, can you tell me now where you stopped in 1937? A. No.

Q. Was your wife with you? A. No.

Q. Now, what was discussed in that convention? What [4142] was the main topic of discussion?

A. One of the main topics, of course, was the possibility of our Union affiliated with the CIO.

Q. Now, do you recall if Harry Bridges was there? A. Oh, he was there, yes.

Q. But you don't remember if he went up there with you or not?

A. I am pretty sure that he didn't.

Q. Would you say that you stopped in the same hotel where Harry Bridges stopped?

A. I don't think so.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Would you say you stopped at the same hotel that Shoemaker stopped?

A. Yes, that is possible.

Q. Is Shoemaker the only person that you now recall that came up there that went to Seattle from your Union?

A. That is all I recall right now. Oh, I could name two now, two other delegates from our Local. That is what you want, isn't it?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, there was a man by the name of Marlowe who later became President of our Union and is now working for the Shipowners. Well Shoemaker was there.

Q. You have already said Shoemaker.

A. Yes. [4143]

Q. And you have recollected Marlowe who is now working with the Shipowners. Now, can you recollect anybody else?

A. No, that is all I can catch right now.

Q. Now, Shoemaker, as you know, broke away from the Communist Party, did he not?

The Witness: I didn't hear the first part of your sentence.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. That is news to me. I don't——

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. (Interposing) And Marlowe — well, strike that.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

While you were in Seattle in 1937 attending this convention—— A. Yes.

Q. (Continuing) Did you attend any Communist Party meetings? A. No.

Q. Now, you testified that you were a member, delegate to the Central Labor Council at San Francisco. A. That is right.

Q. Will you give me again, the years that you were a delegate to the Central Labor Council in San Francisco.

A. Well, my best recollection is that I became a special delegate to the Council when they had the meeting [4144] at which the general strike was discussed. There is doubt in my mind whether or not I was a delegate.

Q. Is that the '34 strike?

A. Yes. There is doubt in my mind whether or not I was a delegate prior to that time, but after the strike I was a delegate at the Central Labor Council where they held their weekly meetings, so that would be '35 and '36 and a part of '37 until they expelled us for joining the CIO.

Q. Now, during the times that you were a member of the Central Labor Council was Walter Lambert a member or a delegate? A. Who.

Q. Walter Lambert? A. I don't think so.

Q. Was John Shoemaker a member or a delegate?

A. Yes, John was a delegate to the Council.

Q. Was Harry Bridges a delegate?

A. Oh, yes.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. During the time that you were a delegate?

A. Yes.

Q. How often would the Central Labor Council hold meetings?

A. It meets—It met ever week.

Q. During the time you were——

A. (Interposing) It meets every week on Fridays. [4145]

Q. Every week on Friday. Now, did you, John Shoemaker and Walter Lambert meet at any time prior to the Friday meetings of the Central Labor Council?

A. No. What is this Lambert fellow doing in this group? He is not connected with our Union.

Q. But you do know that he was connected with the Communist Party, don't you?

A. That is what you told me. I don't know.

Q. Have you ever heard that he was connected with the Communist Party?

A. Yes, I have heard; his name is mentioned in the paper sometimes.

Q. Had you heard that he was a member of the Communist Party before the strike?

A. I don't know if I heard it by word of mouth or by the printed word. I have heard you say it.

Q. Well, do you say that he is not a member of the Communist Party?

A. I wouldn't know.

Q. Well, now, I will ask that question again. I don't know whether you answered it.

Did you ever meet Walter Lambert prior to the

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Friday meetings of the San Francisco Central Labor Council? A. No.

Q. In any kind of meetings? [4146]

A. Pardon?

Q. In any kind of meetings? A. No.

Q. Did you ever meet Walter Lambert?

A. Yes, I may have met him somewhere. It seems to me I have heard him speak from a platform some place.

Q. Was he a member of any union?

A. I wouldn't know that.

Q. How many times would you say that you have met Walter Lambert? A. Well——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I didn't hear that question. Would you read that question?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. Well, it wouldn't be more than twice.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you, as a delegate to this Central Labor Council, speak with any person at any time prior to any of the regular meetings of the Central Labor Council?

A. Oh, sometimes a few of the delegates would come together about 7:30 over in the bar of the Albion Hall and have a glass of beer and discuss the coming meeting, or, maybe, they wouldn't discuss the coming meeting, just made it a habit to drop in there and have a couple of drinks [4147] before they went to the meeting.

Q. Only for that purpose and nothing else?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. Well, that is what you usually go into one of those places for.

Q. I am speaking about the years 1935, '36 and '37.

A. Yes, that is what I am speaking about, too.

Q. Then, your answer is that during the years 1935, 1936 and 1937 you never met with any persons to program any matter that was to come up in a regular meeting of the Central Labor Council?

Mr. Gladstein: I will object to that as an improper statement of the testimony, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: He is asking it, I think.

A. None other than the one I just described. We would hang over the bar for half an hour. We might be discussing something that is coming up in the meeting. If you can call that program, why——

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. (Interposing) Did you meet with any person or group of persons regularly on Thursday nights during the years 1935, 1936 and 1937 to discuss matters that might be raised in the Central Labor Council?

A. Did I meet regularly in all those years? Every Thursday night? [4148]

Q. Yes?

A. To discuss matters with regard to the Labor Council?

Q. Yes. A. Lord, no.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Did you meet regularly on Thursday nights during the year 1935? A. During what year?

Q. '35? A. No.

Q. 1936? A. I don't understand this line of questioning. Is it a crime to meet somebody or —I don't get the drift of this at all.

Mr. Del Guercio: Will the Court admonish the witness, please.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Gladstein: There is ambiguity in the questions, asking whether you had met somebody during those years prior to certain Friday night meetings.

Presiding Inspector: I think the question is directed to a group or a caucus of some of the members.

Mr. Gladstein: It wouldn't appear so from the questions.

Presiding Inspector: Well, I think that it is.

Mr. Gladstein: I have difficulty in understanding what the questions call for. [4149]

Mr. Myron: The witness doesn't.

Presiding Inspector: I think the witness can understand them. I don't think the witness—I may be wrong about that—but when the witness said that he didn't understand the line of questioning I don't think it was that he didn't understand the questions in and of themselves.

Did you?

The Witness: Yes, sir. I am trying to conclude, in my own mind what Mr. Del Guercio is aiming at.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Mr. Del Guercio: It isn't necessary for you to do that. I suggest that the Court instruct the witness.

Mr. Gladstein: It is necessary for the witness to understand what is being called for.

Presiding Inspector: He can understand the questions. Go ahead. I think we can get along all right.

Mr. Del Guercio: What is the answer?

The Witness: You better read the question back.

Presiding Inspector: I think you have answered it.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Let me put it this way, Mr. Schmidt: What caucuses—strike that, please.

Did you attend any caucuses or meetings with any person or persons on Thursday nights prior to the regular meetings of the Central Labor Council during the year 1935? [4150]

A. If you can call the gathering of a group of men who happened to be delegates to the Central Labor Council, while they are discussing some of the issues that might come up, while they are having a scotch and soda, then, the answer is "Yes", I was at a caucus, but I never concluded, in my mind, that we were holding a caucus or a meeting.

Q. Did you attend such caucuses or meetings during the year 1936? A. I may have.

Q. Did you attend such caucuses or meetings during the year 1937?

A. I doubt it very much.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. All right. Now, who were some of the persons with whom you met in such caucuses in the year 1935?

A. Oh, Bridges would drop in sometimes, of course. Sometimes, there were a couple of delegates from the Machinists' Union.

Q. What are their names?

A. I think there was a man by the name of Sheare.

The Reporter: Spell it, please.

The Witness: That is the trouble. I don't know how you spell it. I think it is S-h-e-a-r-e, maybe.

And I seen Shoemaker there a couple of times. There was another machinist there but I don't recall his name.

Q. Now, did Walter Lambert ever attend any such caucuses [4151] or meetings? A. No.

Q. During 1935, 1936 and 1937? A. No.

Q. Would you discuss in these caucuses or meetings issues that were coming up in the Council the following night?

Yes; while we were consuming our drinks, why, somebody sometimes had some information as to what was going to come up in the Council.

Q. Well, now, can you answer this question: Were these meetings primarily for the purpose of drinking or for the purpose of discussing matters that were coming up in the Council the next morning or the next day?

A. I might say they were for both purposes.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Both purposes? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And would they be regularly held during the years 1935, 1936 and 1937?

A. No, they would be very irregular.

Q. Would you say that they were held every time prior to the elections in the Labor Council?

A. Yes, that could have happened.

Q. And would a program be laid out in these meetings as to what the group would do on the floor of the Labor Council on either the election or questions that were coming up? [4152]

A. Discussion with regard to elections sometimes took place.

Q. Would a decision be reached?

A. I don't think you could call it a "decision." Fellows would——

Q. (Interposing) Now, where would these meetings take place, these conferences and meetings?

A. In the saloon on Valencia Street.

Q. Only in a saloon?

A. Yes, that is the only place there is there.

Q. Well, would it be in a room or on the——

A. (Interposing) Well, there was a basement there; that was two and a half or three years ago. They made a change in the building and they moved it.

Q. Would it be a private place in the saloon or a place where the public——

A. (Interposing) Oh, heck, no; it was right

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

there where everybody was in and out; no privacy about it.

Q. Never in a private room?

A. (Negative nod.)

Q. Huh? A. No.

Q. At any times during the years 1935, '36 and '37? A. That is right.

Q. Now, did any other person attend these meetings or [4153] caucuses other than the ones you have named?

A. Oh, yes, but I don't recall their names right now.

Q. If you tried hard could you remember?

A. Oh, I might remember some this afternoon or tomorrow.

Mr. Del Guercio: May we have a short recess?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

(Whereupon a short recess was taken.)

Presiding Inspector: You may proceed.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Do you know Tommy Ray?

A. Tommy who?

Q. Ray, R-a-y?

A. I don't know him. I just read about him the other day.

Q. Did you ever meet him during the 1934 strike or prior to the 1934 strike?

A. I don't know him at all, know nothing about him. [4154]

Q. Did you ever attend any meetings in 1935, May, at 1449 O'Farrell Street, San Francisco?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. No.

Q. Do you know that address, 1449 O'Farrell Street?

A. No; it doesn't mean a thing to me.

Q. Do you ever attend any meeting at that address with Harry Bridges?

A. No. How could I when I said the place doesn't mean anything to me?

Q. Did you ever attend any meetings in September, 1935, at 121 Haight Street, headquarters of the Communist Party? A. No.

Q. At any time in September 1934?

A. No. The only meetings that I went to, and I don't think I can mention the date, was the ones I mentioned earlier and they are in the record.

Q. Did you ever attend any Communist Party meetings in September, 1935 at the ARTA headquarters in San Francisco? A. No.

Q. Were any Communist Party meetings ever held at your home in the years 1935, 1936 and 1937?

A. Never at any time.

Q. Were any meetings ever held at your home during those years? A. No. [4155]

Q. Did Harry Bridges ever attend any meetings at your home during the years 1935, 1936 and 1937?

A. He has been at my home, but it wasn't at a meeting; he was there for dinner.

Q. Did Harry Bridges ever come to your home with other persons during those years?

A. He came with his daughter one time.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Did he ever come to your home with John Shoemaker?

A. I don't think so.

Q. During the years 1935, 1936 and 1937?

A. Any years.

Q. Did he ever come to your home with, or at any time when Walter Lambert was in your home?

A. No.

Q. Did he ever come to your home at any time that Schneidermann was in your home?

A. No.

Q. Did he ever meet Schneidermann in your home? A. No.

Q. During the years 1935, 1936 and 1937?

A. Any year.

Q. Did you attend any meetings of the Communist Party at 121 Haight Street during October 1935?

A. No, again. How many times am I going to be asked this question? [4156]

Q. Are you getting tired? Do you want a drink?

A. No, I don't want a drink and I am not getting tired.

Presiding Inspector: Just answer the questions.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you attend any Communist Party meetings at 121 Haight Street during September 1936?

A. No.

Q. Did you attend any Communist Party meetings at the Equality Hall on Albion Street, San Francisco, during May 1937?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. Did you say "any meeting or "Communist meeting"?

Q. Communist Party meetings. A. No.

Q. Did you attend any meetings at that place?

A. Frequently.

Q. At which Communist Party members were present? A That is possible.

Q. Well, what Communist Party members were present?

A. It so happens that I am a member of the Workmen's Sick and Death Benefit Fund, a fraternal organization, which has its headquarters in that particular building, and they hold membership meetings once a month. Formerly, when I had more time, I used to go to those meetings. If some of the members of that particular organization happened to be a Communist then I might have been in a meeting with Communists.

Q. Did you know if any of them were members of the [4157] Communist Party?

A. I never bothered to inquire, so I wouldn't know.

Q. Were those the only meetings that you attended at that place?

A. On Albion Street? A. Yes.

A. No. I indicated earlier that the Albion Hall group of longshoremen were there.

Q. This is during the year 1937.

A. Well, I have been a member of that society that has been meeting there for ten years.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Did you ever attend any meetings at Equality Hall on Albion Street during the year 1937 in which Communist Party members were present?

Mr. Gladstein: I think that has been answered.

Presiding Inspector: I think he has answered that.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Other than the ones you have mentioned?

A. No.

Q. Did you attend the Maritime Federation convention in Portland in 1937? A. Yes.

Q. June 1937?

A. I am pretty sure it was June.

Q. And where did you stop in Portland at that time? [4158]

A. I think it was in the Sherman Hotel.

Q. What was the purpose of that convention?

A. It was the regular annual convention of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific, where we tried to formulate a program for the coming year.

Q. Were any difficulties had in that convention over the Credentials Committee?

A. I don't recall. I wasn't on the Committee.

Q. Was there any discussion on the floor of the convention regarding the Credentials Committee.

Mr. Gladstein: I will object to that as being immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: In and of itself I think it would be. Maybe he has something in mind. I will take it as preliminary.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. I really don't recall.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Were any caucuses held prior to the convention over any controversies over the Credentials Committee, or any controversy raised by the Credentials Committee?

A. I really don't recall if there was a fuss over the Credentials Committee or not.

Q. Was Harry Bridges at that convention?

A. Yes.

Q. Was Harry Jackson at that convention?

A. No. [4159]

Q. Did you meet Harry Jackson in Portland at any time during that convention? A. No.

Q. Was Z. R. Brown at that convention?

A. I believe he was.

Q. Was John Shoemaker? A. Yes.

Q. Was Harry Schmidt, yourself?

A. Yes.

Q. Herman Stuyvelaar?

A. I think he was.

Q. John Fougerouse?

A. I couldn't say. I am sure I didn't know him then.

Q. Paul Benson?

A. No; that name doesn't mean anything to me.

Q. Germain Bulcke?

A. Yes. I think he was there.

Q. Jack Lawrenson?

A. If that was the fraternal delegate from the National Maritime Union, I recall him being there.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. T. J. Van Erman?

A. Yes; he may have been there, but I wouldn't be sure about it.

Q. Did you attend any meetings, outside of the convention, at which any of the persons I have mentioned were present? [4160]

A. I must have. There were numerous committee meetings during the convention, and when the convention adjourned then the Committees went to work. Some of them didn't meet in the Labor Temple. They met in hotel rooms. I don't recall what kind of committees, what sort of committees these men you mentioned were on.

Q. Were they regular meetings?

A. They were the usual committee meetings. The work of conventions is usually done by committees.

Q. Were they official meetings of the various committees of the Convention?

A. Yes. Besides that——

Q. (Interposing) Did you attend any meetings that were not official meetings of any of the Committees of the Convention with any of the persons I have mentioned?

A. Yes. I went to caucuses where various matters were discussed.

Q. Where was that?

A. It was at another hotel down the street a couple of blocks.

Q. Do you know the name of the hotel?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. No. The first word is "New"—New—something.

Q. Could it possibly be the New Lennox Hotel?

A. Yes; that is the name.

Q. And where was the meeting held in the Lennox Hotel? [4161]

A. Well, it was in a very large room.

Q. Was it a private room?

A. It was a room that belonged to one of these delegates.

Q. What?

A. A room that belonged to one of the delegates.

Q. What was his name?

A. I don't know.

Q. You remember the room number?

A. No.

Q. Could it have been room 406?

A. Could have been.

Q. And could that meeting have taken place about the third week of June in 1937?

A. It could be.

Q. And where there were present the following persons at that meeting: Harry Bridges, Eugene Dietrich, Harry Dennett Jackson, Z. R. Brown, Cameron, John Shoemaker, Herman Stuyvelaar, John Fougerouse, Paul Benson, Joseph Curran, Germain Bulcke, Jack Lawrenson, T. J. Van Erman?

A. I couldn't say "Yes" or "No" to that kind of a question.

Q. Weren't all these persons that I have named members of the Communist Party?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. I don't know.

Q. Wasn't that a Communist Party meeting?

[4162]

A. I don't think so.

Q. Is there some doubt in your mind?

A. I repeat, I don't know; I don't think so. They were all trade unionists, all delegates to this convention.

Q. Was Harry Jackson a trade unionist?

A. I don't know whether he was there or not.

Q. Was John Fougerouse a trade unionist?

A. He belonged to the Marine Cooks and Stewards; yes.

Q. He was also a prominent member of the Communist Party, was he not?

A. I didn't know Fougerouse at that time.

Q. You know he is the same John Fougerouse who has been made the subject of a deportation proceeding?

A. I read that in the trade union papers.

Q. You know that he is the same John Fougerouse that was criminally prosecuted in the District Court in Los Angeles for making false statements?

A. No; of that I know nothing.

Q. And what was discussed in this meeting?

A. As I recall the discussion had to do as to the procedure we would follow in this particular convention with regard to affiliating the unions that were represented there with the CIO.

Q. Isn't it a fact that there was discussed at this meeting in the New Lennox Hotel the voting strength of the [4163] Communist Party in the convention.

A. The voting strength of what?

Q. Of the Communist Party.

A. I don't follow that. How could the Communist Party have any voting?

Q. I am asking you if it wasn't discussed.

A. No. I would like to say——

Q. (Interposing) Didn't you also discuss at that meeting—wasn't that also discussed, the matter of getting around the report of the Credentials Committee?

A. No; I think that is incorrect.

Q. Who was the Chairman of that meeting?

A. I don't remember. The fellows were lying around—there wasn't enough furniture for them to sit down—lying around on the floor. There was no Chairman.

Q. And wasn't there a discussion in that meeting in the New Lennox Hotel to the effect that the cards were stacked against the progressive element in the convention, including the Communists?

A. The remark about the progressive element might have been mentioned, but I wouldn't even recall that.

Q. And, Mr. Schmidt, do you recall now attending another meeting in the New Lennox Hotel, following the meeting that you have testified to, in which the same, substantially the same persons were present? [4164]

A. No, I don't.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Let me refresh your recollection. How many meetings, unofficial meetings, did you attend with members of the Communist Party during the time of this Maritime Convention in Portland in the New Lennox Hotel?

A. Whenever there were meetings held I was in meetings with trade unionists. I don't know anything about your Communists.

Q. How many meetings did you attend in the New Lennox Hotel?

A. I don't know; might have been two or three.

Q. And who were present in these other meetings, other than the first?

A. Some of those people that you mentioned.

Q. Also Harry Jackson?

A. I have no recollection of him being there.

Q. Would you say that you did not meet Harry Jackson in the New Lennox Hotel in Portland, Oregon, at the time of this convention?

A. I have absolutely no recollection of meeting Harry Jackson there.

Q. Would you testify that you did not meet Harry Jackson in Portland, Oregon during the time of this convention, and particularly in the New Lennox Hotel?

A. I would testify that when I rack my memory I don't [4165] remember meeting him there.

Q. How far are you racking your memory?

A. I am trying to do the best I can.

Q. You won't give a "Yes" or "No" answer on that, will you?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. I don't see how I can when I don't remember.

Q. Do you know A. T. Pringle? A. Who?

Q. A. T. Pringle—P-r-i-n-g-l-e. A. No.

Q. Did you ever meet him?

A. I don't know him so I assume that I have never met him.

Q. Did you ever attend any Communist Party meeting in which A. T. Pringle was present?

A. No.

Q. Did you, in September 1936, attend a Communist Party meeting at 121 Haight Street in which there were present Harry Bridges, John Shoemaker, William Schneidermann, Roy Pyle and A. T. Pringle? A. No.

Q. Were you at 121 Haight Street with Harry Bridges and John Shoemaker, in September 1936?

A. No.

Q. And did you at that time, with Harry Bridges and [4166] John Shoemaker, go into Schneidermann's office? A. No.

Q. At 121 Haight Street?

A. Yes, I understand you mean 121 Haight Street, and I can only repeat what I got in the record, that is what I have testified to before, that I have been in that place only twice.

Q. Are you through? A. Yes.

Q. Did you see, when you, Harry Bridges and John Shoemaker, went into Schneidermann's office, did you see Pyle, Roy Pyle, and Pringle just outside the door of Schneidermann's office?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. How could that be when I wasn't there?

Q. What is your answer, "Yes" or "No."

Mr. Gladstein: The question is ridiculous. The question is assuming that contrary——

Presiding Inspector: I will exclude it. But you can refresh his recollection.

Mr. Gladstein: I haven't any objection to that. But the question first asked was, "Were you there with these people?" and the answer was "No." Then the question was asked, "When you were there did you see somebody else?"

Presiding Inspector: It assumes something that the witness has just denied.

Mr. Gladstein: That is right, [4167]

Presiding Inspector: But that doesn't restrict him from asking him about such an occurrence.

Was there such an occurence of this kind suggested in the question? The Witness: No.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Have you ever been in Schneidermann's office, Mr. Schmidt? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever attend, Mr. Schmidt, any Communist Party meetings between November 1936 and February 1937 at the home of Walter Lambert?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know where Walter Lambert lives, or lived at that time?

A. I haven't the slightest idea.

Q. Did you ever attend any Communist Party

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

meetings during that same period of time at the home of Rosenfeld?

A. The name is absolutely unfamiliar.

Q. Did you ever speak at any Communist Party meetings at either the home of Rosenfeld, or the home of Walter Lambert, during the period from November 1936 and February 1937?

A. I certainly did not.

Q. Did you ever speak at such meetings in the homes of those two persons on the Communist Party work among Longshoremen? [4168]

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever speak at any of such meetings at the homes of Rosenfeld and Walter Lambert on the subject of recruiting members to the Communist Party from among the longshoremen?

A. No, sir. I didn't know where they lived so I couldn't have spoken there.

Q. Did you ever speak at any of such meetings at the homes of those two persons on the question of discrediting labor union officials who opposed the Communist Party, such as O'Connell, McLaughlin, Vandeleur and Lundeberg?

A. I never spoke at the homes of those particular people on any subject at any time.

Q. Did you speak against those persons, labor union officials, at any time?

A. Will you mention the names again?

Q. O'Connell, McLaughlin, Vandeleur and Lundeberg.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. In the membership meeting of the longshoremen, longshoremen's meeting, I might have mentioned their names.

Q. Did you speak against them because they were opposed to Communism?

A. No, not particularly.

Q. Not particularly. In what way, then, did you do it?

A. Well, I simply tried to point out that these fellows had, in my opinion, had not at heart the best interests of the [4169] workers that they happened to represent. Of course, I don't recall the exact words.

Q. What did you say in connection with Communism? A. Nothing.

Q. Did you belabor them because they were trying to weed out Communists in the labor union movement? A. No.

Q. Did you say anything about that?

A. I don't think so.

Q. Why did you oppose them?

A. Well, we got acquainted with these people in 1934, or thereabouts, and our union had a certain program that they apparently didn't believe in, and we couldn't get much cooperation from them. The waterfront unions seemed to be considered, well, we couldn't get very close association with the labor movement in the City of San Francisco, and we were sort of isolated, and I certainly was convinced that these particular fellows that you mentioned weren't doing us any good.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Let us take Lundeberg, Harry Lundeberg, for instance. You knew that he was opposed to Communism, didn't you?

A. He has been raising a lot of Cain about Communists in their official organ for the last three or four years.

Q. Why have you been belaboring Lundeberg?

A. I haven't said anything about Lundeberg from any [4170] platform.

Q. You have never spoken against Lundeberg?

A. I might have said, in connection with some issue in our meeting, that the Sailors Union are doing so and so, and in my estimation such a move isn't any good, and we can't agree with the Lundeberg program.

Q. Did you ever attack Harry Lundeberg because he was opposing Communism?

A. No. Harry Lundeberg hasn't been mentioned in our Union for years, in spite of the fact that he practically lives next door to us. We pay no attention to him.

Q. How long have you known Lou or Louis Goldblatt? A. Oh, I think since 1936.

Q. And what is your acquaintanceship with Louis Goldblatt, what has it been since 1936?

A. Well, I know him first as a member of the Warehousemen's Union, who occasionally worked as a longshoreman. Then he was elected Vice President of his own union.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Have you ever attended any Communist Party meetings with Louis Goldblatt?

A. No.

Q. How long have you known that Louis Goldblatt was a member of the Communist Party?

A. I haven't known it.

Q. Never heard it? [4171]

A. Well, I am hearing it now, and I read it in the paper in connection with this case.

Q. Have you ever heard it before this case?

A. Oh, there have been rumors around the waterfront.

Q. Then you have heard it?

A. Well, if you can call that hearing.

Q. Is there any question in your mind but what Louis Goldblatt has been and still is a member of the Communist Party?

A. I have way of knowing. There has even been some rumor that even the Governor of the State is a Communist, has been called a Communist, and also President Roosevelt.

Q. Have you ever been interested in trying to find out who is and who is not a member of the Communist Party in the trade union movement on the Pacific Coast?

A. No; I have never concerned myself very much about it.

Q. Do you think that a Communist can make a good trade union man?

A. There are a couple or three in our union that don't seem to harm anybody.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Who are those?

A. Well, a man by the name of Jones got up in the meeting one evening and said that he didn't mind telling those that were assembled there that he was a member of the Communist Party. [4172]

Q. Who else? A. And Brown.

Q. Z. R. Brown? A. No; Archie Brown.

Q. What did he say?

A. I don't think he said anything. It is generally assumed that he must be a member of the Communist Party because on a couple of occasions he either ran for Supervisor of the City or for Congress on the Communist Party ticket.

Q. I see. And who else?

A. That is all that comes to my mind right now.

Q. Did you ever have the nerve to get up in your own union and say, "I am a Communist?"

A. No, sir. I never said anything like that.

Q. Well, now, you heard Mr. Honig testify—you were in the Court room at the time you said—that there have been Communist Party meetings, among others, with the same Archie Brown that you have mentioned?

A. Will you repeat that, please?

Presiding Inspector: Read the question.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. I was in the court room late one afternoon when this fellow, Honig, was on the stand, but whether he testified with regard to one Brown, I don't recall. [4173]

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you hear him testify that he attended Communist Party meetings with B. B. Jones?

A. No, I don't think he mentioned that name while I was here.

Q. That is the same Jones whom you said got up in your union one time and said that he was a Communist? A. Yes.

Mr. Gladstein: Just a minute.

Mr. Myron: He answered.

Mr. Del Guercio: He said "Yes."

Mr. Gladstein: I move that the answer be stricken until I can make an objection to the question.

Presiding Inspector: Let us hear the objection.

Mr. Gladstein: My objection is that the question is absurd because nothing of any probative value could come out of an answer to that question.

Presiding Inspector: I don't see how asking him whether he heard that particular remark is material.

Mr. Del Guercio: To identify the persons who the witness Honig admitted were members of the Communist Party.

Mr. Gladstein: How could this witness do it?

Presiding Inspector: Whether he heard Mr. Honig say something about people being at a meeting or not, seems to me entirely immaterial, or whether he heard it. [4174]

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Mr. Gladstein: That is right. That is the basis of my objection.

Presiding Inspector: I don't see any materiality of what he heard Mr. Honig say. We have got in the record what Mr. Honig did say, I suppose, accurately.

Mr. Myron: He identified Jones as B. B. Jones.

Presiding Inspector: What difference does it make whether he heard Mr. Honig say something or not?

Mr. Myron: It is not what Honig said. He identified the Jones he referred to as B. B. Jones.

Presiding Inspector: The question is, did he hear Mr. Honig say something or other? What difference does it make whether this witness heard Mr. Honig say something, or did not?

Mr. Gladstein: The next question asked was whether this B. B. Jones Mr. Honig talked about is the same man that Mr. Schmidt has mentioned as being a member of his union. How in the world could Mr. Schmidt's answer to that be of any probative value? The identification of Mr. Jones would have to come from the Government's witness.

The first question asked was "Were you here when Mr. Honig mentioned Jones?"

He said, "No."

Then he asked, "Wasn't the Jones mentioned by Mr. Honig the same Jones that you talked about as being a member of the longshoremen's Union?

[4175]

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Is counsel repeating what appears in the record?

Presiding Inspector: I suppose so.

Mr. Del Guercio: May we have those questions and answers read?

Presiding Inspector: Yes, you may.

You may read the two questions.

(The questions and answers referred to were read by the reporter as follows:

"Q. Did you hear him testify that he attended Communist Party meetings with B. B. Jones?

"A. No, I don't think he mentioned that name while I was here.

"Q. That is the same Jones whom you said got up in your union one time and said that he was a Communist?

"A. Yes.")

Presiding Inspector: I will strike out the answer and exclude the question. But I will let you ask whether he understands that your question relates to the same man whom he mentioned as having gotten up in the meeting and said he was a Communist,—even if that is what you want. He says he didn't hear Mr. Honig. Now, how can you ask him what Mr. Honig meant in something that he didn't hear? [4176]

Q. Is the Jones that you referred to as getting up in your Union and saying those things that he was a Communist, is that B. B. Jones?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. Those are his initials, yes.

Presiding Inspector: I think you have got everything that you really wanted.

Mr. Del Guercio: Sir?

Presiding Inspector: You have gotten everything in that answer that you wanted.

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, I believe counsel on direct examination asked you if you knew Walter Stack. You said that you did. A. I said that I did, yes.

Q. How long have you known Walter Stack?

A. I met him first in 1935 when we organized the American Federation convention. That would make it six years.

Q. You have known him ever since 1935?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have known him as a member of the Communist Party during that period of time?

A. That is generally known, although I never heard him say so himself until last year in an Astoria convention of the American Federation. [4177]

Q. Do you know Revels Cacton, C-a-c-t-o-n?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. For how long a period have you known him?

A. About three years.

Q. And during that period of time did you know him as a member of the Communist Party?

A. No; I knew him as the Secretary of District

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Council No. 2. Since he is the Secretary of that body and I happen to be the President we see each other.

Q. Had you heard during that period of time that he was a member of the Communist Party?

A. Oh, that idea is batted around the waterfront sometimes, yes.

Mr. Gladstein: Your Honor, I might say at this point we have not been objecting to questions which asked have you heard that so and so is a member of the Communist Party but, I think, at this point we should make this comment:——

Mr. Myron (Interposing): I think counsel has a perfect right to object to questions when they are asked, not to make speeches afterwards. I object to any such speech.

Mr. Gladstein: If counsel objects he can ask my remarks be stricken.

Mr. Myron: There is no question pending.

Mr. Gladstein: I want to make this statement:——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): I will hear you. [4178]

Mr. Gladstein: The history of the waterfront since 1934, has been such that probably no person in any position——

Mr. Myron (Interposing): Just a moment. I object to this.

Presiding Inspector: I think that is rather argumentative.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Mr. Gladstein: I say this is introductory to what I am going to say, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: What do you want to say?

Mr. Gladstein: What I want to say is this: To ask a question as to whether you have heard that anybody has been talked of as a Communist has no probative value. Though we have not objected to this question I would like to have sort of an indication from the Court as to whether the Court considers questions of that kind material. We feel they are immaterial but we don't like to make any objections that will restrict counsel in the broadest kind of cross examination. We have no objection to that, but we want this understood: There is hardly anyone in any of the Pacific Coast waterfront unions who at some time or other has not been accused of being a Communist, so to ask have you heard whether so and so is a Communist is a question which we feel, in the light of the history of the trade union movement since 1934 on the Pacific Coast, is meaningless, and we point that out to your Honor because hereafter, I think, in view of our feeling on this, [4179] though we had no knowledge that the bulk of Mr. Del Guercio's case would consist of asking people questions as to whether witnesses had heard that so and so was a Communist, we are going to object to such questions as immaterial from now on.

Mr. Myron: I think, in view of that speech, your Honor, that counsel should be censured for making those statements in Court. There is absolutely no argument on that. It is merely done for publicity purposes and putting information in the mouth of the witness.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, no. I think it is not so bad.

Mr. Myron: I think it is very bad.

Presiding Inspector: Ask your next question.

Mr. Del Guercio: If the Court please——

Presiding Inspector: Ask the next question. We have closed this matter. I am not going to make any ruling on the matter Mr. Gladstein proposed. Go ahead.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Have you ever been connected with the Bridges' Defense Committee? A. Oh, yes.

Q. In what capacity, Mr. Schmidt?

A. Right now I happen to be the Chairman of the Bridges' Defense Committee of the Local Union.

Q. Well, did you have any other connection with it?

A. Well, that makes me a member of it.

Q. Did you ever have any other position on the Bridges' [4180] Defense Committee?

A. No, except that a few weeks ago we organized the Bridges' Defense Committee in the San Francisco Industrial Union Council, but that particular group was assimilated by the National Bridges' Defense Committee.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. That is the only connection you have had with the Bridges' Defense Committee?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever hold any official position on the Bridges' Defense Committee?

A. You say an unofficial position?

Presiding Inspector: No; did you ever hold any official position? I suppose he means as an officer.

The Witness: You mean such as Executive Secretary or anything like that?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Anything?

A. Well, now, I am Chairman of a Bridges' Defense Committee, the Bridges' Defense Committee organized by the Local Union of which I happen to be President also. Now I guess that is official.

Q. That is the only position that you have ever had in the Bridges' Defense Committee?

A. Well, I was a member of the Bridges' Defense Committee that we had in 1939. [4181]

Q. I am speaking about the present——

A. (Interposing): That is all.

Q. Were you ever President of the Bridges' Defense Committee? A. President?

Q. Yes.

A. I didn't know it had a President.

Q. Did you ever hold that title? A. No.

Q. That position? A. No.

Q. Did you ever sign checks? A. Oh, yes.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. For the Bridges' Defense Committee?

A. Nobody can get any dough unless Schmidt signs the checks for the Bridges' Defense Committee.

Q. Are you in charge of the money?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, how can you sign checks?

A. Well, the Bridges' Defense Committee has authorized the Secretary-Treasurer of our Local Union, as well as the Recording Secretary of our Local Union and the President of our Local Union to sign the checks, and unless all three signatures appear thereon the check is no good. [4182]

Q. Well, in whose account is that money kept?

A. In the name of the Bridges' Defense Committee.

Q. And who are the Trustees?

A. Well, I guess us three, the three men that I just mentioned would be the Trustees.

Q. Are you one of them?

A. I suppose you could put that title on me.

Q. Is that a position in the Bridges' Defense Committee?

A. Well, if you mean by "position" does it pay me anything, the answer is "No."

Q. On October 2, 1940, Mr. Schmidt, did you sign yourself as Henry Schmidt, President, Harry Bridges' Defense Fund?

A. No, I don't see why I should do that. October 2, 1940? It doesn't make sense.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Did you at any time sign your name Henry Schmidt, President, during 1940?

A. Oh, I signed my name as Henry Schmidt, President of ILWU 1-10 pretty near every day in the year.

Q. In connection with the disbursing of any funds of the Bridges' Defense Committee did you sign your name Henry Schmidt, President, Bridges' Defense Committee? A. No.

Mr. Gladstein: Your Honor, I think that is quite im- [4183] material. I object.

Mr. Del Guercio: I think it is very material. It goes to the credibility of this witness.

Mr. Gladstein: What will it show?

Presiding Inspector: I don't see that it amounts to much, but I will take it.

Mr. Gladstein: What will it show?

Mr. Del Guercio: His bias and prejudice, if your Honor please.

Presiding Inspector: Well, that is all argument. I am going to take it. At present I don't see that it amounts to much. When it comes to some other phase I may have some other view. He reports that the Committee authorized three persons to sign the checks and the checks are not to be good unless they are signed by these three. He is one of those three persons.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Do you know Walter E. Bell?

A. Yes, sir.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. What connection does he have with the Bridges' Defense.

A. He is one of the persons authorized to sign the checks and he is the Recording Secretary of our Union.

Q. And Edgar E. Reite, R-e-i-t-e. Is that Reite?

A. We pronounce it Reite (long "i").

Q. Who is he? [4184]

A. He is the Secretary-Treasurer of our Union. He functions in the capacity of Treasurer of the Bridges' Defense Committee.

Mr. Del Guercio: We have some more topics, if your Honor please.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. I believe you testified yesterday in answer to Mr. Gladstein's questions that you do not know Cannalonga; is that correct?

A. Yes, that is what I said, and I don't know him.

Q. And that you never sat with Mr. Cannalonga in any Communist Party meetings, is that correct?

A. I don't recollect sitting with Mr. Cannalonga in any kind of a meeting.

Q. Have you ever met Cannalonga in any kind of a meeting? A. A moment ago I said "No."

Q. Now, Mr. Schmidt, you also testified yesterday that you were on the negotiating committee during the 1936-1937 maritime strike, and in answer to counsel's—Mr. Gladstein's questions, you explained what the negotiating committee did; is that correct? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who else was on that committee?

A. A man by the name of White who is a Seattle long- [4185] shoreman and Bridges, of course; Matt Meehan, I am sure.

Q. Was C. R. Brown on that Committee?

A. C. R. Brown is not a longshoreman. He couldn't have been on that committee.

Q. Roy Pyle? A. No.

Q. Walter Stack? A. No.

Q. I believe you also testified concerning a joint meeting of the affiliated unions negotiating committee, is that right?

A. No, I don't think I said that because the attempts to organize the joint negotiating committee failed.

Q. Well, did you ever attend any joint meeting of the negotiating committee?

A. There was no such committee. There was only a gathering of the joint marine strike committee which was representative of all unions on strike.

Q. Now, isn't it a fact, Mr. Schmidt, that Mr. Maurice Cannalonga was on this joint negotiating committee?

A. Well, if he was I didn't notice him.

Q. And that you met him at that time?

A. Absolutely no recollection of meeting him and I studied very carefully the photograph that appeared in the paper a couple of weeks ago.

[4186]

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Did you attend a meeting of the negotiating committee, or of this joint negotiating committee, whichever it was, at which a resolution was adopted to send the following telegram to the Maritime Commission, Secretary of Labor and President Roosevelt dated, "October 14, 1936

"President Roosevelt
"White House,

Signed "F. M. KELLEY, Chairman

"Maritime Federation."

The Witness: What was the question you were asking me?

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Was such a telegram sent?

A. Well, in all probability. I recall——

Q. (Interposing): Do you recognize it?

A. (Examining document): Yes, I recall the contents of the telegram.

Q. Do you recall the discussions had before the telegram was made up? A. No.

Q. You have no recollection of that?

A. They may have elected a sub-committee, drawn it up and referred it back to the body proper.

Q. Were you present at the time?

A. I may have been; I don't know.

Q. Did you participate in the forming of this telegram?

A. I don't recollect that. There were meetings every day of that body. [4188]

Q. Well, now, Mr. Schmidt, do you recall making a motion that the committee refer the wire, this wire that I have read, to the Publicity Committee for re-adopting or re-drafting?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. I may have made such a motion; I don't know.

Mr. Gladstein: Your Honor, I raise this question——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): Just a minute, your Honor. I don't think counsel should interrupt at this time. There is no question.

Presiding Inspector: What is the next question?

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, isn't it a fact, Mr. Smith, that the sending of the above telegram was moved by Bridges and seconded by Cannalonga, and that immediately thereafter you made a motion to have the Publicity Committee draft the telegram?

A. No, I don't know whether that is a fact or not. I may have made the motion.

Q. Well, do you recall Mr. Cannalonga seconding Mr. Bridges' motion to that effect?

A. No, sir.

Q. Huh? A. No, sir.

Q. Would you say that Mr. Cannalonga did not second Mr. Bridges' motion to the effect?

A. I have absolutely—— [4189]

Q. (Interposing): At that time?

A. I have absolutely no recollection of it.

Presiding Inspector: His mind is blank on the matter.

The Witness: I recall——

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. (Interposing): Mr. Schmidt, would the minutes of the meeting refresh your memory?

A. Oh, I think so.

Mr. Gladstein: May I see them?

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes, I have no objection to having you see them, Mr. Gladstein.

Mr. Gladstein: I would like to ask, before these are shown, whether these purport to be genuine copies of the minutes or whether they are re-copied or what? I am just interested in knowing how the FBI gets union minutes.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, he is not interested, apparently, in the witness here, if your Honor please.

Presiding Inspector: Now——

Mr. Gladstein (Interposing): Yes, I am interested in the authenticity of the document, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Well, it doesn't call for any ruling.

Mr. Gladstein: No, but Mr. Del Guercio said "If I show you the minutes would it refresh your recollection?" He said "Yes." Now, I think Mr. Del Guercio should not mis- [4190] lead the witness in any way.

Does Mr. Del Guercio vouch for the documents that he is showing me as being a true copy of the minutes?

Mr. Myron: Well, you can see it. What do you think?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Mr. Gladstein: I would like to—may I see——

Mr. Del Guercio. (Interposing): No; this portion here (Indicating).

Mr. Gladstein: I can't tell if he doesn't show me the first page. He is showing me something on page three. I don't know if they are the minutes or not.

Mr. Del Guercio: There is no objection to you looking at all of it, Mr. Gladstein, and checking everything in this thing here with the original minutes.

Mr. Gladstein: Which one are you interested in?

Mr. Del Guercio: This particular one (Indicating).

Mr. Gladstein: I will start at the front page of that.

Mr. Del Guercio: And if the Court please, we will give counsel every opportunity to check those with the minutes of that joint committee, every opportunity he wants.

Mr. Gladstein: I still would like this question answered: Do these purport to be copies put out by the committee or are they copies that have been re-made or something of that sort? The reason I ask is this: I assume—I am not sure—but I assume that a record has been kept of the minutes by the committee or the various unions involved and that if I were to request an [4191] opportunity to see those minutes I could see, if they have them, the originals or the copies or whatever they kept and have an opportunity to make a comparison. That is why I am inviting Mr. Del Guercio to make a statement. I don't know what these purport to be, whether they purport to be genuine or not.

Presiding Inspector: Well, I suppose he wouldn't have shown them to you unless he understood them to be genuine. [4192]

Mr. Del Guercio: Don't lose the marker, please.

Mr. Gladstein: No, I shan't. I won't disturb the marker.

Mr. Del Guercio: Those books are all over the town, and the minutes are available.

Mr. Gladstein: Pardon?

Mr. Del Guercio: Strike that,—never mind.

Mr. Gladstein: I don't want to take the time to examine these. I can't tell, from examining them, whether they are accurate or whether they were ever corrected at a subsequent meeting, or what the procedure was; I don't know. Perhaps the witness knows.

Mr. Del Guercio: The witness was a member of that committee, if your Honor please, and he will know whether they are or not.

Mr. Gladstein: He may.

Presiding Inspector: Mr. Del Guercio may ask him if he recognizes these as copies of the minutes.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. I will show you, Mr. Schmidt, what purports to be the minutes of the joint meeting of the Negotiating Committee, and with particular reference to this telegram that I have read to you, and that portion that subsequently follows:

"Bridges first, Cannalonga seconded. Moved and seconded that we refer this wire to the Publicity Committee for redraft. Schmidt first. O'Neill seconded. Motion carried. Moved and [4193] seconded that we now recess and reconvene at 4:30 P. M. Motion carried. Meeting recessed at 2:40 P. M."

Will you look at that and see if that doesn't refresh your recollection as to whether or not you ever met Mr. Cannalonga?

A. (Examining document): I am all finished looking at it.

Q. Does it refresh your memory?

A. No, sir. I still insist I don't know Cannalonga or ever having met him.

Q. Would you say that this did not occur as reflected by the minutes?

A. I wouldn't say that. There were more people in this particular room, I believe, than there are in this room here right now, and I certainly wouldn't be expected to recall the faces here now. Besides, there might have been half a dozen——

Q. (Interposing): There is no question, Mr. Schmidt.

Mr. Gladstein: He hasn't finished. Let him finish his answer.

Presiding Inspector: He has said it doesn't refresh his recollection.

Mr. Gladstein: But he started to say something else.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Presiding Inspector: Do you want to say something else?

Mr. Myron: Let's hear him talk. [4194]

Presiding Inspector: I will let him explain.

A. (Continuing): In all probability there would have been a half dozen seconds to that kind of a motion, maybe twelve or fourteen.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Was Walter Stack on this Negotiating Committee? A. He may have been.

Mr. Gladstein: I don't like to interrupt the proceedings, but I think we are entitled to this much courtesy from counsel. Mr. Myron keeps staring at our table and making remarks under his breath at us. I don't have any objection to it, except it does make it difficult for us to concentrate on what is going on. If he wants to have a good time——

Presiding Inspector: I haven't heard anything.

Mr. Gladstein: No, naturally.

Mr. Myron: I didn't realize I was looking at counsel's table. I have tried to keep my face from the table at most times, except when they have a document or something relevant there.

Presiding Inspector: I couldn't hear anything.

Mr. Gladstein: Mr. Myron has made an incorrect statement.

Presiding Inspector: Counsel at either table should not disturb the other. We are trying to conduct an investigation here, and all are taking part in it, but neither should disturb the other.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Go ahead. [4195]

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Do you remember a meeting of this same negotiating committee taking place on October 19, 1936? A. It may have met.

Q. Let me give you something a little further and perhaps it may refresh your memory. The meeting was called to order in the Masters, Mates and Pilots Hall in San Francisco by Chairman Fisher.

A. I don't recall that particular meeting, but I recall very many meetings there.

Q. Do you recall a meeting in which Mr. William Fisher was Chairman? A. Surely.

Q. And F. M. Kelley, Secretary? A. Yes.

Q. And do you remember that at that meeting the credentials of W. J. Stack being read?

A. No, I don't recall that.

Q. You don't recall that? A. No.

Q. At any meeting? A. No.

Q. Do you recall that it was moved and seconded that the delegate, Stack, be seated?

A. No, sir; I don't recall that. [4196]

Q. Do you recall that the motion was carried?

A. I can't recall that either.

Q. And do you recall that it was understood that Walter J. Stack was replacing Cannalonga?

A. No, sir; that doesn't mean anything to me either.

Q. If the minutes of that Negotiating Committee for October 19, 1936, would so state, would it be correct?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. Well, if the minutes of the following meeting would state that the minutes of the previous meeting had been read and corrected, I think it would be so.

Q. Well, I will show—never mind.

Presiding Inspector: I think, before you do that, we will take a recess until 2:00 o'clock.

(Whereupon, at 12:30 P.M., a recess was taken until 2:00 P.M. of the same day.) [4197]

After Recess

2:00 o'clock P.M.

Presiding Inspector: You may proceed.

HENRY A. SCHMIDT

called as a witness on behalf of the Alien, having been previously duly sworn, testified further as follows:

Cross Examination (Resumed)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Mr. Schmidt, were you ever a member of the Keep America out of the War Committee?

A. No.

Q. Do you know what kind of an organization that is?

A. No, I really don't.

Q. You said you knew Bill Schneidermann. His correct name is Vevel Schneidermann?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. I haven't the slightest idea.

The Reporter: How do you spell that first name?

Mr. Del Guercio: V-e-v-e-l.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. You knew, did you not, that an action had been brought in the U. S. District Court in this city to cancell his certificate of naturalization?

Mr. Gladstein: I will object to that question as immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: I do not see how it is material. [4198]

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, it is leading to the next question, if your Honor please.

Mr. Gladstein: There is a way of proving it.

Presiding Inspector: Let us hear the next question. I don't know what it is.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Bill Schneidermann, at the time this proceeding was brought in the U. S. District Court, also had a defense fund, didn't he?

Mr. Gladstein: I object to that as immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: I will sustain the objection. I don't think we can go into that. I don't see how that is pertinent.

Mr. Del Guercio: To show this man's activity. This witness has denied that he ever was a member of the Communist Party.

Presiding Inspector: Even so——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing). I want to show that by a line of conduct this man here, this witness, has been a member of the Communist Party. I say this advisedly, if the Court please. If we were trying this witness here I believe we could bring evidence into court to show that he has been a member of the Communist Party.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Presiding Inspector: We are not——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) This is along that line. [4199] Bill Schneidermann has been quite a well-known Communist character in these parts.

Presiding Inspector: We have had a good deal about Mr. Schneidermann in evidence here, but whether the Government has prosecuted him for a crime, or has proceeded to deport him doesn't seem to be material.

Mr. Del Guercio: If this witness has also contributed money to the Bill Schneidermann defense fund——

Presiding Inspector: He has a right to do that.

Mr. Gladstein: Under Mr. Del Guercio's theory every person who has ever——

Presiding Inspector: I have ruled in your favor. Don't argue further.

Mr. Gladstein: All right.

Presiding Inspector: It is too remote.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Mr. Schmidt, do you recollect attending a mass meeting held in the San Francisco Municipal Auditorium on December 8, 1936, at which meeting Harry Bridges entered into a debate with Mr. Roger Lapham?

A. Well, I am not sure of the date but I was at the meeting where Bridges debated or spoke and where Mr. Lapham spoke.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Were you on the speakers' platform?

A. Yes, sir. [4200]

Q. Who else was on the speakers' platform on that occasion?

A. Oh, there were a couple of dozen people.

Q. Well, whom?

A. George Wilson, I believe, was the Chairman; Bridges, Lapham, myself, Mr. Almon Roth, several other men who have association with the shipowners, quite a few.

Q. How many were on the speakers' platform, how many peopl ?

A. I think maybe 20 or 25; there might even have been 30.

Q. Is that all the people whose n[illegible]es you can remember who were on the speakers' platform on that occasion?

A. No; I think the Vice President of the McCormick Steamship Company, J. Lunney, was there. Goldblatt was there, I am pretty sure.

Q. Is that Louis Goldblatt? A. Yes, sir.

Q. He was there? A. Yes.

Q. Who else?

A. I think Mr. Plant of the American-Hawaiian Steamship Company was sitting there.

The Reporter: Spell it, please.

The Witness: P-l-a-n-t. [4201]

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Who else, Mr. Schmidt?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. That is about all the names I recall right now.

Q. You can't recall any others?

Mr. Gladstein: He has answered that question. I object to the question.

Mr. Del Guercio: I want to give him all the time he wants, if your Honor please.

Mr. Gladstein: I object to this line of inquiry as immaterial unless counsel states his purpose, then.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, I will receive it.

A. If you will mention some names I might be able to tell you if they were there or not.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Well, Mr. Schmidt, you know that William Schneidermann was on the speakers' platform at that last meeting, do you not?

A. No, sir, I am sure he was not there.

Q. You are sure he was not there?

A. I certainly didn't see him.

Mr. Gladstein: I still question the materiality of this unless counsel claims that Mr. Schneidermann was present. I don't know.

Mr. Del Guercio: If the Court please——

Mr. Gladstein: (Interposing) May I finish my objection? I object to this line of inquiry unless counsel claims the [4202] alleged presence of Mr. Schneidermann on that platform makes all people on the platform affiliated in some way with the Communist Party.

Mr. Del Guercio: Mr. Gladstein's witness——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I have already ruled and allowed the question. I adhered to the ruling if that was a motion to make me change it.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Were you ever a member of the American League against War and Fascism, Mr. Schmidt?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever speak on behalf of the American League against War and Fascism?

Presiding Inspector: Did you ever what?

Mr. Del Guercio: Speak.

Presiding Inspector: Did you ever speak?

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes.

A. I don't think so. I believe they asked me one time to speak somewhere. My recollection is that I refused.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you ever speak in any of the meetings of the Friends of the Soviet Union?

A. No, I don't recollect.

Q. Do you recollect making a speech on November 9, 1935 at a meeting of the Friends of the Soviet Union at the California [4203] Hall?

A. No; I recollect having made a speech in the California Hall. Whether or not it was that date I don't recall.

Q. And what were your subjects?

A. Well, I was talking on the strike, I am pretty sure it was, during the 1934 strike.

Q. Did you ever speak on the subject of "A Night in Russia"?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. The subject of what?

Q. A Night in Russia.

A. A Night in Russia?

Q. Yes. A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever make a speech at the Scottish Rite Temple or Scottish Rite Auditorium on behalf of the American League against War and Fascism on August 1, 1936? A. I don't recall.

Q. Do you subscribe to the Western Worker, Mr. Schmidt? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever subscribe to the Western Worker?

A. Never subscribed to the Western Worker.

Q. If the Western Worker for August 6, 1936 carried a notice that you, Henry Schmidt, spoke at a mass meeting at the Scottish Rite Auditorium for the American League against War and Fascism would that refresh your memory? [4204]

Mr. Gladstein: I object to that. The way of refreshing a witness' recollection is to show him any article which purports to be on the topic matter, and not to ask the witness first that question.

Presiding Inspector: That is true. At the same time he has added some material, I think, and without regard to whether anything was published, he may ask the witness.

Mr. Gladstein: But it calls for conjecture.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will withdraw the question.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you ever read any article in the paper stating that you had spoken at the Scottish Rite

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Auditorium on August 1, 1936, for the American League against War and Fascism?

A. No, I don't recall reading such material or article.

Q. Was such an article ever brought to your attention? A. Not that I can recall.

Q. And is it your testimony that you did not speak in the Scottish Rite Auditorium on August 1, 1936? A. I didn't say that.

Q. What is your testimony?

A. It is in the record.

Q. Will you repeat it?

Presiding Inspector: He has no recollection on it, he said.

Mr. Gladstein: He was asked whether he spoke on behalf of a certain organization on a certain day. [4205]

Presiding Inspector: Later, I think, he left that out.

Mr. Gladstein: It was left out, but as far as speaking at that auditorium——

Presiding Inspector: Have you any recollection about any speech there at all?

The Witness: Oh, yes.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, you have? I misunderstood.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. At whose invitation?

A. Well, it so happens that before our union started to meeting at Eagles Hall we used to meet in the Scottish Rite Auditorium and we were there every Monday night.

Q. Did you meet there on August 1, 1936?

A. I don't know whether that was Monday or not.

Q. Was there a meeting there of the American League against War and Fascism on August 1, 1936?

A. I don't know whether there was or not; might have been.

Q. Did you speak on August 1, 1936, at a meeting in the Scottish Rite Auditorium——

A. (Interposing) I don't remember.

Q. (Continuing) ——for the American Legion against War and Fascism?

Presiding Inspector: He started to answer before you finished the question.

Read the whole question to the witness now.

[4206]

A. I hesitate to say that I might have because I don't remember.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Mr. Schmidt, did you ever preside at a meeting in Dreamland Auditorium when Lawrence Simpson talked on the subject "Eighteen Months in a Nazi Hell"?

A. No, I don't think so. I think I was a spectator at the meeting.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Were you on the speaker's platform?

A. I don't think so.

Q. Under whose auspices was this meeting conducted?

A. I haven't the slightest idea now.

Q. Had it been arranged prior to the meeting that you were to preside?

A. I don't recollect.

Q. Do you recall now that that meeting was held under the auspices of the International Labor Defense? A. No, I don't recall that at all.

Q. Did you ever write any article for the People's World, Mr. Schmidt?

A. Did I ever write any article for the Peoples' World?

A. Yes. A. No. [4207]

Q. Any letters? A. No.

Q. Or anything that was published in the Peoples' World?

A. Never wrote anything. I guess I have been quoted in the Peoples' World.

Q. Did you ever send birthday greetings to the Editor of Peoples' World?

A. To the Editor of Peoples' World?

Q. Yes.

A. No recollection of doing anything like that. I don't know when his birthday is.

Q. You don't have a recollection of it?

A. No.

Q. Would you say that you didn't send birthday

greetings to the Editor of the Peoples' World on, say, June 29, 1938?

A. No, I would hesitate to say that I didn't.

Q. Your testimony is that you don't know whether you did or not?

A. I don't know whether I did or not.

Q. Did you know the Editor of the Peoples' World at that time in 1938? A. No.

Q. You don't have any recollection on it?

A. No.

Q. Would you say you didn't know? [4208]

A. Did I say I didn't what?

Q. That you did not know the Editor of Peoples' World in 1938?

A. I don't think I knew him.

Q. Would there be any occasion for your sending him a birthday greeting?

A. I don't think there would be.

Q. And if an article appeared in the Peoples' World under date of June 29, 1938 stating that you, Henry Schmidt, had sent birthday greetings to the Edtor, would that article be true?

Mr. Gladstein: That is improper and I object to it.

Presiding Inspector: I think it is immaterial.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will withdraw the question.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you ever make a trip to Mexico, Mr. Schmidt? A. Yes.

Q. When? A. 1938?

Q. Alone?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. No. There was another longshoreman with me.

Q. What was his name? A. His name?

Q. Yes?

A. His name is Zerfrani—Z-e-r-f-r-a-n-i. [4209]

Q. And where in Mexico did you go?

A. Mexico City.

Q. Is that the only place in Mexico that you went?

A. Several other places that we had to pass through in order to get there.

Q. What was the occasion for this trip?

A. The Latin-American Labor Congress.

Q. Were they holding a convention in Mexico City? A. Yes.

Q. Were you a delegate to it?

A. I was a fraternal delegate representing the State CIO of California.

Q. Who was this longshoreman that went with you, was he also a delegate?

A. No; he just went along for the trip.

Q. Did he pay for his own passage?

A. He paid for his own food, and his own lodging. He didn't have to pay for transportation.

Q. Who paid his transportation?

A. We used an automobile.

Q. Your automobile?

A. No; it belonged to our union.

Q. And is it true that about that time you were elected a member of the Presidium of the World Congress Against War and Fascism? [4210]

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. That might have happened; possibly.

Q. Did you—were you? A. Maybe I was.

Q. Don't you know? A. It might be so.

Q. Why do you hesitate, Mr. Schmidt, on a matter of that kind? You can answer that "Yes" or "No".

A. I am not going to say "Yes" until I am sure in my own mind.

Q. Are you sure in your own mind now?

A. Not yet.

Q. All right. Do you want some time to think about it? A. I have got lots of time.

Q. Well, now, were you elected a member of the Presidium of the World Congress Against War and Fascism?

A. I can only repeat what I stated a minute ago. I am not going to say "Yes" until I am sure. [4211]

Q. Were you ever notified that you were elected a member of the Presidium to the World Congress Against War and Fascism?

A. You mean by communication, word of mouth or letter?

Q. In any manner?

A. I have no recollection right now.

Q. Did you ever sign any proclamation against war? A. Oh, I probably did, yes.

Q. When? A. I don't know.

Q. Huh? A. I don't know.

Q. Did you ever sign the Yank's Proclamation against war?

Presiding Inspector: The what?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Yanks, Y-a-n-k-s, the Yanks, Yankees.

A. I may have; I don't know.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. You have no recollection?.

A. That is right.

Q. Would you say that you did not?

Mr. Gladstein: Now, I object to that. It has been asked and answered. Also, I think, it is immaterial.

Mr. Del Guercio: I think we are entitled, if the Court please, to a yes or no answer. [4212]

Presiding Inspector: I can't imagine what it has to do with this case.

Mr. Del Guercio: They are matters within the witness' knowledge, testing his veracity.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, well, I haven't any idea what the proclamation is, what the society is. It is just something out of the air so far as it appears——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) It was a commonly known front organization of the Communist Party.

Presiding Inspector: That may be. I don't know anything about it, that is, we have had nothing in this case about it.

Mr. Del Guercio: It is already in the record.

Presiding Inspector: Are you sure about that? That I didn't recall.

Mr. Del Guercio: The League Against War and Fascism.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Presiding Inspector: Oh, yes, but this is now some proclamation. I haven't connected that with any one——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) Proclamation against war and Fascism sponsored by the——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) You haven't shown it.

Mr. Del Guercio: Sir?

Presiding Inspector: You haven't even suggested it. You said, "Did you sign a proclamation, a statement against war", a very general question. He said he might have, pro- [4213] bably did. Then, you asked him if he signed——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) Then, I asked him about a specific one.

Presiding Insepctor: Yes, but we don't know what it is.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you ever sign—may I ask this question?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you ever sign such a proclamation against war on or about April 6, 1940?

Mr. Gladstein: I will object to that as immaterial, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I can't see what difference it makes. "Such a proclamation against war", what do you mean by "such a proclamation"?

Mr. Del Guercio: One sponsored by the League Against War and Fascism, your Honor.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Mr. Gladstein: And, I think, that would be immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, but that comes a little nearer. I will take that.

A. Well, I know that I have signed petitions that advocate against war, but whether or not I signed the one you are talking about I don't know. There are all kinds of petitions floating around in our union office all the time.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, is this an answer to the question?

[4214]

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you speak, Mr. Schmidt, at Franklin Hall on August 8, 1937?

A. Franklin Hall? Where is that?

Q. San Francisco.

A. I can't place the location of that in my mind at all, Franklin Hall.

Q. Did you ever speak anywhere at any time on the subject "Young Labor on the March?"

A. No.

Q. Did you ever speak at any time at any place under the auspices of the Young Communist League? A. No.

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, if the Court please, I have a matter here, concerning this witness that we are verifying and I expected to put it in at any time now but it has not come down yet. It might take five or ten minutes.

Mr. Gladstein: I didn't hear you.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Presiding Inspector: They want about five or ten minutes to prepare for a different line of questioning, I suppose.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is right.

Mr. Gladstein: What do you suggest?

Presiding Inspector: Other than that——

Mr. Del Guercio: Other than that, why, I believe we are through with this witness. [4215]

Presiding Inspector: Other than that they think they are through with this witness.

Mr. Gladstein: How long will the balance of the cross take, Mr. Del Guercio:

Mr. Del Guercio: Oh, not more than ten minutes.

Mr. Gladstein: I beg your pardon?

Mr. Del Guercio: Not more than ten minutes, if that much.

Mr. Gladstein: Would your Honor like me to go on with the redirect?

Presiding Inspector: Yes, I would like you to.

Mr. Gladstein: As a matter of fact, I would prefer not to. Perhaps it would be well for us to wait until the cross is over.

Presiding Inspector: Very well. You couldn't put on another witness, or don't you want to break into this?

Mr. Gladstein: Rather not, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Very well, we will take a short recess.

(Whereupon a short recess was taken.)

[4216]

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Mr. Del Guercio: If the Court please, I haven't had a report on the matter I had in mind, but I will ask this witness a few more questions.

Presiding Inspector: Very well.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, Mr. Schmidt, did you at any time sign a petition to place the Communist Party on the ballot in California?

A. I may have done that.

Q. When? A. I guess it was in 1940.

Q. At any time prior to 1940 did you sign a petition to place the Communist Party on the ballot?

A. It is impossible for me to recollect because, as I stated before, there are all kinds of petitions being brought to our union office by various people and we place them in a certain place where our members can read them and sign them if they want to.

Q. You know the kind of a petition I am talking about. I am talking about a petition to put the Communist Party of the U.S.A. on the ballot.

Mr. Gladstein: I object to that question as argumentative and as having been asked and answered, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Well, in light of what he said, that there were all kinds of petitions, I will allow that.

By the way, the presiding Inspector doesn't know what kind [4217] of a petition it is.

Mr. Del Guercio: I don't know as I can describe it any better than it is a petition placed——

Presiding Inspector: I don't know what the person certifies to when he signs it, but you may ask. In the State of New York we don't have any such thing.

Mr. Gladstein: I want the record to reflect my objection to the question as immaterial. I don't see how signing a petition to permit what purports to be a political organization to be on the ballot, assuming there was such a signing that took place, I don't see how that can be material to the issues here.

Presiding Inspector: I don't know whether it certified that the signers were in sympathy with the principles of the organization. Of course, when you file a petition for the nomination of a person on a certain party, where we have direct primaries of that kind, why you certify that you are in general sympathy. I don't know whether you do that in your State or not. In our State that is the way it is.

Mr. Del Guercio: I believe that is also true in the State of California.

Presiding Inspector: I don't know.

Mr. Del Guercio: The Court can take judicial notice of the law in California on the subject.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. [4218]

Mr. Gladstein: I challenge Mr. Del Guercio's statement and I ask him to show the witness any petition which he is purported to have signed so that the record may reflect accurately what such a petition contains.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Presiding Inspector: Maybe that is what he has in mind to do. At any rate, I will allow the question. It may amount to a great deal, and it may amount to little, or nothing.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will ask the witness to explain. He said he signed such a petition.

Presiding Inspector: No—did you say that?

The Witness: I didn't say that I signed that petition.

Mr. Del Guercio: In 1940, didn't you say that?

I will ask the reporter to read what he said he signed in 1940, the question and answer where "1940" is mentioned.

(The question and answer referred to were read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Presiding Inspector: I suppose that is an implied "Yes". It is not very direct.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. What kind of a petition did you sign in 1940?

A. I probably signed several petitions in 1940. I certainly couldn't recall the exact wording of them.

Q. Well, Mr. Schmidt, in 1940, that was last year? A. Yes.

Q. Now, tell me what kind of petitions, all the kinds of [4219] petitions that you signed in 1940?

A. Well, there might have been the one you are talking about.

Q. What is that?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. To place the Communist Party on the ballot, you say.

Q. It might have been? A. That is right.

Q. Are you sure? A. No, I am not sure.

Q. Well, you say you might have signed other petitions? A. Yes.

Q. What petitions did you sign in the year 1940?

A. I might have signed a petition advocating opposition to war.

Q. When you say "I might have", is there a doubt in your mind? A. Yes.

Q. Well, will you tell me all the petitions that you signed in the year 1940 that you have no doubt about? A. I couldn't do that.

Q. Not a single one? A. No, sir.

Q. You have no further recollection concerning the petition for placing the Communist Party on the ballot? A. That is correct.

Q. That you signed in 1940, other than what you have [4220] testified to?

A. That is right.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is all.

May I ask, if your Honor please, that this witness be made available for further questioning?

Presiding Inspector: We will take that up when Mr. Gladstein finishes.

Mr. Gladstein: Has counsel finished his cross examination?

Mr. Del Guercio: At the present time.

Presiding Inspector: He says he has a matter—

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

you heard him yourself—he is investigating. I am going to give him an opportunity to present that.

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Schmidt, the name of Lee Holman was mentioned during the cross examination as having been the President of the ILA Union in San Francisco in 1933 and 1934. Can you describe generally and briefly what the situation was on the waterfront in so far as the working longshoremen were concerned during the period that Mr. Holman was President of the ILA Union and during that same period when the Equality Hall group were meeting?

Mr. Myron: That is immaterial, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I think you went into that. I will take it. [4221]

Mr. Myron: The conditions of the working class on the waterfront? I don't think anything was said about that.

Presiding Inspector: Read the question.

Mr. Gladstein: Do you want me to explain the materiality?

Presiding Inspector: I want to hear the question.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Presiding Inspector: I didn't suppose you wanted anything more than the matters in the Union. Do you want to go into the situation of the social conditions of the workers?

Mr. Gladstein: Only to this extent, your Honor.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

During cross examination Mr. Schmidt was asked whether it wasn't a fact that the Equality Hall group was opposed to Mr. Holman, and whether the opposition wasn't due to the fact, as it was alleged in the questions, that Mr. Holman was opposing Communism.

Now, I would like, through my redirect examination, to bring out the nature of any opposition that existed to Mr. Holman, and the basis of that opposition.

Presiding Inspector: We won't go into the basis as a matter of fact.

Mr. Gladstein: No, merely——

Presiding Inspector: We will go into what was stated.

Mr. Gladstein: That is what I had in mind.

Presiding Inspector: Whether it is true or not we don't care; I mean to say to determine the question before us. [4222]

Mr. Gladstein: At least the record will show what the nature of the opposition, if it was opposition, in fact, was.

Presiding Inspector: I will allow you to show what the nature of the opposition was, if you can.

Mr. Myron: The answer to both questions was "Yes."

Mr. Gladstein: What questions?

Mr. Myron: Both questions that Mr. Gladstein spoke about.

Presiding Inspector: I don't know what you mean.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Mr. Myron: That the Equality group did oppose Holman——

Presiding Inspector: There is no doubt about that.

Mr. Myron: (Continuing) ——and that Holman opposed Communism.

Presiding Inspector: That may not have been the reason they opposed Holman.

Mr. Myron: That is the answer that the witness gave.

Presiding Inspector: That doesn't say that was the reason. You draw that conclusion, and that inference may be drawn, but it isn't the only possible inference.

Mr. Myron: That is the only answer the witness gave.

Presiding Inspector: We are going to find out whether there was something else.

Mr. Myron: He is going into the working conditions——

Presiding Inspector: No, we are not going into that.

By Mr. Gladstein: [4223]

Q. I will put the question this way: What, in fact, Mr. Schmidt, was the basis of opposition, as we shall call it, of the Equality Hall group to Mr. Holman while the latter was President of ILA 38-79?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, that is the same question in a different form.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Presiding Inspector: Yes, but it doesn't go into the factual matter.

Mr. Del Guercio: No.

Presiding Inspector: It is only what they claim was why they opposed Mr. Holman. Now, you have sought to draw an inference that they opposed Mr. Holman because Mr. Holman opposed Communism, as you call it. Now, they are going to show that that wasn't the sole, at any rate, basis of the opposition; or perhaps was not any basis. I don't know. I will allow it.

A. Chiefly because while Mr. Holman was President there was nothing being done in so far as bettering the conditions of the workers was concerned. I recall he had a peculiar habit of getting up on the platform and raising his hands to the ceiling and saying that he was willing to die for the longshoremen. I concluded right there and then the guy was phony. [4224]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What were the complaints that were being made by the longshoremen while Mr. Holman was its leader?

Mr. Myron: That is a leading question.

Mr. Del Guercio: Leading and immaterial, your Honor.

Mr. Myron: There is no evidence of that sort; there is absolutely no evidence in the record.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. I will put it this way: Were there any complaints being made by the longshoremen who were in the Equality Hall group during meetings of ILA 38-79 while Mr. Holman was President?

Presiding Inspector: Complaints in the——

Mr. Gladstein: In the union.

Presiding Inspector: In the organization itself?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, I will take that.

A. Well, occasionally someone on the Executive Board would point out this and that would have to be done in order to get something moving on this waterfront so far as the bettering of the conditions was concerned. It seemed to be impossible to make Mr. Holman move in any direction.

Q. What was the subject matter of the complaints that were made by members of the Equality Hall group?

A. Well, they proposed that coastwise conferences ought [4225] to be arranged for, that unity and solidarity had to be established between all the longshoremen on the Pacific Coast, and that we would have to submit demands to the employers.

Q. What did these demands concern? What did they refer to? A. They referred to——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) If your Honor please, now, we are going——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) You only want that they referred to the conditions of the trade, I suppose?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, I want that in the record.

Presiding Inspector: I think that is perfectly evident. I don't think I would go any further than that. I think he said that already.

Mr. Gladstein: I would like permission to ask this question, then, your Honor. I am not sure of the state of the record.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Would it be correct to state, Mr. Schmidt, that, in general, the complaints by the members of the Equality Hall group that were made in the Union meetings while Mr. Holman was President of ILA 38-79 had to do with questions of hours, wages, working conditions and grievances of San Francisco longshoremen?

A. Nothing else but that.

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, if your Honor please——

[4226]

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I will take that.

Mr. Del Guercio: What?

Presiding Inspector: I will let that stand. That isn't going into whether these were just complaints or not, or what the conditions were. He is merely offering this as the basis, according to his theory, of the attitude of this group, which we have heard so much about, toward the President of the Union.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, Mr. Holman.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, at any time, Mr. Schmidt, did you obtain evidence—withdraw that.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Do you know whether at any time evidence was obtained to the effect that Mr. Holman was secretly working in the employ of the shipowners while he was President of the Union?

Mr. Myron: I object to that question, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Well, is that one of the complaints?

Mr. Gladstein: It became one of the very important ones, yes.

Mr. Myron: Now, is Mr. Gladstein testifying?

Presiding Inspector: He has not stated there was any such complaint.

Mr. Gladstein: He has not been asked yet.

Presiding Inspector: You asked him what the basis of the complaints were, if there were any others. [4227]

Mr. Gladstein: Well, all right, I will withdraw that.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Have you stated all of the bases or the grounds of complaint that the longshoremen, who were represented by the special Equality Hall group, had to make against Mr. Holman's leadership in the union?

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, if your Honor please, I object to that. Counsel has already indicated what he wants the witness to say.

Presiding Inspector: The Presiding Inspector will take that into consideration. I will allow it.

The Witness: Will you repeat it, please?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. That is stating it generally. I might go into some detail but——

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. (Interposing) Well, I wish you would.

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that, your Honor.

Mr. Gladstein: I am inviting the witness to go into detail on the bases of the complaints.

Presiding Inspector: Very well.

A. Well, some of the longshoremen were not exactly led to believe, but they believed that inasmuch as most of [4228] them belonged to this Union they could afford to become a little more militant than they had been. As a matter of fact, prior to that time they didn't even know the word, the meaning of the word, militancy, and some of them took some steps to do away with some of the extremely miserable conditions that existed on the San Francisco waterfront. As a result of their action, including myself, we were knocked off the job. We couldn't get Mr. Holman to do anything about it in so far as rectifying that is concerned.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Were matters of that kind made the subject of complaints in open meetings of the ILA?

A. Certainly.

Q. Did Mr. Holman do anything to rectify those alleged grievances?

A. No, he did nothing at all. In fact, he didn't know how to move. Of course, later on we found out that he was in the pay of the Industrial Association of San Francisco.

Mr. Del Guercio: There it is now, your Honor. It has come out, exactly what counsel has put in the witness' mouth.

Mr. Gladstein: It is the fact, and we will prove it.

Presiding Inspector: I don't know whether you will prove it or not, but we will let it stand now.

[4229]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, Mr. Schmidt, during the time Mr. Holman was President of the ILA 38-79, was there or not any general suspicion among the longshoremen that Mr. Holman was in the secret pay of the employers?

Mr. Myron: I object to that.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think suspicions are a matter of consideration here.

Mr. Gladstein: This is preliminary, your Honor; this is preliminary.

Mr. Myron: All these questions seem to be preliminary, your Honor.

Mr. Gladstein: This is preliminary to the one that follows which will——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Let's hear the one that follows.

Mr. Gladstein: All right. The next one is whether Mr. Schmidt, of his own knowledge, knows that a discovery was made that Mr. Holman actually was in the secret employ of the Industrial Association, an organization of shipowners. Now, that is an organization which is——

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) While he was still President?

Mr. Gladstein: While he was still President.

Presiding Inspector: I mean, this was discovered while [4230] he was still President?

Mr. Gladstein: No; it was confessed later.

Presiding Inspector: Then, we don't care about it. It is not material.

Mr. Gladstein: Why, your Honor?

Presiding Inspector: We don't care what the fact is. The only question here is whether the opposition of this group to Mr. Holman was based upon the fact, as claimed by the employees, implied in the questions of Mr. Del Guercio, because he was opposing Communism. Now, what the fact was is not material. We are only looking at it in its reference to this Albion Hall group.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, if that is true, your Honor——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Well, that is the only thing they have claimed about it.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, first of all, I can't follow your Honor in saying that we are not entitled to introduce the actual facts as they were.

Presiding Inspector: Mr. Holman isn't on trial here.

Mr. Gladstein: I appreciate that, but——

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I understand he died some years ago.

Mr. Gladstein: I don't know a thing about that.

Presiding Inspector: That is what I understood. Is he living? [4231]

The Witness: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, I thought you said——

The Witness: (Interposing) I don't know whether he is living today or not.

Presiding Inspector: That is what I thought you said; I thought you said he died?

The Witness: No, I didn't say that.

Presiding Inspector: Am I wrong? Well, I may be wrong.

The Witness: In fact, I have seen him less than a year ago, about a year ago.

Mr. Del Guercio: That was wit, if your Honor please.

Presiding Inspector: I have mistaken the person?

Mr. Del Guercio: No; that was wit on the part of the witness when he said that Mr. Holman died; that was his dry humor.

The Witness: I made no such statement.

Presiding Inspector: Well, I don't know whether it was humor or not. I may err in my recollection. I supposed that he died, but I don't see that it matters, in any event, one way or the other.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, your Honor——

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

The Witness: (Interposing) Mr. Holman is very much alive.

Mr. Gladstein: (Continuing) ——as the trier of the facts I think that you are entitled to know what the factual [4232] basis was.

Presiding Inspector: I don't care about that.

Mr. Gladstein: Of the complaints that the men were making.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, but if they didn't know at the time there was not any factual basis for their complaints.

Mr. Gladstein: But if they believed that he was, that was a factual basis, and if they subsequently found out that their belief was true, if they got a confession from a person who was the Secretary of Mr. Holman to the effect that Mr. Holman had been while—during the period that his union members suspected him of being an agent of the employers, that he had, in fact, been an agent of the employers, we are entitled to show that.

Presiding Inspector: No, you are not.

Mr. Gladstein: We are certainly entitled to show what the men believed.

Presiding Inspector: You may be entitled somewhere else, not here.

Mr. Gladstein: Aren't we entitled——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I have ruled against it. You may show what their beliefs were.

Mr. Gladstein: That is what I said I wanted to show first.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Presiding Inspector: Not the fact. We don't care anything about the fact. We are not trying Mr. Holman. You can [4233] show the basis of their opposition as it was in their minds, or as they expressed it.

Mr. Gladstein: I think I asked that question but instead of using the word "belief" I used the word "suspicion." And then, your Honor said you wanted to hear what the next question was.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, I did.

Mr. Gladstein: All right. Now, I will ask the witness. There is no use in going back in the record because it will simply consume time. I will rephrase that question.

Presiding Inspector: That is the best way.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. And ask whether, Mr. Schmidt, it is or is not the fact that while Mr. Holman was President of ILA 38-79 there was belief among members of the Union that Mr. Holman was secretly in the pay of the shipowners and was not acting for the best interests of the longshoremen?

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, if your Honor please, you will note that counsel in this question is not going to this Equality or Albion Hall group but to the actual membership of the union.

Presiding Inspector: No, I think we are only interested with respect to this Albion Hall group.

Mr. Gladstein: I inadvertently omitted that.

Presiding Inspector: I supposed that is what you had in [4234] mind.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Mr. Gladstein: Yes.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. With that understanding, Mr. Schmidt, could you answer the question?

A. Yes, there was such suspicions in the minds of the Albion Hall group. In fact, there were suspicions in the minds of many——

Mr. Myron: (Interposing) That is all that was asked.

Mr. Gladstein: He has not finished his answer. I think he is entitled to finish his answer. Then, counsel can move to strike.

Mr. Myron: I move it be stricken out.

Mr. Gladstein: May I be permitted to finish my statement to the Court without constant interruptions from Mr. Myron?

Presiding Inspector: I don't know about that. You may finish your statement to the Court.

Mr. Gladstein: I think the witness should be permitted——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I am going to let him finish.

Mr. Gladstein: When he says something that is not responsive or unnecessary or should be stricken counsel can move to strike; that is the ordinary manner.

Presiding Inspector: I think the witness may answer. Go ahead. [4235]

The Witness: I was going to add there was such suspicions in the minds of quite a large number of longshoremen because I heard them make statements to the effect that Holman couldn't be trusted, and many of them remembered him as having been a longshoreman back in 1918 and he was connected with the union then, and whatever he did then was not much good.

Mr. Del Guercio: I move to strike all of that.

Presiding Inspector: I will let it stand.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. When did you say Mr. Holman was removed as President of the union?

Mr. Del Guercio: If you Honor please, I don't know as there is any evidence in this record here that Mr. Holman was ever withdrawn as President of the——

Mr. Gladstein: (Interposing) I will withdraw the question.

Mr. Del Guercio: Just a minute. Will you permit me to address myself to the Court?

Presiding Inspector: Wait a minute. It isn't of any use. He has withdrawn the question.

Mr. Del Guercio: I may have had something else to say, if your Honor please.

Presiding Inspector: Well, —— [4236]

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) Now, he has been accusing us here, Mr. Myron and myself, of interrupting him while he is making his speeches and I would like to get up every once in a while and make a short speech myself.

Presiding Inspector: Well, we like to hear you, Mr. Del Guercio.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Mr. Del Guercio: If I wanted to. Counsel won't permit me. Every time——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Excuse me. I will recognize Mr. Gladstein's withdrawal of the question. Phrase the next question.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Can you give us the approximate date when Mr. Holman was, for the last time, the President of ILA 38-79?

A. It was somewhere between the February 1934 convention and May the 9th, which is the day that the strike started.

Q. And do you know——

A. (Interposing) I recall that—because he was not elected as a delegate to that convention but he came there with a credential signed by himself and the convention wouldn't recognize it, of course.

Q. Do you know the circumstances under which his presidency terminated, that is to say, did he serve out his term or was there some other method, some other procedure by which his presidency terminated? [4237]

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, if your Honor please, I object to the question first on the ground that matter has already been covered, secondly on the ground that it is suggestive not to say the least, and the third, on the ground that it is immaterial. We are not trying Mr. Holman. We are not trying anybody else but Mr. Bridges. I don't see him here today.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Presiding Inspector: We are not even trying —oh, Mr. Bridges was excused.

Mr. Del Guercio: I see. I was going to turn around to him there.

Presiding Inspector: I will take the answer.

Mr. Del Guercio: Take——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Although I don't think it very material.

Mr. Gladstein: Do you have the question in mind?

The Witness: No.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. Charges were preferred against him by some of the union members and he was brought to trial before a committee that was elected by the union, and they found him guilty in spite of the fact that he didn't show up. There was a provision in the constitution to the effect that if accused parties do not show up the trial should proceed nevertheless, [4238] and after that we didn't see him any more.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Have you ever had occasion to see him since? A. Yes.

Q. When?

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, if your Honor please, I don't know that that is material.

Presiding Inspector: No, I don't suppose that is material. How can that have any effect here?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Mr. Gladstein: Well, your Honor, it is our theory——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) If your Honor please, to avoid another speech from counsel I will withdraw my objection.

Presiding Inspector: Very well.

Mr. Del Guercio: We are only having speeches in the record.

Presiding Inspector: Very well, you may answer.

A. I saw him during the 1936-'37 strike when he was organizing a rival union of strike breakers on Mission Street near Fourth or Sixth Street, and the last time I saw him was under circumstances, unusual circumstances, I would say. It was in the Veterans War Memorial Building on Christmas Eve a year ago when I went there with my daughter to participate in Christmas community singing and, believe it or not, Mr. Holman came there also and he sat right down in front of me on [4239] stairs because there were no more seats left.

Presiding Inspector: And you joined in the same songs?

The Witness: So did Mr. Holman.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, all right.

The Witness: And if I may add this: Every once in a while he writes a letter to our union.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. You mean when the spirit moves him? During 1936 and '37 you say that Mr. Holman was attempting to form a group of strike breakers. Did you have any personal contact with him?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, if your Honor please——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Isn't that remote?

Mr. Gladstein: No. Our theory is, your Honor——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) Well, if it is another speech, your Honor, I will again withdraw my objection and let it go in.

Presiding Inspector: I think it is remote.

Mr. Myron: If it is for the purpose of refreshing the witness' memory, why, we will let him answer.

Mr. Gladstein: Will you answer the question?

Mr. Myron: He has a very poor memory.

A. Yes, I had some very peculiar experiences with these scabs.

By Mr. Gladstein: [4240]

Q. Will you state what they were?

A. Well, I observed one meeting that they tried to hold on Fourth and Mission Street, which was very much advertised by Holman by distributing literature on the waterfront in the middle of the night. The meeting was to be held at Fourth and Howard Streets, I believe, and all bona fide longshoremen, according to his literature, were invited to come. I think our Strike Committee went on record to go there and listen in. We stood out on the street because the place was packed. There was a loud speaker hanging out of the window and Mr. Holman was holding forth, telling all and sundry what a great guy he was and what a good fellow for the longshoremen he would be if only Schmidt and Bridges and Melnikow and some other people were wiped off the face of the earth, and there were lots of strikers there and quite a number of police because they thought there would be trouble between the strikers and the strike breakers.

Then, on another occasion he associated himself during that strike with a newspaper, a weekly newspaper that is published here on Market Street, which is known as the News Letter and Wasp. It advertised the fact that there was going to be a mass meeting there on a Saturday afternoon and that Mr. Holman would speak. The fact that he was going to hold a meeting there with his people was mentioned to this joint marine strike committee and someone made a motion in the joint marine strike committee that our joint marine strike committee [4241] proceed to that meeting and move right in and try to take it over, so at the appointed time we went up Market Street to participate in this meeting. The Vice-President of our union and I, we proceeded up the stairs to invite ourselves in, and the entire stairway was just chuck-a-block with strike breakers all wearing gloves and some of them had brass knucks. We knocked on the door, and the gentleman who runs the News Letter and Wasp recognized me, and I said, "How about getting in here?" He said, "Wait a while and I will take care of it." Meanwhile this Vice-President, who was quite an elderly man, and I, we stood there for a little while and we went downstairs again.

Mr. Del Guercio: If the Court please, I am going to interrupt right here and right now. We have been listening very patiently to this witness telling of his great exploits. Of course, we have no medals here to pin on him at this time.

Mr. Gladstein: I move the remarks of counsel be stricken.

Mr. Del Guercio: I think he should be cut off some time.

Presiding Inspector: I am afraid that is a speech, Mr. Del Guercio, and I think there was a speech on the other side too, only it was not quite as long.

Mr. Gladstein: You mean when I moved to strike his remarks?

Presiding Inspector: I thought you said something else.

Mr. Gladstein: I just said I moved to strike his remarks [4242] as improper.

Presiding Inspector: That isn't a speech. I don't think we will strike them. They will all go out anyway.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Will you continue, please?

Presiding Inspector: Don't you think you have come far enough?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Mr. Gladstein: I don't know. He has not finished this occasion. I am waiting to hear what happened.

Presiding Inspector: Of course, I wouldn't have allowed it at all if Mr. Del Guercio had persisted in his objection.

Mr. Del Guercio: Your Honor, the reason I withdrew my objection was when I was examining this witness here he had a very vague recollection, couldn't recollect events and names and things of this kind, and I thought that, perhaps, when his own counsel questioned him that he would have the same kind of a blank recollection; I didn't anticipate that all of a sudden his memory would come back to him, and it was only for that reason that I withdrew my objection.

Presiding Inspector: Don't you think we better have a further demonstration along that line?

Mr. Myron: Yes, yes.

Mr. Gladstein: If your Honor please, I move that Mr. Del Guercio's remarks be stricken as improper.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think they are proper, [4243] but we are not very particular about these remarks.

Mr. Gladstein: Of course, we are not, but if each time he makes improper remarks and I move they be stricken and your Honor says they are improper but they won't be stricken, there is no inducement for Mr. Del Guercio to remain seated and not indulge in making improper remarks.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Presiding Inspector: Oh, we shouldn't have speeches on either side. Now, you may go on.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Will you continue, please?

Presiding Inspector: Although I think it is immaterial, but I may take a different view. Go ahead.

A. (Continuing) The upshot of it was that the Vice-President of our Local proceeded down to the sidewalk, and there were many strikers gathered there, and we persuaded the man who had come in the loud-speaking truck to go away, and directly Mr. Holman spoke from the window sill. He had no loud-speaker so he used a megaphone.

Then the whole thing wound up in a humorous affair because when somebody started to heave some eggs at Mr. Holman's megaphone they hit him right square in the teeth; whereupon he proceeded to close the window, and then we went on back to the waterfront.

By Mr. Gladstein: [4244]

Q. Was your home ever attacked by any of Mr. Holman's men?

A. Well, I didn't know who it was, and I don't know who did it, today.

Q. Was this during the strike?

Mr. Myron: This is all immaterial, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I think it is immaterial; very immaterial.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. There was mention made of the Defense Committee of the ILA. What do the words "Defense Committee" refer to, what kind of defense?

A. Well, the Committee was charged with the duties of furnishing bail for strikers that might be arrested that belonged to our union. They called on these fellows if and when they were locked up and reported back to the Strike Committee and asked for more money if they required it, and so on and so forth.

Q. Was this for anything besides legal defense?

A. That is all. We had an attorney; may have had two attorneys, but I don't recall.

Q. Now, yesterday I asked you some questions concerning alleged meetings testified to by Mr. Nat Honig. If I were to repeat all of the questions I asked you that referred to Mr. Honig, or Mr. Honig's statements, and substituted the name [4245] "Nat Davis" for "Nat Honig," would your answers have been any different?

Mr. Myron: Just a moment. That is the strangest question I have ever heard in a court room.

Mr. Gladstein: It is for the purpose of saving time. Mr. Honig, as I recall it, also testified that he was known by the name of Nat Davis. I can proceed and ask Mr. Schmidt all the questions that I asked yesterday.

Mr. Del Guercio: If the purpose of it is the saving of time we will withdraw the objection.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Mr. Gladstein: It is quite obvious it is for that purpose.

A. No, I don't know anybody by that name; except that I recall the name of Davis in connection with the trial hearing in 1939, and the Davis that was mentioned there, and identified there, was a sailor.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Would your answers to my questions, if the name "Nat Davis" were substituted for the name "Nat Honig," be the same as they were——

Mr. Myron: (Interposing) I object to that.

Mr. Gladstein: I haven't finished.

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead and finish your question.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. If the name "Nat Davis" were substituted for the name "Nat Honig" would the questions concerning Mr. Honig, as [4246] I put them to you yesterday, be answered the same as they were yesterday?

Mr. Myron: We object to that, if your Honor please.

Mr. Gladstein: On what ground?

Presiding Inspector: Isn't the question this: That the reference was, when he spoke of Nat Honig, was to the man whom he saw on the witness stand?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes; under either the name of Nat Honig or Nat Davis.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Presiding Inspector: That is the question?

Mr. Gladstein: That is the question.

Presiding Inspector: You may answer.

A. My answers will be the same.

Presiding Inspector: He is referring to the man; not the name.

The Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. You were asked about the 1937 convention of the ILA to which you were a delegate. How were delegates to that convention chosen?

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, if your Honor please, reference was made to the 1937 convention, but not to the convention itself, and only for the purpose of placing the witness there at that place. Now, I didn't ask any questions there on cross examination as to the convention itself. I think that that is [4247] improper redirect examination.

Mr. Gladstein: Your Honor, the witness was asked whether he didn't go up by train, or by car, and with which delegates he went. I think I am entitled to bring out how delegates were selected to go to that convention. I am not going into the convention itself.

Presiding Inspector: I don't know as it is material.

Mr. Gladstein: It is material to show how these men who have been named, how Mr. Schmidt came to be going there, or meeting with them, who they were, and how they were selected. The record does not show where these men came from, or who they were, or what they represented.

Presiding Inspector: I thought it was in the question that he was a delegate representing somebody that delegates him; at least that would be implied.

Mr. Del Guercio: I didn't question on how they were chosen, or that he was not a delegate.

Presiding Inspector: What difference does it make whether it was the Executive Committee, or the body, or the President? I don't see the materiality, but if you wish it you may have it. I see no materiality in it.

Mr. Gladstein: I would like to have the question answered.

Presiding Inspector: How were the delegates from the respective organizations chosen, if you know?

The Witness: Our local elected its delegates by the usual [4248] referendum vote. I don't recall whether we used the machines at that time, or the paper ballot.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. And who voted on the question of which delegates were to go?

Mr. Del Guercio: Is this necessary?

Presiding Inspector: In his union—I will allow the statement if he knows who voted.

You mean who had a right to vote?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes.

A. The members of the local union only.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. How were delegates to the San Francisco Central Labor Council chosen in 1934, 1935 or 1936, or at any time thereafter?

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that as not being proper redirect.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

Mr. Del Guercio: It is going into new matters.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

A. In the same manner, except that I recollect that one of the first times that we elected delegates to the Central Labor Council we did it by nomination from the floor, and by a showing and counting of hands. We didn't do that very often. For years now we have been using the secret [4249] ballot.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. How were delegates selected to the convention of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific in Portland in 1937?

A. In the same manner; by referendum ballot.

Q. You were questioned concerning a meeting at the New Lennox Hotel during a period when the Maritime Federation of the Pacific was having a convention. Can you fix the date of that?

A. The day of the week?

Q. No, the approximate date?

A. It would be in the month of June in that year.

Q. Which year?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. 1937, we are talking about, isn't it?

Q. Do you recall what was discussed at that meeting?

A. The question of affiliating with the CIO, which was the big bone of contention on the convention floor.

Q. Was Communism discussed at that meeting?

A. No.

Q. Was the Communist Party policy or strategy, or tactics discussed at that meeting?

A. Not at all.

Q. You were asked whether Mr. Bridges was there. I think you said he was.

A. I think he was. [4250]

Q. And you were present? A. Yes.

Q. And Mr. Curran? A. Joe Curran?

Q. Yes. A. I doubt whether he was there.

Mr. Gladstein: Did you have the list of the other names?

Mr. Myron: They are in the record, I guess.

The Witness: I don't recall him being at that convention. I know a couple of his colleagues were.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. You were asked whether all of the people present at that meeting—withdraw that. I will ask you this: Were the people who were present at that meeting members of the Communist Party to your knowledge? A. No.

Q. Do you know whether any of them were definitely not members of the Communist Party?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. To the best of my knowledge they were all good trade unionists.

Q. What about yourself?

A. That goes for me too.

Q. What about Mr. Bridges?

A. That goes for him too.

Q. Can you recall whether there would be any occasion for [4251] Mr. Harry Jackson to have been present at any such meeting?

A. I can't understand why he should be there. He was not a longshoreman, or a maritime worker, so why should he be there?

Q. Can you state whether at this caucus meeting every person present represented some union that was part of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific, or was a fraternal delegate to that convention?

Mr. Myron: That is a leading question, your Honor. Apparently he had no recollection today of who was there.

Mr. Del Guercio: And it is in the alternative.

Mr. Myron: He is asking if they represented unions and he hasn't got the names of the persons.

Mr. Gladstein: They were all mentioned this morning.

Presiding Inspector: Have you in mind who——

The Witness: (Interposing) I couldn't mention the names of all the individuals that were there.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Can you recall any person who was at such a caucus meeting who would not be from a trade union which was either part of the Maritime Federation or which had sent a delegate to the convention?

Mr. Myron: That is a hypothetical question.

Presiding Inspector: Yes; that is a hypothetical question.

Mr. Gladstein: I am asking for his recollection, if there [4252] was any person there who was not a member of a trade union.

Presiding Inspector: You didn't ask it that way. You said "Who would not be."

Mr. Gladstein: Who, what?

Presiding Inspector: "Who would not be a member," was the way the question was put.

Mr. Gladstein: I should have said, "Who was not."

Presiding Inspector: You mean to his knowledge, was not?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Can you recall any person being there who was not from a union that was participating in the convention of the Maritime Federation, either as a member of that Federation, or as a fraternal delegate to it?

Mr. Myron: I object.

Presiding Inspector: I think I will take the answer, but I don't think it is very persuasive for the purpose for which it is asked. I don't think it goes quite as far as you want it to, but I will take the answer.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. They must have been delegates——

Presiding Inspector: The question is, can you recall anyone there who wasn't a delegate?

The Witness: No.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Would you say that people who were at that caucus meeting were all delegates to the convention? [4253]

A. Well, if some of the MWIU fellows were there they were not delegates in the true sense of the word; they were fraternal delegates from the NAIU, which is not affiliated with the Maritime Federation, only on a fraternal basis.

Q. What about the balance of the people?

A. They were Pacific Coast people who represented some union or other that was connected with the Maritime Federation.

Q. Would they all be delegates to the Convention?

Mr. Myron: "Would" they?

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Were they all——

A. (Interposing) Well, it is possible that there may have been an officer or a member of a local union in Portland who didn't happen to be a delegate who might have been there. I don't recollect that.

Q. Were any of them not trade unionists?

A. They were all trade unionists; certainly.

Q. Were they all trade unionists connected either with unions that were part of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific, or a union which was sending a fraternal delegate to the convention?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that.

Presiding Inspector: Isn't all this argumentative?

Mr. Gladstein: I don't think so.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it. This may well be, [4254] and still it might be a Fraction meeting.

Mr. Gladstein: I am coming to that.

A. That would be a correct statement.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Could this meeting in any sense be a Communist Fraction meeting?

Mr. Myron: I object to that, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I will take his testimony.

A. No; it was a trade union meeting. The subject under discussion was the advisability of affiliating with the CIO.

Presiding Inspector: Except as to yourself and Mr. Bridges you didn't pay any attention to whether the rest of them were Communists or not?

The Witness: I recall such——

Presiding Inspector: Isn't that what you have said heretofore?

The Witness: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: You didn't pay any attention to whether a person was a Communist or not?

The Witness: No.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, you were asked as to whether or not you had ever been in opposition to Mr. O'Connell, to Mr. McLaughlin, to Mr. Vandeleur, and Mr. Lundeberg. Have you ever been opposed to Mr. McLaughlin, either personally or because of matters on [4255] which your judgment differed from his?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please——

Presiding Inspector: Who is the person mentioned?

Mr. Gladstein: Mr. McLaughlin. This was brought out on cross examination.

Mr. Del Guercio: Only the name; not the question of what the opposition was.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it. You may answer.

A. Yes. Mr. McLaughlin was, and I think still is today, Secretary of the Teamsters Union, Local 85, I believe is the number. He did some things that I certainly didn't agree with, which were done for the very purpose of splitting our own union wide open and stopping its affiliation with the CIO. By that I mean that he and others of the Teamsters Union were responsible for a blockade of the waterfront in 1937, which nearly shut the waterfront down for about 30 days.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. When you use the word "Blockade," what do you mean?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. Well, our own union had voted to affiliate with the CIO and the Teamsters saw fit to blockade the waterfront. By that I mean that they gave orders to their members to stop hauling to and from the docks; thereby allowing the cargo to accumulate and eventually blockading it.

They also placed a so-called picket line down there, to which we paid no attention. [4256]

Q. How big was that picket line?

A. Oh, sometimes they would take a couple of thousand men and place them in front of the dock.

Q. You were opposed to Mr. McLaughlin on that, of course? A. Certainly.

Q. Well, now, has your opposition, your expressed opposition to Mr. McLaughlin been at any time because of Mr. McLaughlin's position, whatever it may be, on the subject of Communists, or Communism? A. No.

Q. What has the basis of your opposition or disagreement with Mr. McLaughlin been aside from the incident that you have already mentioned?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I thought his first question was in that connection. Now he is asking for more along that line.

Mr. Gladstein: There may be more. I think we are entitled to it.

You will recall that in this same connection——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) We will withdraw our objection, if your Honor please.

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead, and answer the question.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. Another incident that stands out in my mind is that Mr. McLaughlin and his colleagues gave orders that none of the [4257] unemployed teamsters might accept work from the longshore hiring hall, which used to be the custom. Whenever we had work, more work than we could handle, we would call the Teamsters Union, among other unions, and ask them to send us their unemployed men. I know that Mr. McLaughlin, and some of his colleagues, were opposed to that because they believed that it would get their membership interested in such a hiring hall as we have, and they might make demands to establish a similar one. That is another reason why I was opposed to Mr. McLaughlin.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Would it be correct to say that your opposition to Mr. McLaughlin has at all times been on the basis of trade union differences between the two of you?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I object to that as not being a question, but an answer.

Presiding Inspector: I think it was leading.

Mr. Gladstein: I realize, but it was in the interest of time. I could ask the witness to enumerate the various times; but I don't like to do that.

Mr. Myron: He has.

Presiding Inspector: Both of you are objecting.

What central body was Mr. McLaughlin's union associated with, the A. F. of L. union?

The Witness: Yes. [4258]

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Presiding Inspector: And that was the basis of the opposition—one was the CIO and the other the A. F. of L.?

The Witness: Well, at that particular time that I have in mind our union was still in the A. F. of L., and was just in the process of making the change.

Presiding Inspector: So there was evidence of restricting you from making a change?

The Witness: That is right.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Have you ever been in expressed open opposition to Mr. Vandeleur or his policies?

A. Certainly.

Q. Has that opposition ever been because of Mr. Vandeleur's position, whatever it may have been, on the subject of Communists or Communism?

A. None that I can recall. Just his policies with regard to the job that he holds, and some of the matters that he advocates forces me to oppose this man.

Q. What has been the basis, or what has been the bases of your expressed opposition to Mr. Vandeleur whenever that opposition occurred?

A. Well, he, like Mr. McLaughlin, was of the same opinion in 1937 when the waterfront was blockaded and he collaborated with Mr. McLaughlin in order to make life miserable for us in our organization. In fact, it was a regularly organized move, [4259] organized by the A. F. of L. top leadership, such as Vandeleur, O'Connell, Joe Casey and McLaughlin, to force our membership to go back into the A. F. of L. by depriving them of employment by placing a phony picket line down there.

Q. Was there ever any dispute——

Presiding Inspector: How is this competent? What difference does it make as to the difficulty between these two trade unions, as to whether one was justified or not, or as to what animosity arose out of it? How does it affect this witness or this case?

Mr. Gladstein: It was first brought out on cross examination. Mr. Schmidt was asked whether he had ever been opposed to Mr. O'Connell. He said he had been in opposition to him. Then he was asked, "Wasn't the reason you attacked, belabored Mr. O'Connell, the fact that Mr. O'Connell was fighting communists?" And he said, "No, that wasn't the reason."

I am entitled to go into the true reason.

Presiding Inspector: Haven't you a full and complete answer so far?

Mr. Gladstein: Aren't we permitted to show the true reason for the opposition?

Presiding Inspector: I don't see what difference it makes.

Mr. Del Guercio: There is no evidence as to what the truth is because the witness has said "No" in answer to my question. [4260]

Presiding Inspector: You have been allowed to do this, but it seems—go ahead.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Of course, counsel is trying to save time.

Presiding Inspector: I am afraid that that comes within counsel's definition of a "speech."

Mr. Del Guercio: I will withdraw the remark.

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead, Mr. Gladstein.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, your Honor.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, the joint negotiating committee meetings in 1936, during or immediately before the 1936-1937 strike, at about that period, Mr. Schmidt, how many meetings, trade union meetings of one kind or another were you attending?

A. The joint negotiating committee, I am sure, was organized prior to the starting of the strike. I don't know how long before. It met right along.

Besides that, there was the negotiating committee of the longshoremen's union, which was, which I attended.

We would trot from one meeting to another.

We had an Executive Board meeting of the local union, and there was a constant stream of meetings, especially, during the strike. It was a case of running from one to another—first the strike committee meeting of the local union, then the meeting of the joint negotiating committee, [4261] or the marine strike committee; and it was necessary to consult with the publicity committee—just going around in a vicious circle all the time.

Q. How many members, or trade unionists attended the meetings of the negotiating committee, those that you attended?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. The joint committee?

Q. Yes.

A. The committee was rather a large body because it was representative of all the maritime unions on the Pacific Coast. I would say that there were at least 35 or 40 people there. Besides that, the members of the maritime unions would drift in and sit in the meeting hall. And inasmuch as the meetings were being held in the meeting hall of the Masters, Mates and Pilots Association their members, who might happen to be there, would also sit in as spectators, but they wouldn't participate in the business before the house.

Q. Would it be possible to sit through a meeting of the negotiating committee—withdraw that. What would you say the average number would be of the men who attended the negotiating committee meetings?

Mr. Myron: Does he mean what was the average number that attended?

Presiding Inspector: You said "What would be." I suppose you mean on an average? [4262]

Mr. Gladstein: Yes. It should be "what was."

A. Well, I would say that if there were ever less than 25 it would be very seldom.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What was it generally?

A. I think 35 to 40.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Were you ever introduced to Mr. Cannalonga? A. No.

Q. Were you ever impressed at any time with his presence at any of those meetings?

A. I have no memory of him at all. As I stated this morning, I studied that photograph in the paper and it makes no impression on my mind whatsoever.

Q. Mr. Schmidt, have you ever been in any meeting of a small group, say half a dozen people, at which Mr. Cannalonga ever attended?

A. No.

Q. When you first met Mr. Louis Goldblatt was he a member of a trade union?

A. Yes; he was a member of the Warehousemen's Union.

Q. Do you know whether he has held any office in that union?

A. Yes. He has been Vice-President.

Q. Do you know whether he has held any other office in the labor movement? [4263]

A. Yes; at the present time he is the Secretary-Treasurer of the State CIO Council.

Q. How long has he held that position, do you know?

A. This is either his second or third term. The term is a year.

Q. You were asked about whether you had made speeches here, there or elsewhere. Can you give an estimate of the number of speeches, Mr. Schmidt, that you have made since you became a leader in the local labor movement?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I object to the words "leader in the labor movement." No evidence has been shown here that this man has ever been a leader in the labor movement.

Mr. Gladstein: I will withdraw that expression.

Presiding Inspector: Prominent in the labor movement.

Mr. Del Guercio: I won't admit that, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: According to his estimate——

Mr. Gladstein: I will withdraw the question.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. I simply want to know, say, since 1934——

Mr. Myron: (Interposing) What is the question?

Presiding Inspector: He is putting it now.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Schmidt, since 1934 can you give us an estimate since that date of the number of speeches that you have made?

A. I couldn't begin to do that. [4264]

Q. Well, can you estimate whether it would run into the hundreds or thousands?

A. I don't think it has run into the thousands.

Q. What?

A. I don't think it has run into the thousands.

Q. Is it pretty close?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Mr. Del Guercio: That is obviously improper. Why not say "millions" also?

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What is your best judgment?

A. Hundreds would be closer.

Presiding Inspector: Do you include speaking on the floor of his union?

Mr. Gladstein: I guess my question was rather general and it would include that.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Let me put it this way: Mr. Schmidt, can you give an estimate of the number of public speeches, or addresses or talks that you have given, outside of the regular meetings of your union membership?

A. There wouldn't be too many; perhaps 50 perhaps 75, perhaps 95—I don't know. It might be a little over a hundred; I don't know.

Q. How many trade union meetings, caucuses, and various other kinds of trade union conclaves have you attended since [4265] 1934?

A. Trade union meetings, conclaves, caucuses, Executive Board meetings, anything like that?

Q. Yes.

A. That would be impossible to say. I would say an average of one each day.

Q. You were asked about a trip to Mexico where you attended a Congress. Did you attend one or more than one Congress while you were there?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. A part of one and all of another.

Q. Well, which two were involved?

A. There was, the first one was the Latin-American Labor Congress; and then the second one was the World Congress Against War and Fascism.

Q. To which Congress did you go first?

A. I went to the Latin-American Labor Congress first. [4266]

Q. Where was it held?

A. In Mexico City in the Palace of Fine Arts.

Q. Were you a delegate to that convention or Congress? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And in general what was——

A. (Interposing) That is, a fraternal delegate.

Q. In general, what was the purpose of that Congress?

Mr. Del Guercio: Which Congress?

Mr. Gladstein: The one he is now discussing.

Mr. Del Guercio: I missed that. Would you mind telling me or shall I go to the record?

Mr. Gladstein: No, the Labor Congress.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did they call that the Latin-American Labor Congress? A. That is what they called it.

Q. What, in general, was the purpose of that Congress?

A. To unite the several labor movements in Latin America that existed in the several republics.

Q. Do you know whether the CIO Council received any invitation for delegates to be sent prior to your becoming a delegate?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. No, I don't know that. Shall I describe how it came about? [4267]

Q. I wish you would. A. Well,——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) If your Honor please, I will object to that.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

Mr. Del Guercio: The witness has said he doesn't know.

Presiding Inspector: I beg your pardon?

Mr. Del Guercio: He said he doesn't know.

Presiding Inspector: No, he is going to tell what he does know, as I understand it.

Mr. Del Guercio: Would you mind reading his answer, please?

(The answer referred to was read by the reporter as follows:

"Q. Do you know whether the CIO Council received any invitation for delegates to be sent prior to your becoming a delegate?

"A. No, I don't know that. Shall I describe how it came about?")

Mr. Del Guercio: There, your Honor. He said he doesn't know. How can he describe something he doesn't know?

Presiding Inspector: He doesn't know whether they received any invitation, but he is going to tell how it did come about. They may or may not have received an invitation. [4268]

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

The Witness: Well, I understood Mr. Gladstein's question to mean did they receive an invitation by communication or mail. About that I know nothing, but I do know that fraternal delegates from the C.T.M. which is the Mexican Labor Movement, came to the State Council Convention in Los Angeles that year, and, among other things, they urged that this State CIO Council send a fraternal delegate or delegates to the Latin-American Labor Congress, and that convention accepted that invitation and went on record to send such a delegate, and several people were nominated, and I was elected.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. All right. Now, at the Labor Congress itself whom did you represent?

A. I represented the State CIO.

Q. Were there other representatives of, or from the American Labor Movement or any part of it?

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, if your Honor please, it is unnecessary to go into all this, in the interest of time.

Presiding Inspector: Well, I didn't think it was very material, but it was introduced by Mr. Del Guercio, so I think I will allow you to go into it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Your answer, please?

A. Yes, Mr. John L. Lewis was there.

Q. Any others that you recall?

A. Americans? [4269]

Q. Yes. A. No.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Now, where was the World Congress Against War and Fascism held?

A. In the same place.

Q. In the same building?

A. Yes, I am pretty sure it was in the same building.

Q. When did it take place with respect to the American Labor Congress?

A. Well, the American—the Latin-American-Labor Congress was adjourned on a Saturday afternoon, I believe, and the other one took place the following Monday. The Sunday in between there was a large mass meeting in the bull ring in Mexico City where all these different delegates addressed the workers who came there.

Q. Were you invited to attend the World Congress that began on a Monday? A. Yes.

Q. By whom?

A. I think it was Alexander Carillo.

The Reporter: Spell it, please.

The Witness: C-a-r-i-l-l-o.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. And who was he, what position, if any, did he hold?

A. I think he was Secretary-Treasurer of the C.T.M. [4270]

Q. Did the President of the Republic of Mexico address the World Congress or the Latin-American Labor Congress?

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, if your Honor please, it is a leading question in the first place and it is bringing in a person who was not mentioned in the cross examination.

Mr. Gladstein: I can ask him who the speakers were and he can list them. I simply want to show the general nature of both these meetings about which an inference——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) What good would that do?

Mr. Gladstein: (Continuing) ——about which an inference was attempted to be made by Mr. Del Guercio in his questions.

Mr. Del Guercio: The only inference I made, if your Honor please—we are prepared to support it—that the American League Against War and Fascism is a Communist organization.

Presiding Inspector: I will take the answer. I don't think you should go into the policies of the Cardenas government, though.

Mr. Gladstein: No; I don't intend to.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did you hear the question, Mr. Schmidt?

A. You asked me if President Cardenas had spoken?

Q. Yes.

A. I didn't hear him address the Latin-American Labor Congress because I got there a little bit late, but the other [4271] congress he did address, that is right.

Q. The World Congress?

A. That is right.

Q. Have you ever been notified that the World

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Congress designated you, or elected you to some honorary position?

A. No; it is still news to me.

Q. In what language was the business of the Congress carried on?

A. In French and Spanish.

Q. Do you speak or understand either?

A. No, sir.

Q. Can you recall any other American representatives either from the labor movement or — from the American Labor Movement who were present at the World Congress?

A. There were several Americans there, and we got acquainted. Whether they mentioned their names I don't recall. The only name I can recall is Mr. Smith who was connected with the National Labor Relations Board.

Q. Mr. Edwin S. Smith?

A. I think those were his initials.

Q. You identify him as a member of the National Labor Relations Board of the United States?

A. Yes, he introduced himself as such. Oh, and John L. Lewis was there, too.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, you have already said that.

The Witness: As regards the first Congress and also [4272] the second.

Mr. Gladstein: May we have a recess? Oh, I see, it is almost time to adjourn. I was going to look at my notes to see if I had further questions.

Mr. Del Guercio: Do you have another witness?

Mr. Gladstein: No, not for today.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Schmidt, when a strike takes place or is about to take place do the strike committees of the unions send telegrams to various people?

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, if your Honor please, I object to the question as being too general.

Mr. Gladstein: It is a matter of practice.

Mr. Del Guercio: We are not interested in the practice necessarily.

Mr. Gladstein: You see, Mr. Schmidt was asked about a particular telegram. I wish to show that the practice here has been, during a couple of strikes, for so many telegrams to be sent that it literally goes into hundreds and thousands during a strike, so that I want your Honor to know what the background is against which Mr. Del Guercio says "Do you remember this particular telegram", so that your Honor will have an understanding of what the situation is.

Presiding Inspector: Didn't he say that he read some such telegram?

Mr. Gladstein: He gave an answer that it probably was [4273] sent.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, but——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) He said that he read the telegram, if your Honor please; he recalled it.

Presiding Inspector: I thought he said that he thought there was some such telegram.

Mr. Gladstein: I think we are entitled——

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing)) Now, counsel —excuse me.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it. I don't think it is very material.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What is the practice, Mr. Schmidt, or what has it been during 1934 and during the 1936-'37 strike with respect to the sending of telegrams?

A. Well, when a union is about to go into a strike, or a number of unions are to go into a strike jointly, it is just a case of being forced to send communications hither and yon to all kinds of people.

Q. Well, give examples of people to whom telegrams have been sent. A. Well——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) Your Honor, I object to giving examples. That is carrying it a little too far even under your liberal ruling. [4274]

Presiding Inspector: Yes, I think it should be the custom, if there is a custom.

Mr. Gladstein: All right, I will withdraw that.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Can you say whether it is a practice or a custom during a strike for a union to send numerous telegrams to official Governmental agencies, newspapers and other unions on subject matters connected with the strike or the projected strike?

A. It cetrainly is.

Mr. Gladstein: I believe that is all, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Anything further this afternoon?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Not this afternoon, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: (Addressing witness) You have to be here on Monday.

The Witness: Yes, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Ten o'clock. We will take a recess.

Mr. Gladstein: Do you want the witness again on Monday?

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes, if you please.

Presiding Inspector: I told the witness to be here Monday.

Monday morning at ten o'clock.

(Whereupon at 3:55 P. M. an adjournment was taken until Monday, May 19, 1941, at 10:00 A. M.) [4275]

PROCEEDINGS

Presiding Inspector: Call back the witness, Schmidt.

First of all, I have a letter from Mr. Hynes, in response to his promise, as to the date of the leave of absence from the Department, according to the records.

Would you like to see it?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes.

(The letter referred to was handed to Mr. Gladstein who, in turn, passed it to Mr. Del Guercio.)

Presiding Inspector: You may introduce it.

Mr. Gladstein: We now offer in evidence a letter received by Judge Sears from William F. Hynes, which was in response to a request which we made before he left for a statement concerning the dates of his leave of absence from the Los Angeles Police Department.

Presiding Inspector: Received without objection.

(The letter referred to was received in evidence and marked Alien's Exhibit No. 22.)

Presiding Inspector: Before we go on, Mr. Glad-stein, I ruled on Friday, I think it was, that the question of whether Mr. Holman did, during the time he was President of the Union, receive money from the shipowners was not competent. I still think the fact itself is of no importance in this proceeding, but it may have a bearing upon something which didn't occur to me at the moment—perhaps you made the point but at any rate [4277] it didn't occur to me—and that is, simply on the probability of the Albion Hall group having the suspicions which Mr. Schmidt has testified to. Therefore, I am going to reverse the ruling and allow you to show that.

Mr. Gladstein: I will do that after counsel finishes.

Presiding Inspector: You understand the point?

Mr. Gladstein: I do.

Presiding Inspector: Merely bearing on the probability of their having suspicions.

Mr. Del Guercio: Before we proceed, your Honor, may we ask the Court whether or not Mr. MacMickle has submitted his diplomas to you?

Presiding Inspector: I have received none.

Mr. Del Guercio: Very well.

HENRY A. SCHMIDT

called as a witness on behalf of the Alien, having been previously duly sworn, testified further as follows:

Cross Examination (resumed)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. You testified last week that you had never spoken at any time, any place, under the auspices of the Young Communist League, is that correct?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. That is right.

Q. And that you didn't know where Franklin Hall was in San Francisco? [4278]

Mr. Gladstein: That is not correct. That is a misstatement of the evidence. As I recall it, the witness testified he did know where Franklin Hall was.

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, on page 4215 of the transcript this question appears:

"Q. Did you speak, Mr. Schmidt, at Franklin Hall on August 8, 1937?

"A. Franklin Hall? Where is that?

"Q. San Francisco.

"A. I can't place the location of that in my mind at all, Franklin Hall."

Mr. Gladstein: Is that all the testimony on that?

Mr. Del Guercio: On that point.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, for the purpose of refreshing your recollection, Mr. Schmidt——

Mr. Gladstein: (Interposing) If you want to show him a document would you show it to counsel first?

Mr. Del Guercio: I don't know as I have to show it to you when it is offered for the purpose of refreshing the witness' recollection.

Presiding Inspector: If you are going to show it to him; yes.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

(The document referred to was passed to Mr. Gladstein.) [4279]

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. I will show you a pamphlet here headed "A Story of Jim and Joe", on the back of which appears this "Hear Henry Schmidt, President of ILA 38-79, Archie Brown, Young Communist League, San Francisco Central Labor Council, and Youth Leaders of all views discuss Young Labor on the March, Wednesday, September 8, at Franklin Hall, 1859 Fillmore, admission 20 cents, see 'Road to Life,' Soviet movie of homeless youth. Join the Young Communist League of San Francisco, 121 Haight Street, San Francisco."

Does that refresh your memory any?

Mr. Gladstein: I will object to that question on this ground: That purports, if it is a correct copy, to announce a scheduled speaker, apparently, and is not in line with the question which was asked, which was whether Mr. Schmidt had ever spoken at any such meeting.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, I will allow it. Yes or no, does it refresh your recollection?

A. It refreshes my recollection but I didn't speak there.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. You were advertised as a speaker at that place, were you not?

Mr. Gladstein: I will object to that as incom-

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

petent, irrelevant and immaterial and calling for the conclusion of the witness. [4280]

Presiding Inspector: I will take it. He is your witness. This is cross examination.

Mr. Gladstein: Even if it is, how would he know whether——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I will take it. If he doesn't know he can say so.

A. You asked me if I was advertised as a speaker?

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Yes. A. Oh, yes; I recall that.

Q. You recall that?

A. Yes, but I didn't speak.

Q. Now, for the further purpose of refreshing your recollection, Mr. Schmidt, I will show you a copy of the Western Worker for Thursday, September 2, 1937, and particularly to an article appearing on the bottom of page 8 reading as follows:

"Union leaders to speak at labor rally planned by San Francisco YCL. Prominent trade unionists will be featured at a labor rally sponsored by the Young Communist League for September 8 at Franklin Hall, 1859 Franklin Street. Speakers will be Henry Schmidt, President of Longshoremen 38-79; Jerry Callahan, President of Filling Station Employees Union; Pauline Gordon, organizer of the Cannery & Preserve Workers, and Archie Brown of the Ship Scalers. The movie 'Road to Life' will be shown."

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Does that further refresh your recollection?

[4281]

Mr. Gladstein: I object to the form of the question as to whether it further refreshes his recollection. It is still merely an announcement to the effect that Mr. Schmidt was scheduled to be a speaker.

Mr. Del Guercio: If the Court please, I object to counsel suggesting the answer to the witness.

Mr. Gladstein: I am not suggesting the answer.

Presiding Inspector: He has already stated he was advertised, has he not?

Mr. Gladstein: That is right, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Now, what does this add? I don't see that it adds anything.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Well, now, is your testimony still that you did not speak at that rally on that day?

A. Yes, sir; I know I didn't speak.

Q. How did it happen that you did not?

A. Well, I just didn't speak; I was too busy; I was very busy at that particular time.

Q. Well, did you notify the Young Communist League that you could not appear?

A. I doubt it very much.

Q. Huh? Telephone them?

A. I doubt that very much. [4282]

Q. Well, what is your best recollection on that?

A. There was a——

Q. (Interposing) Did you communicate with the Young Communist League in any manner whatever as to your appearance there?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. I doubt whether I communicated at all.

Presiding Inspector: Wouldn't it be more material as to whether he had agreed to speak?

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Well, did you agree to speak there as announced? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you call this advertisement or article to their attention?

A. I may have done that, but my recollection is very vague. There was a blockade on the waterfront at that time and I was on the job about 14, 16 hours a day.

Q. Well, look, I will give you all the time you want to refresh your memory and have a good recollection.

Mr. Gladstein: I object to that statement.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you notify——

Mr. Gladstein: (Interposing) I object to that statement and move it be stricken.

Presiding Inspector: I think it is improper.

Mr. Gladstein: I think counsel should be admonished. [4283]

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you notify——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I won't admonish him.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. I don't think so, but I may have. I don't know. There were—as I said, there was this blockade on the waterfront. It was necessary for me to get up about 5:00 o'clock every morning.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, you also testified that you had only been to 121 Haight Street twice, once at a New Year's party, and the other time to hear Anita Whitney speak; is that correct?

A. That was my testimony and that is correct.

Q. Now, you have never been there at any other time? A. No, sir.

Q. Now, didn't you go to 121 Haight Street in the early part of 1936 to get a mimeograph machine which was being used by the Communist Party at that time?

A. Did I go there to get a mimeograph machine?

Q. Yes. A. No, sir.

Q. You are sure of that?

A. I am sure of it. [4284]

Presiding Inspector: One more question about this Young Communist meeting: Have you any idea how they happened to advertise you as a speaker?

The Witness: No, your Honor; I don't know. First, I saw placards on telephone posts down around the waterfront. In fact, I remember having, not exactly a hot argument about it, but accusations by Joe Casey, who was International Representative of the Teamsters Union at that time. He proceeded to bawl me out for having my name advertised as going to be a speaker there. I said, "Well, Joe, you need not worry because I am not going to speak there."

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Presiding Inspector: Then it wasn't your business that made you not speak, but because you didn't like the meeting? Answer that question.

The Witness: I am sorry, but it wasn't asked of me.

Presiding Inspector: But you have given the answer that you were too busy to speak.

The Witness: That was one of the reasons. I certainly was busy. There was a terrific blockade on the waterfront, and we were trying to get out of a mess down there. I had no intention to speak there anyway.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Were you ever on the speaker's stand at 121 Haight Street with Elaine Black? A. No.

Q. For the purpose of refreshing your recollection, Mr. [4285] Schmidt, I will show you a copy of the Western Worker for Monday, May 21, 1934, and to two articles, one appearing on the front page under the heading——

Mr. Gladstein: (Interposing) Before you continue, could we see the articles that you intend to ask the witness about?

Mr. Del Guercio: I showed you both articles.

Mr. Gladstein: You did not.

Mr. Del Guercio: One on page 1 and one on page 5—page 4.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Mr. Gladstein: You didn't say anything about that one.

Presiding Inspector: Let's not argue. Look at it now.

Matters of that kind don't call for angry statements, Mr. Gladsein.

Mr. Gladstein: Counsel said——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) The first article is on page 1.

Presiding Inspector: There may be misunderstanding passing over the table.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. I want to withdraw that last question and put this question to the witness:——

Presiding Inspector: Let's wait until Mr. Gladstein has examined the newspaper.

Mr. Grossman: Is there something on page 5?

Mr. Del Guercio: Page 4. [4286]

Mr. Grossman: Page 5, I said.

Mr. Del Guercio: 4.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Were you ever on the speaker's stand at any time, any place, with Elaine Black?

A. That might be possible, but I wouldn't recollect.

Q. Well, when?

A. I have no remembrance.

Q. During 1934 were you on the speakers' stand at any time, at any place, with Elaine Black?

A. Well, as I testified yesterday, she spoke to our Strike Committee one time, and we had sort of a high place there where she addressed the Strike Committee, but I was sitting in the audience facing her.

Q. Where was that?

A. On Steuart Street, at the headquarters on the waterfront.

Q. Did you ever hear Elaine Black speak anywhere else during the 1934 strike?

A. Yes, sir. She spoke in California Hall; some time during the strike, after the Police Department beat up a lot of people on the waterfront, during the end of May, they had sort of a protest meeting in California Hall.

Q. Were you on the speaker's stand?

A. Yes, I think I did speak there. [4287]

Q. Were you ever on the speaker's stand with Elaine Black at the Civic Center in May 1934?

A. I don't understand what you mean, "speaker's stand at the Civic Center."

Q. Was there a rally, or a meeting at the Civic Center during the 1934 strike?

A. Some time during the 1934 strike we organized a parade of strikers which proceeded up Market Street and they gathered on the green there, and there were speeches made from the bed of a truck. I am pretty sure I spoke. Whether Elaine Black spoke or not, I don't remember.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. I don't know as I have offered those other two documents in evidence. The other reporter has them.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Presiding Inspector: Very well. There is no objection to their being received?

Mr. Gladstein: What is that?

Mr. Del Guercio: That yellow pamphlet.

Mr. Grossman: Certainly we object. They haven't been identified by any witness as having been circulated.

Mr. Del Guercio: The witness said hundreds of them were around town.

The Witness: Not those yellow things. I didn't say that.

Mr. Gladstein: The evidence shows the witness was [4288] advertised as a speaker without his approval and consent.

Presiding Inspector: I just asked whether there was objection.

Mr. Grossman: We object on the ground that no proper foundation has been laid, and that it is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial. In the first place, no proper foundation has been laid for this particular document; secondly, it is immaterial whether he was advertised.

Presiding Inspector: I will reject it on the first ground only.

Mr. Del Guercio: What ground is that?

Presiding Inspector: It hasn't been properly identified.

Mr. Del Guercio: Then we offer it for identification.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

(The pamphlet referred to was thereupon marked for identification Government's Exhibit No. 266.)

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. I will show you a copy of the Western Worker for the date, May 21, 1934, and call your attention particularly to two articles appearing therein; one appearing on page 1, under the title, " 'Stevedores Can't Lose,'—says Strike Committee;" and the other appearing on page 4, the article headed "5000 Stevedores, Families, Sympathizers in S. F. Parade," and ask you if that is the parade and the matter you speak of that occurred in 1934? [4289]

A. (Examining newspaper) Page 1——

Presiding Inspector: Page 1 and page 4.

A. (Examining newspaper.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Mr. Schmidt, did you speak on this occasion?

Presiding Inspector: He hasn't answered yet—he hasn't fully examined the article.

A. On what occasion do you mean?

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. On the occasion reflected by that article.

A. This article that I have just finished reading says nothing about any meeting or parade.

Q. Did you speak on that occasion, then, on the same occasion that Elaine Black spoke?

A. In Marshall Square in front of the City Hall, yes. I am pretty sure I spoke there.

Q. Now, look at the article on page 4, Column

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

2, particularly to the fourth paragraph of that article reading as follows:

"Among those to speak were Shoemaker as Chairman, Johnson, President of the Local ILA, Harry Bridges, Chairman of the Strike Committee, Henry Schmidt of the Strikers Publicity Committee. All told how the stevedores must spend an entire week to get perhaps a day's work; of the speed-ups, of the uncertainty for even an existence." [4290]

And also to the last paragraph in that column reading as follows:

"Greetings of solidarity were given by Levino of the striking cooks, Ben Fee of the Chinese seamen, Paul Valdez, of the Filipino Seamens, Fritz Deuer of the Typographical Union and Elaine Black of the International Labor Defense."

A. I would like to call your attention to the paragraph that is entitled "Woman speaks." I have a clear recollection of that lady speaking. That happened to be Mrs. Olson, who is the wife of a striking longshoreman.

Q. Is that statement in the same article?

A. Yes; just above the one that you were reading. [4291]

Q. Well, now, did you speak on that occasion?

A. I undoubtedly did.

Q. And Elaine Black was on the speaker's platform?

A. It was not a platform; it was the bed of a truck.

Q. Well, was she on the same truck?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. If she spoke there she was.

Q. Was Harry Bridges on the same truck with Elaine Black and you?

A. Well, as I recollect it, we were not all standing on the truck at the same time. The Chairman stayed there by himself and every time he introduced a speaker, why, the speaker would climb on to the truck.

Mr. Del Guercio: I offer this in evidence, if your Honor please, a copy of the Western Worker and ask that a photostat copy of it be substituted for the original.

Presiding Inspector: Received without objection.

Mr. Grossman: What is being received, your Honor?

Presiding Inspector: That newspaper.

Mr. Gladstein: That is the article that the witness——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) Both articles.

Mr. Gladstein: What?

Mr. Del Guercio: Both articles, the article on page 1 and the article on page 4.

(The newspaper referred to was received in evidence and marked Government's Exhibit No. 267.)

By Mr. Del Guercio: [4292]

Q. I believe your testimony was that you didn't know Harry Jackson very well during 1934 and before the strike; isn't that correct?

A. I believe that is what I stated, yes.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. And how many times did you meet Harry Jackson during the 1934 strike or prior thereto?

A. I don't remember meeting him at all prior except, maybe, a few days before it developed.

Q. And during the 1934 strike how many times would you say——

A. (Interposing) Oh, he might have dropped over to the strike committee six or seven times.

Q. Well, did you ever see him at 121 Haight Street during the 1934 strike?

A. No, sir; I don't remember—I was only there twice as I testified before.

Q. I believe you testified to the same effect in regard to Darcy, Sam Darcy?

A. I don't think you asked me about Darcy.

Q. Well, I will ask you now then.

A. No, I didn't meet him.

Q. Never met Sam Darcy at any time prior to the 1934 strike or during the 1934 strike?

A. I have seen him speak from the platform.

Q. Did you ever sit on the same platform as Sam Darcy? A. No, sir. [4293]

Q. Did you ever sit on the same platform as Harry Jackson during the 1934 strike?

A. I know that he spoke in the great mass meetings that we held, I think. It was in the Civic Auditorium and it was a few days before the general strike developed. I know I spoke there. I am pretty sure that he spoke also.

Q. Were you on the speaker's platform with Harry Jackson on that occasion?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. There were a great many people on the platform.

Q. Were you on the platform with Harry Jackson?

A. I can't say yes to that in just one word.

Q. How many people were there on the platform?

A. There might have been 40 or 50.

Q. Did you know any of them?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, give me the names of some of them.

A. Well, there was Harry Bridges, Mr. O'Brady of the Masters, Mates and Pilots, Shoemaker——

Q. (Interposing) That is John Shoemaker?

A. Yes, sir. I think in all probability, the entire joint marine strike committee was up there.

Q. Now, do you recall seeing Harry Jackson on the speaker's platform?

A. Yes, I recall him speaking there.

Q. Now, what union did he represent? [4294]

A. The Marine Workers Industrial Union.

Q. Did he speak? A. Yes.

Q. That is at the Civic Center?

A. Civic Auditorium.

Q. Civic Auditorium. Now, to go back to 121 Haight Street, did you ever sit on a speaker's platform with Harry Jackson there?

A. No, sir.

Q. At any time during the 1934 strike?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was it ever announced at any time that you were to be on the same speaker's platform at 121 Haight Street with Harry Jackson?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. Oh, that may be. I have no recollection.

Q. Huh?

A. I say that may be, but I have no recollection.

Q. Well, going back to the 1934 strike were you ever announced as a speaker to appear at 121 Haight Street with Harry Jackson?

A. Certainly not to my knowledge.

Q. And Sam Darcy? A. No, sir.

Q. Not to your knowledge?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Now, I will show you a copy of the Western Worker for [4295] Monday, June 4, 1934, and call your attention there to this announcement appearing on the bottom of that page:

"International solidarity day, June 3rd, 8:00 P.M., 121 Haight Street, S. F., dance and entertainment, speakers Harry Jackson, Seamen's Strike Committee; Henry Schmidt, Longshoremen's Strike Committee; Sam Darcy, District Organizer, Communist Party. All proceeds to Longshoremens and Seamens Strike fund. Admission 15 cents, Auspices Workers International Relief." Does that refresh your memory?

A. No, that doesn't do any good.

Mr. Grossman: I call your Honor's attention to the fact that, according to the witnesses of the Government in this case, 121 Haight Street was not at that time connected with the Communist Party.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Mr. Del Guercio: That is incorrect, if your Honor please. The evidence does not support that statement at all.

Presiding Inspector: Well, we will have to go to the record.

Mr. Grossman: St. Clair testified, for example—I think of him in particular—that the Communist Party Headquarters was at 37 Grove Street until it was broken up after the strike was over, or during the latter part of the strike.

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, there is no objection.

Mr. Grossman: It seems to me that was also the testimony of several other Government witnesses.

[4296]

Presiding Inspector: I don't know. I can't remember those dates.

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, there is evidence in the record that was the headquarters of the International Labor Defense and the Workers International Relief, and the evidence shows that both organizations are Communist organizations.

Presiding Inspector: Well, we will have to go to something else. The witness says this is no good to him.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you ever see that announcement before?

A. (Examining document): No, sir.

Q. This is the first time? A. Yes, sir.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. And you didn't appear at 121 Haight Street as indicated by this announcement? A. No.

Q. Were you notified that you were to appear at that address? A. Absolutely no recollection.

Q. Well, is it your testimony that you did not or that you have no recollection?

A. I have no recollection.

Q. And you might have been a speaker there, is that what you mean? [4297]

A. I wouldn't say that.

Q. What do you mean when you say "I have no recollection?"

A. Well, I don't remember and I am sure that I haven't been a speaker there.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, if your Honor please, I don't quite get that answer.

Will you read his answer please? I think we are entitled to a yes or no answer.

Mr. Gladstein: Read the last ten answers in which the witness says first "I was not a speaker", and then he was asked "Were you asked to be a speaker", and he says "I haven't any recollection of being asked." Then, counsel——

Mr. Myron (Interposing): Now, he is just asking for the last answer.

Mr. Gladstein: I haven't finished, Mr. Myron.

Presiding Inspector: Let him make his objection.

Mr. Gladstein: Then, counsel said, "Well, is it because you have no recollection or because you don't know," but counsel, then, you see, confounds the two distinct points, one, whether you spoke and the other being whether you were asked to speak.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Presiding Inspector: To relate this to whether he was asked to speak?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, that is the point. I think those should be kept clear and distinct. [4298]

The Witness: Your question was to——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): Were you asked to speak?

The Witness: I don't think so. I am pretty sure I was not asked but my——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): That is your best recollection, that you were not?

The Witness: Yes, positively, positively.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Was this announcement called to your attention during 1934?

A. Absolutely no recollection of ever having seen it before.

Q. You did testify, however, did you not, that the Western Worker was the official organ of the strike committee during the 1934 strike?

A. Not that paper.

Q. A portion of it?

A. Not that paper; a smaller bulletin that was printed in their printing shop. It was never my testimony that that paper was the official organ of the strike committee.

Mr. Del Guercio: May I have that paper marked for identification and a photostatic copy substituted?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Presiding Inspector: Have it marked for identification.

(The newspaper referred to was marked Government's Exhibit No. 268 for identification.)

[4299]

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, I believe, that you also testified that you never appeared as a speaker on behalf of the American League Against War and Fascism; is that correct?

A. I don't know whether I testified to that effect or not.

Q. Well, what is your testimony on that point?

A. I certainly have no recollection of ever speaking at any meeting where—that they were holding.

Q. That is your best recollection?

A. It certainly is.

Q. You might have spoken at such——

A. (Interposing): I might have.

Q. You don't recollect any of them at this time?

A. No, sir.

Q. Were you ever announced as a speaker at any meeting of the American League Against War and Fascism? A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Did you appear, or rather, were you announced as a speaker at a meeting sponsored by the Methodist Federation of the American League Against War and Fascism on a Friday, August 3rd, 1935? A. What kind of——

Mr. Grossman (Interposing): Your Honor, I am going to object to this question as incompetent, irrelevant and im- [4300] material. Now, it seems to us it is certainly inconsistent if we are not permitted to show not only that Mr. Chase spoke at, but advocated membership in the Bund and the Government is allowed to show, apparently on the theory that by some kind of remote connection between the American League Against War and Fascism and the Communist Party, that speaking under the auspices of the American League Against War and Fascism is relevant, I say, those two decisions are inconsistent. This is certainly, remote, incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: There is no proof of any connection between the Bund and any attempt to overthrow the Government by——

Mr. Grossman (Interposing): There certainly is between that and being anti-labor, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: What?

Mr. Grossman: There certainly is between that and being anti-labor, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: We are not going into these on the ground that they are anti-labor.

Mr. Grossman: Then, why are we going into it?

Presiding Inspector: It is claimed it is an adjunct to the Communist Party.

Mr. Gladstein: It has never been claimed that——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): We submitted proof along that line. [4301]

Mr. Grossman: May I finish my statement? At best, if we believe every witness of the Government, it is that the Communist Party, only that the Communist Party controlled the policy of that organization, not that every member is a Communist, not that anyone who speaks on that platform is a Communist, not that anyone who believes in their program is a Communist at best. Unless Mr. Del Guercio intends to prove that Mr. Schmidt had something to do with controlling the organization for the Communist Party it is completely irrelevant, whether he spoke on their platform.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Presiding Inspector: It may be of slight relevance.

Mr. Grossman: Now, your Honor, I am perfectly willing that Mr. Del Guercio should submit the program of the American League Against War and Fascism for your Honor to rule as to whether that is a Communist program. If it is a Communist program, then, I submit it is relevant whether Mr. Schmidt spoke there. I submit it is not, by any stretch of the imagination. If it is relevant that one of these witness takes an anti-war position, then, I submit most definitely that it is inconsistent with the ruling on Mr. Chase's speaking on the Bund.

Presiding Inspector: We don't care anything about this organization except there is some proof that it is Communist controlled, and, I think, I will take it on that basis. It may be of slight relevance. I will take it. [4302]

Mr. Del Guercio: Will you read the last question?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Presiding Inspector: Now, if you distinguish between the Methodist League and the main body, why——

Mr. Del Guercio: That should have been worded Methodist Federation and the American League Against War and Fascism.

Mr. Grossman: I make no distinction, but it points out the ridiculous absurdity of the Government's position. I suppose, he thinks under his theory that the Methodist Church is a Communist organization, because obviously——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): If your Honor please,——

Mr. Grossman (Interposing): Quite obviously from the name, the Methodist Federation is a group of Methodists who agree with the American League Against War and Fascism.

Presiding Inspector: He has corrected the name. Perhaps you didn't hear him.

Mr. Grossman: Does it still include the Methodist Federation?

Presiding Inspector: No; two sponsors, as I understand it.

Mr. Grossman: Then, we say very definitely unless his theory is that the Methodist organization is a Communist organization this is completely irrelevant.

Presiding Inspector: No, I don't think——

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): I don't care what counsel believes. In the first place, it is immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: That is the manner of presenting his argument. He isn't to be criticized for using that phrase.

Now, what is the name of this organization?

Mr. Del Guercio: There appear to have been two of them, if your Honor please. One was the Methodist Federation and the other the American League Against War and Fascism. There seems to have been a joint meeting sponsored by both organizations at that time.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

A. I have a recollection of speaking at a Negro church in Oakland, but I don't know whether it was the Methodist Federation or whether it was the American League Again War and Fascism.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. I am speaking of San Francisco not Oakland.

A. Well, I mean by that when you started to speak about Methodist Federation there came to my mind this talk that I made at the church in Oakland. That is the best I——

Q. (Interposing): You have a recollection you may have spoken on behalf of a church in Oakland?

A. Oh, yes, I spoke in a Negro church.

Q. When was that?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. Well, I rather think that was during the 1938 tie-up. [4304]

Q. On what subject?

A. On the question of Negroes shouldn't come to the waterfront and act as strike breakers, that they had to stick with the workers on strike, etc., etc.

Q. Now, you have a clear memory as to that event?

A. Well, when you mentioned a church I remembered.

Q. Now, do you have just as clear a memory as to this event in 1935?

Mr. Gladstein: I object because of the form of the question. It is argumentative.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, it doesn't help.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. For the purpose of refreshing your memory I will show you a copy of the Monday, July 29th, 1935 issue of the Western Worker, and I call your attention to an article appearing on page 2 there under the heading "Reception for Kanju Kato is Planned in San Francisco. Noted Japanese trade union leader here."

And I will call your attention particularly to the third paragraph there, the last sentence:

"On Friday, August 3d, Kato Francisco. The meeting will be under the joint sponsorship of the Methodist Federation and the American League Against War and Fascism and will be held at 8 p. m. at the Building Trades Auditorium, 200

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Guerrero [4305] Street. Besides Kato, speakers will include Rev. Robert Whitaker, Harry Schmidt, Bert Leech, Pacific Coast Organizer of the American League and others."

Does that refresh your memory as to that?

A. As to whether I spoke there or not?

Q. Yes.

A. No, sir, it doesn't refresh my memory.

Q. Well, did you speak on that occasion as announced by this copy of the Western Worker?

A. I did not.

Mr. Grossman: It isn't announced that Henry Schmidt was going to speak. It is announced that Harry Schmidt was going to speak.

Mr. Gladstein: It seems to me, your Honor——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): There is no objection.

Mr. Gladstein (Continuing): ——If there is a record of any such speech having been made by Mr. Schmidt he can confront the witness with that record and ask him if that is a correct reflection of the facts, instead of going around this way and asking whether he was ever announced as a speaker, then, not coming forth with any semblance of proof that Mr. Schmidt did speak at any of——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): We will confront him with proof. This is laying the foundation for it, if your Honor please. We are testing the veracity of this witness here. [4306]

Mr. Gladstein: Not by any approved method of cross examination in any Court according to any authority that I have ever seen.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Presiding Inspector: If it actually refreshes his recollection, he should say so.

The Witness: The only talks that I can remember making in the Building Trades Temple are those that were being held there when the Longshoremen's Union met there.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Would you say that there were none under the auspices of the American League Against War and Fascism? A. I am pretty sure.

Mr. Del Guercio: I offer this in evidence for identification, your Honor.

Mr. Gladstein: We will object to that as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: Have it marked for identification.

Mr. Gladstein: I thought you said in evidence.

(The newspaper referred to was marked Government's Exhibit No. 269 for identification.)

[4307]

Mr. Del Guercio: Council objected to the other article because the name appeared as Harry Schmidt, instead of Henry Schmidt.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, I show you a copy of the Western Worker for Thursday, August 1, 1935, and call your attention to an article appearing on page 3 of that issue under the heading, "Kato to Speak in East Bay, San Francisco," and call your attention particularly to this sentence:

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

"In San Francisco he"—referring to Kato—"will talk at the Building Trades Temple, 200 Guerrero Street, at 8:00 P. M. on August 3. Other speakers include: Bert Leech, William Sanders, Dr. Edward Wilson, and Henry Schmidt."

Does that refresh your recollection?

A. (Examining article): No, it doesn't help me at all.

Mr. Del Guercio: I offer this for identification, your Honor.

Mr. Gladstein: For identification?

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: It may be marked for identification.

Mr. Del Guercio: And I ask that a photostatic copy be substituted.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

(The document referred to was thereupon marked for identification as Government Exhibit 270.) [4308]

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, Mr. Schmidt, were you ever announced as a speaker under the auspices, or sponsorship, of the American League Against War and Fascism for October 27, 1935, at the Third Baptist Church, 1299 Hyde Street, San Francisco?

A. I may have been announced, but I certainly have no recollection of speaking there. The first

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Baptist Church on Hyde Street? That doesn't mean a thing to me.

Q. Did you ever appear there on behalf of the American League Against War and Fascism?

A. I doubt it very much.

Q. You might have?

A. It could be, but I have no recollection of speaking in a church in San Francisco at all. The only church talk that I can recollect is the one in the negro church that I mentioned a while ago.

Q. Did you speak at any church, at any time, at any place, under the sponsorship of the American League Against War and Fascism?

A. I doubt it very, very much.

Presiding Inspector: By that you mean your best recollection now is that you didn't?

The Witness: That is right.

Presiding Inspector: That is as I understood you.

By Mr. Del Guercio: [4309]

Q. Did you ever speak at a conference of the American League Against War and Fascism at the Building Trades Temple here in San Francisco?

A. I certainly have no recollection of it.

Q. Well, is it possible that you may have spoken there? A. It is possible that I may have.

Q. You have no recollection of it?

A. I have no recollection of it.

Q. Now, I said a conference of the American League Against War and Fascism, which included only the League forces in the San Francisco Bay Area. Does that refresh your recollection further?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. Which included only what?

Q. The League forces, American League Against War and Fascism forces?

A. No; that doesn't help me any.

Q. I will show you an issue of the Western Worker for Thursday, August 19, 1935, and call your attention to an article appearing on Page 1, thereof, and continuing on page 2, the article headed, "67,280 massed for opposition to Vigilantism. Over 40 trade unions in Bay Area Conference to fight Fascism." And call your attention to this part on page 2:

"Speakers at last night's mass meeting at the Building Trades Temple were: Leo Baroway, of the American League; [4310] Mrs. Moburg, Ladies Auxiliary of the International Longshoremen's Association; Henry Schmidt, Maritime Federation."

Does that refresh your recollection as to whether you spoke at that conference or not?

A. I am willing to state I might have spoken there, but I don't seem to remember it at the present moment.

Q. Would you say that this was an incorrect announcement?

Mr. Gladstein: I think the question has been asked and answered. I object to it on that ground.

Presiding Inspector: He says he has no recollection of it; that this doesn't refresh his recollection, but that he might have spoken.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I will offer this for identification.

Presiding Inspector: It may be marked for identification.

Mr. Del Guercio: And ask that a photostatic copy be substituted.

(The document referred to was thereupon marked for identification as Government's Exhibit No. 271.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you ever participate in the United Labor party Campaign in 1935 in the San Francisco Municipal Elections?

A. What do you mean by "participating"—making speeches?

Q. As a speaker or in any other capacity?

A. No. I was very lukewarm on that subject. I don't [4311] recollect making any talks anywhere.

Q. You don't recollect? A. No.

Q. Did you ever speak at mass meetings sponsored by the United Labor Party?

A. It is possible that I might have, but I doubt if I did.

Q. What is your best recollection on the subject?

A. That I doubt it.

Q. You doubt it. Did you ever appear at political rallies on behalf of the United Labor Party candidates as a speaker?

A. Well, if that was the group that had a sort of an organizational convention in the Civic Auditorium I was in the audience.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Weren't you a candidate for supervisor?

A. No.

Q. At one time?

A. No. You have got me mixed up with Dr. Adolph Schmidt, who is a supervisor.

Q. You are not Dr. Schmidt, are you?

A. No.

Q. Now, you also testified, I believe, last week that you didn't know Lawrence Ross, is that right?

A. That is right. I don't know him. [4312]

Q. Did you ever appear with Lawrence Ross on the same speaker's platform?

A. He might have been there without my knowledge, without my knowing who the individual was.

Q. Do you know Mervyn Rathborne?

A. Sure; yes.

Q. You have been on the same platform with him? A. Dozens of times.

Q. He is a close friend of yours, is he not?

A. Yes; I would be glad to call him my friend.

Q. Were you ever announced as a speaker by the United Labor Party Campaign Committee, say, in 1935?

A. I certainly have no recollection of it.

Q. Was Mervyn Rathborne?

A. Was he announced, you mean?

Q. Yes.

Mr. Gladstein: I think this is immaterial and calls for conjecture.

A. I can't remember that.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Presiding Inspector: It doesn't matter. He says he can't recall it.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. For the purpose of refreshing your memory, I will show you an article, or an issue of the Western Worker, dated San Francisco, Thursday, August 22, 1935, and appearing on the first page thereof, under the heading, "Uhl & McSeehy Will Meet [4313] Labor Ticket Speakers," and call your attention particularly to this paragraph appearing in that article:

"The United Labor Campaign Committee is a coalition of trade unions, liberals, Epic democrats, and radical forces united for the purpose of supporting a progressive platform and slate in the municipal election. Other speakers at the mass meeting will be Henry Schmidt, Mervyn Rathborne, Lawrence Ross and Ben Legere."

Does that refresh your memory as to whether or not you had ever met Lawrence Ross?

A. It does not.

Q. Were you a speaker, as announced in this issue of the Western Worker?

A. (Referring to article): I don't see my name on here.

Q. Let me help you. Is that (indicating) your name? A. Yes; that is my name.

Q. Does that refresh your memory now?

A. No, sir; I don't recall having spoken there.

Q. Do you recall being announced as a speaker?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. No, sir. I might add that the last week I was announced as a speaker so——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): I am not asking you about that.

I move that be stricken from the record. [4314]

Presiding Inspector: Strike it out.

Mr. Del Guercio: I ask that this be marked for identification.

Mr. Gladstein: Before you go ahead—I don't understand why that was stricken out. It was an explanation of his answer. He asked if he had been announced as a speaker. He is telling of an incident where he was announced and didn't speak.

Presiding Inspector: That doesn't add anything. It is entirely immaterial. It goes out.

Mr. Gladstein: I do not understand why it goes out. I have heard plenty of remarks of Mr. Del Guercio's that have not been stricken, which were highly improper, but when this witness tries to give a complete answer by explaining what he has in his mind, then it is stricken out.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, Mr. Gladstein, you know better than to claim that is relevant. For instance, the Republican Party might somewhere have announced him as a speaker. We don't know what kind of a matter that was—the last week, as he started to say—it has no reference to anything here at all. It is entirely immaterial.

Mr. Gladstein: I think the whole line of questioning is immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: You haven't objected.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Mr. Gladstein: We did on that ground, and you said you would take it. [4315]

Presiding Inspector: I mean that because some union organization, perhaps the Quakers—I don't know—or perhaps the Republican Party announced him as a speaker, as having no relation here, and he didn't speak. He might have been advertised to speak as a most reputable or a most disreputable person, but do you mean to say that that is competent here?

Mr. Gladstein: I think none of it is competent and we have objected to the question constantly asked, "Have you been advertised to speak?" because if Mr. Del Guercio asks Mr. Schmidt if he has been advertised to speak at a meeting which Mr. Del Guercio thinks has a radical tinge to it, I think in all fairness to the witness that he has a right to go to his records and point out to your Honor how many speeches he has given for the Republican Party, or the Democratic Party, or the most reputable organizations in the country, to show his character. If there is any reflection at all on him——

Presiding Inspector: This doesn't mean to affect his character, as I understand it.

Mr. Gladstein: I think that is what Mr. Del Guercio has in mind.

Presiding Inspector: I don't know.

Mr. Del Guercio: Is Counsel through?

Presiding Inspector: I will still strike it out. I am surprised at the argument. [4316]

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Mr. Del Guercio: May I ask that this be marked for identification, if your Honor please?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: And that a photostatic copy may be substituted.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

(The document referred to was thereupon marked for identification as Government Exhibit No. 272.)

(Whereupon an issue of the Western Worker was passed to Mr. Gladstein.)

Mr. Gladstein: Counsel is producing here new papers, new editions, to have marked for identification, having reference to the same meeting.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. I will show you an issue of August 19, 1935, of the Western Worker, and call your attention to an article appearing therein under the heading, "Candidates to Address Labor Ticket Rally," and particularly to this paragraph under the heading "Mass Meeting":

"San Francisco, with a United Front Labor Ticket already under way, will launch a city-wide campaign with a mass meeting on August 21 at 8:00 P.M. at the Building Trades Temple, 200 Guerrero Street. There the United Labor Campaign Committee program will be explained by Henry Schmidt, ILA; Lawrence Ross, Communist Party; Ben Legere, of the Democratic City Council, [4317] and Mervyn Rathborne, Maritime Federation." and ask you if that refreshes your memory as to whether you spoke on that occasion as announced in this article?

A. (Examining article) No; I have no recollection of speaking there.

Q. Does that refresh your memory as to whether or not you know Lawrence Ross?

A. Not at all.

Q. Have you ever seen that article before?

A. No; I couldn't remember.

Q. Has it ever been called to your attention?

A. Not that I can remember; that was six or seven years ago.

Q. But you do recall that you never met Lawrence Ross?

A. I have no recollection of ever meeting the man. He made no impression on my mind. I might have met a man last week and have forgotten about him.

Q. The fact that the Western Worker, the Western organ of the Communist Party, has a reference to Lawrence Ross as being connected with the Communist Party, does not help refresh your memory?

Mr. Grossman: We object to that as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: He said it doesn't refresh his recollection. [4318]

Mr. Grossman: Obvoiusly, the only purpose of this examination for the last hour is for Mr. Del Guercio to read from the Western Worker on the theory somehow that that is going to tie up this witness with these things.

Presiding Inspector: It makes no difference. It doesn't make any difference in the trial of this case. None of them are in evidence.

Mr. Grossman: Obviously, from the last question, that is his only purpose. I don't think he should be permitted to use the court room for that kind of a forum, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: It isn't evidence. All these advertisements that have been put in, articles, or notices, none of them are in evidence.

The only proof of any notice that I can recall that has been received is the one that he spoke of, where he said he was called down by somebody for having allowed his name to be published as a speaker, or something of that kind. It might not have been quite that way. That is the only one that has gotten in the record that I know of. The others have been merely marked for identification.

Mr. Del Guercio: May I ask that this issue of the Western Worker for August 19, 1935, be marked for identification?

Presiding Inspector: It may be marked for identification.

Mr. Del Guercio: And that a photostatic copy be substituted? [4319]

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

(The document referred to was thereupon marked for identification Government's Exhibit 273.)

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. You also testified that you never submitted any article under your name to the Western Worker, is that correct?

A. I don't think I testified to that effect.

Q. What did you testify to?

A. I don't think I testified to that effect.

Q. What did you testify to?

A. I don't know. I don't recall you asking me that question.

Q. I will ask you again: Did you ever submit any articles to the Western Worker under your name?

A. I may have. I submitted them to the Voice of the Federation and Labor Herald.

Q. I am asking you about the Western Worker, the official organ of the Communist Party.

Mr. Gladstein: I submit that has been answered.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. He said he might have.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you ever write any articles for the Peoples' World?

A. I might have written advertisements. They some- [4320] times communicate with us and ask us to place an ad in the paper for which we pay.

Q. But you never submitted an article?

A. Oh, I sometimes write articles for the Voice of the Federation, and Labor Herald, and when the stenographer sends it out she asks what paper to send it to, and I say, "Send it to the labor papers."

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Do you understand my question?

A. Yes.

Q. I didn't ask about the Voice of the Federation, and I didn't ask you about the other one. I asked you if you submitted articles to the Peoples' World?

A. It is possible that I did. If I tell the stenographer that I have written something, and tell her to send it to the labor papers, it will go to the Peoples' World also. But I don't write for the Peoples' World specifically and not for the others.

Q. Did any article ever appear under your name in the Peoples' World?

Mr. Gladstein: Wouldn't it be better to ask the witness, to show him any article that purports to be an article by him, and ask him if he wrote that, rather than ask him if any article has ever appeared by him in the Peoples' World?

Mr. Del Guercio: Do you know of any such article, Mr. Gladstein? [4321]

Mr. Gladstein: No, I don't. I am asking you. If this is just a fishing expedition then I think Mr. Grossman's objection should be reconsidered by your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: What objection?

Mr. Gladstein: The objection as to this line of questioning by Mr. Del Guercio. If Mr. Del Guercio has an article by Mr. Schmidt which appeared in the Peoples' World why not show the witness the article and ask him to explain it, or identify it?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Presiding Inspector: I assume he has some such article. It isn't in evidence. I will have to let counsel present their case, as I have said before, as they see fit, respectively.

You may proceed, Mr. Del Guercio.

Mr. Del Guercio: I want to call your Honor's attention, please, to the testimony of this witness appearing on page 4207 at the bottom.

Presiding Inspector: I have it before me—although it appears from what follows that that referred to the Waterfront Worker.

Mr. Del Guercio: No—the question at the bottom of page 4207.

Presiding Inspector: 4107 I was looking at.

Mr. Del Guercio: 4207.

Presiding Inspector: 4207.

Mr. Del Guercio: 4207, at the bottom of the page, begin- [4322] ning with the next to the last question.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, Mr. Schmidt, I show you the April 7, 1938 issue of the Peoples' World and call your attention to an article here purported to have been written by Henry Schmidt, reading—that is, the title reading, "In Spite of Terror, Sugar Mill Owners 'Stick-up Man' Kennedy, Crockett Workers Build Union."

Did you write that article for the People's World?

A. (Examining article).

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Mr. Gladstein: While he is reading that may we have the morning recess?

Mr. Del Guercio: May I ask that we wait until he finishes with that?

Mr. Gladstein: That is all right.

Presiding Inspector: Very well.

A. (Referring to article) Yes, I wrote that article. It was a good article.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. You wrote that article. Well, now, Mr. Schmidt, you testified under oath in this court last week that you did not write any article for the Peoples' World. You testified falsely, did you not?

A. You asked me last week whether I wrote any such article for the Western Worker. [4323]

Q. Did you testify falsely?

A. No, I don't think so.

Q. Last week, so the transcript shows, I asked you this question:

"Did you ever write any article for the Peoples' World, Mr. Schmidt?"

And your answer was:

"A. Did I ever write any article for the People's World?"

My next question was:

"Q. Yes."

And your answer:

"A. No."

Now, I will ask you again, did you testify falsely under oath when you so testified last week?

A. Certainly not deliberately.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. How did you testify falsely, then?

Mr. Gladstein: I object to that as argument.

Presiding Inspector: I think it is argument.

Mr. Del Guercio: May we have the morning recess, please?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

(Whereupon a short recess was taken.)

Presiding Inspector: You may proceed.

Mr. Del Guercio: If the Court please, I offer this issue of the People's World, dated April 7, 1938, in evidence.

Mrs. King: There is no objection.

Presiding Inspector: It may be received. [4324]

Mr. Del Guercio: And I ask leave to substitute a photostatic copy.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

(The document referred to was received in evidence and marked Government's Exhibit No. 274.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, Mr. Schmidt, I asked you last week also if you knew the Editor of the People's World, and whether you ever sent birthday greetings to him, and your reply was that you had no recollection of doing anything like that; that you didn't know when his birthday was. Do you want to change your testimony on that? A. No.

Q. Is it still your testimony that you did not send birthday greetings to the Editor of the People's World?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Mr. Gladstein: I object to that on the ground that it is assuming something not in evidence, and is an improper question.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think he quite said that.

Mr. Del Guercio: Page 4208.

Presiding Inspector: I have the testimony before me.

Mr. Del Guercio: 4208.

Presiding Inspector: He says he hasn't any recollection of it. He said, "I would hesitate to say that I didn't."

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Do you know Harrison George? [4325]

A. No.

Q. Or George Harrison?

A. Is he supposed to be the Editor?

Q. Yes, and an agent of the OGPU, or one of the agents of the OGPU, according to evidence in this case.

Mr. Gladstein: I move that that be stricken as improper.

Mr. Del Guercio: For identification.

Presiding Inspector: I don't recall whether there was testimony to that effect.

Mr. Del Guercio: There is. It is to the effect that he was the OGPU agent for the Soviet Government in Brazil.

Mr. Grossman: First, Mr. Del Guercio didn't state it was testified in this case that he was. He said that he was. If Mr. Del Guercio wants to name

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

the witness and say a particular witness said that

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing). It is testified to in this case.

Mr. Grossman: That doesn't make it the truth because your witness said it.

Presiding Inspector: Counsel is assuming it.

Mr. Grossman: You mean counsel is assuming the truth of this evidence?

Presiding Inspector: In asking the question as to identification he can deny that he knows anything about that.

Mr. Grossman: Mr. Del Guercio has no right to assume the [4326] correctness of his evidence.

Presiding Inspector: No, no.

Mr. Grossman: In this question he does.

Presiding Inspector: I don't so understand it.

Strike out the part about the OGPU.

Mr. Del Guercio: I might say that there is evidence that this is so.

Presiding Inspector: Let us find out how he knew this man, whatever he was, was an agent of the OGPU, or an agent of the Socialist Party, or an agent of anyone else. It doesn't make any difference.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. What is the answer to that question?

A. I have absolutely no recollection of sending him birthday greetings, and I don't know Mr. George Harrison, or Mr. Harrison George.

Q. Did you ever meet him?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. I don't know him.

Presiding Inspector: You mean you didn't ever meet him as far as you can recollect?

The Witness: Precisely.

Presiding Inspector: You have no recollection of meeting him at all?

The Witness: That is right.

Presiding Inspector: That is clear. Let us go on. [4327]

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. For the purpose of refreshing your memory, I will show you an issue of the People's World, for June 29, 1938, less than three years ago, and particularly to an article headed "Foster sends Greetings to George. Long History as Labor Champion Cited in Birthday Message," and particularly to this appearing in the article:

"Among the labor leaders honoring George today were: Herman Stuyvelaar, Secretary, San Francisco Industrial Union Council."

Do you know Mr. Stuyvelaar?

A. Yes.

Q. "Louis Goldblatt, Northern California Director, CIO."

Do you know Louis Goldblatt?

A. Yes.

Q. "Frank Drumm, Vice President, Steel Workers Organizing Committee, Lodge 1684."

Do you know Frank Drumm?

A. Yes.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. "William P. Shields, Secretary, Labor Unions Unemployment Council, and Delegate to that body from Machinists Local 68."

Do you know Shields?

A. Yes; I know Shields.

Q. "Bill Gratton, Editor, CIO Labor Herald." Do you know [4328] Gratton? A. Yes.

Q. "Clifford Daggett, Acting Secretary of the Inland Boatmen's Union."

Do you know Daggett?

A. No. Clifford Daggett? No.

Q. You don't know him? A. No.

Q. "Also, Henry Schmidt"——

A. (Interrupting) That is me.

Q. Is that you? A. I guess so.

Q. "President, International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, Local 1-10."

Is that you?

A. My name is Henry Schmidt.

Q. Are you the person that sent birthday greetings to George?

Mr. Grossman: The article doesn't state birthday greetings were sent. There is no proof of that.

Presiding Inspector: The document isn't in evidence anyway.

Mr. Gladstein: That is right. Of course, it is being read in.

Presiding Inspector: That doesn't put it in evidence. He is asking whether this refreshes his recollection, as I under- [4239] stand it.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Does that refresh your recollection as to whether or not you sent birthday greetings to George?

A. I don't recall having sent any birthday greetings to him, or to anybody else. [4330]

Q. Did you see that issue of the People's World?

A. In all probability not, because I hardly ever see it.

Q. Your office took a copy of the People's World, did they not, at that time?

A. Some time ago, yes.

Q. Did they in 1938?

A. I wouldn't remember.

Q. Would the record of your local show?

A. I don't think the local ever subscribed to it. The records would however show.

Q. Is there a CIO office here? A. Surely.

Q. Did they subscribe to the People's World?

A. The CIO Industrial Union?

Q. Yes. A. Yes, I believe they do.

Q. Did they subscribe for the People's World on June 29, 1938?

A. Well, I don't remember that far back.

Q. Would the records show?

A. I think they would.

Q. Are those records available to you?

A. Well, I would have to ask the secretary.

Q. Well, would you do that? [4331]

A. I would be very happy to do that.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. And ask the secretary to notify this Court as to whether or not they subscribed to the People's World, particularly on that day.

A. As to whether or not they subscribed to the People's World at that time?

Q. Yes.

A. That is in which month in 1938?

Q. June 29th, particularly, 1938.

And for the purpose of further refreshing your memory I want to read just——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) No, no, show him now. We are getting too much into this record. Of course, the reading of it doesn't put it into the record at all.

Mr. Del Guercio: There is a question as to whether the article actually stated that birthday greetings were sent.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. Well, we are not interested in the article in the slightest, as yet. The article is not in evidence. Reading doesn't make it so.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Was this article called to your attention by anyone, by either the secretary or anyone else in the CIO?

A. (Examining document) I have no recollection of that. There were dozens of papers floating around, memeographed material. [4332]

Mr. Del Guercio: I offer this for identification, if your Honor please, and ask it be marked.

Presiding Inspector: What was the offer?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

The Reporter: For identification.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, it may be marked for identification.

(The document referred to was marked Government's Exhibit No. 275 for identification.)

Mr. Del Guercio: And I ask that a photostatic copy be substituted.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Do you know who Mr. Foster is?

A. Mr. who?

Q. Foster?

A. Yes, I have read of him, heard of him.

Q. What?

A. I have read and heard of him.

Q. Have you ever been arrested?

A. I didn't hear you.

Q. Have you ever been arrested?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many times? A. Once.

Q. For what? [4333]

A. They called it assault and battery.

Q. Were you charged with assault and battery?

A. Yes; the business was thrown out of Court.

Q. Were you charged with assault and battery?

A. Yes, I think that is what the document read. I mean, I don't know whether you can call it even an arrest.

Q. Where were you arrested?

A. Well, I was not apprehended on the streets. I voluntarily went to the Hall of Justice to find out what they wanted from me.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Where was that? A. In San Francisco.

Q. And was a warrant issued for your arrest?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you served with it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you say the charge was subsequently dismissed? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And have you been arrested at any other time? A. No.

Q. Anywhere? A. No.

Q. In Germany? A. No.

Q. In Canada? A. No. [4334]

Mr. Del Guercio: That is all.

Presiding Inspector: Now, Mr. Gladstein.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, we have some questions.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, certainly.

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. On this assault and battery matter, Mr. Schmidt, when did that occur?

A. I believe, the year was '38 or '39.

Q. Did it have anything to do with your position as the President of the Longshoremen's Union?

A. Yes, in a way.

Q. In what way?

A. Well, we had changed our affiliation to the CIO. It so happened that a group of longshoremen didn't see fit to go along and they established rival headquarters at another place about two blocks from our office, and they attempted to recruit our fellows into their organization, and occasionally they would make it a point to come over to our place and try and raise the devil, and a couple of them got into a beef there one day and I happened to come along and——

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. (Interposing) First of all, what do you mean by the word "beef" so the record will be clear?

A. A fight, an altercation.

Q. Where did it occur?

A. On Clay Street almost directly across the street [4335] from our office which was at that time located at 27 Clay street.

Q. And who were the parties to the fight, that is, I am not interested in the names, but simply their union affiliations, if there were distinctions between them?

A. Well, the fight took place between a man that belonged to our outfit and another man that belonged to the rival outfit, and his name was Edward Achstatter, A-c-h-s-t-a-t-t-e-r, and the other fellow's name I don't recall.

Q. Were you personally engaged in the fight in any way?

A. Not at all. I saw it from a distance and I went over there to see what was going on, and I happened to stop it with a couple of other fellows.

Q. And, then, the warrant of arrest, by whom was it sworn out; one of the rival unionists?

A. This man Achstatter, who—he made the charge that I assaulted him.

Q. Did you appear for trial? A. Yes.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Was the case dismissed?

A. That is right.

Q. Now, mention was made of a meeting at the Civic Square during the 1934 strike. Do you have that in mind, that meeting?

A. Well, if that was the meeting that—immediately [4336] following a big parade that we organized, yes.

Q. What kind of a parade was it?

A. It was a parade of striking longshoremen and striking seamen, the entire group.

Q. Do you remember where the parade took place?

A. Well, it started at the waterfront at the foot of Market Street. I suppose, the organization—the line-up of the parade probably took place on Stewart Street. Then, we marched up Market Street.

Q. Under whose auspices was the parade held?

A. In all probability under the auspices of the Joint Marine Strike Committee.

Q. Where did the parade wind up?

A. Directly in Civic Center known as Marshall Square.

Q. And what occurred there? Was there a public meeting?

A. Yes, sir. There was a truck available and a sound system was available. I don't know about the sound system. I think, we ordered the sound system and somebody intimidated the sound man and he didn't show up. At least, that is my recollection.

Q. And what was the purpose of the meeting, the general purpose?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. Well, to acquaint the listeners who might come there—to acquaint them with the objectives of the strikers.

Q. Now, Friday you were testifying concerning Lee Holman. [4337] I think—I don't substitute this for your testimony but I merely use it to call your attention to what I am interested in my next question—I believe, you stated in substance that members of the Albion or Equality Hall group suspected, and also other members of the Longshoremen's Union who were not members of the Albion or Equality Hall group, suspected that Mr. Holman was secretly acting on behalf of the employers.

Do you recall that testimony or testimony of that general character?

A. Yes, I believe I made some statements to that effect.

Q. All right. Now, did you ever have occasion to learn whether there was any basis for the suspicion on the part of the longshoremen who were identified in the previous question?

Presiding Inspector: This is over your objection, Mr. Del Guercio.

Mr. Del Guercio: It is, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I will receive it as bearing solely on the probability of the statement of the suspicions.

Mr. Del Guercio: The Court has, perhaps, overlooked the fact that now he is asking him for something that occurred afterwards.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Presiding Inspector: I know, but as to the facts before.

The Witness: Will you repeat the last part of your question?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes. Will you read it?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.) [4338]

Mr. Myron: This is the Albion Hall group, your Honor?

Presiding Inspector: Yes, the Albion Hall group and people who had also shared in the Albion Hall group's feelings.

A. You mean were our suspicions realized later on?

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did you have occasion to find out——

A. (Interposing) Yes, sir.

Q. (Continuing)—whether there was any basis to that suspicion?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Will you tell us under what circumstances and from whom you did so find out?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I object to that on the ground: Now, this is nothing to indicate as to when the basis was discovered for the suspicions. Was it before——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Can't you identify the time a little more fully?

Mr. Gladstein: All right.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Let me ask this: At the time you did discover that there was a basis for those suspicions, Mr. Schmidt, did your discovery reveal evidence as to Mr. Holman acting or not acting secretly on behalf of the employers during the 1934 strike?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that. [4339]

Presiding Inspector: Now, he was removed from office during the strike, wasn't he?

Mr. Gladstein: At one point.

Presiding Inspector: You mean before he was removed from office?

Mr. Gladstein: Before his removal. Let's put it that way, yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that. There is no evidence here——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Yes. It is over your objection. I will allow it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Do you understand the question?

A. Yes, I understand it. Before his removal there were were merely just suspicions but the evidence certainly developed later on.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. All right. Now, when the evidence did develop was it evidence which justified the suspicions as of the time the suspicions existed before Mr. Holman's removal? A. Certainly.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that. It still doesn't place——

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) It calls for a conclusion. [4340]

Mr. Gladstein: I realize the word "justifies" does, but I am trying to fix in the mind of the witness the period we are concerned about. Your Honor asked about that.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. I think you should, of course.

Mr. Gladstein: All right.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, will you tell us from whom, or in the presence of whom this evidence, whatever it may have been, was given to you?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I object to that. No time has as yet been fixed, that I know of, as to when this so-called evidence was——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) He said it was after he was removed from office.

Mr. Gladstein: I will put this question to him first if you prefer, your Honor.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Can you give us an approximate time, Mr. Schmidt, an approximate date when this evidence was revealed in your presence?

A. You mean during the '34 strike?

Q. No; the evidence which you obtained, which you ultimately obtained after Mr. Holman's removal when did that occur? [4341]

A. Well, there are three things that stand out in my mind. First the thought that in 1934 during the strike he attempted to organize a rival union, which is evidence enough, in any union man's mind, that this fellow was working in cahoots with somebody.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. What is the second?

A. During the 1936-'37 strike he again attempted to organize strike breakers, and did so, and the man who was his secretary apparently got tired of the phony business and he contacted Jack Shelley, who was then a member of the Bakery Wagon Drivers, who is now a State Senator, and contacted myself, and we had him come to Mr. Kidwell, George Kidwell's office, who was then secretary of the Bakery Wagon Drivers, and this secretary of Holman's told us a lot of things——I can't remember everything he said—but the fact that he was the secretary, that they were up against it for money, that whenever they ran up against the question of money, why, he would drive Holman down to Montgomery Street to the offices of the Industrial Association, that Holman would go into the Alexander Building and come out after a while and he would usually have some more money to carry on.

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, if your Honor please, there is no date, you see, to all of this story here.

Presiding Inspector: No. It long post dated Holman's removal as the President of this Union?

[4342]

Mr. Gladstein: Yes that is true.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, when is the approximate date when these statements were made by Mr. Holman's former secretary to you and to Mr. Shelley?

A. That is too difficult to remember. It was during the 1936-'37 strike. We were on strike for 99 days. Let's assume that——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) Now, if your Honor please, I move to strike it all out for the reason that the Albion Hall group, upon which the basis of this line of questioning is founded, went out of existence long before that.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, that is immaterial as to when they went out of existence, your Honor. The important thing is this: I would recognize, I would admit to your Honor——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) If your Honor please, I will withdraw my objection.

Mr. Gladstein: I don't care what counsel——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) The objection is withdrawn. Go ahead.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. You have mentioned Mr. George Kidwell. Who is he, please?

A. He was at that time secretary of the Bakery Wagon Drivers Union. He is now the State Industrial Director. [4343]

Q. Now, you were asked——

A. (Interposing) State Industrial Accident Commissioner.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. You were asked if you had acquired on the waterfront the name of "Editor Schmidt." I think you said that you had heard that you had been called that. A. Yes.

Q. Can you state for the first time you learned that such a—that you had won such a name?

A. Oh, that is very difficult to state.

Q. Well, I don't mean the exact day, but the period.

A. The only way I can explain it, that during the strike I was a member of the Publicity Committee.

Q. Which strike, please?

A. The 1934 strike.

Q. All right.

A. After that strike terminated I continued to write the weekly bulletin of the Union, and three thousand five hundred men of our Local knew that, so, I suppose, they called me Editor Schmidt. I don't mind the title; it doesn't mean anything.

Q. But, to your knowledge had you ever heard that name being used to describe you prior to the 1934 strike?

A. No; I didn't write anything.

Mr. Del Guercio: What?

Presiding Inspector: "No, I didn't write anything." [4344]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. When did you first become connected with the ILA bulletin?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. Well, immediately when the strike started. I don't recall there being any bulletin put out before the strike; there may have been. But the Strike Committee, as I stated before, elected sub-committees and the Publicity Committee was one of those, so we immediately started putting out a bulletin. Our attempts were to put it out daily. Whether they did that or not I don't recall.

Q. That is, when you first started writing for the ILA bulletin?

A. Yes, to the best of my knowledge.

Mr. Del Guercio: In the first place, counsel has put the words in his mouth; there is no evidence there ever was an ILA bulletin.

Mr. Gladstein: He has testified there was.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it. I don't know whether that was the name that was given to it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Well, what was the name that was given to it? I think he testified about that last Friday.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. He testified there was a sheet, of course, that they first had mimeographed, then, that they had it printed by the Daily Worker.

Mr. Del Guercio: Western Worker. [4345]

Presiding Inspector: I don't recall the name of the sheet.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What was the name, Mr. Schmidt?

A. To the best of my recollection it was called

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

ILA Strike Bulletin. It may have been called Longshoremen's Strike Bulletin, one of the two.

Q. Now, it has been testified in this case that the 1934 strike began on May the 9th and ended on July 31st. Is that in accordance with your recollection?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. During that period of time what committees did you serve on for the union?

A. The Publicity Committee and the Executive Board and the Strike Committee.

Q. What about the Joint Marine Strike Committee?

A. Well, I became a member of that later on when it was set up.

Q. Now, did you attend meetings of all those Committees? A. All the time.

Q. And where were they held, in what city?

A. In San Francisco.

Q. During that period from May 9th to July 31st was there any period of time during which you were absent from San Francisco? [4346]

A. Yes; sometime in June the Strike Committee sent me to Portland and Seattle.

Q. Do you recall the date of that, either the date when you first left San Francisco or the date when you came back, by any incident that occurred?

A. I certainly don't recall the date that I left but I do recall the date that I returned because I was—I just got here in time to take part in the discussion that took place on the so-called June 16th

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Agreement which was repudiated by the membership.

Q. Now, do you know when the June 16th Agreement was discussed by the membership?

A. Yes, it was on a Sunday, I believe, either in the evening or in the afternoon.

Q. Well, do you know when with reference to June 16th, Mr. Schmidt?

A. On the day following, June 17th. My best recollection is that as soon as I got off the ferry boat here I went to the headquarters, and, I think, they were just organizing a Strike Committee meeting to discuss this Agreement, and they were going to discuss it in the general membership meeting the day following. That would be June 17th.

Q. Now, do you have any recollection as to how long prior—withdraw that.

How long were you away from San Francisco on that occasion to take the trip to Portland and Seattle that you [4347] mentioned?

A. I was not gone very long; eight or nine days at the most.

Q. Were you away from San Francisco on any other occasion during that strike?

A. I am pretty sure that I was not.

Q. Now, did you see—withdraw that.

In connection with the meetings that you would attend during the 1934 strike while you were in San Francisco on what occasions would you have met Mr. Bridges?

Mr. Del Guercio: What?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did you meet him?

A. Well, it seems to me I would see him—I certainly would see him most every day. He was the Chairman of the Longshore Strike Committee.

Q. All right. Now, when there were meetings of the Longshore Strike Committee Mr. Bridges was Chairman? A. That is right.

Q. And you were a member?

A. That is right.

Q. At such meetings you saw Mr. Bridges?

A. Surely.

Q. All right; now, any other meetings?

A. Well, when the Joint Marine Strike Committee was set up there was five of us from our Union, delegates to that, and he was one, and I was another. I would see him there. [4348]

Q. Now, did the Joint Marine Strike Committee form before or after the June 16th Agreement?

A. I am pretty sure it was after because I remember now that one of the reasons that it was not accepted by the members is because it provided that we return to work and leave the other crafts out on strike.

Q. When you say "it" do you mean the June 16th meeting?

A. Yes, and since it—a better united front developed between the striking groups. Somebody proposed that a Joint Committee be set up and it was actually organized so. I think, it was after the June 16th Agreement.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. All right. Now, when the Joint Marine Strike Committee was formed you were a delegate to that, were you? A. Yes.

Q. Was Mr. Bridges also? A. Yes.

Q. Did you meet Mr. Bridges at the meetings of the Joint Marine Strike Committee?

A. Well, at least, I saw him there. Yes, I met him there.

Q. How often did your ILA Strike Committee meet? A. Daily.

Q. Did that include Sundays?

A. Yes, frequently there were Sunday meetings but not [4349] always.

Q. Was there a definite routine as to a daily meeting during the week days?

A. Yes sir, my recollection is that in the beginning it met in the afternoon, and then after—no, in the morning, although I couldn't say what time definitely, and then later on after the Joint Marine Strike Committee was organized—no, I am wrong. The Longshoremen's Strike Committee used to meet in the afternoon until such time as the Joint Marine Strike Committee was set up. Then, that started to meet in the afternoon. Therefore, they found it necessary to shift the meeting of the Longshoremen's Strike Committee to the morning hours so that we could first attend the Longshoremen's Strike Committee meeting in the forenoon. Then, in the afternoon we could go to the Joint Strike Committee, but I recall also that sometimes during that strike that Joint Committee met in the evening sometimes.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. What was Mr. Bridges' position on the Joint Committee?

A. I believe, he was Chairman of that, too.

Q. Well, was he, in any event, the Chairman of the ILA delegation to it?

A. Well he was certainly considered the leader of the five delegates.

Q. The five delegates from the ILA? [4350]

A. That's right.

Q. Were there any other meetings at which you met Mr. Bridges during the 1934 strike, that is, meetings that were regularly routinely held during the strike?

A. Oh, you couldn't exactly call them meetings. There might be discussions back in the office with Joe Johnson, the President, and the Secretary. There were meetings when he would sit in with the Publicity Committee sometimes. Life was just one meeting after another during those days. We came up here during the—we came—I think it was in this room—all the strikers' representatives were given an opportunity to testify before the National Longshoremen's Board. We spent considerable time around the Post Office Building here.

Q. This is during the strike?

A. During the strike.

Q. Mr. Schmidt, did you see Harry Bridges in San Francisco every day from May 9th to July 31st, 1934, in San Francisco, with the exception of the period when you took the trip to the north, to Seattle and Portland, returning on or about June 16th or 17th?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. Well, I couldn't say that I saw him on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and not on Thursday and then again on Friday, I couldn't say that, but if he were absent I certainly would have—it would stand out in my mind because he was—— [4351]

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) Now, if your Honor please——

Mr. Gladstein: (Interposing) I don't think he has finished his answer. I think we are entitled to the answer before any motion is made.

Mr. Del Guercio: I move to strike it out.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think he has finished his answer. Go ahead.

Mr. Gladstein: Do you want to have the part of the answer that you have already given read back to you so you can continue?

The Witness: No, that isn't necessary.

Mr. Myron: We might ask to have the question read back and see if the answer is responsive to the question.

Mr. Gladstein: Are you making an objection?

Mr. Myron: I am. Doesn't it sound like an objection?

Mr. Gladstein: Then, make the objection.

Presiding Inspector: He has made the objection that the answer is irresponsive. Now, we will hear the answer over again.

Couldn't you hear the objection, Mr. Gladstein?

Mr. Gladstein: No.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Presiding Inspector: It is implicit in that he was objecting to it as irresponsive. Now, we will hear the answer.

Mr. Gladstein: I didn't so understand it. [4352]

Presiding Inspector: Beg your pardon?

Mr. Gladstein: I didn't so understand it.

Presiding Inspector: I understood it that way I may be mistaken but I took it that way. I don't think it called for any comment. Now, we will hear the answer.

(The portion of the answer referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Mr. Gladstein: Now, he is giving the basis of his——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) You didn't ask him for the basis.

Mr. Gladstein: I am asking him for an answer.

Presiding Inspector: That question can be answered yes or no, but I don't restrict him to that.

Mr. Gladstein: All right.

Presiding Inspector: Now, what counsel wants to know is: Can you say whether or not you saw him every day except the time you were away during the strike?

The Witness: Yes, I can safely answer yes, but I would like to qualify it if I may.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, go ahead. You have answered it; now qualify it.

The Witness: I would like to qualify it to this extent: If he had been absent I would have noticed it because we were constantly associated with one another. We were going from the Strike Committee meting to the Joint Committe meeting [4353] and doing a lot of things together. If he were absent for one or two days, why, it would stand out in my mind, the same as he certainly knew if I was gone for eight or nine days.

Presiding Inspector: I don't see that it qualifies the answer. It only gives the reason for his recollection.

Mr. Gladstein: I beg your pardon?

Presiding Inspector: It only gives the reason for his recollection which isn't qualifying the answer, but it is an explanation and I will let it stand.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Schmidt, I want to refer, for a moment, to the article in the People's World. I do not have the date before me. Do you have in mind the one I am referring to, the one which——

A. (Interposing) No.

Mr. Del Guercio: It is in evidence.

Presiding Inspector: The one you said you wrote.

The Witness: Oh, yes, yes; excuse me.

Presiding Inspector: I think he has it in mind.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Do you have that in mind?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall the circumstances under which that was written?

A. No, I don't recall writing it. However, after reading it, it has to do with the fact that some workers in the [4354] sugar mill up at Crockett were being organized. I believe, there were in process of changing their affiliation to the CIO.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Do you remember how you came to write that article?

A. You mean what caused me to start writing it?

Q. Yes. A. I don't recollect.

Q. Do you recall whether you wrote a similar article, or the same article or one on the same subject for any other newspaper or publication?

A. I may have done it but I don't remember.

Q. What has been your practice with respect to writing articles?

Mr. Myron: What type or articles, your Honor? I object to that question.

Mr. Gladstein: Let's ask the general question first.

Presiding Inspector: Do you want to vary the testimony that he has already given?

Mr. Gladstein: No. I simply want to get the practice.

Presiding Inspector: Well, he has given it, hasn't he?

Mr. Gladstein: I don't recall that he has, what he said on that.

Presiding Inspector: I think he said that he dictated to the stenographer and then that she, perhaps, under his direction would send it to different newspapers.

Mr. Gladstein: I had forgotten that testimony.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

You are [4355] correct, your Honor, that does cover the subject.

I don't think I have any further questions.

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, just bear with me a second or so.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Re Cross Examination

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. I believe you testified that you didn't begin knowing Harry Bridges until shortly after the 1934 strike; is that correct?

Mr. Gladstein: Could I hear that question again?

Presiding Inspector: I didn't hear it either. Read the question.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will withdraw the question.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, Mr. Schmidt, what is your recollection as to how many of these meetings during the 1934 strike Harry Jackson attended?

A. Harry Jackson didn't attend any meetings, except that when we first set up the Joint Marine Strike Committee he came there. I am pretty sure I explained that here last week.

Q. Well, how many meetings did he attend?

A. I couldn't recall; I don't think more than one. I don't know.

Q. Would you say he attended these meetings every day [4356] of the Joint Strike Committee?

A. Oh, no. I am sure he didn't because the first meeting, or one of the first meetings of the Joint Marine Strike Committee was held on Pier 3. I think it was Pier 3, and we had a big argument there, whether or not the delegates from the Marine Workers Industrial Union should be seated, and Jackson was one of them. Now, he may have shown up again at the next one, he may have shown up again at the following one—I don't recall—but eventually the issue was decided that they were not to be seated.

Q. Now, how did you vote on that question?

Mr. Gladstein: That has been already asked and answered, your Honor.

Mr. Del Guercio: I don't believe that was.

Mr. Gladstein: I think it is immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: I can't recall it.

A. I believe I voted to seat him.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is all.

Mr. Gladstein: That is all.

Presiding Inspector: Next witness.

(Witness excused)

Mrs. King: If your Honor please, we have a question of law that we would like to take up next, which we can't really get into before lunch. We would prefer, if possible, to adjourn now and come back at ten minutes of two.

Presiding Inspector: What is this, a question of law [4357] you want to take up among yourselves?

Mrs. King: What?

Presiding Inspector: A question of law——

Mrs. King: No; that I want to discuss at the hearing, but I don't believe it can be completed before lunch. I thought it would be easier to discuss it all at one time.

Mr. Gladstein: This has to with the order of our case, your Honor, and we would like to present——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I am not going to hold you to any strict rule.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, I think, perhaps, you should hear, at any rate, the point that we wish to make.

Presiding Inspector: Very well.

Mrs. King: The only question, I think, is the question of whether you, your Honor, wishes to hear us now and probably not get finished, or wait until two o'clock.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, I think I better hear you now.

Mrs. King: We can't finish at this time, but if your Honor wishes to hear us now we can at least get started.

Presiding Inspector: Perhaps there will be no differences of opinion on your statement. Let's hear what the secret is.

Mrs. King: Well, I am quite sure that there will be a difference of opinion, your Honor.

This has to do with the testimony of the Court Reporter, Mr. Shoemaker. As your Honor stated earlier this morning, [4358] the fact that a thing has been read into the record does not make it evidence in this case. Now, that is the present situation of the testimony of this Reporter. We should like to argue at this time that this so-called deposition, this question and answer which was sworn to before the attorney from Portland, should be admitted in evidence at this time.

As your Honor knows, it is almost two weeks now since that testimony was had. As your Honor likewise knows the witness Cannalonga has not been discovered, although——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I haven't heard of his discovery.

Mrs. King: I don't believe he has been discovered because I am quite sure that your Honor would have heard of it if it had happened.

We should like, if it hasn't already been done, at this time to offer in evidence this document which was the question and answer which was taken by the reporter, Mr. Shoemaker, and we believe we have the right to do this under the rules of the Immigration Service.

I am now reading Section 19.6, subdivision (i), reading as follows:

"Hearing; Use of statement or admissions made during investigation. A recorded statement made by the Alien (other than a General Information Form) or by any other person during an investigation may be received in evidence only if the maker [4359] of such statement is unavailable or refuses to testify at the warrant hearing or gives testimony contradicting the statements made during the investigation."

I believe that is all of it that is relevant to this problem.

Now, at this time we wish to present to your Honor the fact that this witness made a recorded statement, a deposition, which we offer in evidence upon the ground that the witness is unavailable and will not testify, and under the rules of the Immigration Service we believe that we have a right to have that received in evidence.

I think that at the time your Honor made no ruling upon the question and that the only——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) You are right about that.

Mrs. King: What?

Presiding Inspector: You are right; I made no ruling.

Mrs. King: And why there was any problem even is that this deposition is hearsay under the rules of common law. Now, as you have so often revealed in the course of this proceeding this is not an action in a Court of Law; it is an administrative proceeding. We have had a witness on the stand and subsequent to that when he was unavailable he made a recorded statement. That recorded statement, we believe, is admissible under the rule that we have just quoted. We believe that it is within our right to have it received in evidence at this time. [4360]

Now, of course, there is no objection—I won't argue the point any further. If this rule is not regarded as sufficient I am prepared to go further into the law, but it seems to me that the rule clearly covers the situation and that under the rule the deposition is admissible and should at this time be received in evidence. [4361]

Presiding Inspector: I suppose that refers to a witness who hasn't been sworn.

Mrs. King: There is nothing in the rule so stating.

Presiding Inspector: Isn't that implicit in the rule?

Mrs. King: I don't believe so.

Presiding Inspector: This man was sworn and cross examined at great length. Now, what induced him to make the statements, if they are contradictory, that he made, and your attempt to cross examine outside of the hearing room, of course, no one can tell. It is not before us. Now, should we take a statement of that kind?

Mrs. King: It seems to me, your Honor, that quite apart from the cases such a statement is within the actual wording of this rule.

Presiding Inspector: I think not.

Mrs. King: And that we are entitled——

Presiding Inspector: It may be within the literal wording of the rule but not, I think, within the sense of the rule.

Mrs. King: Well, then, we come to the problem of the authorities on that and I think it would be more satisfactory to deal with it after the noon recess because they are rather numerous.

Presiding Inspector: I have read some of the authorities. It is a question of fairness.

Mrs. King: That is correct. [4362]

Presiding Inspector: A question of fairness.

Mrs. King: And it seems to me that in order——

Presiding Inspector: You had every opportunity to cross examine this witness.

Mrs. King: Now, before we go into that, I should like to call your Honor's attention again to the fact that when this hearing was initiated the attorneys for Mr. Bridges requested further time to get prepared; that that time was not given to them.

I don't recall, at the end of this witness' testimony, exactly what the record shows, but I believe that at that time we wished to have him continued to be available because of the fact that we were not completely prepared for the testimony of this witness.

Presiding Inspector: I don't recall about that.

Mrs. King: I would have to refresh my recollection on the record too.

Mr. Gladstein: I could add——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): I don't recall exactly the state of the record on this question, but admissions of counsel show he was available to counsel.

Mr. Gladstein: I can add something at this time.

Your Honor will recall, at the end of this day's session when Mr. Cannalonga finished testifying, we had a chambers conference and at that time I asked that Mr. Cannalonga be made [4363] available in the event we wanted him.

At that time—does your Honor recall—Mr. Del Guercio said in substance that he didn't know where Mr. Cannalonga was; that, in effect—this is what stands out in my memory—in fact, Mr. Del Guercio said he left without even waiting for his check.

Do you recall something like that, your Honor?

I assume that was referring to his witness fees.

I have a recollection of Mr. Del Guercio saying that and, thereby, explaining that he did not feel that it was his responsibility to continue to make Mr. Cannalonga available to us at some future time.

So, in essence, Mr. Del Guercio said, "I don't know where he is. He left without giving us any address; he didn't even take his witness fees"—and that he just walked out, or something to that effect.

We raised at that time the question of having Mr. Cannalonga available for further examination in the future.

Presiding Inspector: You found him after that.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes; we found him and he made a statement.

Presiding Inspector: You didn't ask him to come here.

Mr. Gladstein: We certainly did.

Presiding Inspector: There is no such statement to that effect so far that I have heard.

Mr. Gladstein: You haven't allowed—— [4364]

Presiding Inspector: About him going to this office, and so forth. I recall no statement that you asked—you didn't communicate with the Presiding Inspector, and you didn't ask for any subpoena for him.

Mr. Gladstein: When this matter first came up to us Tuesday morning, I think—it was about two weeks ago, will be two weeks ago tomorrow——

Presiding Inspector: It came up on Sunday morning.

Mr. Del Guercio: Counsel saw him first on Saturday.

Mr. Gladstein: I am referring to the time that it came before your Honor which, I think, was on a Tuesday morning.

Presiding Inspector: I don't know anything about Tuesday.

Mr. Gladstein: It was Tuesday morning when we put a witness on the stand at that time, and there was some colloquy, and I think the record will show that I advised your Honor that I had asked Mr. Cannalonga to come down here and testify and he had refused.

Presiding Inspector: I don't remember that, but it may have been.

Mr. Grossman: The record will show that.

Mr. Gladstein: And that he had refused.

Now, I don't know what burden there was upon me, when my responsibility was such that I had to be back in court on Monday morning. It was a Sunday morning when the deposition was taken. Is it your Honor's contention that the defense bore [4365] the burden on a Sunday of attempting to get hold of Mr. Wixon, and go through the process and procedure that we have had to go through, as cumbersome as it is, and full of red tape, in order to get a witness subpoenaed?

Presiding Inspector: I should think so.

Mr. Gladstein: Why?

Presiding Inspector: That is the arrangement under which this proceeding advances.

Mr. Gladstein: We did it at the first available opportunity, which was on Tuesday.

Presiding Inspector: What about Saturday? You were in conference with him, or someone was, on Saturday.

Mr. Gladstein: We didn't have any subpoena to serve.

Presiding Inspector: You could have asked for a subpoena and it could have been issued.

Mr. Gladstein: How could a subpoena have been issued to us in time? That was Saturday afternoon when I saw him, about three o'clock. Does your Honor realize what it would have required on my part?

Presiding Inspector: It would have required a telephone message.

Mr. Gladstein: To Mr. Wixon on Saturday afternoon. I am rather certain it would not have been possible to have gotten him.

Mr. Del Guercio: On the contrary, we can show that Mr. Wixon [4366] is there 24 hours a day; that he lives there.

Mr. Gladstein: I have tried to get him on other occasions and have not been able.

Mr. Grossman: Mr. Wixon has assured us he cannot issue a subpoena on Saturday afternoon. Mr. Wixon has told us that his office staff is not available and that it cannot be done on Saturday afternoon. It is ridiculous to argue whether Mr. Wixon is there and available on Saturday afternoon or not. If this case is going to be based on that decision, whether he is available there, we can prove that he is not.

There are some important issues at stake, and the issues aren't whether or not Mr. Gladstein should have called Mr. Wixon on Saturday afternoon.

Presiding Inspector: I think that is one issue.

Mr. Grossman: Well, we can put Mr. Wixon on the stand to prove this point, and if he says he can't issue subpoenas on Saturday afternoon that is resolved in our favor. That is one issue.

The second issue is this: Can we have a subpoena issued in regular course when your Honor has ruled that we can't put on the evidence any other way, in due time, which is immediately after we get your ruling, that you wouldn't allow the testimony of Mr. Shoemaker, which could have been allowed in some jurisdiction?

Presiding Inspector: I haven't said that. [4367]

Mr. Grossman: At that time you said, you allowed the introduction of the evidence of Mr. Shoemaker, which was the first time we had a decision by your Honor, a decision not necessary if your Honor had followed certain jurisdictions and——

Presiding Inspector: I am not going to follow the Massachusetts and Main decisions. I am going to follow the Supreme Court of the United States. If I follow any of the legal jurisdictions, I am going to follow the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States.

Mr. Grossman: Mrs. King is prepared, at the end of this recess, to argue whether or not the law justifies the Supreme Court of the United States in allowing the introduction of that.

All I am saying is this: We, as lawyers, come into court attempting to introduce the testimony of Mr. Cannalonga, rather, the admissions of Mr. Cannalonga, in a certain legal form; a legal form which, I say, is admissible in some jurisdictions—I am not going to argue how many—and at that time we find out for the first time what the ruling of your Honor is going to be. We bring in Mr. Shoemaker at the first available opportunity. You have stated we can prove our case in our own way. Our own way was to attempt to prove the admissions first by the statement of the Notary Public who took it. We cannot be criticized because we didn't do it the way someone else would like to have it done. At the first opportunity to bring Mr. Shoemaker down [4368] we attempted to prove our case, on that point, by Mr. Shoemaker. Your Honor ruled we couldn't prove it in that way. It wasn't an unreasonable position for us to take. Some jurisdictions would have allowed it.

Then at the first opportunity we asked for a subpoena, after that, and then I assume then that Mr. Wixon takes over the responsibility in attempting to serve the subpoena.

There cannot be proved here one moment of delay in attempting to secure Mr. Cannalonga because we have a legal right to start proving the admissions of Mr. Cannalonga, if we wish, by the statement of Mr. Shoemaker. So at the earliest opportunity, after obtaining the statement, we attempted to put on legal proof.

After this legal proof was not allowed to be presented we asked for a subpoena. It cannot be said that we waited for one moment, or delayed one moment in attempting to bring Mr. Cannalonga here.

I say, not as a discussion of the law, because Mrs. King is prepared to argue the law as to our right to introduce the testimony of Mr. Shoemaker, but as a question of fact as to whether we delayed unduly after we got information indicating an admission of Mr. Cannalonga. I say we didn't delay one minute. All we did was to attempt to put on the testimony of Mr. Shoemaker to prove that admission, and having gotten a ruling on that, we attempted to introduce Mr. Cannalonga's testimony by having a subpoena issued for him, and which we had a perfect right to do, as [4369] your Honor will recognize.

Mr. Gladstein: To complete that——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): This is repetition.

Mr. Gladstein: We had Mr. Crayeraft also brought down here from Portland and available to follow Mr. Shoemaker on the witness stand, and we had asked Mr. William Lord, the Attorney who swore in Mr. Cannalonga, to come down here also, and he advised us that he was entering the trial of a case that would occupy his attention for about a week; but he would come down at the first opportunity thereafter.

Presiding Inspector: What could he do?

Mr. Gladstein: This all took place in his office.

Presiding Inspector: I don't suppose there is any question about that.

Mr. Gladstein: There is a question raised by Mr. Del Guercio on everything that took place. As a matter of fact, we were charged here, your Honor, and the record will substantiate it, that when Mr. Del Guercio read the deposition he said, "Why, it shows on its face that Mr. Cannalonga was intimidated by defense counsel." I wanted to show from Mr. Lord—I anticipated that something like this would arise from Mr. Del Guercio. We were ready to prove by Mr. Lord just what took place that morning in his office as to whether there was any charge of intimidation.

Presiding Inspector: That wouldn't clear the whole [4370] matter: What may have taken place would only go part way. I don't suppose there is any charge he was intimidated in Mr. Lord's office.

Mr. Gladstein: I don't know.

Presiding Inspector: I think it would be very improbable that they would claim that the lawyers intimidated him.

Mr. Gladstein: If I remember correctly Mr. Del Guercio made a statement, in substance, like this: That if you read Mr. Cannalonga's deposition you can see on its face that I—the defense counsel—had subornated him to perjury. I assume by that that he meant, that he based that statement, or that charge, upon the obvious fact, to him, that Mr. Cannalonga, under oath, had said that he had given false statements to the FBI. I suppose that is the basis of his charge. When a man gets off afterwards and says, "I lied," and somebody hears him, I suppose that somebody should apologize for being within hearing distance.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is not the basis of my statement. I will repeat the charge again.

Presiding Inspector: I don't know as charges and countercharges have anything to do with this particular argument.

As I understand it, you offer in evidence the statement of Mr. Cannalonga?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes; the entire deposition.

Presiding Inspector: We may take it as proven here that [4371] a subpoena was issued on Tuesday—was it Tuesday morning?

Mr. Gladstein: Late Tuesday.

Mr. Grossman: Wednesday.

Mr. Gladstein: We had to prepare an application in writing.

Presiding Inspector: Was it Wednesday morning?

Mrs. King: I brought it up here at approximately 9:30 on Wednesday morning, and I believe it was telephoned by you to Mr. Wixon between 9:30 and 10:00 A. M. on Wednesday.

Presiding Inspector: These are very peculiar circumstances. Ordinarily, if there weren't an attempt to get this witness I would say that this statement would be entirely incompetent, and I think it would be unfair to introduce it. But here is an attempt to subpoena this man, and he has removed himself from his usual walks and cannot be subpoenaed.

Now, I think I will receive this in evidence and let it go at that.

Mr. Del Guercio: Over our objection?

Presiding Inspector: Over your objection.

Mr. Del Guercio: And subject, also, to calling Mr. Gladstein as a witness?

Presiding Inspector: Yes; you can call Mr. Gladstein, certainly.

Mr. Myron: This has been referred to as a deposition. It is not a deposition. [4372]

Presiding Inspector: It is a statement.

Mr. Del Guercio: Will the Court take judicial notice of the law of the State of Oregon regarding the administering of an oath on Sunday?

Presiding Inspector: I don't put any stress on it being sworn to. That may be something that goes to its effect, but doesn't go to the admissibility.

(The statemen' referred to was received in evidence and marked Alien's Exhibit No. 13.)

Presiding Inspector: We will take a recess until two o'clock.

(Whereupon, at 12:42 p. m. a recess was taken until 2:00 p. m. of the same day.) [4373]

After Recess
2:00 O'clock P. M.

Presiding Inspector: In receiving the testimony of the statement given by the Witness Shoemaker—if that is his name?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, sir.

Presiding Inspector: I will only receive it so far as the former Witness Cannalonga was in the room, not what may have happened after that, showing that he left, and nothing that transpired in his absence. That is simply explanatory. And I will receive it on the ground that it contains contradictory statements, to some extent at least, which tend to impeach the witness, the way any contradictory statements made out of Court have that tendency.

Mr. Del Guercio: And there is our objection not only to the statement——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): Oh, certainly in every way.

Mr. Del Guercio (Continuing): ——but to the form of it in every way.

Presiding Inspector: In every way, Mr. Del Guercio. It is a close point. It is a peculiar situation which has arisen and I am trying to—I will receive this statement as tending to impeach the witness simply in what I can see fairness under all the circumstances which are peculiar. As a strict proposition of law, I think, the statement—under common law rules, I think, the statement is inadmissible. [4374]

Will you stand up and raise your right hand.

SAM KAGEL

called as a witness on behalf of the Alien, being first duly sworn, testified as follows:

The Witness: My name is Kagel, K-a-g-e-l. The first name is Sam. My address is 709 Mission Street, San Francisco, my office address. My home address is 909 San Benito Road, Berkeley.

Direct Examination

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Will you repeat your full name, please?

A. Kagel, K-a-g-e-l, Sam Kagel.

Q. What is your occupation, Mr. Kagel?

A. I am a staff member of the Pacific Coast Labor Bureau. My work concerns the giving of economical counsel to trade unions only. I represent trade unions in negotiations, in arbitration proceedings, at times in Government hearings such as the National Labor Relations Board hearings or the Railway Adjustment Board hearings.

Our office does research work for trade unions, the type of research that may be helpful in negotiations such as making an actual survey of industries and items of that sort. Our office also maintains an auditing department of trained auditors under the direction of a certified public [4375] accountant, but our auditing work is limited for services to trade unions. We audit books and we help unions put systems into effect to meet their particular type of conditions; if they are a small union, a simple system; if a large union, a little more complicated system, and so on. [4376]

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I move to strike the witness' entire answer as being unresponsive as to the question calling for what his business is.

Presiding Inspector: I think it is intended to be a statement of his business. I will let it stand. It goes into the business of the organization, of course, but I will let it stand.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Does your employment also normally call for you to engage in negotiations on behalf of trade unions?

A. A large portion of our work has to do with negotiating on behalf of trade unions.

Presiding Inspector: I think he testified to that.

Mr. Grossman: All right.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Now, Mr. Kagel, what is your academic experience?

A. Well, I graduated from the Lincoln School in Oakland, grammar school; then the Oakland High School. Then I entered the University of California. My graduating class was the class of 1929, at which time I received an A.B. degree. I majored in Economics.

I then proceeded to take a year and a half to two years of graduate work in the Graduate School at the University of California, again primarily in the Department of Economics. During a portion of that time I had a teaching fellowship in [4377] the Department of Economics.

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

Q. After leaving the University did you hold any state positions?

A. I left the University and I took the place of the Statistician of the State of California, Department of Industrial Relations, for a period of 13 months. The statistician at that time was in charge of a special survey on the problem of unemployment which he was conducting on behalf of the State of California, under the sponsorship of the then Governor Rolph. I took his place and worked here in San Francisco in that particular office.

At that same time I also did some work in the Labor Commissioner's office, which is one of the specific offices under the Department of Industrial Relations.

After that particular experience I intended to return back to school to finish up my work toward a Ph.D. degree. The bank holiday came along, and I was short of money in the first instance, but became a little shorter when some of the funds I had were tied up in the banks, and I did a short piece of work for the California Taxpayers Association. This was a survey of wages paid in private industry in Alameda County for certain types of work, such as stenographic work, mechanics and so on.

It was after I completed that work that I decided to go to work in my present position on a steady basis. I had worked for [4378] the Bureau since 1929 during vacation periods, Christmas vacations, and so on, or on odd jobs. But it was after this bank holiday that I took my present position on a full time basis and I have been there ever since.

Mr. Del Guercio: I move to strike out the witness' entire answer as being unresponsive, particularly regarding his intentions.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think they are material enough to even strike them out.

Mr. Grossman: I admit his intentions are not material, but the balance of the answer is.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think what he has been doing is all right.

Mr. Grossman: Yes; as showing his qualifications and experience.

Presiding Inspector: Do you expect to qualify him as an expert? Perhaps you do.

Mr. Grossman: It may relate to expert testimony, but his background principally is what I am concerned with.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Have you been, since approximately 1933, employed by the Pacific Coast Labor Bureau?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, as an employee of the Pacific Coast Labor Bureau have you had occasion to represent, in the ways that you have [4379] stated the union represents the unions, any of these maritime unions?

A. Yes, we have.

Q. Could you state which unions you, yourself, have represented in any of those things that you have just described?

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

A. Our office has reperesented the International Longshoremen's Association, when they were affiliated with the International Longshoremen's Association; it has since represented the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union; we have represented the Marine Engineers Beneficial Association; the Masters, Mates and Pilots; we have at various times represented the Sailors Union, the Firemen's Union, the Cooks and Stewards Union, and at times the American Radio Telegraphists Association, the old ARTA. We have also represented affiliates of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, such as the Ship Clerks, the Warehouse Union. I believe that is all.

Our office has represented them, and I have personally participated in a number of the direct cases in which the unions were involved, as a staff member of the office.

Q. Have you had occasion, during your work with the Pacific Coast Labor Bureau, to represent unions—put it this way: The unions that you have named, with respect to strikes and during strikes?

A. Well, I represented them in negotiations which at [4380] times culminated in strikes.

Q. Have you represented any of them during strikes?

A. Yes. Once a strike has taken place, since it is inevitable that negotiations must either proceed during that time, or some time in order to end the strike, so that an agreement is arrived at between the parties, usually when such an event takes place our representation and work with the union continues until the incident is over and closed and a contract agreed to or some other means of settlement of the dispute, such as either mediation or arbitration is arrived at.

Q. And can you estimate approximately how many unions you personally have represented in these ways since you went to work for the Pacific Coast Labor Bureau?

A. I think it would be a safe estimate to say that I have represented, since I have gone to work, in excess of fifty different unions and have represented these same unions in innumerable times.

Q. Can you state whether your representation of these unions has been solely in San Francisco?

A. No. I have personally represented unions in Tacoma, in Vancouver, B. C., in Los Angeles, in Salinas, in San Jose. I am now working on a case which will take me to Salt Lake City. I have even gone to Chicago before the Railway Adjustment Board to represent unions with headquarters in San Francisco. I have been to New York representing unions. I have also been in [4381] Washington representing unions.

Mr. Myron: May I ask at this time if this line of inquiry is for the purpose of qualifying this witness as an expert in any matter?

Presiding Inspector: I don't know.

Mr. Myron: Otherwise it would be immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: I suppose it is to show his general background.

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Now, during this work that you have described thus far, have you had occasion to work with Harry Bridges in such work?

A. In a number of situations; yes.

Q. Have you had occasion to work with Harry Bridges in work done by you for the International Longshoremen's Association?

A. That is correct; I have

Q. Which bodies of that association?

A. The Warehousemen's Union, Local 6.

Q. Which others?

Q. Well, I worked with him when he was the President of Local 38-79 at the time affiliated with the International Longshoremen's Association, and he was President of the local Union.

Q. With what others? [4382]

A. That are affiliated with the ILWU?

Q. ILA.

A. With the ILA—well, we represented at various times the District or the so-called International itself. In relationship to that type of representation. I had occasion to work directly with Harry Bridges.

Q. All this work that you have just described was done by the organization of which you are an employee? A. Correct.

Q. By the way, what title do you hold, if any, in your organization?

A. Well, I have been called an Associate Director and an Assistant Director; but I am a salaried employee and titles make no difference in that.

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

Q. Who is Director of the organization?

A. H. P. Melnikow is the Director.

Q. Now, can you name any other unions in connection with work for which you have dealt with Harry Bridges?

A. I have had—as I said a moment ago, I have had occasion to work with Harry Bridges when I was doing work for the Warehouse Union Local 6, and I have also had occasion to work with Harry Bridges when I did work at one time for the San Francisco-Oakland Newspaper Guild.

Q. During any of this time that you have represented these unions has Harry Bridges held a position as Pacific [4383] Coast or California Director of the CIO? A. He has.

Q. And by reason of such position of Harry Bridges have you worked with him in some of this work that you have done?

A. Yes; it was for that reason that I had contact with him in a situation involving the San Francisco-Oakland Newspaper Guild. This particular situation took place——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Are you interested in this?

Mr. Grossman: Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: He could have answered that yes or no.

Mr. Grossman: I am interested. It will avoid a question, your Honor.

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

Presiding Inspector: Very well, I will take it.

The Witness: (Continuing) It took place in the early part of 1939. The San Francisco-Oakland Newspaper Guild was in negotiations with the four newspapers on this side of the Bay, the Examiner, Chronicle, Call-Bulletin and the News and the Oakland Post Inquirer. The Guild had been established here since 1934 and had developed contracts with the publishers, but in the year 1939 the Guild made a specific request for the so-called Guild shop which, though, it is not exactly a closed shop or union shop, has a similarity to it. In other words, it was a proposal that all employees of the newspaper covered by the contract should be members of the Guild. [4384]

We met with the publishers for some time and we could make no progress. The publishers were represented by the respective——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) If your Honor please, I would like to interrupt right here. It is apparent it is not responsive to counsel's question.

Presiding Inspector: I don't understand——.

Mr. Grossman: (Interposing) I think it is necessary to have the nature of this particular dispute or negotiation brought out thoroughly. It is entirely preliminary. I think it will appear to your Honor why it is necessary to know exactly what the issues were and what the facts were.

Presiding Inspector: I will rely on that. I can't see the pertinence. Very well, go ahead.

Mr. Grossman: Continue, Mr. Kagel.

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

The Witness: (Continuing) After some negotiations with the publishers, who were represented by their business managers, and by Harvey Kelly, who was Labor Counsel for all the Hearst Newspapers in the United States, it was apparent no agreement could be reached. A meeting was called in the office of the Guild, the Williams Building, at Third and Mission, at which there were present officers of the Guild and myself, as their negotiator, for the purpose of discussing the next step to be taken. Those of us who were in the actual negotiations felt that the only thing to do would be to take a [4385] strike vote and, if necessary, to actually strike the newspapers.

A subsequent meeting was set at which Mr. Bridges appeared as the representative of the CIO. There was also present an international officer of the Newspaper Guild, and there was a great deal of discussion as to the next step. Mr. Bridges——

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. (Interposing) Just one moment and I will ask you a specific question.

What position, if anything, did Mr. Bridges take at that meeting with respect to whether or not a strike should be carried on by the Guild for their objective of achieving a Guild shop?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I will object to that. It is obviously not a preliminary question.

Presiding Inspector: I can't understand the purpose.

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

Mr. Grosman: Your Honor, I would like to say that it obviously is not—there hasn't been sufficient basis laid so your Honor will see the whole picture. I can lay out part of it for you.

If your Honor will recall, various of the Government witnesses, when they took the stand, described what they claimed were the Communist policies, the Communist Party policies in the trade unions. Some of these witnesses for the Government described these policies very specifically. They stated that [4386] these were the Communist Party policies. And one of the Government witnesses, for example, Mr. Gitlow, stated that the Communists left nothing to chance. They arranged all these things in all cases.

Now, among other things, these Government witnesses have stated—I don't say all of them have stated them, but I am going to cite some of those things that specific Government witnesses have stated—Mr. Rushmore stated, for example, that when Communists in the trade unions speak of better wages, better working conditions, they are speaking specifically—I have his quotation here, but I am sure I am summarizing it correct—they have no interest whatsoever in that. They are only interested in using these workers as stooges, that was his work, to achieve their revolutionary aims. Mr. —the man from Milwaukee—Mr. Schnering, testified that he taught Communist theory with reference to what Communists do in the trade unions in a workers school in Milwaukee. He stated that

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

Communist theory was to attack as misleaders of labor all labor leaders who told the workers that they could achieve anything substantial by negotiations and by bargaining with their employees. He stated that anyone—I mean, by bargaining with their employers. He stated that Communists are taught that the only way to get anything is not by such collective bargaining, because the workers can't get anything out of that at all, but the only way to get anything—and anyone who advocates anything different in the labor movement is a misleader of [4387] labor—is by carrying out a rigid class struggle policy.

To give you another example, Mr. Diner testified that you can't be a good trade union man and a Communist at the same time.

Now, the purpose of this testimony—and this is obviously only part of it—this one incident is only part of it—is to show that accepting the definition of the Government witnesses of what Communists do in the unions, what Communists, trade unionists do, what the Communist Party line is in the trade unions, accepting that as true, Harry Bridges did not do those things on one occasion or generally. We can show, in other words, if that is the conduct that Communists carry on in the unions Harry Bridges is not a Communist.

Now, let me point out a little further how it becomes relevant. The Government claims, among other theories—and there are other bases for this relevancy—the Government claims, among other things, that Harry Bridges was affiliated either with the Communist Party or an organization connected with the Communist Party. If your Honor please, I don't know if you will or will not accept the definition of affiliation that was accepted by Dean Landis, the Court definition that the Government is attempting to change. It is in substance that affiliation is established by regular cooperation between the individual and the organization so regularly that the organization can reasonably expect such cooperation to [4388] continue.

Presiding Inspector: Of course, that definition may be all right under certain circumstances. It isn't exclusive.

Mr. Grossman: That is correct.

Presiding Inspector: Because there are definitions within the statute itself.

Mr. Grossman: That is correct. I recognize that. That is one of the issues in the case obviously, whether that kind of affiliation has existed.

Presiding Inspector: That is one question.

Mr. Grossman: Obviously, Harry Bridges' primary activity, as the Government will admit, is in the trade unions. Obviously, whether or not Harry Bridges regularly carries out those things that are considered by the prosecution or their witnesses as Communist Party line, as what Communists do in the unions, whether Bridges does those things is relevant to whether or not he is affiliated because, obviously, affiliation by its very nature isn't proved by a nominal membership. It is proved by cooperation. If we can prove not only that is not true, but the opposite is true of what their witnesses say. Communists do in unions, if the things their witnesse say Communists do in unions are not done by Bridges either as specific examples or as a course of conduct—we can prove both—then, it is quite relevant now as to the relevance of this question and subsequent questions that will deal with the same subject, your Honor. [4389]

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

Presiding Inspector: Well, of course, under the definition which has been given there may be a proper beneficial purpose for the members of the union as well; that may have been the order. How do we know? Is the fact that he has done beneficial work for his union necessarily inconsistent with the Government's position? If it isn't, it seems to me this testimony is immaterial.

Mr. Grossman: This testimony is going to be broader. This testimony is going to show—take Mr. Schnering, for example. Mr. Schnering testified that—I would like to read you his quotation so there won't be any question.

Presiding Inspector: I have it in mind. You needn't read it.

Mr. Grossman: Mr. Schnering declared——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) You said you weren't interested very much.

Mr. Grossman: I beg your pardoon?

Presiding Inspector: You said you weren't interested very much in Gitlow or Schnering.

Mr. Grossman: We are for the purpose——

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) As a matter of fact——

Mr. Grossman: (Interposing) Whether we are interested or not, your Honor, we have a right to assume that the Government's theory as to what Communists do in the unions is expressed by Mr. Schnering. Now, Mr. Schnering stated, for example, that Communists definitely taught that, and it was the [4390] Communist Party theory that workers can gain nothing by sitting down at a table and bargaining collectively in an amicable fashion, and that from this no benefits could result to the workers.

Now, we don't intend to prove that Mr. Bridges merely made such statements. We intend to prove that Mr. Bridges acted in such a way as is completely inconsistent with the holding of such views or the carrying out of Communist policy in the unions. We intend to show that in so far as these actions of his were reflected by statements, those were his statements. In other words, we are prepared to show, in opposition to what Mr. Diner says, or rather, assuming that Mr. Diner is telling the truth, that Bridges was a good union man in the sense that it is generally understood, therefore, couldn't be a Communist. That is one of our points. Further than that we intend to show that these very things Schnering says Communists called men misleaders of labor for advocating these very same things, Bridges consistently, over a long period of time, not only advocated but carried out. In other words, it is broader than the statement your Honor made.

Presiding Inspector: What do you have to say about this, Mr. Del Guercio?

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, if the Court please, in the first place, counsel's summary is argumentative.

Presiding Inspector: Of course, it is argumentative. [4391] This is argument.

Mr. Del Guercio: Of what the witnesses have testified to. That isn't the Government's theory at all. The Government's theory is first: That Harry Bridges is a member of the Communist Party. The evidence has all been directed towards that point. Secondly, he is affiliated with the Communist Party through, of course, the Marine Workers Industrial Union, his actions soliciting members to join the Marine Workers Industrial Union. Thirdly, his conduct throughout a period of years by meeting with known Communists at secret meetings, closed meetings, his attendance particularly at the convention of the Communist Party there at Fresno, California. That evidence has not been contraverted.

Now, that, as distinguished from a meeting, was a convention of the Communist Party open only to delegates of the Communist Party, not to trade unionists.

Now, counsel's argument here as to his theory, his interpretation as to what Schnering and Gitlow and others may have said, I think, is a little facetious. We have in the record here, of course, official statements of the Communist Party as to how they work, what their purpose is in getting into trade unions, the boring from within, and obviously in order to succeed in such a movement the Communist Party must of necessity do, or make the people believe that they advocate some of these things. That doesn't prove anything in itself at all. Certainly, they advocate better wages, [4392] or publicize that they advocate better wages and better working hours for the working class. That is part—it is shown by their own literature—that is part of their scheme, their plan, their policy.

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

Presiding Inspector: In other words, it is not inconsistent with the Communist affiliation or membership?

Mr. Del Guercio: Not at all. They are creating, all the time creating situations. Now, how are they going to create these situations? First of all they have got to get control of the trade unions. They admit that in their writings. They have got to get control of the unions, not control merely of a minority but an absolute control of the unions before that situation can be created, that is, a situation for a revolutionary struggle. They have got to get control of the unions and that is what they are doing now. The situation has not arisen yet, or the time isn't ripe for the revolution or for the class struggle. They haven't gotten control of the trade unions, please the Lord, yet.

Mr. Grossman: This is something else——

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) It isn't inconsistent at all with our theory of——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Well, there hasn't been any evidence, has there, that he has done, that Bridges has done anything contrary to the interests of the unions of which he has been an officer? [4393]

Mr. Grossman: Well, now, your Honor, there was, as your Honor will recall, not only—your Honor, in the first place, various of the Government witnesses said that Bridges—what Bridges did, the things he did in the trade unions were harmful to the labor unions. That is one thing. Mr. Laurence stated that for one. Mr. Wilmot, I believe, stated that for another. Secondly, we have——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Well, they stated their personal beliefs.

Mr. Grossman: Yes, I understand.

Mr. Del Guercio: To show bias, if the Court please.

Presiding Inspector: You brought out their personal beliefs.

Mr. Grossman: Let me continue. Excuse me.

Presiding Inspector: That is, control was a bad thing for the unions, but that was not founded upon any particular facts.

Mr. Grossman: I don't know whether they were or not.

Presiding Inspector: You asked for them as bearing on bias, as I recall, to show why they should testify.

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

Mr. Grossman: All right, let me continue. Mr. Diner——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Well, I don't want to continue unless we are at one.

Mr. Grossman: I don't know whether they had a basis——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Wasn't that the only [4394] basis on which the questions were asked?

Mr. Grossman: That may be why we asked the question. That may not be the reason why the——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) That is the only reason, I believe I received it, the only inference it has on the case.

Mr. Grossman: Let's assume that. Let me go to the other point which is clear-cut. Mr. Diner stated—this is not subject to interpretation because it is so clear—Mr. Diner stated in answer to the question, "You mean you cannot be a good trade union man and a Communist at the same time?" His answer was "You cannot."

Presiding Inspector: Who asked the question?

Mr. Grossman: Page 889; I am certain it was the Government. It is only my recollection. But, as I said, the page of the transcript is 889.

Now, that is not subject to the interpretation that Communists can go into the unions and do everything that is good for the workers on the theory of something that is going to happen in the future. That definitely cannot be interpreted that way. Secondly, Mr. Del Guercio makes a distinction, what a Communist is supposed to do before he gets control of the trade union and what he does after that.

Now, your Honor has listened to all this testimony. I am sure you are quite aware of, at least the substance of what [4395] has been said, and the substance of what has been said is this: That Communists believe that the trade unions and their members are something to be used as a revolutionary force. They are to be given by the Communists political, let's say political pushes, political experience, they are to learn through strikes; they are to go into strikes so that they will become part of the revolutionary movement, or something like that. That is obviously the theory of the Government.

Now, we are going to show that in so far as that is a charge, and it definitely is, that Communists believe in many times strike for strike's sake believe in putting the workers into certain activities for the purpose of helping a revolution, which activities are not justified exclusively by improvement of the workers' wages, hours and working conditions—we are going to show in so far as Communists believe that, or if they do, Bridges is not a Communist. He doesn't do that. In other words, our proof is going to go further than that Bridges was active for the union; our proof is going to show on many, many occasions not only did he not advocate strikes when strikes could have been put over, when he wouldn't have lost any support by the workers, but on many occasions he actively opposed the negotiating committees, the unions, themselves, if he thought the strikes weren't at that time just the thing to help the workers. In other words, these [4396] examples we are going to give, and this first one is going to be a good one for that, to show that Bridges' only interest in the strike situation, or the situations which might have led up to strikes, his only interest—and it is absolutely exclusive of any possible interest in educating the workers politically or making revolutionists out of them—was to do what was best for the workers. If he thought a particular strike was not beneficial he even opposed and opposed actively the other members of the negotiating committee, the union itself, and the other union officials for that policy. That may not be conclusive; we recognize that. It is certainly some evidence.

Let me make one other argument. Let's forget the affiliation. Certainly, it is some evidence as to whether Bridges is a member of the Communist Party. If over a period of time consistently he does things which are not consistent with Communist Party theory in the unions I don't say that completes the detail of the affiliation or the membership but it is certainly some evidence. Acting contrary over a long period of time in specific instances or habitually—we can prove both—to the way they say that Communists act and Communists believe unionists should act is certainly some evidence for that additional reason. [4397]

Presiding Inspector: I won't receive it at this time—I may later—the individual instances. Go to the general ones and then we will see about the individual instances later.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Mr. Kagel, can you state whether, over the course of your acquaintanceship with Harry Bridges and your contact with him in connection with negotiations, whether he ever took a position in favor of a strike that was not exclusively to be justified on the basis that it would improve the wages, hours and working conditions of the workers involved?

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, if your Honor please, I object to the question. First, it is so long that I cannot follow it without reading it two or three times. I object on the further ground that Bridges' stand on a particular strike situation is immaterial in this case. The evidence shows, and the Government has shown, that the Communist Party has one basic policy, and that is to overthrow the Government of the United States and the substitution of a dictatorship of the proletariat. Now, how is it to arrive at this ultimate object is another matter? We have shown that they have various methods. Boring from within by trade unions is one method. We have shown that they do not intend, or will not proceed with their ultimate object until they have created a certain situation. Now, that situation, obviosuly, has not arrived yet or we would have had a dictatorship of the proletariat. [4398] They are still working toward it. Now, anything that individual members of the Communist Party may have done is, of course, not indicative of what they will do in the future.

We have shown that the Communist Party, and we have evidence here, and it is uncontroverted as yet, that they believe and teach a policy of hypocrisy and deceit. That is one of their policies, one of their doctrines, one of their precepts.

We have shown that they have changes of policy, that they have no inflexible policy with regard to trade unions; that they change from year to year.

Notice, for instance, the Trade Union Educational League. There is evidence in the record here to show that at one time, on orders from Moscow, it was decided to form a Trade Union Educational League for the purpose of setting up unions under the direct control of the Trade Union Educational League, which was an affiliate of the Red International of Labor Unions, instead of having their Communist Party members in the American Federation of Labor Unions. They carried that out for a number of years. It did not succeed. They changed their policy and then instructed their men to go into bona fide trade unions, like the American Federation of Labor, and other unions, and to work from within those unions, not openly, but secretly.

Now, it is obvious that if a person, and a Communist, gets [4399] into a trade union secretly that he is not going to advocate openly what the Communist Party has instructed him to do. It is obvious that that person, once he gets into that union, will work secretly, and will openly avow that "I am for the working man, I am a great union leader, I am working for higher wages, and better working hours for the working class." That is to be expected, to be expected until such a time as that man who has been working all this time secretly in the labor unions as a Communist has created that situation where the Communists can say, "I now direct you to proceed toward the ultimate object of the Communist Party."

Now, the testimony of the witnesses here, the Government witnesses, and the publications of the Communist Party that we have offered in evidence, is not inconsistent. As a matter of fact, it supports it, and it gives no support, I believe, to counsel's argument.

Mr. Grossman: May I say this, briefly, your Honor: Accepting Mr. Schnering's testimony as true, what Mr. Del Guercio says is simply this, which I think is its own answer; Mr. Del Guercio says that his position is that the Communist Policy would be for a trade union leader to go into a trade union, become active in those unions, and act in such a way that the Communist Party would have to call him as mis-leader of labor, because Mr. Schnering stated definitely that Communists, in their schools, teach that every one who does [4400] certain things, which we are going to prove Harry Bridges did, is not only one, but is regularly called a mis-leader of labor by the Communist Party.

That is a ridiculous conclusion; that the Communists would send to the unions their men and have them act in such a way as called mis-leaders of labor. It may be true, but certainly it is not a logical conclusion, and I think not justified and reconcilable with the statement given by Mr. Diner or Mr. Schnering.

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

Presiding Inspector: Isn't it perfectly evident that an officer of the trade union has got to so act as to keep the favor of the members of the Union? That would be self-evident, wouldn't it?

Mr. Grossman: It doesn't follow. We intend to show that Mr. Bridges, in the course of his conduct in favor of collective bargaining, was using strikes only as a last resort, very often not only opposed the leadership of a union's Negotiating Committee, but very often the membership itself.

Presiding Inspector: Supposing that is all so, it was for the good of the union, wasn't it?

Mr. Grossman: Correct.

Presiding Inspector: Isn't that the aim of the member of the Communist Party who is in the union, to enhance the strength of the union until they can take it over?

Mr. Grossman: According to Mr. Del Guercio.

[4401]

Presiding Inspector: And even after that, until the time when this revolution that we have heard so much about is thought ripe?

Mr. Grossman: According to Mr. Del Guercio's theory Mr. Bridges has already taken over his union.

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

Now, the question is this. According to this theory Communists wish, in unions, to provoke the class struggle, to tell the workers, "You can't really get anything out of negotiations and collective bargaining."

Certainly, under this theory, if a Communist is in a position of leadership in a union and can get the workers to go out on strike, even though it wouldn't be a good strike, without losing any support from the membership, he would continue to do so.

But we can show that Mr. Bridges even opposed the membership if he thought a strike wasn't appropriate, which is certainly inconsistent with any theory that he is carrying out a Communist Party policy, because he would have had even the support of the membership in a policy they would call a Communist Party policy, and the only logical conclusion to be drawn from that is that he isn't carrying out any Communist Party policy, but the reverse and he is even doing what the membership at that particular time—they may understand lafer that he was right—but even doing what the membership at that particular time doesn't understand, arguing with them, in order to carry out a policy that [4402] the Communists wouldn't agree with.

Mr. Del Guercio: The argument to that is that he is carrying on a policy of hypocrisy and deceit.

Mr. Grossman: If it is a policy of hypocrisy and deceit to do something under their theory, it is not a Communist Party position. That is the point I am making. If they wanted to say Communist carry out a policy of hypocrisy and deceit in order to carry out a Communist Party position, they have to stick by it.

We intend to show though he had an opportunity in many cases to carry out what they said is the Communist Party position, though he may have hurt himself by not doing it, he didn't do it.

Presiding Inspector: Do you mean to say we can go into the question of the whole conduct of Mr. Bridges' trade union life here in order to disclose whether or not he acted in the interests of the men in his union?

Mr. Grossman: I say definitely not only can we, but we must.

Presiding Inspector: It will exclude this from this point on.

Mr. Gladstein: Before you make a definite ruling——

Presiding Inspector: I have excluded it. Go on to something else.

Mr. Grossman: Then I understand that I am entitled to go into the general conclusions of this witness; if not specific [4403] at least general.

Presiding Inspector: I am going to let you go into this generally, so as to shorten this, but we are not going into the entire life of this man as a trade unionist to determine this particular question.

Mr. Grossman: I understand I can do it by general questions.

Presiding Inspector: I am going to let you, in a general way, show that he has acted—I think it is implicit and what we all know and can almost take judicial notice of, that is, that he has worked for the interests of his union as he has seen that interest.

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

Mr. Grossman: But he has done certain things that are inconsistent with what they call the Communist Party policy.

Presiding Inspector: We can't raise an issue of every particular act in this man's life.

Mr. Del Guercio: The Government doesn't contend that Bridges hasn't done certain good things. That has never been our contention.

Presiding Inspector: The Government wouldn't have been willing to have consented that he preside at the conference recently held in Los Angeles if it took any such extreme view of the conduct of Mr. Bridges.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is correct. The Government would have had him in custody. [4404]

Presiding Inspector: Yes. I think it is perfectly clear that we may recognize Mr. Bridges is an excellent trade union leader.

Mr. Grossman: May I proceed?

Presiding Inspector: Yes. You don't want to take that admission of counsel?

Mr. Grossman: It is not a sufficient admission. If Mr. Del Guercio will admit Mr. Bridges has never, has continually failed to carry out the Communist Party line, or the Communist Party policy in unions, I will accept that.

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Certainly not.

Presiding Inspector: They couldn't do that. Your witness from Los Angeles, Mr. Horn, said he made a rather Communistic speech.

Mr. Grossman: He didn't say that.

Mr. Del Guercio: He said it was innocuous.

Presiding Inspector: Yes; an innocuous speech, rather along what he understood was Communistic.

Mr. Gladstein: No, he didn't say that.

Presiding Inspector: We will look it up. I haven't attempted to quote the language.

Mr. Myron: He said it was tinged with Communism.

Mr. Gladstein: I was asking about the phraseology and——

Presiding Inspector: It wasn't about phraseology.

Mr. Gladstein: It is my recollection that he said it was [4405] mildly tinged with that line, or with that phraseology.

Presiding Inspector: No. It wasn't about phraseology.

Mr. Gladstein: We can look at the record.

Mr. Del Guercio: As I recall the testimony, the witness, Horn, first testified on direct examination that Harry Bridges' speech was innocuous. On cross examination he admitted he told the officers who interview him that Harry Bridges' speech, this same speech, was tinged with Communism. He also stated that it was the custom of these Communists —not, of course, open Communists—to attack conservative labor leaders by referring to them as fattened royalists, or whatever they are, and then admitted later on, at least inferentially, that Bridges used the same expressions.

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

Presiding Inspector: We can look that up. Everyone's memory is subject to error.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Mr. Kagel, can you estimate on about how many different occasions you dealt with Mr. Bridges in connection with union negotiations?

A. Well, I think that would be difficult because the negotiations themselves might be a continuous one, yet broken by recesses, and would spread over a long period of time. But I worked with Mr. Bridges in the 1934 strike on the waterfront; I had to do with him when he went to arbitration after that strike in preparation of a case; I handled one or two matters [4406] that went to arbitration after the 1934 award.

Q. About how many?

Presiding Inspector: We are having a long speech here.

The Witness: I don't want to make a long speech.

Presiding Inspector: Can't you say how many —if you don't know, say so.

A. (Continuing) I guess around 15 or 25.

Presiding Inspector: We want something better than a guess.

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Would it be 20?

A. I think at least 20; yes.

Q. Now, during all this contact with Mr. Bridges on these negotiations, and all your other contacts with Mr. Bridges, has he at all times been a good trade unionist?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I will object to the question as being immaterial and irrelevant to the issues in this case, as to whether he is a good trade unionist or not.

Mr. Gladstein: They raised the question by direct questions of their witnesses, your Honor.

Mr. Del Guercio: Only as a Communist. If it is admitted that Harry Bridges is a member of the Communist Party then I will say the question is proper. We have said that a Communist cannot be a good trade union man and we still stick to that. If counsel wants to admit, or concede, that Harry Bridges [4407] is, as we have shown, a member of the Communist Party, then that evidence is admissible.

Mr. Gladstein: That is a lesson in logic, I take it.

If the Government can ask their witnesses, "Can a Communist be a good trade unionist?"—the expression "good trade unionist" obviously is not the most precise thing in the world but, nevertheless, the Government introduced it—if they got an answer from their witnesses then we have a right to ask our witnesses, "Is Harry Bridges, or has Harry

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

Bridges been a good trade unionist?" We can use that same expression. If their witnesses say that Communist Party membership is inconsistent with being a good trade unionist—one of the methods of our defense is to show that Harry Bridges has been not only a good, but an excellent trade unionist.

What is this one-sided arrangement that Mr. Del Guercio thinks he has a right to put in here? He has a right to ask witnesses, and bring out answers, that Communist Party membership and trade unionism are inconsistent with each other. That is, you cannot be a good trade unionist and also a Communist. Now, he doesn't want to allow us to prove that Mr. Bridges has been a good trade unionist, and by reasoning, therefore, your Honor is entitled to draw the inference that he couldn't have been a Communist, according to the Government's own witnesses.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think that follows. [4408]

Mr. Gladstein: Why doesn't it?

Presiding Inspector: It might show that he was a bad Communist.

Mr. Gladstein. Even that would be relevant, from our point of view, for this reason:——

Presiding Inspector: I don't see that that would be relevant at all.

Mr. Gladstein: When you take into consideration the testimony of Mr. Gitlow, and other witnesses, about how the Communist Party works, and how everything is arranged in advance, and there is absolute discipline and you must obey, and Mr. Honig testifies that orders, once they are handed down from above, are mandatory on every member, they have got to carry them out, then that is something for your Honor to take into consideration as to whether these——

Presiding Inspector: But you confuse omnipotence with omniscience. The Communist Party may not know everything, although it has power to do everything, according to these witnesses. You are going to concede that argument, I suppose, that if he had disobeyed their orders he wouldn't remain a Communist, if he ever was a member of the Communist Party.

Mr. Gladstein: That would seem to be quite obvious; or there wouldn't be any such affiliation over this period of time.

Presiding Inspector: He may not know about these acts. [4409]

Mr. Gladstein: We want to show that these acts, this conduct of Mr. Bridges, has been open, that it is a matter of public record, and before this case is over we will prove, not in one case, but in many cases, that witnesses for the Government have said, for example: That the Communists in a certain meeting laid down a certain policy for Harry Bridges to follow on a certain subject matter, and that was mandatory on him; that the witness, Honig, testified to matters of that kind and other witnesses. We will show you, by matters of public record, that those were not the truth and that Harry Bridges stood up publicly in his union meetings and conventions and advocated exactly the opposite.

Now, how does that comport with the theory of Mr. Del Guercio that since 1932 Harry Bridges has been, and now is a member of, or affiliated with the Communist Party? Especially, when we can show your Honor instance after instance where he has not only not advocated or carried out the Communist Party policy, but has done exactly the opposite.

Presiding Inspector: How do you know what the Communist Party policies are?

Mr. Gladstein: Their witnesses have told us and that is the only thing in the record.

Presiding Inspector: You mean only in general.

Mr. Grossman: I don't see how you can be any more specific because there are certain things which everyone in the [4410] trade union movement understands the meaning of. Mr. Schnering referred to those words. Mr. Schnering referred to whether it was possible for workers and the employers to sit down at a table and bargain collectively in an amicable fashion, and that that would result in benefit for the workers. Every one of those things is very tangible. He said, "We taught our students that this was the most dangerous pitfall of all."

You can't be more specific. That is not being general. Their witnesses say that doing things like that makes one, and the Communists pointed out, as Mr. Schnering said, that person out as a misleader of labor. That is being specific.

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

I agree with them very generally in some of their statements, but statements like this are not subject to being passed over as being so general that we can't find out whether Bridges' conduct is and has been inconsistent with it.

Mr. Del Guercio: We might answer that by saying——

Mr. Goodwin: Your Honor——

Presiding Inspector: One at a time, please.

Mr. Del Guercio: If they can show us one instance—we will admit all of counsel's argument—that the Communist Party has ever called Harry Bridges a mis-leader of labor, we would like to see it. That is not the point.

There is one other matter referring to Mr. Gitlow's statement that Mr. Gladstein so conveniently forgot, and that is a reference to, I believe it was Foster and Browder. Nobody [4411] denies, not even Mr. Gladstein, I don't think, that Mr. Foster and Mr. Browder are two of the leading characters in the Communist movement in the United States. It will be remembered that Gitlow's testimony—and Gitlow's testimony remained unchallenged—brought out that for a period of years Foster and Browder, like Harry Bridges——

Mr. Grossman: (Interposing) Did what?

Mr. Del Guercio: (Continuing) ——was not revealed as a member of the Communist Party.

Mr. Gladstein: Did Mr. Gitlow testify to that?

Presiding Inspector: I don't remember.

Mr. Gladstein: Did Mr. Gitlow say that Earl

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

Browder, like Harry Bridges, was not revealed as a Communist Party member?

Mr. Del Guercio: Counsel understands what I mean perfectly if the Court please.

Presiding Inspector: The likeness of Mr. Bridges is interposed in explanation of what he said.

Mr. Goodwin: Is it counsel's position on the other side that they are sustaining the proposition that it is impossible for a man to be, as Mr. Diner testified, a good trade union man, and at the same time a member of the Communist Party?

Presiding Inspector: I suppose so.

Mr. Goodwin: If that is their position in this case——

Presiding Inspector: That is the major premise on which they base the question of the admissibility of this evidence. [4412] They say it is impossible, because it has been stated by some witness, for a man to be both a good trade unionist and a Communist.

Then their minor premise is Mr. Bridges, to be brought out by this witness and other witnesses, is a good labor union man, and they seek to draw the conclusion that he couldn't be a Communist.

Isn't that it?

Mr. Grossman: That is correct.

Mr. Gladstein: Part of it.

Mr. Goodwin: Are you accepting that proposition?

Mr. Grossman: We are accepting no proposition. Judge Goodwin, as a lawyer, knows we have a right to assume the Government has not proved their case. We have a right to assume that a portion of the testimony of one of their witnesses is correct. Obviously, in order to show that, assuming that to be correct, we have a right to do it. They definitely haven't proved their contention in this respect, but we can prove the contrary. We have a right to do that without admitting anything, and the Judge knows that.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, providing the Government did ask about whether he was a good trade unionist, or something of that kind. [4413]

Mr. Grossman: Page 889, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Get me that volume, please.

Mr. Goodwin: It seems the question is this: Has Mr. Bridges been a member of the Communist Party, not whether while being a member of the Communist Party he has been a good trade unionist, or whether he has been a good Communist; but was he or was he not a member of the Communist Party?

Now, if you are going into such an inquiry as this as to whether he was entirely consistent at all times with the theory of some of the leaders of the Communist Party, we get into something that is very far afield.

Presiding Inspector: We will try not to get too far afield.

(Whereupon the Presiding Inspector referred to a copy of the transcript.)

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

Yes, Mr. Del Guercio questioned along that line.

Mr. De Guercio: If you will read just prior to that you will see what brought that out. The question was brought up about the disciplinary committee of the Communist Party.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: His testimony was because he refused to do what the Communist Party had told him to do, that is, to give jobs to Communist Party members in preference to those that were already on the waiting list.

Presiding Inspector: He states it very broadly here. [4414]

I will take the testimony over your objection. Of course, this was in relation to minor matters that he testified to.

Mr. Grossman: I don't care whether they were minor matters or not, we have a right to assume it is true.

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead. I will allow this, although the effect of it still remains for the trier of the fact.

Mr. Gladstein: What?

Presiding Inspector: The effect of it, the conclusions to be drawn from it, conclusions of fact, remain for the trier of the fact.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Mr. Kagel, during your contact with Harry Bridges, in connection with trade union activities and trade union negotiations, has he at all times been a good trade unionist?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I object to that question as calling for a conclusion of the witness, Presiding Inspector: It does, but I will take it.

A. In those cases where I have had direct contact with Harry Bridges on matters pertaining to his own union and to those other unions where he had an official capacity to be in, I have found him to be definitely a good and determined trade unionist.

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please——

[4415]

Presiding Inspector: I will let it stand for whatever it is worth.

Mr. Del Guercio: I think that the witness should be instructed to answer, whenever possible, "Yes" or "No", that is, when a questions calls for a "Yes" or "No" answer, and not go into a story and start relating, like other witnesse have done. It seems to be typical. I think we are wasting time and unnecessarily clouding the record with all of these stories.

Mr. Grossman: I remember when Mr. Diner went on for about ten minutes, and I finally asked him whether this wasn't irrelevant, he asked me the question, and then he answered it and then said, "I didn't mean to answer that way because my answer is the other way." I did my best to cut him short.

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

Presiding Inspector: I will let the answer stand. Ask the next question.

Mr. Grossman: May we have the afternoon recess?

Presiding Inspector: A short recess.

(Whereupon a short recess was taken.)

Presiding Inspector: Ask your next question.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Mr. Kagel, at any time in your trade union contacts with Mr. Bridges did he seek not to better the conditions of the workers, but rather to recruit them into the Communist Party and prepare them as stooges for the proletarian revolution? [4416]

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to the question.

Presiding Inspector: I will sustain the objection. You have had the fundamental question answered.

Mr. Grossman: I think there is a difference between statements, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I don't see it.

Mr. Gladstein: One of the Government witnesses testified that the purpose of Communist Party membership in a trade union is to so conduct himself as would be inconsistent with a sincere purpose to better the conditions of the American workers.

Presiding Inspector: He testified that, in his judgment, he has acted throughout as a good trade unionist. This is only a detail.

Mr. Gladstein: That only happens to be one statement.

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

Presiding Inspector: I am not going to receive it. Go ahead. I think you have the full benefit.

Mr. Grossman: May I have the last question read?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Presiding Inspector: That is on the ground that you assume something directly opposite to what this witness has testified to.

Mr. Grossman: I would like to—— [4417]

Presiding Inspector: That is, that he acted not as a good trade unionist. His testimony is that throughout he has acted as a good trade unionist. There is no basis in the testimony of this witness for that question.

Mr. Grossman: Your Honor has ruled and that is final on that.

Presiding Inspector: You can ask the last part of the question alone without reference to his being a good trade unionist.

Mr. Grossman: I will ask that.

Presiding Inspector: You can ask him if he ever acted as a stooge, in his judgment.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. During the course of your contacts, your trade union contacts, with Harry Bridges did he ever, to your knowledge, act in such a way as to recruit the workers into the Communist Party and to prepare them as stooges for the proletarian revolution? A. Never.

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that, your Honor, unless they intend to qualify this witness as an expert on Communism and he admits that he has been in the Party and knows just what he Communists do along that line.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think that is necessary. I will let the answer stand. [4418]

Mr. Grossman: If an expert is needed——

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. During the course of your trade union contacts with Harry Bridges did he ever take the position, or act in accordance with such a position, that workers and employers cannot sit down at a table and bargain collectively in an amicable fashion and have it result in benefits for the workers?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, your Honor, as immaterial and irrelevant.

Presiding Inspector: I will take that.

A. He never has. But to the contrary——

Presiding Inspector: That is all.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Has he ever acted to the contrary?

A. No.

Q. Has he, during the course of your trade union contacts with him, continually bargained collectively with the employers in an amicable fashion resulting in benefits for the workers involved?

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that as incompetent and irrelevant.

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

A. In actual negotiations the answer is "Yes."

[4419]

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. In the course of your trade union contacts with Mr. Bridges, did he ever take any action that was inconsistent with the best interests of the workers, best economic interests of the workers that were involved?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that as irrelevant and broad.

Presiding Inspector: It is pretty broad. That is, as he saw it.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. As you saw it, Mr. Kagel?

A. In the final analysis as it has turned out, the answer would be "Yes," because there have been times when I disagreed with Mr. Bridges on matters pertaining to negotiations, or the handling of situations.

Q. Did Mr. Bridges ever, in the course of your trade union contacts with him, act in a way that was consistent with—withdraw that. During the course of your trade union contacts with Mr. Bridges did he ever take any action along the—— [4420]

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) I will object to that.

Mr. Grossman: Just one moment.

Presiding Inspector: He has not finished the question.

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. During the course—withdraw the question that I started to ask.

During the course of your trade uhion contacts with Harry Bridges was there any conduct of Mr. Bridges which appeared to you to be in support of the policy of a strike for a strike's sake which was not justifiable because of the economic advantages to the workers involved?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

A. My answer is no.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. During the course of your trade union contacts with Harry Bridges was there any action of Mr. Bridges along the line of sabotage or industrial violence or advocacy of sabotage or industrial violence? A. Not so far as I know.

Q. During the course of your trade union contact with Harry Bridges did he engage in any conduct such as unlawful destruction of property in connection with industrial disputes?

A. Not so far as I know. Would I be permitted, Judge—— [442] I could give examples to the contrary.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, no. Strike that out.

Mr. Del Guercio: We know how willing the witness is, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: What is that?

Mr. Del Guercio: We know how willing the witness is.

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

Mr. Gladstein: I move that statement of counsel be stricken.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Mr. Kagel, during the course of your trade union contacts with Harry Bridges was there any example of his conduct along the line of recommending forcefully to the union representatives that a strike they contemplated should not take place?

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Isn't that going into details?

Mr. Grossman: Yes, it is, your Honor, and I have asked the general question. I still feel that we have a right, in order to rebut or deny the substance of what we argued about before, to go into specific details.

Presiding Inspector: I think not.

Mr. Gladstein: Now, if your Honor rules that we aren't I would like to make an offer of proof with respect to some specific details. [4422]

Presiding Inspector: No; we will assume that you could produce specific instances.

Mr. Grossman: I still think, your Honor, I have to make an offer of proof which will explain the substance, at least of what it was I offered to prove in specific detail. I could be brief.

Presiding Inspector: This man has sat with him in negotiations; he has been his advisor, the paid advisor of Mr. Bridges' union, I suppose, in looking up financial matters. Of course, except as every person has observed, he has had little opportunity to observe except along the lines that he has given definite information about. Taking them all together, I am taking them all together; I am lumping them together for the sake of expedition. I don't think it will be wise to go into—or helpful, in any way, to go into the specific instances.

Mr. Gladstein: Your Honor, before you make a final ruling on that, let me say this: Of course, there is the possibility that some one else will be looking at this record; in fact, undoubtedly the Attorney General will be doing so. Now, we have in mind this: We are going to prove, before this case is over, both from Mr. Bridges and from other witnesses that Bridges has engaged in conduct which is clearly 100 per cent inconsistent with the kind of things that the Government witnesses say Communists do. For example, as I understood the witnesses for the Government, one of the things that the [4423] Communists are interested in doing is to use trade unions to tear down the Government, embarrass the Government, stir up dissention and chaos and things of that kind.

We will prove before this hearing is over that Bridges has cooperated not once but several times with various departments of the United States Government, and particularly with reference to the 1936-'37 strike that he cooperated with the United States Government and with representatives of President Roosevelt, and that his conduct far from being the kind of conduct which Government witnesses say is carrying out the Communist Party line, showed that he is a better American than many people who have had the audacity to speak in this Court. That is one thing. Another thing is this:——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) Well, your Honor, I object to that statement of counsel, the audacity of anyone to appear here on the stand.

Mr. Grossman: The shoe fits, Mr. Del Guercio.

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, just a minute. The shoe will fit you in a little while.

Presiding Inspector: Now, wait a second.

Now, let Mr. Gladstein finish, Mr. Del Guercio.

Mr. Del Guercio: He has no right to pass remarks like that, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Well, people get heated——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) That is all he has been, is heated up, apparently, both of them here. [4424]

Presiding Inspector: (Continuing) ——even in deportation hearings.

Mr. Del Guercio: The record will show there is more speeches than evidence.

Presiding Inspector: Well, I think that is so.

Mr. Grossman: That started with the first day, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I notice that Dean Landis said there were very few objections in the other hearing, but we have gone to the other extreme, I think, in this one.

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

Now, I really have forgotten what you said.

Mr. Gladstein: The point I was making, the point is, we will give explicit specific examples which I trust your Honor will admit into the record to show something which is obviously inconsistent with what Government witnesses say is characteristic of a Communist, that is to say, if the Communist Party members in the trade unions, as the Government witnesses say, are not loyal to the Government but intend by their activities to destroy the United States Government, then, we want to show you that by his conduct Mr. Bridges has been exactly the contrary.

Now, there is another thing. That is this: It is very simple for a person to say "I charge Harry Bridges with having been at a certain place on a certain day." The only thing that one can do in answer to that is say "I deny it; I was not there." Now, that is a negative kind of evidence, that [4425] is correct. With a man whose life has been as busy as Harry Bridges' has been, it is not possible for us to trace back and cover every moment of every day in his life since the time that he came to this country, although the charge is such that if we had the facilities at hand we would be required, in order to put in a good defense for him, to cover every such period, every such day of that entire period. That simply isn't physically possible. Therefore, we of necessity are forced to attempt to show you that he, by his conduct, consistently in this field to which he has devoted his life has committed acts and engaged in conduct which is not consistent with the kind of conduct which the Communist Party members in trade unions are supposed to indulge in, according to the Government witnesses. And, your Honor will see too what an unfair disadvantage we would be put if we were simply confined to saying in answer to a Government witness' charge "No, he was not there." We must also be allowed to show that Bridges has said and has acted and conducted himself in such a way that to your Honor it will appear not only that Mr. Bridges denies that he was there but that he couldn't have been there, couldn't have engaged in the discussions that he is said to have engaged in, couldn't have agreed to submit to mandatory decisions such as testimony here to that effect.

Now, we must be permitted to show what this man's life in the trade union movement has been. Otherwise, we are not permitted to put in a defense and although you allow this witness, [4426] Mr. Kagel, to put in a general answer, we feel that a few specific instances must be permitted because the true flavor of Mr. Bridges' views and his conduct cannot be found in a general answer to a general question which is, after all, an answer giving a person's personal opinion. And you, yourself, have stated that the weight of such testimony is something for you to decide, and you may decide that it is simply opinion evidence. Why should we not be permitted to, show the facts, not just the opinion of the witness, but the facts which reveal Mr. Bridges in life, exactly what he has said and what he has done, and you then can take those facts and see whether the Government's theory fits him or not. That is the nature of our defense.

Presiding Inspector: Well, you see, you don't have to trace every second of his life since 1920 because the burden is on them, on the Government, to establish that he has so conducted himself as to bring himself within the scope of this deportation law, so that the rest of his life, we may assume, is of no importance, at least, innocuous.

Now, you are going to pick out a lot more episodes and bring those in on the other side. Those are only material, of course, if they bear on the witnesses that they have produced to prove this, because all other episodes are immaterial in a general way. Now, I have let this witness testify to his opinion, that he is a good trade unionist, I thought we might [4427] almost assume that to be the fact, and I don't think that this argument that you suggest, this soliloquistic argument is of very great strength, that you can prove that he is not a Communist because he has been a good man in his conduct of the unions. It doesn't seem to me that that necessarily reaches that conclusion and, therefore, I don't think we would be helped by the particular episodes on which this witness bases this conclusion. I think you have the full benefit without it.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, there is one more thing to be said, your Honor. That is this: In the last hearing, as Dean Landis found, Mr. Bridges did not deny, and he has never denied that he has had associations, that he has known a number of Communists. He has not denied that some of those Communists have done work in the trade union movement which, he felt, was within the democratic pattern of the trade union and may have been helpful to that trade union at that particular time.

Now, the Government, in this case, as in the last case, must find something more than mere acquaintance or association. It must find something in the nature of affiliation or membership. Now, what does that mean? It means that we, on the part of the defense, have a right to show that despite instances of acquaintance or association Mr. Bridges' conduct has been such that that association or acquaintance, though it existed, is inconsistent with the idea of affiliation carrying out orders of the Communist policy for the Communist Party. [4428] With the situation different, namely, that Mr. Bridges didn't know a single Communist in the United States, perhaps, this kind of evidence would have no materiality, no weight of any kind, but in order to make it clear to you what the situation has been it becomes necessary for us to put in evidence of his actual conduct so that you will not accept the theory which the Government here asks you to accept from the day of the opening statement, namely, that a mere acquaintance or an association with a person who is a Communist makes one deportable.

You are being asked, in effect, to make a ruling which would change, in our opinion, the law of the United States. Now, we are asking you not only to permit that law to remain as it is, but to permit us to put in a defense which will justify the conclusion we ask you to arrive at, namely, to leave that law as it is and not yield to the request of Mr. Del Guercio that you change that law.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, I don't think he makes any such——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing). We don't accept as ours counsel's remarks.

Presiding Inspector: No.

Mr. Gladstein: Moreover, we feel this: We feel this is somewhat crucial to the theory of our defense, very frankly, your Honor, and that, if you feel any doubt about the admissibility of this we would like to have it submitted here and [4429] now to Attorney General Jackson, to whom this matter ultimately will be submitted anyway, we presume, either through the form of a recommendation from you, because whatever the situation is, as I understand it, the Attorney General's word will be final in the matter, that is——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) That is true.

Mr. Gladstein: He can either accept or reject your recommendation.

Presiding Inspector: Certainly.

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

Mr. Gladstein: Now, that being so, and because we feel as we do about this character of testimony, we are prepared to ask you—in the event you do not permit us to put in this kind of testimony we are prepared to ask that the matter be submitted to Attorney General Jackson now so that we can know whether we have that right.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think that would be——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) That request is unusual. You are the trier of the facts right here, now. The matter is before you, not before Mr. Jackson.

Presiding Inspector: I know. I won't decide it this afternoon. I will think it over tonight. Go on to something else. I won't pass on it finally, but I won't talk with Mr. Jackson about it. I will take the responsibility myself.

Mr. Gladstein: Shall we withhold our offer of proof on this? [4430]

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Gladstein: All right.

Mr. Grossman: No more questions.

Presiding Inspector: Do you want to cross examine or do you want to wait?

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes, your Honor. Well, is their direct examination of this witness over?

Presiding Inspector: Until I rule whether I will receive these details. I thought, perhaps you would like to postpone your cross examination.

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, I would until it is completed.

Presiding Inspector: Until tomorrow morning. I should think so.

Can you call another witness?

Mr. Gladstein: We don't have one here now. There are a few questions we could ask, I think, perhaps, your Honor.

Mr. Del Guercio: I may make this statement, if your Honor please: The Government, or those representing the Government in the prosecution of this case are just as anxious as you, the Presiding Officer, to conduct a fair hearing. We believe that you are primarily—we know you are, under the rules and under the law, primarily the trier of the facts. You have to determine first and make your recommendations to the Attorney General. And if we thought that such evidence was material, of course, we wouldn't object to it at all [4431] because we are just as interested in seeing that this is a fair hearing as you are and as everybody else is, and, I think, that any reference, any request from counsel for you to submit the question——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I can't do that so disabuse your mind of it. I am going to take the responsibility here for good or for evil.

Mr. Gladstein: Did Mr. Del Guercio indicate that he desired to save his cross examination until tomorrow?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

Mrs. King: If your Honor please, we still have portions of the testimony——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Yes, can't we go on with those?

Mrs. King: (Continuing) ——that we could go on to.

Could the witness be excused until tomorrow morning?

Presiding Inspector: Yes, tomorrow morning at ten o'clock.

(Witness temporarily excused.)

Mrs. King: The Government read some material on pages 2663 running over to 2664. In that material there is a reference to Roy Hudson. Because of that reference I am proceeding to read on page 2671, beginning on the third line as follows:—

Mr. Myron: (Interposing) I wonder if you would wait a moment until we could find it in the reference book?

Mr. Del Guercio: What page is that? [4432]

Mrs. King: I am reading on the third line of page 2671 and I am basing my right to read this on your quotation from page 2663-4.

Presiding Inspector: How far do you want to read, Mrs. King?

Mrs. King. I want to read down to seven lines from the bottom of the page 2672.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, our reference, to get the record clear, was the Marine Workers Industrial Union. The matter is on page 2663. That was the subject.

Presiding Inspector: She says that what you read brought in the name of Roy Hudson in some statement.

Mr. Del Guercio: Are you sure you don't mean Telford, Sam Telford?

Mrs. King: Right following Sam Telford on the next page, 2664, you have this q stion:—

Mr. Del Guercio: "Roy Hudson". That is right. Now, you want to read what?

Mrs. King: Beginning on the third line of page 2671 and reading to within seven lines of the bottom of 2672.

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, it has no reference, you will admit, to the subject matter of the Marine Workers Industrial Union. It merely has reference to Roy Hudson, is that correct, as being a member of the Communist Party? [4433]

Mrs. King: It also discusses his position with reference to seamen and so on, which, I believe, is an explanation of the discussion on the other page.

Mr. Del Guercio: We will object, then, to that, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: What was the matter on the other page? I haven't the record before me.

Mrs. King: After the question "Sam Telford?" you have the answer "I think was a member of the Marine Workers Industrial Union and the Sailors Union of the Pacific.

"Q. Roy Hudson?

"A. The only union I think he was a member of was the Marine Workers Industrial Union."

This is a further discussion of Roy Hudson and the contact of Mr. Bridges with Roy Hudson.

Presiding Inspector: Now, where is this?

Mrs. King: Beginning on the third line of page 2671.

Presiding Inspector: How far do you want to read?

Mrs. King: To within seven lines from the bottom of page 2672.

Presiding Inspector: Well, I shouldn't think this testimony about Aaron Sapiro would be material.

Mrs. King: I don't think it is, but I wanted to read before and after. It seemed to be simpler to take it in.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, that is highly objectionable, [4434] your Honor. It has no reference——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I will receive it, down to the——

Mrs. King: The last question on page 2671.

Presiding Inspector: Down to the last question on 2671.

Mrs. King: All right. Then, can I go on?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mrs. King: The difficulty is, your Honor, the first question on 2672 refers to the answer preceding it, but, I think, the rest of the questions on 2672 are relevant, and the answers.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. Why not leave out that first answer?

Mrs. King: All right.

"Q. Can you recall whether anybody was present at that discussion?" You see, the words, "that discussion" don't make much sense without the preceding answer, but I am perfectly willing to leave it out.

Presiding Inspector: Well, I don't know. It is hard to——

Mrs. King: (Interposing) I will concede that. That is the reason why I included it; I mean, I am not terribly interested in it.

Presiding Inspector: Well, why not omit down to the question "Do you know that Roy Hudson was in charge of the trade union activity——"

[4435]

Mrs. King: All right, I will do that, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, all right.

Mrs. King: "Q. I think you said yesterday you knew Roy Hudson? A. Yes.

"Q. Do you recall how many times you have met Roy Hudson?

"A. Only twice to the best of my recollection.

"Q. Do you know whether he holds any position in the Communist Party?

"A. I think he does. I want to say when I said 'twice' I mean that I can recall two distinct conferences with Roy Hudson. When he was around here in 1936 I met him on a few other occasions. I might have run into him—we used to go to a saloon on the waterfront there and maybe have a drink or two and talk things over. I remember he used to be around and I ran into him a few times there. I only have two distinct recollections of having a conference with him.

"Q. Do you recall what the subjects of those conferences were on those two occasions?

"A. Regarding the maritime situation.

"Q. What?

"A. In regard to the Maritime situation; the seamen-longshore situation. [4436]

Then, after an omission:

"Q. Do you know that Roy Hudson was in charge of the trade union activity for the Communist Party? A. I didn't.

"Q. And is a member of the Central Committee of the Communist Party? A. I didn't."

Now, I am about to read on pages 2793-4. The Government read immediately before what I have the intention of reading, about a certain Herman Mann.

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, can you tell me on what subject you are——

Mrs. King: (Interposing) Well, the Government read the question and answer in the middle of the page:

"Did you ever use Herman Mann as a messenger to contact Walter Lambert, Sam Darcy?

"A. I have used Herman Mann as a private investigator——"

Now, I want to go on.

"Q. (Interrupting)"——

Mr. Myron: (Interposing) We object to that, your Honor. It has no reference at all to the admission introduced by the Government.

Mrs. King: I can't understand if the Government talks about Herman Mann, why they have a right to stop in the middle of a sentence with a dash and not let me go on reading to the [4437] conclusion of that.

Mr. Myron: The rest of the testimony has no bearing on the admissions that were introduced by the Government and made by the Alien.

Mrs. King: I mean, the purpose for which the Government introduced it may be one thing but it is more on exactly the same subject that the Government introduced material on.

Mr. Myron: That is why we object to it. It has no reference at all. It is only admissible as admissions by the person at the former trial.

Mr. Gladstein: Your Honor, the question that the Government read into the hearing on page 2703, "Did you ever use Herman Mann as a messenger to contact Walter Lambert, Sam Darcy," and the answer unfinished, "I have used Hermann Mann as a private investigator——", now, there could be drawn an inference from that that Mr. Bridges was answering to some effect that as an investigator or a messenger or in some such capacity the question has been answered or intended to be answered in the affirmative. We think we have a right to show what the balance of the question was, to show what Mr. Bridges' full answer was concerning Mr. Mann.

Presiding Inspector: How far do you want to read?

Mrs. King: Down to the sixth line on page 2704.

Mr. Del Guercio: If the Court please, we introduced that testimony as an admission in connection with the general subject [4438] of the Waterfront Worker. Now, Mann, of course, may have as many personalities as—well, there are so many innumerable personalities. Mann, in one personality in connection with the Waterfront Worker, is a different man from that in connection with any other capacity.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, I think I will take that; it is pretty close.

Mrs. King: (Reading)

"Q. (Interrupting) No, no; as a messenger, I said. "A. As a messenger?

"Q. He was then a waterfront section organizer, if you recall. Do you know that?

"A. I didn't know that, and I don't recall it, and I don't recall ever using him as a messenger.

"Q. During the strike, I am talking about, in May 1934. A. No.

"Q. You never used him as a messenger?

"A. No, not at all. It is pretty hard to say whom you have used as messengers during the strike, but I don't recall——

"Q. (Interrupting) I mean continually or frequently. A. No.

"Q. You would know that, wouldn't you?

"A. I certainly would."

Now, I am proposing to read on pages 2780 and 2781, beginning in the middle of the—well, I mean in the course of [4439] the first full paragraph with the third sentence thereof after the word "No."

Mr. Del Guercio: So that we may follow can you tell us on what subject that is?

Mrs. King: Yes, on the I.W.W., and I propose to read through the first full paragraph on page 2780.

Presiding Inspector: All right.

Mrs. King: (Reading)

"Now, my answer would also be——"

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) I object to the reading of it, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Why do you object to the reading of it?

Mr. Myron: We haven't found it. Of course, you have our volume.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, 2780.

Mr. Del Guercio: We don't have our volume.

Presiding Inspector: I have got it.

Mr. Del Guercio: May I look at it up there?

Presiding Inspector: Yes, certainly, come right up here and look at it.

Mr. Del Guercio: May I make my objections from here?

Presiding Inspector: Certainly, as long as you don't rule on them. How far do you want to read?

Mrs. King: Through the first full paragraph on 2781, [4440] ending with the words "over to their side."

Presiding Inspector: All right, I will allow it.

Mrs. King: "Now, my answer would also be that when it came to a question of working out solutions of problems, I think it is democracy enough if you are going to make advances, if you are going to have things work; otherwise, if it is not it is what was the matter with the I.W.W. where everybody expressed themselves at any time; before decisions were made, after decisions were made, despite the rules in the union; every individual was free to do anything he liked. During a strike if he felt like going out and blowing up a bridge, that was perfectly all right; if he felt like—not that I say that they done it; I am just talking now as an example.

"You either have to have democracy where the line is drawn somewhere, or you have anarchy, and I think it is a safe rule to let everybody express themselves up until the point that the vote is taken and then after the vote is taken the majority rules and the minority is bound to go along; otherwise, you have got anarchy.

"I don't think the minority has got the right to keep on fighting and disrupting to get their own way. They have their right by democratic means to swing the majority over to their side."

Now, I am proposing to read on page 2850.

Mr. Del Guercio: On what subject, please?

[4441]

Mrs. King: On the I.W.W. again, beginning at the beginning of the last paragraph on that page and running down to the last statement of Dean Landis on the next page.

Presiding Inspector: Whereabouts was that? I was reading on from where you stopped. I was interested in it. Now, where are you now?

Mrs. King: I am on page 2850, beginning with the last paragraph.

Presiding Inspector: 2850.

Mrs. King: Down to the place where Dean

Landis talks about adjourning. I think we will do the same in a moment.

Presiding Inspector: What was that? What are you talking about?

Mr. Del Guercio: We object to reading any portion of that. It doesn't appear to have anything to do with the I.W.W. or the theory of the I.W.W.

Presiding Inspector: Where do you want to read from? 2850, what line?

Mrs. King: To the "Trial Examiner Landis: I think we had better adjourn at this time." I stop there.

Mr. Gladstein: You see, your Honor, on page 2851 Mr. Bridges refers back to what he said on the previous pages and characterizes it as what he believed to be a fair description of the I.W.W. philosophy.

Presiding Inspector: Where do you want to start? [4442]

Mrs. King: The last paragraph on page 2850.

Presiding Inspector: I will take this as being in some way connected with what has already been admitted.

Mrs. King: (Reading)

"I can understand the other process, but I cannot understand the taking over of industry by general strikes. I have seen general strikes. What you have here would have to be simultaneous, a general strike, and the general strike and taking over all the country. Then after you took those things over you would have to operate them, and you would have to operate them for the benefit of the people that took them over.

"Well, maybe it could be done, but it is pretty far-fetched, it seems to me.

"Trial Examiner Landis: You wouldn't say that that particular illustration, which I regard as rather imaginary, is a fair concretization—if there is such a word—as Marxian technique?

"The Witness: No. That is a fair description of what the I.W.W. philosophy is."

Now, if your Honor please, I would like to read beginning on page 3060——

Mr. Del Guercio: On what subject?

Mrs. King: Again on the I.W.W. and, I believe, later on the MWIU. [4443]

Presiding Inspector: Well, I haven't the testimony before me.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will make it available.

Mrs. King: Beginning with the last question, the last question on 3060.

Mr. Del Guercio: 3060? We object to reading that. While there is a character reference to the I.W.W. it is not——

Mrs. King: (Interposing) I propose to read to where the Government started to read on page 3065, which was the last question on that page.

Presiding Inspector: They read to there?

Mrs. King: No; they began reading at that point.

Presiding Inspector: They began at 3065?

Mrs. King: The last question, in fact, the only question.

Mr. Del Guercio: On the I.W.W.?

Mrs. King: No; I said on the MWIU. Then, reading on to the company union, and the efforts to break away from it.

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, if your Honor please——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Now, what is the point of this you want to read?

Mrs. King: The material beginning on page 3065 shows the organization, although the Government put it purely on the problem of the MWIU and the Waterfront Worker and the I.W.W., they show the culmination of a process which we contend begins on page 3060 and is part of the same process. [4444]

Mr. Gladstein: That is to say, for example, your Honor, during the course of Mr. Bridges' answer to that specific question that begins on 3065 where he is asked about "When did the men start to organize a union which was not a company union," he mentions "our waterfront paper." Now, the background against which that paper was started up and the motivation for it are discussed on pages 3060 to 3065. In order to give you a correct picture of that background it is necessary to have those pages in the record.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, of course, we don't admit that is a correct statement of the background.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it; I will take it.

Mrs. King: (Reading)

"Q. And what was the condition of the waterfront at that time? Were there any unions in existence?

"A. There was—well, you had the company union in San Francisco. There were remnants of unions here and there up and down the Pacific Coast. In San Pedro the I.W.W. got pretty strong, even to the extent of pulling a strike in 1923.

"In some of the Northwest ports the American Federation of Labor, I.L.A., had charters, but without any power.

"In the port of Tacoma, I believe, was the only union of any weight or power and that was very limited.

"But as far as I was concerned, I was in San Francisco and they had a company union there.

[4445]

"Q. You were a member of that company union?

"A. About six months after I went on the waterfront I joined the company union. It was a question of joining or getting off the waterfront.

"Q. Were conditions on the waterfront good at that time?

"A. They were not so bad then. Later, on however, in 1925, they got pretty bad.

"In 1924 we attempted to form, and we actually did form a local of the I.L.A. We paraded on Labor Day in 1924. That was the last Labor Day parade in San Francisco until 1934.

"Q. Why were they discontinued?

"A. Well, it was at that time—I had my own ideas, I think I was correct. The leadership that were engaged in organizing the union were organizing it fairly secretively which, of course, was the correct tactics, but they were operating on the basis that this was going to be done until everybody was in the union.

"Some of us put up quite a fight to have it done in another way, but I was new, a newcomer at that time, and had no weight. I didn't believe the tactics were correct. I had nothing to say about it, however.

"Then after 400 of us paraded in the open on Labor Day in 1924, why we were kind of blacklisted for a couple of years.

"Then, of course, from 1925 on up to 1934, conditions just [4446] got worse and worse. Wages were reduced, the rate of production was increased as high as around 500 or 600 per cent. Various forms of graft and racketeering increased. Unless you got around quite a bit and put up a terrific fight you had to pay for your job to your straw boss, or gang foreman, as the case may be.

"This was during prohibition. Functioning in conjunction with the company union were certain bootleggers on the waterfront and when you went to work why you had to cash your check with these bootleggers, and they would see to it that they got a certain amount of it. Then they would turn over their checks to the company union officials to cash with the steamship owners. In other words, if you wanted to work steady, and if you were a good company union man you worked fairly steady, although you really killed yourself while doing it. You cashed your check with the bootleggers and 10 or 15 per cent of your wages went out of your check in that way.

"Then, of course, there were many other things you had to put up with more than your job was worth. You had to report if you got injured. If you got two serious injuries while working, regardless of how they occurred—it didn't necessarily have to be your own fault—you were generally through on the waterfront.

"There were some pretty ridiculous complaints.

"I recall my partner, he got hurt. He just returned to the job and got hurt a week later. He got his foot [4447] broken. The report was that he had soft bones. He had worked on the waterfront 18 years.

"These various things existed and really reached a high point around 1932.

"Q. Mr. Bridges, you just used the word 'partner' in that description.

"A. Longshoremen work in pairs in the holds of vessels and on the dock and on the deck. When I say 'partner' that is the technical term for your working partner in performing longshore work.

"Q. What were the wages at that time?

"A. 90 cents an hour in 1922. That continued on at 90 cents per hour until 1930, or 1929, I think, when they were cut to 85 cents and the following year they were cut to 75 cents.

"However, along with the cutting of the wages went the terrific speed-up which, in that type of work, can become something that is pretty hard to describe, but can result in people actually being killed on the job through sheer exhaustion.

"Q. What was the 'shape-up?'

"A. The 'shape-up' was a method of hiring. In all ports,——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Well, now, I didn't notice this part of the proof.

Mrs. King: What?

Presiding Inspector: Has this anything whatever to do [4448] with what was read?

Mrs. King: It has to do with what is about to be read, yes, what was read, because that explains why they started to organize a union which was not a company union.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, it has nothing to do with the Marine Workers Industrial Union.

Mrs. King: It explains exactly why they were ready to cooperate with the Marine Workers Industrial Union, if there was any cooperation, because the conditions were so bad on the waterfront it was necessary to use what assistance was at hand, so that they cooperated with anybody who was organized in order to get away from the company unions and the conditions which the company unions had imposed on the men on the waterfront. [4449]

Now, there is only another page to read, your Honor, and it seems to me that this is clearly in line with what follows.

Mr. Gladstein: Specifically, your Honor, on page 3066, which is a part of the transcript read by the Government, you will find a reference in Mr.

Bridges' answer to the waterfront paper. He said "There was really no start toward real organization until September, 1932, when we started our waterfront paper. The waterfront paper generally dealt with the ills of the longshoremen."

Now, this portion which Mrs. King is reading discusses the ills of the longshoremen which represented the reason for the waterfront paper coming into existence.

Presiding Inspector: All right, go ahead.

Mrs. King: (Reading)

"A. The 'shape-up' was a method of hiring. In all ports, except San Francisco, they had what we term Fink Halls. Employers' hiring halls is the correct term. They were halls owned and controlled by the employers, where the hiring was done, and they were in reality an elaborate blacklising system where anybody that talked organization was immediately weeded out of the industry. They had a complete coastwise set-up in that regard.

or formed themselves into a semi-circle and the boss came along and says, 'You; you, you,' and that is the way the terms originated.

"This 'shape-up' of course, was objected to because it put too much power in the hands of the boss, the gang boss, who was generally a petty racketeer.

"Of course, in longshore work there was no discrimination for being fired on the job, but the discrimination came from being hired."

Mr. Del Guercio: Of course, this is being read over our objection, if the Court please. Does the record show that?

Presiding Inspector: Oh, yes.

Mr. Gladstein: Your Honor, it is ten minutes past four. Shall we adjourn for the day?

Presiding Inspector: How much more have you of this?

Mr. Gladstein: We probably have—it will take until 5:00 o'clock.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, that is a good thing to do, isnt' it? Do you really want to adjourn now? [4451]

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, we would prefer it, your Honor. Then, the balance we can read during those intervals that occur invariably or inevitably during the rest of the trial.

Presiding Inspector: Very well. Tomorrow morning at ten o'clock.

(Whereupon, at 4:10 o'clock p.m. an adjournment was taken until Tuesday, May 20, 1941, at 10:00 o'clock a.m.) [4452]

Court Room 276,
Federal Building,
San Francisco, California,

Met, pursuant to adjournment, at 10:00 A. M.

[4453]

PROCEEDINGS

Presiding Inspector: Now, we will proceed.

SAM KAGEL

called as a witness on behalf of the Alien, having been previously duly sworn, testified further as follows:

Presiding Inspector: Do you know what the question was that we were discussing?

Mr. Grossman: I think I can find it, your Honor. I can describe it in substance, if not in words.

Presiding Inspector: I know you can. I have it well in mind myself, but I didn't know what its technical form was.

Mr. Grossman: Here we are, your Honor, on page 4422:

"Q. Mr. Kagel, during the course of your trade union contacts with Harry Bridges was there any example of his conduct along the line of recommending forcefully to the union representatives that a strike they contemplated should not take place?"

Presiding Inspector: I excluded that question, did I not?

Mr. Grossman: Well, I don't know whether you ruled—you indicated, I think, a desire to exclude it. Then there was the question of——

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

Presiding Inspector: I think I said I would think it over overnight.

Mr. Grossman: That is a question you were to think over.

Presiding Inspector: I understand this is objected to?

Mr. Del Guercio: It is. [4454]

Presiding Inspector: On the ground that it is incompetent, or isn't relevant to give the details upon which this witness has based his opinion?

Mr. Del Guercio: That is correct.

Presiding Inspector: I am going to adhere to that ruling and liken this to a reputation witness. In fact, this is a kind of reputation witness, reputation as a good trade unionist and, therefore, I will exclude the details upon which he bases this conclusion. I think it is well within the authorities.

I don't say that it isn't remotely relevant, but it is so remotely relevant that the time it would take to prove all those things would not be justified; and I rule it out as practically irrelevant, not within the general contemplation of the rule in relation to such testimony as this. Further, if there is any question it is a matter of discretion.

I don't think that it is necessary to make any offer of proof except to say, which I assume is the fact, that you would prove numerous instances of conduct which you would claim would be a fair basis for conclusions of the man being a good trade unionist, as already stated by this witness.

We will proceed. Ask the next question. [4455]

Mr. Grossman: I have some more general questions.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, you may ask them. I want you to cover it in your general theories. I have allowed that, although I have grave doubt whether that is even competent, but I have allowed it and I am going to let you amplify the general basis.

Mr. Grossman: After I finish that, I think, your Honor, because I would state it slightly differently and in a little more detail, I would like to make my statement of offer of proof. I can make it simple.

Presiding Inspector: You may do that, but I don't want you to give——

Mr. Grossman (Interposing): I understand.

Presiding Inspector (Continuing): ——the matters which I am thus excluding under this theory.

Mr. Grossman: I understand.

Presiding Inspector: Now, I have given this the very best consideration that I am capable of and, of course, we are all subject to error.

Direct Examination

(Resumed)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Mr. Kagel, during the course of your trade union contacts with Harry Bridges did he always follow the policy of advocating and carrying out strikes only when they were necessary as a last resort to satisfy the reasonable economic [4456] demands of the workers?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that question as being too broad.

Presiding Inspector: I think I will take it. This is all on the basis of establishing that he is a good trade unionist in the opinion of this witness.

Mr. Del Guercio: Opinion testimony, your Honor, is it not?

Presiding Inspector: Yes. I will take it. It is opinion testimony.

A. In my opinion, the answer is Definitely Yes.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. During the course of your trade union contacts with Harry Bridges did you find him continuously a supporter—withdraw that.

During the course of your contacts with Mr. Bridges did you find him equally willing to use the procedure of arbitration, negotiation and mediation as well as the procedure of strikes?

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, if your Honor please, I will object to that.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

Mr. Del Guercio: It is a lea' question.

Presiding Inspector: It is. I will take it.

A. The answer to that question is Definitely Yes. [4457]

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. During the course of your trade union contacts with Harry Bridges did you find him regularly and continuously willing to and actually cooperating with Governmental agencies to avoid strikes where such strikes could reasonably be avoided?

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, if your Honor please.

Presiding Inspector: If there were such instances I will allow it.

Mr. Del Guercio: What?

Presiding Inspector: I will take his general testimony on that.

A. There were certain instances where I had contact with Mr. Bridges relative to such cases where Mr. Bridges definitely cooperated with the Government authorities to the end of trying to avoid certain strike situations. And I could testify, if I were permitted, to the specific cases.

Presiding Inspector: We will strike that out.

The Witness: I am sorry.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Do you know of any cases to the contrary?

A. Not of my own knowledge. Not that I had anything to do with.

Q. Will you state from your trade union contacts with [4458] Harry Bridges what was and is his theory on the role and function of the trade unions?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, your Honor.

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

Presiding Inspector: I will sustain the objection to that question. That is his opinion of the workings of Mr. Bridges' mind. We will take that from Mr. Bridges.

Mr. Grossman: I think I am entitled to ask it, if the witness can answer it, from the activities of Mr. Bridges and the statements of Mr. Bridges that were integrally tied up with those activities and explanatory of them.

Presiding Inspector: It is immaterial anyway. I can't see how it is material.

Mr. Grossman: This goes to the very substance of the Government witnesses, that we started this discussion on. That is, as to the Communist theory on the role and functions of the union.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. But the Communist theory is a very complicated matter. You just pick out one very small part of it and try to draw conclusions from that. I think that you have got to treat this matter as a whole. I will exclude that question. Perhaps you can simplify it in that way.

Mr. Grossman: All right.

Mr. Gladstein: We haven't inquired about this, your Honor, but is it understood that whenever you make a ruling [4459] on a question of admissibility of evidence of this kind, for example, that when you exclude testimony which we desire to have brought into the record, that automatically an exception is noted in the record?

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

Presiding Inspector: I don't think any exception is necessary.

Mr. Gladstein: That is, it is not necessary for us to ask for any exception?

Presiding Inspector: Oh, no. The question, of course, in these administrative hearings is whether there has been a fair hearing on the one hand or whether the person determining the fact has acted in so gross a manner as to have denied either a fair hearing or to have been arbitrary or capricious.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Mr. Kagel, yesterday when I asked you whether Mr. Bridges had ever taken any action that was inconsistent with the best economic interests of the workers that were involved, you stated the answer was, Yes, because there were times when you disagreed with Mr. Bridges on matters pertaining to the negotiations or the handling of situations. If I asked you that same question in this form, tell me whether your answer would be any different. I am going to state the question again now. In the course of your trade union contacts with Mr. Bridges did he ever take any action that could be reasonably interpreted as being meant not in the best interests of [4460] the workers involved or being meant for some other ulterior political purpose? A. No, definitely not.

Mr. Del Guercio: Just a minute, please.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to the question upon the ground of form.

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

Presiding Inspector: I will allow the objection to go in first before the answer.

The Witness: I am sorry.

Presiding Inspector: You answered quickly.

Mr. Grossman: I will ask that again.

Presiding Inspector: We will strike out the question and answer so we can start over. [4461]

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. In the course of your trade union contacts with Mr. Bridges did he ever take any action that appeared to you to be taken for a purpose other than satisfying the best economic interests of the workers that were involved?

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that as being immaterial. Whether or not, in the opinion of this witness, that is true or not is immaterial.

Mr. Grossman: These have been permitted.

Presiding Inspector: I think it is along the same line and I will take the answer.

A. My answer to that is, no, he has never taken such a position. If I may be permitted——

Presiding Inspector: No, that answers it.

Mr. Gladstein: Why not let the witness explain?

Presiding Inspector: Because he will give some details.

The Witness: No.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, if he does give details those can be stricken, but if he wants to complete his answer in a general way——

Presiding Inspector: I don't see what more he can add to that. If he can, let him go ahead.

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

A. (Continuing): I simply wanted to explain that my answer yesterday, when I said "Yes", was meant to mean that I differed at times with Mr. Bridges as to procedure, or as [4462] to particular strategy at the moment; but the answer of "Yes" yesterday was not meant to mean that I knew of cases where he was taking a particular position contrary to the economic interests of those persons he represented.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think we so understood it.

The Witness: I wanted to clear it up on the record.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think the explanation was necessary.

Mr. Del Guercio: I move to strike out the witness' answer.

Presiding Inspector: I will let it stand. It don't amount to anything.

Mr. Grossman: I fought for days on end to have Government witnesses answer "Yes" or "No" and failed.

Presiding Inspector: I have ruled in your favor. If you want to withdraw it, or anything of that kind—I ruled in your favor.

Mr. Del Guercio: I have a statement to make. The Government has sat idly by and has not been given any opportunity to reply to various charges and accusations and implications, made by counsel——

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

Presiding Inspector: According to the rules laid down, none of this goes into the record.

Mr. Del Guercio: It is going in the record, however.

Presiding Inspector: This isn't the record. The record is what the Presiding Examiner reports to the authority, the Department. [4463]

Mr. Del Guercio: It will all be stricken from the record?

Presiding Inspector: That is what the rule says.

Mr. Del Guercio: The rules provide.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: But the reporter is recording all this.

Presiding Inspector: But he cannot use his discretion as to what goes in and what shouldn't go in. He is taking everything.

Mr. Grossman: At this time I would like to make my offer of proof.

Presiding Inspector: I don't know how to make up a record, how it would be possible to make it up, without having some of this discussion in, but we will have a talk about that when the case closes.

Mr. Grossman: I wish to make an offer of proof to the effect that if we had been permitted we would have asked questions, and the replies of Mr. Kagel to those questions, would be in substance this: That on many, many occasions the conduct of Mr. Bridges was such as to support the general statements that have been made, the general replies that have been made to the general questions previously asked Mr. Kagel about characterizing the conduct of Mr. Bridges; and that all of the conduct of Mr. Bridges has been consistent with those statements; and that Mr. Kagel would have given specific examples showing cases where Mr. Bridges had opposed a strike, or strikes, [4464] even against the position of the leadership of the union involved, and even against the position of a large part of the membership in the union involved, because he thought it was not the best economic weapon to use at that time, or not necessary to achieve the economic ends of the union; that he would also testify to Mr. Bridges going so far in favor of collective bargaining that he disagreed with union committees on the question of whether employer groups should be permitted to join together into a single employer association for the purpose of collective bargaining, on the theory that such collective bargaining would be better collective bargaining and would avoid minor and small strikes; that Mr. Kagel would also have replied that at the request of the Government of the United States, officials of the Government of the United States, more properly, Mr. Bridges had used all his efforts to avoid and delay certain important strikes at the request of the Government in the hope of avoiding the strike permanently; that Mr. Kagel would also, if permitted to testify, give examples of Mr. Bridges theory of the role and function of the trade unions and its application to particular situations, showing that such theory, which statements of Mr. Kagel would have the effect of showing that such theory, and such activities in support of such theory of Mr. Bridges, is completely inconsistent with the statements of Communists' theory as to the trade unions that have been made by the Government witnesses, [4465] in particular, Schnering, Rushmore and Diner.

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to the line of testimony offered by counsel.

Presiding Inspector: The first part of it is all in, that you offered, is already in.

Mr. Grossman: I recognized I was duplicating, but for the purpose of clarity I wanted to add that.

Presiding Inspector: But whatever new there is, outside of what you have already shown, I will exclude the evidence.

Let us have the next question.

Mr. Grossman: Your Honor, I would like to have a statement from you as to whether or not you consider our offer of proof sufficient for the purpose we are making it?

Presiding Inspector: I certainly do.

Mr. Grossman: And without mentioning the particular events or circumstances, about which testimony could be given, because in order to make our offer of proof conclusive we are willing to do that, unless your Honor considers that it is sufficient as it now stands.

Presiding Inspector: I think it is absolutely sufficient. In fact, I think the matter is entirely clear without the offer. Of course, the offer is to clarify what needs clarification.

Mr. Grossman: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: And you showed by your question, I [4466] think, that you were aiming at fully, so as to protect your rights completely. I have allowed the offer so there may be no question about it, so as to make sureness doubly sure.

Mr. Grossman: No more questions.

Cross Examination

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. How old are you? A. I am 32.

Q. Now, you say you are connected with the Pacific Coast Labor Bureau? A. Correct.

Q. Is that a private organization?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it incorporated? A. No, sir.

Q. Is it organized for profit?

A. Well, it is owned by one person, by H. P. Melnikow, as the Proprietor.

Q. What?

A. H. P. Melnikow is the Proprietor.

Q. Is he running the organization for profit, or is it an eleemosynary institution?

A. I don't know exactly what you mean by "profit." The money that is made, over and above expenses, is usually kept [4467] in the business.

Q. Are you a salaried employee of the concern?

A. I am.

Q. You don't have any title, do you?

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

A. Well, I have, as I testified yesterday, been called at times "Associate Director," or "Assistant Director."

Q. I am not asking you what you have been called. I am asking you what is your exact position with that concern, how are you carried on its payroll? A. Simply by name.

Q. By name. And you have no title at all?

A. Not on the payroll. [4468]

Q. What is your salary?

A. $425.00 a month.

Q. Who pays you that salary?

A. The Pacific Coast Labor Bureau.

Q. That is, Mr. Melnikow?

A. Mr. Melnikow.

Q. Who picked the name "Pacific Coast Labor Bureau"?

Presiding Inspector: There was a little noise in the room. It was difficult for me to hear as well as the witness.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Your organization is called the "Pacific Coast Labor Bureau". Do you know why the word "bureau" was chosen? A. Yes. I think I do.

Q. Well, without going into detail, great detail, who picked it out?

A. Well, the only way I can explain that is to tell you how the Pacific Coast Labor Bureau was itself established.

Q. Well, I am not asking you that.

A. Well, but——

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

Q. (Interposing): Was it picked out by Mr. Melnikow?

A. Mr. Melnikow picked out the name "Pacific Coast Labor Bureau", but the Pacific Coast Labor Bureau was an office taken over from a group originally known as the "Labor Bureau Incorporated", which was organized in New York and had offices throughout the country and had an office established [4469] in San Francisco.

Q. Now, was Mr. Gladstein ever connected in any shape, manner or form with that organization, either here or Portland or anywhere else?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know it?

A. Not to my knowledge. And for the period that I have been connected with the Bureau I would say, No.

Q. And you have been connected with it since 1933?

A. On a permanent basis and on a part time prior to that.

Q. Now, these contacts that you have testified to as having with Harry Bridges, they were on the basis of an employer and employee basis, were they not? A. That's correct.

Q. You were the employee, or your organization was the employee, Harry Bridges was your employer?

A. Well, the Union he represented was.

Q. Yes? A. Correct.

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

Q. And he paid you for all the information you furnished him? A. Correct.

Q. In other words, you and your organization were Harry Bridges' paid advisors, is that correct?

[4470]

A. Correct.

Q. And your relations with him throughout this period of time that you have testified to have been in that relationship, is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. Employer and employee? A. Correct.

Q. And without going into details or specific instances, Harry Bridges has employed you and your organization to obtain for him figures and statistics on employer organizations and labor matters and what-not?

A. Yes. The union that Bridges represents has employed us.

Q. Now, he didn't advise you, did he?

A. What, sir?

Q. He didn't advise you or your concern as to what you should or should not do in all of your contacts? A. With him?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, I might say that in our contacts with him these matters were always discussed pro and con, and it wasn't a question of advising our organization because our organization per se was not in the negotiations, for example, or in the arbitration. But there was a mutual exchange of opinions and advice and suggestions.

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

Q. Well, did you or your organization get advices from Harry Bridges? [4471]

A. Only in those cases where he had anything to do with the matter, such as the longshore matters or when he was the CIO West Coast Director, in those cases involving CIO Unions where the Union called in Bridges. We didn't call him in.

Q. He was paying you, was he not, for your advice? A. No.

Q. And for the advice of your organization?

A. No. I think I had better qualify that.

Q. Wait! Can you answer that "Yes" or "No."

A. Well, I want to——

Q. (Interposing): Then you can qualify it.

A. Let me explain it to you.

Q. Just a moment! Let me do the questioning.

Mr. Grossman: It is quite obvious that this can't be answered "Yes" or "No."

Mr. Del Guercio: He hasn't stated it.

Presiding Inspector: I don't know.

The Witness: Ask the question again.

Mr. Del Guercio: Will you read it, please?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

The Witness: The answer there should be "Yes", when Bridges was directly representing the longshoremen. But "No", when Bridges sat in conferences involving other CIO Unions and where he sat as the CIO Director. In those cases [4472] we were paid by the particular Union that called us in. For example, the Newspaper Guild or the Ware-housemen. They paid us separately. But at their request they might have called Bridges in, and only in those cases did we advise with Bridges concerning their particular problems of these other unions.

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I move to strike the answer out on the theory that it was not responsive.

Mr. Grossman: It is perfectly responsive.

Presiding Inspector: I think that is responsive. It differentiates between two different things here, matters; both of which were covered by the question.

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. You and your organization claim to be experts in gathering statistics, do you not?

A. We do.

Q. And those statistics include matters pertaining to employment along the waterfront and the statistics concerning the ability or inability of the employer-shipowners to pay, say, certain wages claimed by the particular unions?

A. Well, they include all kinds of economic statistics that may be helpful in negotiations or arbitrations.

Q. And that is what you and your organization sell?

A. We do that, but we also prepare the exhibits, for example, for an arbitration proceeding and usually somebody [4473] from the staff will present the arbitration case.

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

Q. When you prepare these things you get paid for them, do you not? You sell them?

A. We get paid for all our services, Mr. Del Guercio.

Q. There isn't any service that you do that you don't get paid for? A. That is correct.

Q. That is not boughten and paid for?

A. That is correct. We are in the same capacity as a lawyer except that we do no legal work.

Q. Have you ever been a member of the Communist Party? A. No, sir.

Q. Have you ever been a member of the Professional Section of the Communist Party?

A. No, sir.

Q. At any time? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever attend any Communist Party meetings? A. No, sir.

Q. Open or secret? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever attend any rallies of the Communist Party? A. No, sir.

Q. Anywhere? [4474] A. No, sir.

Q. At any time? A. No.

Q. Did you ever belong to any—do you know what the term "Communist front organization" means?

A. Well, I have heard it discussed in the newspapers. I mean, I have read about it.

Q. Well, do you know of your own knowledge what they are?

A. I wouldn't say that I know their names, no.

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

Q. Are you familiar with the Congress of Democratic Action?

A. I have heard of the name.

Q. Did you ever sponsor such an organization?

A. Not to my knowledge. No, sir.

Q. Do you know who the sponsors of that organization are?

A. I wouldn't be able to tell you.

Q. What?

A. I wouldn't be able to tell you.

Q. Have you ever attended any meetings of the Congress of Democratic Action?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Well, what do you mean "not to your knowledge? [4475]

A. Not that I can recall.

Q. You may have attended without your knowledge?

A. The point is that I go to many meetings in the course of my work. I am not sure that I never attended any meeting that was sponsored by the group that you have named.

Q. Would that answer be the same with regards to attending Communist Party meetings?

A. No, sir. That would not be the same.

Q. Do you read the People's World?

A. Yes.

Q. Do your subscribe to it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you read an article in the People's World of March 31, 1939 reporting you as having been a sponsor of the Congress of Democratic Action? A. I did not.

Q. How long have you been subscribing to that?

A. Our office subscribes to it, as we do to all newspapers.

Q. Well, how long a period?

A. Well, I am trying to—I think for the last two years. I am not sure.

Q. Were you subscribing to it on March 31, 1939?

A. I am not sure. It may be. The point is that the paper comes into the office, but I do not read it every day. [4476] We receive over a hundred papers in our office through the week. It is impossible to cover all of them.

Q. I don't know whether you were asked this on direct examination or not. Were you asked where you were born? A. No, I was not.

Q. Where were you born?

A. Right here in San Francisco, south of the slot.

Q. Are you married? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever write any speech—well, strike that out.

That is all, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Anything further?

Mr. Grossman: Just a moment.

Mr. Del Guercio: There is just one more question, if your Honor please, if I may ask it.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

(Testimony of Sam Kagel.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Do you know Aaron Sapiro?

A. I met Aaron Sapiro once or twice.

Q. Have you ever admitted to anyone that you were a member of the Communist Party?

A. No, sir; because I am not a member of the Communist Party and never have been.

Mr. Grossman: Is that all? [4477]

Mr. Del Guercio: That is all.

Mr. Grossman: No questions.

Presiding Inspector: That is all.

The Witness: Thank you.

(Witness excused.)

Mrs. King: If your Honor please, the next witness isn't here, but we will go on with our reading and he will be here in the next fifteen or twenty minutes.

Presiding Inspector: Very well.

Mrs. King: I propose to read from page——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): May I be excused? I want to be excused for just a moment.

Presiding Inspector: Just wait a moment.

Mr. Del Guercio: It won't be necessary——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): Can we go on?

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: All right.

Mrs. King: I propose to read from page 3067 beginning on the fifth line to page 3073 to the point where the Government began to read on that page.

Presiding Inspector: What is the subject?

Mrs. King: It has some more to do with the set-up on the waterfront and immediately precedes the discussion of the Waterfront Worker and explains why the Waterfront Worker was undertaken.

"A. —— [4478]

Mr. Myron (Interposing): Just a moment!. We haven't found if yet.

Mrs. King: Oh, I beg your pardon.

Mr. Myron: We object to that, your Honor, as not having any reference to the admissions which have been introduced by the Government.

Presiding Inspector: I will have to look at it.

(The transcript containing the portion referred to was passed to the Presiding Inspector.)

Presiding Inspector: Where is this now, Mrs. King?

Mrs. King: It begins on the fifth line of page 3067.

Presiding Inspector: Where does it go?

Mrs. King: Down to the place where the Government itself read on page 3073, which is the last question. They started to read the last question on 3073.

Presiding Inspector: Did they read this 3066? Was that read?

Mrs. King: Yes. They read the part of 3066 to the bottom of the page. They started on 3065 to the bottom of page 3066, and what I am proposing to read really is the portion between the quote which the Government read on page 3066 and the portion which the Government started on page 3073, feeling that this is just a part of that general picture, that what was taken out is relevant to a clear understanding of the picture on the waterfront at that time. It is very much of the same character as the last quotation that I read last night. [4479]

Presiding Inspector: Now, where do you end?

Mrs. King: What?

Presiding Inspector: Where does your offer end?

Mrs. King: Beginning with the fifth line on page 3067 and ending three lines from the bottom of page 3073, which is the beginning of the Government's quotation.

Presiding Inspector: Of course, I haven't read the testimony offered, but it seems to me that this is on a separate subject.

Mrs. King: I don't believe it is, your Honor, for this reason: It seems it impinges on two subjects covered in the Government's quotations. In the first place, it explains the difficulties that the longshoremen were suffering, which were set forth in the Waterfront Worker. It also has a very clear bearing, it seems to me, on the question of why Mr. Bridges cooperated with the Marine Workers Industrial Union, particularly, towards the end of this quotation. It seems to me that if the Government is entitled to show his connection with the Waterfront Worker, and his connection with the Marine Workers Industrial Union, he is entitled to show the reasons for those connections.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. Is that what they introduced from his statements, what his connection with those matters may have been?

Mrs. King: They introduced the fact that he cooperated with [4480] the Marine Workers Industrial Union.

Presiding Inspector: Is that in here?

Mrs. King: That comes along.

Presiding Inspector: In what they have already introduced?

Mrs. King: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: Just tell me what the——

Mrs. King (Interposing): The material they introduced on the Marine Industrial Workers Union?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mrs. King: Just a moment. That was one of the four subjects that was specified as being introduced by them. They introduced material on the Marine Workers Industrial Union, and on the Waterfront Worker, and on the IWW, and on Communist literature purchased by Mr. Bridges. Those were the four subjects.

Mr. Myron: The testimony introduced by the Government was introduced as admissions made by the party at a former hearing. Now, any evidence introduced by Alien's counsel must be introduced at this time to qualify or explain the subject matter of those admissions. We say that this doesn't even remotely refer to the subject matter of the admissions introduced by the Government.

Presiding Inspector: It strikes me that it is remote, Mrs. King.

Mrs. King: Just a minute. At the very end there of their quo- [4481] tation,——

Presiding Inspector: Of course, I agree with your general principle that you are entitled to anything that explains or qualifies the admissions, the matter which they have introduced as admissions.

Mrs. King: For instance, on page 3073 you find this statement:

"When the strike was originally called were there any unions a part of it other than the International Longshoremen?"

"A. No, they were the only ones that struck on May 9, 1934."

And then it goes on to say:

"Q. Did you get any support from the International organization at all, or was it a local situation?

"A. None whatsoever."

Now, you will find in the portions that the Government read that they call attention to the fact that the Marine Workers Industrial Union went out on strike the next day. This entire picture of the strike gives the background against which Mr. Bridges cooperated with the Marine Workers Industrial Union, a large functioning organization on the West Coast, which was the first of the unions to go out in support of this strike after it was called. They went out on May 7th.

Now, in view of that situation, his relationship to the Marine Workers Industrial Union, which the Government calls at- [4482] tention to, is very different from what it might have been if there had been no strike situation, if there had been a functioning union of the International Longshoremen's Association.

I do not see how you can understand the admissions which the Government has introduced without a picture of the situation against which those admissions must be judged. It is part of that picture. The fact is that they read up to a point, and then skipped this portion that I am proposing to read, and then read right after it. This seems to me as a part of that story, as an integral part of it.

Presiding Inspector: It is the general practice to give wide latitude in allowing explanatory statements. I am not fully convinced that this is explanatory but, nevertheless, in the interest of fairness I will take it and let you read it.

Mr. Myron: Over the Government's objection?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mrs. King: (Reading from transcript of previous hearing):

"A. It is generally known how a company union functions.

"The company union had a closed shop agreement. Everybody had to be a member of the company union. It was simply a device where you were supposed to bring any complaints you had against the employers to the officials of the company union. The minute you done that, the officials of the company union went to that particular employer and said, 'Now, get rid of him fast.' And you were just blacklisted. [4483]

"Therefore, when you had a choice between being short-changed in your wages, or one thing and another, on the one hand, and the choice of reporting it to the company, so-called, union, on the other hand, you would be blacklisted off the waterfront. You took the short change and you took the other abuses and you generally kept quiet about it.

"There were a few of us that fought it. I got into trouble with it again around 1929 and I had another 18 months' layoff.

"Generally, the men were pretty well beaten and disorganized at that time and it was very hard to do anything about it.

"Q. Did the company union have union meetings?

"A. Of a type.

"Q. What do you mean by that?

"A. Well, there was a group of these bosses and the officials, and a little clique that used to hang around the company union hall and play gambling games; they had a lot of card-sharks around there, people that used to handle crooked dice—of course, every longshoreman knew better than to get into one of those games—and this was the group that used to make up the union meeting.

"Of course, if any ordinary working longshoreman raised a protest in the union meeting—we tried it once—why, we got thrown down the stairs, as a rule.

"Q. I take it there wasn't a great deal of democracy [4484] in the country, in those unions?

"A. No, I would say not.

"Q. Now, I interrupted you a moment ago when you were about to describe the activities of the union in 1933.

"A. Well, beginning with our—as far as the waterfront was concerned, I have already dealt with the longshoremen. The new deal came in, I think it was in April—I mean, the NRA came in after the election campaign, and I think it took effect in April. Under the NRA there began to be quite a surge for organization, and we already had the apparatus laid.

"In other words, there was a group of 15 or 20 of us functioning on the waterfront by that time. We had an organizational apparatus, so it was not very long under the NRA, with the organization incentive that that gave, until we had a union organized on the waterfront.

"Between April and June, 1933, we organized a majority of the longshoremen into a union and got a charter in the ILA, A F of L. And then came the task, of course, of getting the union into shape.

"Also, we had to give some attention to the other organizations on the waterfront. The seamen had no union to speak of; they also had what was in effect a company union. As a matter of fact, our company union headquarters were in the same headquarters as the Seamen's Union, and Scharanberg, who was an official of the Seamen's Union, worked very [4485] closely with the company union officials. In other words, it was an employers' set-up all the way down the line.

"The Seamen's Union was a company union, to all intents and purposes, the same as our union, so we couldn't deal with one without very well dealing with the other, and we would have to give some attention to the organization of Seamen. We tried that in 1933, but we were generally rebuffed by their officials, who, in effect, said that, "We don't want anything to do with the longshoremen."

"So we went ahead by ourselves, and so we went through all the organizational stages, and this and that and the other thing, and generally had the union in pretty fair shape by January, 1934.

"Q. Meanwhile, what was the condition of, for instance, the Marine Cooks and Stewards, the Marine Firemen?

"A. Those unions remained in that company union state until May, 1934, when we was able to put sufficient pressure on them to force them on strike.

"Q. And were there any developments in the Longshoremen's Union between January '34 and the strike, or was it just a continued——

"A. (Interrupting): Well, it was in June, very shortly after our union got started, the Longshoremen's Union, that we found out that the president of it was an employer's agent, employed and paid by the Industrial Association of [4486] San Francisco—Lee J. Holman. He got himself elected as president of our union by connivance, by the support of the Labor Council, by the support of the probation officer in San Francisco, and apparently a little help from the police department and what-not.

"So we had to organize to correct that situation, and that is where we formed the equality group.

"Q. When that was formed, as closely as you can fix it?

"A. As far as I can recall, in June, 1933. In addition to that, many of our members, as soon as you got active in our organization you were discriminated against on the waterfront. So we had some 14 men at that time who had been fired from their job for joining our union, even though there was a great to-do about the NRA.

"It was my idea and the idea of other people around me that to break the back of the company union we had to break its back in the place where it was the strongest, and that was the Matson Navigation dock. There had been four men, four of our best men fired from that dock for talking about and being active in our union, and eventually we organized a strike against that company in October, 1933, and won.

"Q. Now, was that an I. L. A. strike?

"A. That was an I. L. A. strike, yes, by the local union here. We had the four men reinstated on the job, and of course that—we also organized a little business there where [4487] we burned our company union books, that is, a lot of the people that hadn't thrown them away. We made a bonfire and burned them in front of the Matson Company at that time, and of course all these things gave an added drive to our organization.

"From then on the organization started to move; until January, 1934, when we were up against the international and district officials. We sent two men from our local, myself and Dietrich, to visit the other locals on the Coast to demand a convention be called, to unite the Coast. We had already built up our local; the next step was to unite all the locals on the Coast on one program, and for that reason it was necessary to get a convention called, a Coast convention, and it was necessary to have it called by elected delegates, not by appointed delegates.

"There had already been one convention called where all the delegates were appointed by the international or district officers, and the membership had nothing to do with it; so we repudiated all the actions of that convention, mainly through the lead of the small group that we had organized in the Albion Hall, and eventually we sent myself and Dietrich in a delegation to visit the other ports.

"The other ports all voted in favor of calling a convention in San Francisco, February, 1934. At that convention the demands for the 1934 longshoremen's strike were drawn up, and [4488] from that convention submitted to a referendum vote. Later on, of course, after the strike was originally set for March 7, 1934, at the request of the President we postponed the strike and it was eventually called on May 9, 1934.

"Q. Now, meanwhile what had happened to the company union, before the strike?

"A. We got rid of it. There was—it just folded up.

"Q. What were the demands made upon which the strike was based?

"A. Wages at that time were 85 cents an hour. The demands were for $1 an hour straight time, $1.50 overtime; a 6-hour day, instead of the 8-hour day; hiring through the union hiring halls, that is, establishing and hiring through union hiring halls; and no separate port agreements. They were the four demands.

"In other words, one Coast agreement and no separate port agreements. The reason we put that in is the past history of the Pacific Coast had shown that it had always been an instrument of the employers to sign separate agreements with the ports and play them one against the other, so we were determined to get one Coastwise agreement. Ultimately we did, of course.

"Q. When the strike was originally called, were there any unions a part of it other than the International Longshoremen? [4489]

"A. No, they were the only ones that struck on May 9, 1934.

"Q. Did you get any support from the international organization at all, or was it a local situation?

"A. None whatsoever. We never have—the International Longshoremen's Association at no time got any support from the International in any strike. All they got was threats to revoke their charter if they struck; and one thing and another."

[4490]

I am now turning to page 3075. I believe that is immediately after the Government's quotation beginning on 3073.

Presiding Inspector: 3075? Whereabouts on 3075?

Mrs. King: At the beginning of page 3075. On page 3076 you will see some mention of the Marine Workers Industrial Union. The quotation goes more on the picture of the general strike as it occurred——

Mr. Myron (Interposing): What is your contention? That it refers to what admission introduced by the Government?

Mrs. King: That it refers, as before: to the reason why the Waterfront Worker was started and also particularly to the Marine Workers Industrial Union and the reason why Mr. Bridges was ready at that time to cooperate with the Marine Workers Industrial Union, and it gives the entire picture of the strike situation at that time.

Now, I would like to read from the beginning of page 3075 to the last question on page 3092. It doesn't seem to me that the relation of Mr. Bridges to the Marine Workers Industrial Union is possible to be understood without a picture of the situation, the background against which it arose.

Presiding Inspector: How far do you read?

Mrs. King: Down to the last question on 3092.

If your Honor please, at this time I believe that the witness has come in and we would like to have the morning recess now and go on with the witness, if we can and then [4491] take this up at some later time.

Presiding Inspector: Very well.

(Whereupon a short recess was taken.)

Presiding Inspector: Call the witness, if you will.

ROSCO GEORGE CRAYCRAFT

called as a witness on behalf of the Alien, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Will you state your name, please?

A. Rosco George Craycraft.

Q. Spell it, please.

A. C-r-a-y-c-r-a-f-t.

Q. How is your first name spelled, Mr. Craycraft?

A. R-o-s-c-o.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. Will you please state where you reside?

A. 025 Southwest Curry, Portland.

Q. Are you a man of family?

A. Wife, two children.

Q. Do they reside with you at that address?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is your occupation?

A. International Executive Board member of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union.

Q. When did you acquire that office, please?

A. I think in the spring of '39.

Q. The spring of 1939? [4492]

A. 1939.

Q. Now, prior to becoming a member of the International Executive Board of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union did you work as a working longshoreman?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Beginning when, please? A. '29.

Q. 1929? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And where? In what city did you work as a longshoreman? A. Portland entirely.

Q. Portland what?

A. Entirely; all the time in Portland.

Q. That is, Portland, Oregon?

A. Portland, Oregon.

Q. For how long did you continue to work as a longshoreman in Portland after you once began in 1929? A. Ever since.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. Have you held other union offices besides the ones that you have just mentioned?

A. I was Secretary of the Portland Local in the years 1937 and 1938.

Q. Is that the Portland Local Union of the Longshoremen? A. Yes, sir. [4493]

Q. And in 1936 and 1937 it was, was it not, a part of the then known International Longshoremen's Association? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Subsequently transferred its affiliation to the CIO, and became the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, did it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you hold the office of Secretary of the Portland longshore local union for two years?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 1936 and 1937? A. No, 1937 and 1938.

Q. I beg your pardon. Now, prior to 1937 did you hold any office or position for the union?

A. I was a member of the Local Executive Board from 1933 up until the time I went in as Secretary of the union in 1937, outside of one six-months period in '35.

Q. How was your selection to that position made?

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, if your Honor please, we have listened to all these preliminary questions for about five minutes.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. We know who he is now. This is all for identification.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, it is. Not just for identification, but also to bring out sufficiently personal data to enable the trier of the facts to take into consideration those data in [4494] determining the weight of the evidence.

Presiding Inspector: Well, I call that "identification".

Mr. Gladstein: All right.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. In 1934, Mr. Craycraft, did you hold any office in connection with the strike?

A. I was Chairman of the Local Strike Committee.

Q. Did you hold any similar position in 1936 during the strike of that year?

A. I was Chairman of the Relief Committee. [4495]

Q. Do you know a man named Maurice J. Cannalonga? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you first become acquainted with him?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I will object to any further questioning of this witness' relations with Maurice Cannalonga. Apparently the Court knows what he has in mind.

Presiding Inspector: I think I do. I have heard some statement from Mr. Gladstein along that line.

Mr. Del Guercio: You know the circumstances under which this alleged statement was—I say "alleged statement" because it can't be called by any other name—was made and that this witness was brought down here in connection with the same matter.

Presiding Inspector: I think it is a troublesome matter. I think I will take the testimony.

Mr. Gladstein: Read the question, please.

Presiding Inspector: It is over your objection, Mr. Del Guercio, and very properly you should make the objection.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. During the 1936 and 1937 strike.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Just very briefly, and in a general way, Mr. Craycraft, please state how that acquaintance was formed? [4496]

A. Maurice Cannalonga was a member of the Strike Committee, representing the Marine Firemen's Union. I was a member of the Strike Committee representing the longshore union. We held Strike Committee meetings practically daily.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. In what city? A. In Portland.

Q. Was this throughout the duration of that strike? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And is that the way in which you became acquainted with him?

Presiding Inspector: That is what he said. You asked him that.

The next question.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Since the 1936-'37 strike have you had occasion to see Mr. Cannalonga? A. I have.

Q. When was the first time?

A. April 30 of this year.

Q. How do you fix the date?

A. We had a special meeting of the longshore union called in Portland on that date.

Q. And did you see him on the same day?

A. I seen him on the same day of this special meeting.

Q. Before or after the meeting? [4497]

A. I seen him before the meeting and after the meeting.

Q. Where did you see him when you saw him before the meeting?

A. On the West Kussetta—K-u-s-s-e-t-t-a—I believe it is spelled.

Mr. Del Guercio: What?

The Witness: West Kussetta.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. A ship? A. Yes.

Q. Where was that ship docked?

A. At Irving Dock.

Q. In Portland? A. In Portland.

Q. Do you recall what time of day it was when you saw him?

A. Probably 6:30 in the evening, just prior to the time that the membership meeting would take place.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Presiding Inspector: Are you having some difficulty in speaking? It is difficult to hear you even at this short distance?

The Witness: I know; I have sinus trouble.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Were you with him on the ship on that occasion? A. Yes, sir. [4498]

Q. Where on the ship?

A. I met him in his room on the ship and just talked to him briefly. There were a couple of other shipmates of his in the room. I told him that I had a special meeting to attend of my own local union and if the meeting didn't go too long I would come down and see him again that night, or I would come down the following morning.

Presiding Inspector: When was this?

The Witness: On April 30.

Presiding Inspector: What day of the week?

The Witness: Wednesday.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did you, on that occasion, tell him, or did he ask you what purpose, if any, you had in mind in seeing him?

Mr. Myron: That is a leading question. You should ask for the conversation.

Presiding Inspector: I don't see how the conversation of April 30th has the slightest materiality. He was sworn as a witness after that.

Mr. Gladstein: Pardon?

Presiding Inspector: He was sworn as a witness after April 30th, wasn't he?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Mr. Gladstein: No.

Presiding Inspector: When was he sworn?

Mr. Gladstein: Prior to April 30th. [4499]

Mr. Grossman: What is the date?

Presiding Inspector: I don't know, but I supposed it was before. What date was he sworn?

Mr. Gladstein: I can't tell you the exact date right now. I know it was prior to April 30th. Mr. Cannalonga testified I would say, approximately ten days or so previously.

Mr. Del Guercio: April 17th.

Presiding Inspector: Let us find out why he went to see him.

Mr. Gladstein: I have been told that Mr. Cannalonga testified on April 17th in this proceeding.

Presiding Inspector: Very well.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Would you state, Mr. Craycraft——

Presiding Inspector: I thought it was after that.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Will you state what occasioned you to go to Mr. Cannalonga on the ship on April 30th?

A. I was returning home after I had attended the ILWU Convention in Los Angeles. I stayed over in San Francisco here several days. I picked up a paper one day and I read where Maurice Cannalonga had testified in the Bridges trial, and at the bottom of the article his answer——

Presiding Inspector: Never mind what his answer was, what was in the newspaper. You read something in the news- [4500] paper that he testified to.

The Witness: His statement in the newspaper—

Presiding Inspector: Never mind his statement in the newspaper.

Mr. Gladstein: This goes——

Presiding Inspector: We will exclude any newspaper statement. He read something about Mr. Cannalonga.

Mr. Gladstein: What he read in the newspaper doesn't bind Mr. Cannalonga, the Government, as to the testimony, but it does show——

Presiding Inspector: I may bind me and I am excluding it. Go ahead.

Mr. Gladstein: How can it bind you? It goes to the motivation——

Presiding Inspector: I am not going to take it at this time.

Mr. Gladstein: I offer to prove——

Presiding Inspector: I won't accept your offer to prove.

Mr. Gladstein: I have a right to make an offer of proof in the record.

Presiding Inspector: No, you haven't. Go ahead. He read something in the newspaper about Mr. Cannalonga.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Well, Mr. Craycraft, let me ask you this: Did you read something in the newspaper concerning

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Mr. Cannalonga [4501] which had any connection with your going to see Mr. Cannalonga?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to the form of the question.

Presiding Inspector: I will take that.

A. Yes.

Mr. Gladstein: Do I understand your Honor won't permit me to bring out what this was?

Presiding Insepctor: No. We don't care what was in a newspaper. How is that material?

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What was your purpose, Mr. Craycraft, in attempting to speak with Mr. Cannalonga?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that as immaterial as to what purpose he had.

Presiding Inspector: What did he do? Let us hear what he did, and the purpose will probably be obvious.

Mr. Gladstein: I will withdraw that.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. After reading this item in the newspaper what, if anything, did you do in connection with attempting to talk with Mr. Cannalonga?

A. After reading the article I went up to see Mr. Bridges, and I told him I was acquainted with Mr. ——

Presiding Inspector: You saw Mr. Bridges. We won't have any conversation with Mr. Bridges.

Go ahead. You saw Mr. Bridges. Then what did you do? [4502]

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

A. (Continuing) I asked him——

Presiding Inspector: Not any conversation. Where did you go then?

A. (Continuing) I went back to Portland to attend to my regular duties in my capacity as Board Member.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Executive Board Member?

A. Executive Board Member; yes.

Q. What efforts, if any, did you make to find out where Cannalonga was?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I will object to that. It doesn't make any difference.

Presiding Inspector: I will allow it.

A. That was a request I made of Mr. Bridges to try to locate Mr. Cannalonga so I could speak to him and——

Presiding Inspector: Didn't you understand me to tell you not to give the conversation with Mr. Bridges?

Mr. Grossman: That was one of the efforts he made——

Presiding Inspector: Just a moment. It was after you left Mr. Bridges that you were asked what efforts you made. Did you understand me first?

The Witness: I thought according——

Presiding Inspector: Just a moment. Did you understand me?

The Witness: Not in that way. [4503]

Presiding Inspector: You didn't understand that

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

I ruled that you could not give the conversation with Bridges?

The Witness: I don't see how I could answer the question without answering that way.

Presiding Inspector: Did your understand my ruling?

The Witness: I will have to say "No" to that.

Presiding Inspector: Be careful. [4504]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did you after your return to Portland learn that Mr. Cannalonga was working on the West Kusetta? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember when that information came to you?

A. On the evening of April 30th Mr. Rodman came to my house and told me that Cannalonga was working on the——

Mr. Myron: (Interposing) We object to that conversation.

Presiding Inspector: We don't care for any conversations.

Mr. Gladstein: All right.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. You learned on April 30th, is that correct?

A. That's right.

Q. Was it early evening or late evening?

A. Early evening around 5:00 or 5:30.

Q. After getting that information as to where Mr. Cannalonga was what, if anything, did you do in the way of an effort to talk with Mr. Cannalonga?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

A. I went immediately down to the ship and held a short conversation with Mr. Cannalonga.

Q. Did he recognize you?

A. Yes, sir. He seemed very well pleased to meet [4505] me.

Q. Was he friendly?

A. Yes, sir. He offered me a drink. Very friendly.

Q. How long were you with him that first occasion?

A. Not over ten minutes.

Q. Will you give all the conversation that you had with him that you remember?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I will exclude it. Now, you may ask him if he said anything that was contrary to what Mr. Cannalonga said and quote it to him and ask him whether he said that or that in substance, leading him.

Mr. Gladstein: I am willing to do that, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: That's the way to proceed, I think.

Mr. Del Guercio: We will object also to that, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I know. But I will take it over your objection.

Mr. Gladstein: Are you ready, your Honor?

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. On that first occasion, Mr. Craycraft, did Mr. Cannalonga state to you anything to the effect that he had given testimony in the Bridges case which was untrue? A. No.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that. [4506]

Presiding Inspector: He said "No".

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did he state to you on that first occasion anything concerning the testimony that he had given? A. No.

Q. In essence did anything occur other than a general discussion?

A. That is all, and to make arrangements for another meeting.

Q. And what were those arrangements?

A. I was to either come back after the union meeting that night or come down and see him the next morning.

Q. When is the next time after this first conversation on April 30th that you saw Mr. Cannalonga?

A. There wasn't a quorum at the meeting, so no meeting was held. I went back down to the ship at approximately 8:00 or 9:00 o'clock.

Q. Did you see Mr. Cannalonga then?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where on the ship?

A. First in his stateroom, then we went back to his little workshop between No. 4 and No. 5 hatch.

Q. Who, if anybody, was with you and Cannalonga on that occasion?

A. I don't know the shipmates on the boat who were in his room, but he had his radio playing. So he requested [4507] that we go back to his workshop and we went back alone.

Q. On that occasion, beginning at approximately nine o'clock in the evening, as you have stated, how long were you with him?

A. Oh, I would say, approximately 20, 25 minutes.

Q. On that occasion did you have a discussion with him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In that discussion did Mr. Cannalonga make any statements with reference to the testimony he had previously given in the Bridges case?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, if your Honor please.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

A. Yes.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What were those statements?

Presiding Inspector: No, not generally. Only contradictory statements.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, of course, this witness didn't hear the Cannalonga testimony.

Presiding Inspector: No, but you can suggest it to him.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, I could suggest things to him. That is true.

Presiding Inspector: This is for the sole purpose of [4508] impeaching credibility of Mr. Cannalonga, as I understand it.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes. And there are also other things that we are interested in bringing out, too.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

It isn't only that. It isn't merely that he made statements contradictory to his testimony, but that he made other statements which we feel are very material.

Presiding Inspector: I don't know whether we will take those other statements. Now, we will take first the ones that are contradictory. Let us take up one thing at a time. I am trying to confine this witness to this subject now of contradictory statements, and it is in view of some things that have been said that I have acted a little sharply with this witness.

Mr. Gladstein: All right, your Honor.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, Mr. Craycraft, on that occasion in the evening or at night April 30th of this year did Mr. Cannalonga make any statements to you along the line that he had given untrue testimony or had made untrue statements to the FBI?

A. That is correct.

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I will object to that unless counsel states the exact——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Well, I think he is going to follow it up. I will let it stand with that understanding.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes. My next question is, What were [4509] those statements?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What were those statements, please, Mr. Craycraft?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Mr. Myron: Of course, the Government objects to this line of inquiry.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, I know. But I have ruled that under the peculiar circumstances in this case I will broaden the usual rule of the common law and allow contradictory statements to be shown. I have already ruled that in relation to the testimony of Mr. Shoemaker, and I am going to follow it in this case.

Mr. Del Guercio: The Court has mentioned "peculiar circumstances" surrounding the taking of the statement.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. A subpoena was issued and it couldn't be served. The trial is still in progress. There has been no possibility evidently of producing the witness after the subpoena was issued. Under those circumstances I will take the contradictory statements.

Mr. Del Guercio: Does the Court——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) As bearing on his credibility.

Mr. Del Guercio: Does the Court also have in mind that the reports that were submitted to him in connection with the efforts made by the officers of the Immigration and Naturalization Service in looking for Cannalonga and that [4510] those efforts are continuing?

Presiding Inspector: Yes, I know that. Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: And also——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) But it would only postpone taking the testimony of this witness.

(Testimony of Rosco George Crayeraft.)

Mr. Del Guercio: What?

Presiding Inspector: It would only postpone taking the testimony of this witness. If it is on that ground, if you think that Mr. Cannalonga will be produced I will postpone this examination.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will assure the Court that if there is anything that the Government, the Immigration Service and the FBI can do to locate Cannalonga it is being done.

Presiding Inspector: Well then, let us take some testimony as to when Cannalonga was last seen and something of that kind.

Mr. Del Guercio: What I had in mind, if the Court please, also in connection with these peculiar circumstances——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I thought that Mr. Cannalonga would in all probability not be found.

Mr. Del Guercio: I don't——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) You don't think that is justifiable?

Mr. Del Guercio: Justifiable.

Presiding Inspector: You do not. [4511]

Mr. Grossman: Your Honor, if we wait on Mr. Cannalonga that means waiting on the line of witnesses such as Mr. Crayeraft, which is going to necessarily mean—and I am sure it can be avoided—a delay in the trial of this case for that reason, because I do not think that it is fair or the law requires that we be asked to put on this type of evidence after we have closed our direct case. I think we have a right to put it on in our direct rebuttal case and we are coming very close to the end of our case, and if we are going to delay it is going to mean that. And I think your Honor should bear that in mind. It is liable to mean a delay, which we don't think is necessary. And finally is the fact that your Honor has just mentioned, in any event, no matter what Mr. Cannalonga says, if he does appear, the testimony of these witnesses or Mr. Craycraft in particular is relevant and will be given in any event unless he admits the whole of the testimony, which is exceedingly unlikely, in all its details. If there are any differences, as your Honor states, we can't put on Mr. Craycraft. Considering that I don't think it is worth while holding up the hearing. If, as Mr. Del Guercio says, all the energies of the Immigration and Naturalization Service and FBI and all the other services he mentions have been working on this for two weeks, starting from the same city at least an hour or, let us say, two hours after he was last seen; if after that they haven't found him in two weeks, though let us grant for the purpose [4512] of argument that they are bending all their energies, still after two weeks I think it is reasonable to assume that he is not going to appear at least within the next two or three days. And that means a delay of our hearing.

Mr. Del Guercio: If the Court please, while these statements are being made we may just as well correct every statement made by counsel.

In the first place, he misquoted me. I said that every effort was being made by the Immigration and Naturalization Service and the FBI. Now, the FBI haven't entered into it until just recently. Of course, this is an Immigration case, primarily. But there are other circumstances that we want to point out to the Court in connection with this matter now under consideration, and that is the "peculiar circumstances" that I thought the Court had in mind. And I think that for that purpose we should review shortly, because we didn't have an opportunity to argue the matter, and the circumstances are this:

We must first consider that a request for a subpoena, as I understand it, and as the record will show, was not made until Wednesday morning. I believe I am correct in that. If I am not correct, counsel there for the defense will correct me.

Presiding Inspector: I think that Mrs. King said that it was Wednesday morning. [4513]

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes. Now, it is admitted here that Mr. Gladstein, an attorney for Mr. Bridges, saw Cannalonga at Portland, Oregon on a Saturday preceding that Wednesday. It is admitted by counsel that he had had a certain conversation with Cannalonga at that time. He therefore had an opportunity—the witness was available then. A statement has been made that Mr. Wixon, who was the District Director of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, who was issuing subpoenas, was not available on Saturday and, further, that he had told Mrs. King and counsel that he would not issue subpoenas on Saturday. We have Mr. Wixon in the Court room here to give the lie to that.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Mr. Grossman: That statement was not made, Mr. Del Guercio, and the record will show that statement was not made.

Mr. Del Guercio: The record will speak for itself.

Mr. Myron: The record will speak for itself.

Mr. Grossman: The——

Mr. Myron (Interposing): The record speaks for itself.

Presiding Inspector: Let Mr. Del Guercio make his statement. Then I will hear you.

Mr. Del Guercio: The record further shows that Mr. Gladstein admitted seeing Cannalonga on a Sunday, the following Sunday, that is, prior to this Wednesday. It further shows that persons working for Mr. Gladstein and for others saw that witness on a Monday and also on a Tuesday. So that [4514] Mr. Cannalonga was available to them on Saturday, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. So that they can't come in and say that the witness was not available and, therefore, "We ask that his statement that he made", if it was a statement, "be admitted."

He was available to them on those four days, Saturdays, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, and so the ground on which Cannalonga's alleged statement was admitted I think was erroneous, and improper.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Presiding Inspector: It may be.

Mr. Del Guercio: And I think on that ground the Court should reconsider this decision.

Presiding Inspector: No. I am going to let it stand as it is. Now, I want to hear about why Mr. Cannalonga isn't here. When did this man last see him?

Mr. Gladstein: I am perfectly willing to have that answered.

Mr. Del Guercio: We will object also to this testimony, to taking any further testimony at this time.

Mr. Gladstein: I would like to hear that objection. Do I understand that your Honor wants to know from Mr. Craycraft when the last time was that Mr. Craycraft saw Mr. Cannalonga?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Gladstein: And that Mr. Del Guercio is objecting [4515] to that testimony, too?

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes, that is right.

Presiding Inspector: I would like to know when the last time is.

Mr. Gladstein: Your Honor, I have no objection to your asking him.

Presiding Inspector: When was the last time you saw Cannalonga?

The Witness: On Monday night, approximately 9:00 o'clock, and I just don't remember the exact date. It is the first Monday in May.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Presiding Inspector: Where was that?

The Witness: On the West Kussetta Terminal No. 1, Portland.

Presiding Inspector: And you had a talk with him at that time?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

Presiding Inspector: You knew he had signed on for the voyage, or hadn't he?

The Witness: Not at that time. He was trying to get a man to take his place and he was coming to San Francisco with me voluntarily without a subpoena.

Presiding Inspector: When was that voluntary statement of Mr. Cannalonga?

The Witness: On Monday night.

Presiding Inspector: And then did you go to look for [4516] him after that?

The Witness: No. I came on to Frisco with the understanding with him that I would meet him in Frisco on Tuesday night, that he wanted to go to Seattle first before coming to Frisco.

Presiding Inspector: Ask your next question, please.

Mr. Gladstein: May I have the last question?

Presiding Inspector: He said he wanted to go to Seattle, in substance, and that he would then come out here.

Mr. Gladstein: No, I mean the last question that I asked before this began.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as follows:

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

"Q. What were those statements, please, Mr. Craycraft?")

Presiding Inspector: This is over your objection.

A. When we first went back to Cannalonga's machine shop he seemed to want to talk awful bad and he wanted to explain his——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): Never mind! Just tell us what the statements were.

The Witness: You want me to give it all, just what he said?

Presiding Inspector: In answer to what his statements were.

A. (Continuing): He stated that he had come out of [4517] the Marine Hospital in Seattle with an injured hip and he was down to the Firemen's Hall Monday.

Presiding Inspector: I think that you should be confined to telling what statements there were which he said were false. That is the question, isn't it?

Mr. Gladstein: Well, I am perfectly willing to have that question asked of the witness, but I understand now he is going to give you, your Honor, his best recollection of the exact statements that Mr. Cannalonga made.

Presiding Inspector: We don't care for the whole statements.

Mr. Gladstein: Not the whole ones?

Presiding Inspector: No.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Craycraft, will you give us those statements——.

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): We are taking this on the ground of impeachment on the ground of contradictory statements.

Mr. Gladstein: All right.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Will you relate the statements which Mr. Cannalonga made that night which specifically referred to the testimony that he gave in this case?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, if your Honor please. [4518]

Presiding Inspector: Yes, I will take it.

A. Well, he said he was forced to testify falsely through intimidation of the FBI.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did he make any——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): If your Honor please, I ask that that statement be excluded. It wasn't responsive.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, I think that is responsive, and I think that is contradictory.

Mr. Del Guercio: It wasn't a contradictory statement, certainly.

Presiding Inspector: I think it is contradictory. I think he said here under oath and all the sanction of cross examination that he was not intimidated.

Mr. Gladstein: That is right, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: And I will take this statement for what it is worth, this statement made in the cabin or on the deck of this vessel.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did he make any other statements, Mr. Craycraft, to you on the occasion that you are talking about, with respect to the intimidation?

A. He said they was holding 20 years Mann Act charge over his head.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think that you can go [4519] into that. He said he was intimidated.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, but——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): That the statement was false.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes. And he gave as part of his——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): What difference does that make?

Mr. Gladstein: Well, it is very important, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Well it might be important, but you would have to show the relevancy. You would have to show it ordinarily by direct testimony.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, we are.

Presiding Inspector: How can you get it in through a statement of Mr. Cannalonga which can't in any way be tested by cross examination?

Mr. Gladstein: Well, your Honor, this is the point. The witness is testifying as to a conversation that he had with Mr. Cannalonga. Now, it may have been, hypothetically, that when they say, well, the person may have said "I gave false testimony," and stop. Or he may have said, "I perjured myself," and stop. Or he may say that "I was forced to give false testimony because they were holding a certain charge over my head and I couldn't help myself," and stop with the "period" there. And you are entitled to give the entire sentence. [4520]

Presiding Inspector: What you are entitled to ask is this: "Did he say this or this in substance, that the testimony that he gave here was under threats or intimidation?" If he said that or that in substance, you may give it.

Mr. Gladstein: All right. Then I can ask him what were the words that he said.

Presiding Inspector: No. I am not sure that you can go any further than that.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, suppose the witness says "Yes" in response to that question,——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): Well, do you want to open up the question of whether they were in fact threats or intimidation?

Mr. Gladstein: I certainly do.

Presiding Inspector: You have got to show that by someone else than by the statement of Mr. Cannalonga.

Mr. Gladstein: Why, your Honor, my understanding of this administrative proceeding is that you have not yet excluded testimony solely on the ground that it was hearsay. The only objection that can be made to this testimony is that it is hearsay as to the fact of whether or not the FBI intimidated him.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. But here is a charge against the Government institution based on pure hearsay from a man that you say is not worthy of belief.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is exactly what counsel is doing and [4521] making a serious charge.

Mr. Gladstein: And he testified falsely. It is our intention to prove that out of his own mouth. If we had him here we think we could force him to admit that.

Mr. Del Guercio: I question that.

Presiding Inspector: You hope. You may show any contradictory statements.

Mr. Gladstein: All right.

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead. Let us go ahead with that.

Mr. Gladstein: Before I go on with the next question, will your Honor please keep in mind when Mr. Cannalonga was on the witness stand he made a number of answers to the question that Mr. Del Guercio asked him, "Were you intimidated, threatened or coerced by the FBI?" One of his answers was "Well, yes and no." Subsequently when Mr. Del Guercio continued to ask him that question he said "Well, no." And I think I have quoted the record exactly on that.

We wish to prove that Mr. Cannalonga not only made these statements to the effect that he had been intimidated, but we wish to prove the words that he used as nearly as the present witness can recollect them. But, after all, when he answers "Yes" on the question, "Did Mr. Cannalonga tell you that he had been intimidated?" that is in a general sense a conclusion. When he says "Yes"—— [4522]

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): Why didn't you take it by cross examination? [4523]

Mr. Gladstein: We hadn't had any conversations with him at that time. We did test it by cross examination.

Presiding Inspector: What did he say?

Mr. Gladstein: He said he had been intimidated.

Presiding Inspector: I am going to let you show that he now says that was false.

Mr. Gladstein: All right.

Presiding Inspector: That is all you want, isn't it?

Mr. Grossman: May I ask you for this ruling: You have indicated——

Presiding Inspector: I will hear the second counsel now.

Mr. Grossman: This is a different argument that hasn't been made. You indicated that because the statements of Mr. Cannalonga are hearsay, which is the only legal objection that could be made to them, they are not going to be admissions on a question of whether he was intimidated, rather, how he was intimidated.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think the question of whether he was or was not, in fact, intimidated is material at this point. It may become so. But the question here is, and I have asked Mr. Gladstein to confine himself to it, is as to whether he made contradictory statements.

Mr. Grossman: I don't think, your Honor——

Presiding Inspector: This witness has testified that he said that he was intimidated. [4524]

That finished that on that point.

Mr. Grossman: Isn't it true, your Honor, that even in the most technical common law courts hearsay is admissible if it is against interest?

Now, here this admission, which is sought to be introduced, is an admission of the commission of a crime, two crimes; one, a crime of coming down here and committing perjury; and another crime, which I need not describe because I am not certain of the statute. If this were in the common law technical jurisdiction such hearsay would be admissible as against interest. If that is true, then I don't see any legal objection that can possibly be made to it.

Presiding Inspector: I never heard of that rule that you cite.

Mr. Grossman: Secondly, your Honor, we have had hearsay admissible in this proceeding——

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Grossman (Continuing): ——we have had hearsay admissible in this proceeding on the basis, I suppose, that for practical reasons it was impossible to bring the person here for examination. As a matter of fact, I can cite examples in the Government's case where a man——

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): If your Honor please, I object to any such——

Presiding Inspector: Just a moment. I can't hear counsel's argument. [4525]

Mr. Del Guercio: He is not arguing, but making a speech.

Presiding Inspector: I do not care, I have got to hear him. Then I will hear you. We must have some order here. I know it is difficult to sit by and hear these things said, but at the same time we have got to have some order in this hearing.

Go ahead.

Mr. Grossman: To go on—I can cite example after example——

Presiding Inspector: I am not blaming you, you understand.

Mr. Grossman: I can cite example after example of what has gone into this hearing and——

Presiding Inspector: Mr. Grossman, I have said that we would confine it to this point at first.

Mr. Grossman: That is no ruling on the other.

Presiding Inspector: Not a final ruling on the balance; no. Let us hear what he says about the contradictory statements.

Mr. Gladstein: Is there a question pending?

Presiding Inspector: It is hard to tell what is a question and what is argument.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. This may be repetition, but I don't know just what the state of the record is on this, so I will ask again, Mr. Craycraft, you to state what Mr. Cannaionga said to you as to whether or not he had been intimidated, coerced, or threatened [4526] and, if so, by whom?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Mr. Goodwin: Your Honor, may I make an objection?

Presiding Inspector: Yes, you certainly may.

Mr. Goodwin: I understand that it is admitted that no such question as this could be asked in a court of law. Isn't that true? In your own Court of Appeals it has been decided that after a witness has left the stand he cannot afterwards put on testimony that he said that he was forced to give that testimony, that he was coerced, that he was very sorry that he made it.

Am I right in regard to that?

Presiding Inspector: Not quite right.

Mr. Goodwin: Not quite right?

Presiding Inspector: In a second trial it was shown, it was held, that it could not be shown that after the end of a trial a man had so stated.

Mr. Goodwin: That was after the testimony was given, that they wanted to put on testimony.

Presiding Inspector: I haven't read a case to that effect, but you may be right about it, but I thought not.

Mr. Goodwin: In reviewing the case of People vs. Moore that very question came up; that immediately after he left the stand he talked with different people, and he told them that he had given false testimony; that he was very sorry that he had given false testimony, but he was compelled to do so.

[4527]

Presiding Inspector: I think that was after the end of the trial.

Mr. Goodwin: Would your Honor reserve that until we look it up?

Presiding Inspector: Yes. I may be wrong.

Mr. Goodwin: I am quite sure that that was in rebuttal.

Presiding Inspector: Another trial.

Mr. Goodwin: Is it not a fact that no testimony can be adduced to contradict what a witness has said on the stand unless a foundation is laid in the question of prior testimony?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Goodwin: Prior testimony.

Presiding Inspector: That was the common law rule.

Mr. Goodwin: What?

Presiding Inspector: That, as I understand it, is the common law rule in general applied in this country.

Mr. Goodwin: Everywhere.

Presiding Inspector: No.

Mr. Goodwin: Perhaps not in Massachusetts, but that is very questionable. Now, there is no authority, so far as I can find, except that one Massachusetts case, where a witness is permitted to say that the witness had made a false statement, where a witness can go on the stand and testify that the witness said afterward that he made a false statement.

Now, your Honor, Mr. Del Guercio has pointed out this—let me put it this way: The matter of whether you shall [4528] receive hearsay evidence at all is within your sound discretion. You are not obliged to hear it. Considering all the facts and circumstances you must decide whether it is proper for you to hear it or not.

Now, Mr. Del Guercio has pointed out that this witness was in the possession of counsel for the other side practically as early as on Saturday; he was available on Saturday. He says, "Well, we couldn't issue a subpoena on Saturday because Mr. Wixon was not available." Mr. Wixon was available on Saturday; he was available on Sunday; he was available on Monday and he was available on Tuesday. But no effort was made to get this witness until Wednesday.

Now, they came in and asked your Honor to exercise his discretion and permit them to prove by hearsay what they had an opportunity to prove by that witness, if it was the truth. I say it is a denial of justice to the Government to permit that sort of evidence under the circumstances that Mr. Del Guercio has pointed out. There is no authority in a court of law and there is no reason for your Honor permitting it as a matter of hearsay in the circumstances that have been stated.

That is all, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I am going to receive the testimony of contradictory statements. I am not going to go farther than that at this time. Go ahead.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft:)

By Mr. Gladstein: [4529]

Q. I will ask you this, Mr. Craycraft——

Presiding Inspector: Ask whether he said this or that in substance. I think it is all covered.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. I want to direct your attention again to the nine o'clock meeting, let us call it, that you had with Mr. Cannalonga on the evening of April 30, 1941, on board the ship West Kussetta. Will you state, from the best of your recollection, all of the statements that Mr. Cannalonga made to you at that time that referred to the giving of false testimony in this case?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please——

Presiding Inspector: I won't receive that. I will allow you to ask him whether he said this or that in substance. All you want is that he made contradictory statements at this time. That is all you want at this time.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. I will ask you this as a preliminary question, Mr. Craycraft: In your discussion that evening with Mr. Cannalonga did he discuss with you specific parts of his testimony or was his discussion with you general?

A. He did not discuss any specific parts of his testimony, but he gave me the background of——

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): If your Honor please, I move that the answer be stricken out.

[4530]

Mr. Gladstein: It can't be stricken out until it is spoken. Why is there this constant attempt to bottle up a witness? Mr. Goodwin says that the Government is interested in justice here, that he doesn't want the Government to be denied justice——

Presiding Inspector: Now, wait; now, wait.

Mr. Gladstein: Why aren't they interested in hearing the story and then let them do their own checking? If there is even a suspicion of injustice or false dealing, or double dealing on the part of anybody connected with the FBI it should be their first interest to have it come out, so that they can investigate it, instead of relying on all these hyper-technicalities, and red tape, and talking about the common law.

Mr. Del Guercio: In reply to that——

Presiding Inspector: This doesn't impress me at all, on either side.

Let us hear what the question was, and the answer as far as it goes.

Mr. Goodwin: While counsel is looking at his notes——

Presiding Inspector: It is the reporter who is going to refer to his notes.

Mr. Goodwin (Continuing): ——may I call your attention to 14 N. Y. 419, Stacy v. Graham, where the testimony of a witness had been taken de bene esse and was read at the trial. After plaintiffs had rested the defendant offered to prove [4531] conversations with that witness after the examination in which he confessed that his evidence was false; that it was given under threats; that he regretted that he had to swear to it.

That was in and during the trial after the plaintiffs had rested.

That is all I wanted to call your attention to.

Presiding Inspector: Well, the testimony had been taken de bene esse. There was a deposition and they could have produced him, I suppose. Was he dead, the witness in this case, dead?

Mr. Goodwin: He wasn't dead. The testimony had been taken de bene esse.

Presiding Inspector: Generally it is taken de bene esse because you are going to die, within a reasonable time.

Mr. Goodwin: You might say he wasn't available then, not available; but at the same time it was excluded. It says here:

"After plaintiffs had rested the defendant offered to prove conversations with that witness after the examination in which he confessed that his evidence was false."

It was excluded.

I think that case is stronger than the case of a deposition because you might say, in the case of a deposition, "Well, the witness is no longer available." I think our case here is stronger.

Presiding Inspector: I don't know. We will have to [4532] examine the facts in that case to find out whether it is stronger or not.

We are not bound by these technical rules. I will take this within certain limits.

Mr. Gladstein: I understand that I had asked a question, and the witness had started to answer, and there was an interruption.

Presiding Inspector: This is over your objection.

Mr. Gladstein: Could we have the question and the answer again, please?

(The question and answer referred to were read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Mr. Gladstein: I think the witness should be entitled to finish his answer.

Presiding Inspector: Background of what?

A. (Continuing) Of how he came to testify as he did.

Mr. Gladstein: Are we permitted to go into that, your Honor?

Presiding Inspector: Ask the next question.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What did he say?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that.

Presiding Inspector: I will exclude that at this time.

Mr. Gladstein: All right, your Honor.

By Mr. Gladstein: [4533]

Q. Will you do this, Mr. Crayeraft: Please fix your mind on that meeting—how long did you say that it took, that 9:00 o'clock meeting?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

A. Approximately 20 or 25 minutes.

Q. All right. Will you try and recall, and please state, or relate to the best of your recollection, those statements, if there were more than one, which Mr. Cannalonga had made to you, which contained in essence a statement that was contradictory to the testimony that he had given in this case?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that.

Presiding Inspector: We don't care about those statements. We have this witness' testimony that he made contradictory statements. He said he was coerced. Isn't that——

Mr. Gladstein: I think we are entitled to have what Mr. Cannalonga said, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: As proof of what? Not proof that he was coerced, but that he said he was.

Mr. Gladstein: Within the limits of your own ruling we would be entitled to that. You are, in effect, confining us merely to a statement by this witness of conclusions, instead of facts.

Presiding Inspector: That is not a conclusion, except as everything is a conclusion from a legal standpoint.

Mr. Gladstein: I did not ask Mr. Craycraft to write out for me any report of what took place in these conversations. I do not [4534] have before me any way of putting specific questions to him and saying, "Did Mr. Cannalonga say this, that or the other thing?" I have general knowledge from Mr. Craycraft of what took place in these meetings. Of course, I have personal knowledge of what took place on two occasions. But I have not yet come to them. Therefore, I am not in a position to direct leading questions to him, and you are preventing me, by your ruling, from pointing out through this witness just what Mr. Cannalonga said, even though the question I am putting to Mr. Craycraft is within the scope of your limitation, namely, as to contradictory statements.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. I am going to let you show, and have said again and again, that I will let you show contradictory statements. But I don't want to wander all over the lot.

Mr. Gladstein: If it appears that the witness is wandering I suppose he will be stopped very fast, but can we not ask him to state from his memory those statements that Mr. Cannalonga made in which there was a reference to the existence of contradiction between the facts and the testimony that he gave?

Mr. Del Guercio: The witness has testified he didn't remember what Mr. Cannalonga had said regarding his previous testimony.

Mr. Gladstein: That is not true.

Mr. Del Guercio: Or that Cannalonga didn't refer to any specific statements he had made. [4535]

Mr. Grossman: He said in the first meeting that was true.

Mr. Gladstein: And he said in the second meeting there wasn't any specific break-down as to particular things; that there was a general discussion.

Mr. Del Guercio: How can he show contradictory statements, then?

(Testimony of Roseo George Craycraft.)

Mr. Gladstein: I don't know what the language was that Mr. Cannalonga used. I can't put it in the form of a leading question. I don't know whether Mr. Cannalonga——

Presiding Inspector: The only reason I suggested that was that he shouldn't wander all over the lot.

Mr. Gladstein: All right. I would ask leave to ask Mr. Craycraft the general question: "Tell us what Mr. Cannalonga said on this question of contradictory statements to his testimony", and if Mr. Craycraft appears to get into a field that you feel is improper, let us wait until he has finished his answer and then you can strike out those parts of his answer, or all of it, if you feel that it is improper. How can it hurt anybody? What great harm can it do anybody? If you think it shouldn't be in the record you can make a ruling on it.

Presiding Inspector: I think I will take it. Go ahead. But, of course, I don't take it now as proof of anything except that it is contradictory of what he said before the Court here.

Mr. Gladstein: I understand your ruling. [4536]

Presiding Inspector: I am not accepting this as proof of any accusation or allegation that he may have made.

Mr. Gladstein: All right.

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead.

A. At this 9:00 o'clock meeting he didn't go into contradictory evidence of what happened down here but he told me the reasons how he came to come down here to testify. I invited him over to my house for dinner the next Monday or Tuesday where he was going to give me the entire story.

Mr. Myron: That finishes the answer your Honor.

Mr. Gladstein: I didn't hear the answer. I couldn't pay attention to the answer and to the interruption at the same time.

Mr. Myron: Then ask the reporter to read it back.

Presiding Inspector: Read the answer Mr. Reporter.

(The answer referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

The Witness: I haven't finished my answer.

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead.

A. (Continuing) Just before I left he requested that I see Dr. Buckner, in Seattle, who could substantiate all that had transpired in Seattle at the time he was taken in charge and when he was under investigation.

Mr. Del Guercio: I can't understand the witness, can't hear at all. [4537]

Presiding Inspector: The witness has some affection of the throat, evidently. It is hard to hear him. Will you read the answer that he gave there, Mr. Reporter?

(The answer referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, Mr. Craycraft, in the next question, in view of the Judge's ruling, I do not want you to state what Mr. Cannalonga said but I want to refer you to something that you have just mentioned in your answer. You said that Mr. Cannalonga described the circumstances under which he came down to testify. Without going into those circumstances, will you state whether Mr. Cannalonga told you, on the occasion we are talking about, that because of those circumstances, whatever he may have said, he had given false testimony?

A. That is correct.

Q. Did he say that to you?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, when was the next time—withdraw that. When is the next time that you saw Mr. Cannalonga?

A. On Friday night at the Sunset Oil dock around 8:00 o'clock in the evening.

Q. That would be Friday night, what date?

A. That would be May 2, I believe.

Q. Now, prior to May 2; prior to the time you saw Mr. [4538] Cannalonga next, did you write any letter to anybody in which you made any reference to the fact that you had seen Mr. Cannalonga?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it, if he wrote a letter.

A. I wrote a letter to Brother Bridges.

Mr. Gladstein: Now, I am going to show this letter to counsel before I ask the witness to identify it.

(The letter referred to was passed to Mr. Del Guercio.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, if your Honor please, I object——

(Testimony of Roseo George Craycraft.)

Mr. Gladstein: (Interposing) I haven't asked a question yet.

Mr. Del Guercio: I have an objection.

Mr. Gladstein: You can't make an objection when there isn't a question yet, or can you?

Mr. Del Guercio: That is for the Court to decide, Mr. Gladstein.

Presiding Inspector: I don't know. He said, "I will show you a letter."

Mr. Gladstein: I showed it to Mr. Del Guercio.

Presiding Inspector: What are you going to do with it?

Mr. Gladstein: I guess he wants to object to the fact that I showed it to him. That is more courtesy than he extended to us. [4539]

Presiding Inspector: Ask the next question.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Where were you when you sent the letter that you referred to?

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to any further questioning of this witness along that line.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

Mr. Del Guercio: May I finish?

Presiding Inspector: Yes. But I will take it—where he was when he wrote the letter. How can that harm anybody?

Mr. Del Guercio: Nothing could harm us as far as that is concerned, because we know what the facts are.

Presiding Inspector: Mr. Del Guercio, I didn't mean that. I meant from a legal standpoint, how could the mere fact that he was in San Francisco, or Seattle, or Tacoma, or in New York City, when he wrote a certain letter which we haven't got in evidence, be harmful? It is preliminary. We will never get through if you keep objecting like that.

Mr. Del Guercio: That isn't what I had in mind. I had in mind what counsel is up to, that is, a desperate effort here to becloud the issue. They have nothing, and this is just a smoke screen, and they are getting very, very desperate.

Presiding Inspector: I will take an answer to the question. Where were you when you wrote the letter?

A. I was in the International office in the Arcade Building in Seattle, Washington. [4540]

Presiding Inspector: What is the next question?

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. For the purpose of identification I show you a letter which I have already shown to Mr. Del Guercio and ask you whether that is the letter which you sent with reference to your having seen Mr. Cannalonga? A. That is correct.

Mr. Gladstein: I offer it in evidence.

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to it, if your Honor please, upon the ground that it is immaterial, incompetent and improper, and an attempt by indirection what they cannot do by direct evidence: to smear the FBI.

Presiding Inspector: I will exclude the letter.

Mr. Gladstein: Before you rule on that your Honor——

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) You may have it marked for identification.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, would that mean that there is a possibility that the letter will be in evidence?

Presiding Inspector: No. But you have asked about a certain paper, a writing, and it would be well perhaps if any reference is subsequently to be made to it to have it known what the letter was. I shouldn't think you would offer the letter.

Mr. Gladstein: You shouldn't think I should offer this?

Presiding Inspector: No; but that is your business.

(The letter referred to was marked Alien's Exhibit No. 23 for identification.) [4541]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, after writing that letter I think you said that you saw Mr. Cannalonga on a Friday night, is that correct? A. That is correct.

Q. Prior to your seeing him on Friday night did you have any conversation with any of the defense counsel with reference to the possibility of one of the defense counsel talking with Mr. Cannalonga?

A. Mr. Gladstein called me in Seattle.

Q. That's me.

A. And wanted to know if I could go to Portland and arrange with Mr. Cannalonga— —

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) I will object to any further testimony along that line.

Presiding Inspector: Well, it explains what I have already admitted in evidence, so I think I will take it.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, the witness has testified that Mr. Gladstein called him, not the witness called Gladstein.

Presiding Inspector: Well, I suppose—what's the matter with that?

Mr. Del Guercio: He must have had some prior information.

Mr. Gladstein: After I had the letter, yes.

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead. I will take it.

A. (Continuing) Mr. Gladstein called me in Seattle [4542] and requested that I go down to Portland and see if Mr. Cannalonga would be willing to talk with the defense attorneys. So I proceeded to Portland that afternoon, went down to the ship to see Mr. Cannalonga approximately 8:00 at night, and I explained to him that the attorneys had called and they wanted to talk to him on the testimony he gave in this trial and would he be willing to meet me. He said "Yes" he would be glad to. So I called Mr. Gladstein back at 10:00 o'clock that night and then he proceeded to Portland the next day, Saturday.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, in this Friday night conversation with Mr. Cannalonga where did that take place?

A. On the West Kussetta at the Sunset Oil dock.

Q. And how long were you engaged in conversation with him then?

A. Oh, very short time. The only discussion held with Mr. Cannalonga that night was to see whether he would be willing to meet with the defense attorneys and then arrange a meeting with him the next morning to see whether it was possible to get him to be up on Saturday.

Q. Was there any reference in that discussion on that Friday night to any testimony that he had given in the case?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that. [4543]

Presiding Inspector: "Yes" or "No." I will take it.

The Witness: You will take it?

Presiding Inspector: Yes. "Yes" or "No."

A. No.

Presiding Inspector: Was there discussion?

The Witness: No.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. When was the next time that you saw Cannalonga?

A. I went down to the Crown docks the next morning, Saturday, at 10:00 o'clock and told Mr. Cannalonga that Mr. Gladstein would be in on the 1:35 plane and we would meet with him around 3:00 o'clock.

Q. Prior to seeing Mr. Cannalonga on that Saturday morning had you conveyed to me Mr. Cannalonga's willingness to talk to me?

A. By telephone that night previous around 10:00 o'clock.

Q. That is the Friday night?

A. The Friday night.

Q. And was it from that conversation that you learned when I would be in Portland?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

A. That is right.

Q. On the Saturday morning when you saw Mr. Cannalonga and told him that I was coming to Portland to see him did you have any discussion with him on that occasion with respect to the testimony he had given or the circumstances under [4544] which that testimony had been given?

A. No. the only request that he made of me was that the ship might be watched and he didn't want no one to see him leaving the ship or have me coming on the ship and going off with him. And so he would come out on the face of the terminal, walk down the street a block and I was to pick him up there and take him to your hotel.

Mr. Del Guercio: I move to strike that out as unresponsive and clearly improper.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, the next time that you saw Mr. Cannalonga after that Saturday morning occasion was when?

A. About twenty-five minutes to three I picked him up on Front Street.

Q. Had you prior to that time of the day seen me?

A. I met you at the plane at 1:30, took you over to the Clyde Hotel, left you there and then went down and picked up Mr. Cannalonga.

Q. Did you meet Mr. Camalonga at twenty minutes to three, or whatever the time was?

A. I was supposed to meet him at a quarter of three. I was a few minutes early and so was he. It was about twenty-five minutes to three. He was out in the front waiting.

Q. After you met him what happened? [4545]

A. We came on back up to the Clyde Hotel. It wasn't quite three. So Mr. Cannalonga and I went in to the Virginia Cafe, got a cup of coffee before proceeding on up to your room.

Q. And then did you come to my room?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What took place?

A. I introduced the two of you, give you the background of my talks with Mr. Cannalonga, and stated to you that Mr. Cannalonga was very willing to talk, that he was glad to see you. So then you spoke to Mr. Cannalonga. You said "Can you give me the entire truth——"

Mr. Myron: (Interposing) The conversation between him and Gladstein?

Mr. Gladstein: That is what I am asking for.

Mr. Myron: Mr. Gladstein is the best witness for that.

Mr. Gladstein: Isn't that a silly statement?

Mr. Myron: "Silly statement"?

Mr. Gladstein: He is the man who was present in the conversation.

Presiding Inspector: Mr. Gladstein is answering you. I will take it. Go ahead.

A. (Continuing) Mr. Gladstein asked Mr. Cannalonga, "What you told Mr. Crayeraft, is that the truth?"

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Cannalonga said it was.

Gladstein said "I want nothing but the truth and the whole truth." [4546]

Mr. Myron: Ha! Ha!

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead.

A. (Continuing) Then Mr. Gladstein started to question Mr. Cannalonga based on the testimony that I have an idea that was previously turned in here.

Do you want me to go into that discussion, too?

Mr. Gladstein: Well, I can lead him on this because I was there on this occasion, so I know just exactly what was asked. So does this witness.

Mr. Del Guercio: I don't know whether that statement is argument or what?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, it is argument.

Mr. Del Guercio: Or whether he is testifying.

Presiding Inspector: Is that an objection?

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to counsel's statement.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, well, I don't think that is a part of the record, really.

Mr. Gladstein: All right, sir.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. On that Saturday afternoon in the Clyde Hotel, Mr. Craycraft, in your presence did I ask Mr. Cannalonga to tell me in his own words about what took place on the occasions when he saw the FBI, beginning at the beginning?

A. That is correct.

Q. In answer to my question did he tell me, did he state [4547] in your presence that he was first contacted in October, 1940, by a Mr. Boyd?

(Testimony of Roseo George Crayeraft.)

A. That is correct.

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to questions along that line.

Presiding Inspector: Is that contradictory?

Mr. Gladstein: Do you want me to confine it to just the contradictory portions?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Gladstein: All right. I will go to those.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think that is contradictory.

Mr. Gladstein: This is the problem, your Honor: I have not gone through Mr. Cannalonga's testimony in this case to pick out specific portions about which I could ask the present witness. Now, I had planned to ask this witness to testify to simply what took place beginning at the beginning and giving as exhaustively as he could his recollection of what occurred on that occasion, stating what was said by all three persons who were present. Now, if some of those statements, as we contend they are, are definitely inconsistent with his testimony here, obviously under your ruling they are admissible. If any of them are not inconsistent how can anybody be harmed by it? And to require us to differentiate in advance before the questioning would simply mean a matter of delay, because I would have to pick up Mr. Cannalonga's testimony and skip from one part to another, pick out those portions which in his testimony are not consistent with the [4548] statements he made to us. But the Government could not be hurt. If, for example, it is brought out here from

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Mr. Craycraft that Mr. Cannalonga told us that day that he was contacted by Mr. Boyd, how could they be hurt by that?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, that has been repeated several times. It isn't the question of how the Government could be hurt or what harm it is. There is nothing that Mr. Gladstein can say or do that would hurt or harm the Government.

Presiding Inspector: That isn't what is meant by "hurt."

Mr. Del Guercio: That is what is meant. That is why we are objecting to it.

Presiding Inspector: He means in a legal aspect.

Mr. Del Guercio: Legally or otherwise.

Presiding Inspector: Then if you don't object to it we will take it.

Mr. Del Guercio: We do object, however, to those questions, but not on that ground.

Presiding Inspector: You are not entitled to object to things that don't hurt.

Mr. Del Guercio: I am objecting to counsel's statements.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, well, those are not evidence.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Craycraft, on that Saturday afternoon, did Mr. [4549] Cannalonga say that he was first contacted by a Mr. Boyd of the Immigration Department while he, Mr. Cannalonga, was in the Marine Firemen's Hall?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

A. That is right.

Mr. Del Guercio: Your Honor,——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I shall take that. I should think you would like to have that. I think it is of advantage to the Government to have that. I will take it. I don't see why Mr. Gladstein asked it. Go ahead.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did he state in answer to my questions that Mr. Boyd had taken him to two FBI agents?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that.

A. That is right.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did he name those two FBI agents as Mr. Medala and Mr. Dickstein?

A. That is right.

Q. Did he say that on the day when he was first introduced to the two FBI agents he, Cannalonga, had an appointment for either 1:00 or 3:00 o'clock in the afternoon with a doctor?

A. That is correct. [4550]

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that also.

Presiding Inspector: I think he also said that on his examination.

Mr. Gladstein: He said something along that line.

Presiding Inspector: Something along that line. It can't be harmful, though.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did he on that occasion say that he was questioned by the FBI for approximately two hours?

Mr. Del Guercio: We will object to it.

A. Correct.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did he on that occasion——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I will take it. I will let it stand.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did he on that occasion say that the FBI had asked him what he knew about Harry Bridges?

A. Correct.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that.

Will you please let me get my objection in before you answer?

Presiding Inspector: Yes. Go a little slower. I will take that.

By Mr. Gladstein: [4551]

Q. Did he on that occasion say that he had told the FBI that he knew nothing as to whether Mr. Bridges was or ever had been a Communist?

A. That is correct.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did he on that occasion say that before he left he was told that the FBI is a big organization?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to it.

Presiding Inspector: I don't see how that is material.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, I will finish the question, then. I will put it this way:

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did he on that occasion say that the FBI had told him on the occasion of his first meeting with Mr. Madala and Mr. Dickstein that they wanted him back in their offices the following morning and that he was not to try to run away, because the FBI was a big organization?

Mr. Del Guercio: Your Honor, I will object to that, and not only on the ground that it is immaterial but indicating what was in the mind of the person that was asking that question; that the person who was asking the question, that it was conceived in his mind and not in the mind of Cannalonga.

Mr. Gladstein: Did you hear the question?

[4552]

Presiding Inspector: I should think that it was a very natural and proper thing for them to say. I don't see any harm in it. I will take it. [4552a]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did he say those things?

A. That is correct.

Q. Did he say that the following day——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) As the sequel shows, perhaps it was a very wise thing to say. He seems to have run away now.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did he say on this Saturday afternoon that on this same first occasion he denied knowing anything or having any information as to whether Harry Bridges had ever been a member of the Communist Party?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, if your Honor please.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

Mr. Del Guercio: As I understand it, counsel here says that he was asking these questions, elicited that evidence from Cannalonga.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, that is so.

Mr. Del Guercio: He isn't stating in the course of his question, "Did I ask the witness this question?"

Mr. Gladstein: I did, if your Honor will look back at the record.

Presiding Inspector: I will let it stand as it is.

Mr. Del Guercio: And that doesn't contradict any previous testimony. [4553]

Presiding Inspector: Oh, yes. I think in a way.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did he say on that occasion, Mr. Craycraft, that with reference to the first time that he had met with Mr. Madala and Mr. Dickstein they sent him to his doctor in a taxi cab?

A. That is correct.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to it, your Honor, as not contradicting anything.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Presiding Inspector: Oh, I don't see that that has any materiality, but I don't see any harm in it. I think I will let it stand. It is the whole story.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did I then I ask Mr. Cannalonga as to what took place on the second occasion when he met with the FBI agents?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to it unless counsel puts in the whole question that he asked him.

Mr. Gladstein: That is just the question.

Presiding Inspector: I will allow it.

A. Yes.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did Mr. Cannalonga say that he met the FBI agents for the second time on the day following the first occasion?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, not showing anything contradictory of the previous testimony.

Presiding Inspector: I will allow it. [4554]

A. Yes.

Presiding Inspector: No, it doesn't show anything contradictory. It is just explanatory of the history.

Mr. Del Guercio: May we have a general objection to all this line of inquiry instead of objecting every time?

Presiding Inspector: Yes, surely.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did Mr. Cannalonga say that on this second occasion the FBI agents wanted him to sign a statement to the effect that he, Cannalonga, had seen Harry Bridges pay dues in the Communist Party? A. Yes.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Presiding Inspector: Oh, no, just a moment! There is no such testimony in the case, is there?

Mr. Gladstein: As to what? Communist Party dues?.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Gladstein: There is reference——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Is there any such statement in the record?

Mr. Gladstein: No, he actually didn't make a statement to that effect, but he made the statement to us.

Presiding Inspector: We are not as yet trying these FBI agents, you know.

Mr. Gladstein: Not as yet.

Presiding Inspector: I will exclude that. Strike out the answer. [4555]

Mr. Del Guercio: Well now, your Honor——

Mr. Gladstein: (Interposing) May I make a note on that particular question?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, this is a public hearing. I think we are entitled to an explanation here from Mr. Gladstein when he made that remark in answer to your question as to whether we are trying the FBI agents. He stated "Not as yet."

Presiding Inspector: Well, he expects to introduce some testimony which may reflect upon them, I suppose.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, inasmuch as this is——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) And he has already stated it two or three times in the Court. I don't think there is any very great mystery about it.

Mr. Del Guercio: So that the public may know, we want to know what Mr. Gladstein is going to do.

Mr. Gladstein: I will be very happy to tell counsel if your Honor invites me to do so.

Presiding Inspector: No. I think you had better go ahead.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did Mr. Cannalonga say that he was asked by the FBI agents whether he had ever been in meetings with William Schneidermann?

A. Yes. [4556]

Q. Did he say that he had told them that he had been in meetings with William Schneidermann?

A. Correct.

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that question, both questions, none of them being contradictory.

Presiding Inspector: Those are not contradictory, but then that is all right. It doesn't do any harm.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did Mr. Cannalonga say that he was asked by the FBI agents whether he had been in meetings with Harry Bridges? A. Correct.

Q. Did Mr. Cannalonga say that he had told the

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

FBI agents that he had been in meetings with Harry Bridges? A. Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: Is the Court's ruling that it is going to admit other testimony than contradictory testimony?

Presiding Inspector: Well, if they are confirmatory I should think that you would like them.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did Mr. Cannalonga say that the FBI agents had then asked him whether he, Cannalonga had been in meetings where Schneidermann and Bridges were present at the same time? A. Yes.

Q. Did Mr. Cannalonga say that he told the FBI agents that he had never been in any meeting with William Schneider- [4557] mann and Harry Bridges at the same time?

A. That is correct.

Q. Did Mr. Cannalonga say——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) This is under the objection.

Mr. Goodwin: Your Honor, may I suggest that the witness be cautioned not to answer a question until counsel has objected?

Presiding Inspector: Counsel has entered a general objection to all this line.

Mr. Goodwin: All right.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did Mr. Cannalonga say that the FBI agents told him that they wanted him to sign a statement to the effect that he had been in meetings with Schneidermann and Bridges at the same time?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Mr. Del Guercio: We object to that as not being contradictory of any previous statement, and in connection with the question as to whether it is confirmatory of what Cannalonga may have said we wish to state that we don't desire any confirmation from this witness. We haven't called him.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, I know. But it doesn't do any harm. I am trying to do my best to conduct what I consider a fair hearing and I am going to allow some latitude here for the sake of expedition. We don't want to worry over every [4558] particular question that may not be material. Of course, that is, I suppose, contradictory because he did say he had signed such a statement, and examined it, corrected it and says that he didn't notice it and it is in the record.

Mr. Gladstein: That is right, your Honor.

Mr. Del Guercio: I understand what the Court has in mind, but I have in mind it will open the case wide because we will be compelled to come in here——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I think it will. I think it will.

Mr. Del Guercio: It will carry it far afield and we are getting away from the main issues.

Presiding Inspector: That may be. We can't help it. It seems already to have gone pretty far afield.

Mr. Gladstein: Will you read the question, Mr. Conklin?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. Yes.

Presiding Inspector: I think I should say, Mr. Del Guercio and Mr. Gladstein, that all this evidence has no sanction of cross examination and its only real bearing is now that this witness under this meeting, after he had given testimony and been excused, made contradictory statements. Now, that is all there is. It doesn't say that the trier of the facts in admitting a piece of evidence—that the trier of the facts [4559] doesn't say that he will believe it. I will take it. Of course, testimony given under the sanction of cross examination is very much stronger here ordinarily than something given out of Court. The statement may have been under compulsions. We have no test upon the question as to what compulsions were influencing this witness to give these contradictory statements. That is all. I don't know that there will be anything of that kind, but you can't tell.

Mr. Gladstein: Something like the same problem of the Richard Lovelace statement.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well now, I don't think that that statement is necessary.

Mr. Gladstein: All right. I will withdraw the statement.

Presiding Inspector: No. I don't think that there is the same problem. There we have one where the rule itself permits that statement.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I may have misunderstood that last, unless that they have evidence that Mr. Cannalonga is dead. If that's what they mean——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Perhaps they may have. I don't know.

Mr. Gladstein: Of course not. We have no such evidence. If we had any such evidence we would certainly bring it to the Court. I don't know how such evidence could come to us [4560] before it could come to that great organization, FBI, whose record has been in all the newspapers! Why, they are microscopic in their attention to detail! And here is a poor seaman who can't be found by them and they are now searching for him and have been for two weeks!

Presiding Inspector: Now, Mr. Gladstein, that is a speech.

Mr. Gladstein: It is an answer.

Presiding Inspector: It didn't have the merit of the speech that you objected to of Mr. Del Guercio. It wasn't a short one. Now, we will just cast this all aside and go ahead with this trial. We are having too much persiflage.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Craycraft, did Mr. Cannalonga say on that same afternoon in the Clyde Hotel in the presence of yourself and myself that he had told Mr. Madala and Mr. Dickstein that he would refuse to sign a statement to the effect that he had been in meetings where Schneidermann and Bridges were, because such a statement would be false?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

A. That is right.

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it. And now we will go to lunch.

(Whereupon at 12:35 o'clock P. M., a recess was taken until 2:00 o'clock P.M. of the same day.) [4561]

After Recess—2:10 O'Clock P. M.

Mr. Del Guercio: I apologize for being late.

Presiding Inspector: That is quite all right. Now, Mr. Gladstein?

Mr. Grossman: Your Honor, because of the necessity of having enough witnesses in advance so there won't be any shortage of witnesses, and because of the distance from Portland, we had to inform Dean Morse in advance as to when we would be done with the witness before he was called, and since he has obviously important business back in Eugene at the Law School, and the students are going to be discomforted if he is delayed here, and also since we are in the middle of our direct examination and we can't harm the Government, we would like to withdraw Mr. Craycraft at this time and put on the Dean until he has finished his testimony.

Presiding Inspector: Is there any objection?

Mr. Del Guercio: We have an objection to putting on this witness out of order.

Presiding Inspector: You have an objection?

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: Well, what is the objection?

Mr. Del Guercio: We should finish with the witness that is on the stand.

Presiding Inspector: I am sorry there is not an agreement [4562] on this, but I will allow you to withdraw Mr. Crayeraft. I am doing this to convenience the Dean. I do not think his testimony will be long.

WAYNE LYMAN MORSE

called as a witness on behalf of the Alien, having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Presiding Inspector: Give your name and address to the reporter.

The Witness: Wayne Lyman Morse, Eugene, Oregon.

Direct Examination

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Dean Morse, are you connected with the University of Oregon Law School?

A. I am Dean of the Law School at the University of Oregon.

Q. For how long have you been?

A. I have been Dean since 1931 and a member of the staff since 1929.

Q. Dean, are you at present connected with any committees of either the Oregon or the American Bar Association?

A. I am a member of the Legal Education Committee of the Oregon State Bar Association, and for a good many years have been a member of the Law Enforcement Committee, Chairman on several occasions; I am Chairman of the Committee of the American Bar Association on Sentencing, Probation and Parole. [4563]

(Testimony of Wayne Lyman Morse.)

Q. Have you, in the past, done any work for the Attorney General of the United States, or the Department of Justice of the United States?

A. In 1936 to 1939 I was Special Assistant to Attorney General Cummings, and Director of the Attorney General's nationwide survey of release procedures.

Q. Have you at any other time represented the Attorney General, or the Department of Justice?

A. Well, during that period of time I was in consultation with the staff on various matters; and on one particular occasion I was appointed by the Attorney General to present the Government's case in a labor matter before a specially appointed tribunal in the District of Columbia, the case involving a controversy between the Government and certain allegations which had been filed attacking the policies of the Government in connection with the Workers Alliance of America.

Q. Have you in the past held any other Government position, United States Government position?

A. Well, I have been appointed by the Secretary of Labor as Arbitrator to handle a series of labor disputes. However, I don't feel that technically that is a Government position. It is simply a case of where an officer of the Government has been selected by the party-litigants to name the Arbitrator.

Q. Have you in the past held any position in the State [4564] Government of Oregon?

A. No position, except I was a Chairman of a Civil Service Commission for Police of the City of Eugene for a time.

Presiding Inspector: Is it a State Law School?

The Witness: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: And, of course, do you consider that as State employment or not?

The Witness: Well, it's State employment.

Presiding Inspector: Well, we understand that. I didn't want to have any omission.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Are you on any committee of the Association of American Law Schools?

A. I am on the Committee on Tenure.

Q. Have you published any books or treatises?

Presiding Inspector: Well now, are you qualifying him as an expert?

Mr. Grossman: No, I wouldn't say that this particular question is an important one. It is just general background.

Mr. Del Guercio: We don't question the identity of Mr. Morse.

Mr. Grossman: I won't pursue that question. I don't think it is important enough.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Have you had occasion to act as Arbitrator in labor [4565] matters?

(Testimony of Wayne Lyman Morse.)

A. Well, since 1935 I have arbitrated as far as final decisions are concerned, 86 cases, and I have two decisions pending.

Q. Have you been rather continuously an arbitrator since that time?

A. Well, I think the number of cases indicates that I have been rather busy.

Q. Do you have any regular appointment now or regular employment as an Arbitrator between any group of unions and any group of employers?

A. Well, at the present time I am called the Coast Arbitrator for disputes arising between the Waterfront Employers Association of the Pacific Coast and the ILWU, District No. 1, the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union.

Q. For how long have you held your present position as Arbitrator between the groups?

A. Well, my present appointment dates from December 20, 1940. In December of 1938 I was first appointed by Secretary Perkins to arbitrate a case then pending in San Francisco. And during that period of time the appointments were more or less case by case.

Q. Your latest appointment to this job was by whom?

A. By the Secretary of Labor. [4566]

Q. Could you estimate approximately how many arbitrations you have presided over as such Arbitrator?

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, if your Honor please,

(Testimony of Wayne Lyman Morse.)

I will object to that question as not involving any issue in this case.

Presiding Inspector: I think this is preliminary.

Mr. Grossman: It is preliminary showing the basis for knowledge. That is all, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. I will allow it.

A. You mean——

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Between the Waterfront Employers and the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, approximately how many arbitrations have you presided over?

A. Oh, I think approximately between 65 and 70.

Q. Can you state whether Harry Bridges was an official of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union throughout the entire period that these arbitrations covered?

A. He was President.

A. Of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union?

A. Of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, District No. 1.

Q. Can you state whether Harry Bridges on several occasions appeared before you as such Arbitrator, either as a witness or as an advocate?

[4567]

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I object to the question.

Presiding Inspector: I will allow it. "Yes" or "No".

A. Yes.

(Testimony of Wayne Lyman Morse.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Could you estimate how many times he appeared before you in such capacity as a witness?

A. I would judge at least 40 and not more than 50.

Q. Can you estimate about how many times he appeared before you as an advocate acting as an attorney would if there were one present?

A. Well, the same number of cases because when he appears he always appears both as a witness and as an advocate.

Presiding Inspector: You mean he does not differentiate between the two positions?

The Witness: No. I mean that during the hearing he will take the witness stand and testify and he will also function as an advocate, frequently examining witnesses.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Will you state whether you had anything to do with the 1940 negotiations between the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union and the employers that they were dealing with?

A. I was called in by the parties to attend the negotiations on the last day preceding the signing of the Agreement [4568] in order to discuss with the parties certain mooted questions in regard to which there did not seem to be complete agreement.

Q. Was Harry Bridges present at those negotiations also? A. He was.

Q. And is that the only time you participated in any way in the 1940 negotiations between the ILWU and the employers? A. That's all.

(Testimony of Wayne Lyman Morse.)

Q. Have you on any other occasion participated in any way in the negotiations between the ILWU or any section of that organization and the employers?

Mr. Myron: This is immaterial, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I think this is to lay a foundation for evidence as to his character as a labor union man, along the line of Mr. Kagel's testimony.

Mr. Grossman: That is correct.

Presiding Inspector: I will allow it on that basis. Counsel want to show what his experience is with Mr. Bridges, not any definite case but what in a general way is his experience.

Mr. Del Guercio: Of course, your Honor, we repeat our objection to this line of testimony.

Presiding Inspector: You remember, I confined this quite closely, but I will allow testimony as to his character in that respect.

Mr. Del Guercio: We want to get our objection rendered again on this same line of questioning on the ground that it [4569] would open up a new issue, that there is no issue in this case as to whether Harry Bridges is a good or bad labor man; and that to admit testimony of this kind would open the case up to us and we would have the right and be entitled to produce witnesses here to testify that Harry Bridges was not a good labor man.

Presiding Inspector: I think they will have to take that risk. I have been in doubt as to whether the testimony is competent or relevant; competent, yes. But I am going to allow it.

A. Well, I haven't been in any direct negotiations as far as negotiating a contract, you understand, is concerned. Of course, there do follow my arbitration decisions from time to time what might be called "Negotiations" at the next hearing.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Has your trade union contact with Mr. Bridges been primarily then to arbitrations?

A. That's true. In fact, with the exception, if I may add, of the meeting on December 20, 1940 I can assure you that my contacts with Mr. Bridges have been limited to my work as Arbitrator, save and except similar occasions to this one at Angel Island when I was subpoenaed there, as here, to testify at that case.

Q. What was the procedure in the arbitrations involving the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union with [4570] respect to whether or not an oath was given to witnesses before they testified?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, your Honor, as being immaterial and irrelevant.

Presiding Inspector: I think I will take it. As to his opportunity to observe how Mr. Bridges conducted himself as a labor union man, I will take it.

A. In our early hearings oaths were given and then I took the position that a further oath would be unnecessary because I was going to take it for granted that the parties would tell me the truth, and I thought I was in a position to detect whether or not they told me the truth, and if they didn't it didn't make any difference whether it was under oath or not, because I would take such action as I thought it warranted. I had no contempt power. Therefore, I thought the oath was unnecessary as a rule of procedure.

Mr. Myron: I think that answer should be stricken out. It is immaterial to any issue in this case, or any issue that might be manufactured in this case.

Presiding Inspector: The upshot is that an oath was administered at first. I will take it that far. That is all it establishes. That was in the discretion of the officer.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Will you state from your experience, as you stated, with Mr. Bridges, whether, during the course of that experience Mr. [4571] Bridges ever took the position that workers and employers cannot sit down at a table and bargain collectively in an amicable fashion and have it result in benefits for the workers?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to the question, your Honor——

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

Mr. Del Guercio: (Continuing) ——it being broad and not going to any of the issues in this case.

(Testimony of Wayne Lyman Morse.)

Presiding Inspector: Don't you think you ought to ask him a preliminary question? Well, I will allow it. You may answer.

The Witness: May I have the question again, please?

Mr. Grossman: Read the question.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. He has not taken such a position within my experience.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Will you state whether, in the course of such experience, Mr. Bridges took the position that workers and employers can sit down at a table and bargain collectively in an amicable fashion and have it result in benefits for the workers?

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to the question.

Presiding Inspector: You are asking him affirmatively?

Mr. Grossman: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: You may answer. I will take it over [4572] your objection.

A. It has been my experience with Mr. Bridges that he has taken the posifion that employers and employees can and should sit down and negotiate their differences.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Will you state whether Mr. Bridges, during this contact of yours with him, took the position in good faith, I mean that appeared to you to be in good faith, that arbitration on some occasions could be beneficial to the workers involved?

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that, if your Honor please, as improper.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it over your objection.

A. He has shown by his record, and has urged arbitration.

Mr. Del Guercio: I ask that the answer be stricken—"by his record."

Presiding Inspector: You mean by the record before you?

The Witness: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: With that understanding I will take it. I thought that was it.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Has Mr. Bridges ever taken the position in your experience that arbitration, as a principle or as a general rule, is bad for the workers involved?

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, if your Honor please, I will object to that on the same grounds, and also on the further grounds that [4573] I don't understand this witness to be testifying other than his experience as an arbitration man for the Department of Labor, as I understand it. I believe it should be limited to that.

Presiding Inspector: These questions are all confined to your personal experience?

The Witness: That is the only answer I can give, as based on my experience in these cases.

Presiding Inspector: I will take the answer.

(Testimony of Wayne Lyman Morse.)

The Witness: May I have the question again?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. He has not.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Has Mr. Bridges taken the position that an arbitration set-up should be provided so that disputes between the workers and their employers could be settled without strikes?

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that question as not in issue in this case.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it. This is all preliminary to asking a question as to whether, in the judgment of Dean Morse, Mr. Bridges is, as we have used the phrase, a good trade union man. I am allowing this as preliminary to that general question.

Mr. Del Guercio: Why can't we go direct to the question without these preliminaries? [4574]

Presiding Inspector: I cannot confine him to any particular manner of approaching his case. I will take these questions.

A. The answer is "Yes."

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Has Mr. Bridges ever conducted himself in such a way as to indicate to you that he believed in the theory of strikes for strikes' sake?

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that on the same ground.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

A. Well——

(Testimony of Wayne Lyman Morse.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Would you like that explained?

Mr. Myron: Allow him to answer the question.

A. I will answer as I understand it and the Court may strike it if my answer is improper.

I think my answer would have to be that when his union has been involved in a given strike he certainly has intended to see to it that that particular strike was carried out to its proper end.

Presiding Inspector: Even to the bitter end?

The Witness: Sometimes to the bitter end.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Has Mr. Bridges conducted himself in such a way as to indicate to you that he believed in strikes, even though a [4575] particular—withdraw that—that he believed in a particular strike, or particular strikes, even though that strike or those strikes could not benefit the economic conditions of the workers involved?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, that question obviously calls for an answer that I don't think Mr. Morse, or any other witness, could properly give. It would involve so many things. it would involve the determination of the things that led up to the strike, and other factors involved as to whether it benefits the public or is in the public interest.

Presiding Inspector: That is all true, but I don't want to go into those matters. This is laying a foundation for an ultimate question and I will take it. He may not ask the question——

(Testimony of Wayne Lyman Morse.)

Mr. Grossman: (Interposing) I will ask it.

Presiding Inspector: That is an ultimate conclusion to be finally drawn by the trier of the fact, athough the opinion may be of assistance or may not be of assistance.

The Witness: May I have the question, please?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. The answer is "No."

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. During the course of your contact with Harry Bridges did he act in such a way as to indicate to you that he [4576] believed in cooperation with Governmental agencies that were involved in labor relations?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that as being broad—what governmental agencies and on what subject?

Presiding Inspector: It is broad, but I will take it.

A. Yes.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. From what contact you have had with Harry Bridges would you say that he is a good trade unionist?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I will object to that as not being material and affects no issue in this case—the question of whether Harry Bridges is a good or bad labor man.

Presiding Inspector: The Government has asked

(Testimony of Wayne Lyman Morse.)

some questions along that line hypothetically. I will take it.

Mr. Myron: That is in his opinion?

Presiding Inspector: That is all he can say; from what he has seen and what he has testified to.

A. On the basis of my experience with him in the so-called longshore cases involving his union, and the Waterfront Employers Association, my answer is, yes, I consider him as a good trade union man in those cases.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did you ever see any conduct of Harry Bridges indicating that he was attempting to involve workers in strikes solely for the purpose of achieving some revolutionary or ulterior purpose? [4577]

Mr. Myron: I object to that.

(Whereupon Mr. Del Guercio passed a paper to the Presiding Inspector.)

Mr. Myron: There is an objection to the pending question.

Presiding Inspector: I didn't hear the question.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

Mr. Myron: It is calling for a state of mind of Mr. Bridges.

Presiding Inspector: It is, I realize that, but the whole matter really is of his state of mind.

(Testimony of Wayne Lyman Morse.)

Mr. Myron: It is asking the witness to determine what was in Mr. Bridges' mind at the time.

Presiding Inspector: So far as he observed, he is giving his impression of what Mr. Bridges' conduct indicated to him. That is all.

A. Based upon Mr. Bridges' conduct before me the answer is "No." [4578]

Presiding Inspector: It is really calling for your opinion of your own state of mind.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. From your contact with Mr. Bridges are you able to state what is his theory of the role and the function of trade unions?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, if your Honor please; not involving any particular issue in this case.

Presiding Inspector: It is rather broad.

Mr. Grossman: It is just a generalization of these elements put together, perhaps adding another element.

Presiding Inspector: Very well. I will take it for what it is worth.

A. Well, it has been my conclusion as we have gone through these many cases that he has looked upon his job as a job which requires him to use his best efforts to promote the welfare of his men in their relations with their employers.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Dean, has the conduct of Harry Bridges with which you have come in contact in every case been consistent with proper collective bargaining?

(Testimony of Wayne Lyman Morse.)

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I will object to that. Now, these questions, the Court has ruled, are preliminary.

Presiding Inspector: He has asked the final question.

Mr. Grossman: Not quite. [4579]

Presiding Inspector: He has asked the final question. This is supplementary.

Mr. Del Guercio: I say he has asked already the final question.

Presiding Inspector: He has asked the final question and this is an explanation of the final answer. I don't know that it is very helpful, but I will take it.

A. The answer is Yes.

Presiding Inspector: I think it is implicit in the main answer that he gave.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Dean, could you state briefly what generally were the issues that were involved in these arbitrations involving the IL and WU, the International Longshoremen and Warehousemen's Union?

Mr. Myron: It is highly immaterial.

Mr. Grossman: It is preliminary to show their general importance between the Union and the employer, that is all.

Presiding Inspector: Let me ask a question preliminarily.

Was there any general type?

The Witness: Well, I think they break themselves up into two types.

Presiding Inspector: I will hear those types.

(Testimony of Wayne Lyman Morse.)

Mr. Grossman: All right.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. What were those two types? [4580]

Mr. Del Guercio: Our objection——

Presiding Inspector: Yes. Very briefly.

A. The cases have broken themselves up into two types: Those involving an interpretation of an agreement already signed by the parties, the application of the law of contracts to the agreement; and the second type of case has been a case involving a determination by the arbitrator on a record made by the parties before him on questions of wages, hours and conditions of employment.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. And these would be where the latter was involved coastwise wages, hours and working conditions?

A. Most of them coastwise, unless you are dealing with a port practice problem. Then it would be of local significance to that port.

Q. In any of those cases in which you came in contact with Harry Bridges; did they involve questions which were occasioned by strikes or lockouts?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, if your Honor please.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. I will take it, but I won't go into the particular cases.

Mr. Grossman: No. I am not going into any particular cases.

Presiding Inspector: If there were such I will allow him to state. [4581]

(Testimony of Wayne Lyman Morse.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Is this also preliminary?

Mr. Grossman: This is to show the general importance——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) It is in form supplemental, but in purpose preliminary.

A. A considerable number of them involved port strikes, so-called "quickie" strikes, stoppages of work.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Many of them involve questions that were coastwise in the sense they affected working conditions up and down the entire Pacific Coast?

A. A considerable number of them.

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that.

The Witness: I am sorry.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

The Witness: A large number of them.

Presiding Inspector: Over your objection. Now, Mr. Grossman, suppose you make the same offers that you did——

Mr. Grossman: I am not quite ready, if the Court please. I have some more general questions.

Presiding Inspector: I think you have about exhausted the subject.

Mr. Grossman: I have a couple more that I think are revelent even under your ruling, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: All right.

By Mr. Grossman: [4582]

Q. Could you state whether from your experience with Harry Bridges in these arbitration proceedings you believe he has when testifying before you told the truth?

(Testimony of Wayne Lyman Morse.)

Mr. Del Guercio: If the Court please, I object to that.

Presiding Inspector: I can't take that.

Mr. Grossman: May I explain very briefly.

Presiding Inspector: That is on his general character, and I won't take that.

Mr. Grossman: May I explain something, your Honor?

Presiding Inspector: Surely.

Mr. Grossman: You will recall at the beginning of this general argument with reference to Mr. Kagel's testimony I declared that the various witnesses for the prosecution had given certain—well, I won't call them "Touchstone", but certain characteristics that they stated Communists always have. And I gave you some examples of characteristics which are involved in trade union action.

Now, with respect to this question that I am now asking I say that these Government witnesses were almost unanimous to the effect that Communists, if they think the end justifies the means, are willing to lie even to the extent of lying under oath. It would follow from that logically that if they are willing to lie even under oath they would lie certainly when there is not an oath and, therefore, no legal compulsion if important issues are involved.

I have showed so far the importance of these issues. I [4583] could enlarge on that, but I don't think it is necessary. But these issues were very, very large with respect to Harry Bridges and the Union he has represented. I have also showed that on many occasions Harry Bridges testified. It is my theory that, if on those many occasions with so much at stake Harry Bridges always told the truth, that would characterize him as being different from these people who are described by the prosecution witnesses as "Communists" and described in various ways. So, for the same reason that we are permitted to go into Mr. Bridges' lacking these certain theories or activities in his union activities, such as being a bad trade unionist and not believing in collective bargaining, for the same reason and even a greater reason because so many of the Government witnesses have used this theory, I think we are entitled to go into whether or not Mr. Harry Bridges on important issues lies under oath or not under oath where that lie would have affected the results.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think that this kind of evidence would help to resolve that question. Further than that, I think it is far too remote and I will exclude it. Let me give you perhaps an example.

Mr. Grossman: I beg your pardon?

Presiding Inspector: If a man were charged with murder you wouldn't think the fact that he was a member of a church or other religious organization would be competent to show that he hadn't committed the murder on the principle that good [4584] church members don't commit murders?

(Testimony of Wayne Lyman Morse.)

Mr. Grossman: I will say this, your Honor, I think a perfect analogy can be made that I agree with. I would say, if evidence were introuced that he belonged to a church which did not believe in the sanctity of the oath and believed that one should lie under oath if the ends justified the means, I believe one would have the absolute right to prove that this particular man under great stress and strain had not done that sort thing to prove that he didn't belong to that church and, therefore, the doctrines of that church wouldn't affect his credibility.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think so. I will exclude the question as one that bears upon his general character and his character is not attacked.

Mr. Grossman: Your Honor, I would like to make a very brief offer of proof, which is that, if Dean Morse were permitted to answer this question, I believe—I don't know definitely, but I believe—his answer would be that Harry Bridges told the truth under oath on all these various occasions, under oath and not under oath on all these various occasions, when he appeared before Dean Wayne Morse as Arbitrator.

Presiding Inspector: Of course, Dean Morse couldn't tell whether he told the truth or not.

Mr. Grossman: That is his job.

Presiding Inspector: He could only give his opinion.

Mr. Grossman: Just as you will give your opinion, [4585] your Honor, as to whether you will believe these witnesses are telling the truth.

(Testimony of Wayne Lyman Morse.)

Presiding Inspector: I will exclude it as evidence of general character, and his character has not been attacked generally.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Dean, has Harry Bridges in these various contacts that you have had with him ever engaged in such conduct or expressed such opinion or done anything that would indicate to you that he was or is a Communist?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I object to the question unless this witness is qualified here that he is an expert on Communistic matters and Communistic doctrines and principles, unless he is acquainted with the practices of the members of the Communist Party, acquainted with their beliefs.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, I think that is purely negative, Mr. Grossman.

Mr. Grossman: I recognize it is negative. I think it is as good——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I doubt that being competent.

Mr. Grossman: Well, your Honor, it seems to me that this rule of allowing certain kinds of statements has got to work both ways. Now, the Government witnesses have stated that they "believe" that Harry Bridges is a Communist or, even, farther, that others "believe" that and they stated further that they [4586] believe it from the general activities.

(Testimony of Wayne Lyman Morse.)

Now, I believe if such evidence could be used to establish an affirmative it must be allowed to establish a negative. Now, the weight of it is for you, of course, to determine.

Presiding Inspector: I will allow you to show that he knows of no activity of his personal knowledge which indicates to him that he is a Communist.

Mr. Gladstein: That is what the question calls for.

Presiding Inspector: I will take that.

Mr. Del Guercio: May I just be heard?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: If testimony of that kind is permitted, of course, it would open the door very wide. They could call in many persons to testify similarly and we could call just as many that would testify to the contrary.

Presiding Inspector: That is true.

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, to do that we must, of course,—there must be an end somewhere.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: And I think it is right here.

Presiding Inspector: Well, this man has had a great deal of contact with him and I think it will be of little probative value, very little probative value. I think it just gets under the wire. I think I will take it. It is only a very slight matter. [4587]

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Dean Morse, have you seen any activity of Harry Bridges——

(Testimony of Wayne Lyman Morse.)

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) This is all objected to.

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. (Continuing) ——which indicated or indicates to you that he was or is a Communist?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will renew my objection unless the witness can testify that he knows what Communism is, how it operates, how it functions.

Presiding Inspector: That will take a long time to go into that.

Mr. Grossman: The opening statement of the prosecution says we can take judicial knowledge of the Communist Party.

Presiding Inspector: The only doctrine of the Communist Party which we are particularly interested in here is the theory of the establishment by revolution of the dictatorship of the proletariat with the overthrow of Government by force and violence. Of course, secondarily to that there is the policy of the Party in distributing literature, advocating such principles. Now, without going further into that I think I will allow the question.

A. Based upon the Court's explanation of Communism [4588] as it is involved in this case, which is also my understanding of it, the answer is that I do not know of any conduct of Mr. Bridges in any of my relationships with him that would indicate to me that he is a Communist.

Mr. Grossman: No more questions.

(Testimony of Wayne Lyman Morse.)

Cross Examination

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Mr. Morse, in any of these proceedings—"arbitration proceedings", I believe you called them? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever have occasion to investigate or cause an investigation to be made of the questions as to whether or not Harry Bridges was a member of the Communist Party? A. No.

Q. Was that question ever before you as an Arbitrator?

A. Well, the charge that he was was before me.

Q. Who charged?

A. But it was immaterial.

Q. Who charged that Harry Bridges was a Communist?

A. Oh, it constantly weaves its way into the cases by statements of counsel or by statement of a witness, but I have always taken the position that it is no concern of mine.

Q. Was a formal charge made that he was a member of the Communist Party? A. Oh, no.

Q. Huh? A. No. [4589]

Q. Did you investigate to determine whether or not he was a member of the Communist Party?

A. The answer is No. I would certainly disqualify myself as a judicial officer if I did such a thing, wouldn't I?

Q. Well, I don't know. You were inquiring into the—it was one of your functions, was it not, to determine the truth and veracity of witnesses appearing before you?

A. On the basis of the record made.

Q. Have you ever read any Communistic literature?

A. I believe I have. If what I think you have in mind is Communistic literature, I believe I have.

Q. I believe you said that charges had been informally made before you that Harry Bridges was a member of the Communist Party, is that correct?

A. Oh, comments have been made in testimony that "Here's a Communistic leader" or "We are not interested" says somebody, "in your Communistic approach", or something of that type.

Q. Having that in mind and those charges having been made, and having in mind also your testimony and your opinion that Harry Bridges was not a member of the Communist Party, did you consider this passage from Government's Exhibit No. 105——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I don't think he quite said that, did he?

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Is that what you said substantially? [4590]

Presiding Inspector: He said to his mind.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, to his mind, of course.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you consider this passage from Government's Exhibit No. 105? I am reading from the "Left Wing Communism, An Infantile Disorder", by N. Lenin, published by the Marxian Educational Society, 5941 Jos. Campau Avenue, Detroit, Michigan:

"It is necessary . . . to go the whole length of any sacrifice, if need be, to resort to strategy and adroitness, illegal proceedings, reticence and subterfuge, to anything in order to penetrate into the Trade Unions, remain in them, and carry on Communist work inside them, at any cost"?

A. Oh, I never——

Q. (Interposing) Did you consider that?

A. I have never read that passage. I simpled watched the witness on the basis of the testimony that he made before me and checked to see that it squared with the complete record.

Q. Well, I say, and then your answer to my question is——

A. (Interposing) I have never read that.

Q. You have never read that?

A. That's right.

Q. And you never took that into consideration in evaluating the testimony of witnesses that appeared before you? A. Not that passage.

Q. In giving your opinion, Mr. Morse, to the effect that [4591] Harry Bridges in your opinion was not a member of the Communist Party did you give weight and consider this passage from Government's Exhibit No. 225, taken from "The Communist" for May, 1934? There is in evidence in this case that that Communist magazine is the official publication or is published monthly by the Communist Party of the United States:

"Tasks of the Party in the Trade-Union Work.

"1. (a) Mobilize the entire Party membership for revolutionary trade-union work; (b) for the carrying through of the program of concentration to root the Party in the most important factories, establish trade-union organization, for the building of the oppositions in the first place in the most important industries, stimulate, develop and lead the struggle of the workers. Enroll every Party member eligible into the trade unions on the basis of a thorough enlightenment of the membership as to reasons for our emphasis on work in the factories and trade unions. This was fully explained in the Open Letter, which stated that unless the Party establishes its roots among the decisive sections of the industrial proletariat it cannot become a mass Communist Party. The discussion must be brought into every Party nucleus, into every trade-union fraction. The Party leadership must not only convince the Party as to the correctness and urgency of carrying through the Open Letter, but also help the membership to carry through the tasks. Every district, section, nucleus, and especially shop nucleus, must work out its plan of work on the basis of the policy of concen- [4592] tration, assign the most experienced and developed comrades for leadership in the trade-union work. Steps are to be taken to build the trade-union fractions and assure their guidance through the Party Committees. The Central Committee, the District Committee and all leading Party organizations must assume responsibility for the carrying through of these tasks and the work in the trade unions which is the task of the entire Party. In raising before the Party work in factories and trade-unions as the central task, care must be taken to overcome the opportunist conception of trade-union work. Our trade-union work is not an end in itself—the trade unions are for the Communists a bridge to the masses. As part of our Communist work in the factories, the Party nucleus in the factories must receive the greatest attention from the leading committees. They must receive the greatest guidance and support in building the union in the shop, the shopcommittee, the publication of a Party factory paper, building the circulation of the Daily Worker, recruiting into the Party." ?

(Testimony of Wayne Lyman Morse.)

Did you consider that passage?

A. I have never read the passage. This is the first time I have ever heard the passage.

Presiding Inspector: Is that a comment on the 21 or 23 points?

Mr. Del Guercio: No, if your Honor please. This is another portion of it. [4593]

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. And, Mr. Morse, did you, in arriving at your opinion as to whether or not Mr. Bridges was a member of the Communist Party, give consideration to an accepted precept of the Communist Party, and that is their policy of hypocrisy and deceit?

(Testimony of Wayne Lyman Morse.)

A. I understand it is one of their precepts and I certainly took that into account.

Q. You understood that that was one of their precepts? A. Yes.

Q. Where did you get that understanding from, Mr. Morse? A. Oh, reading.

Q. Reading what?

A. Literature heretofore testified to. I suppose there has gone across my desk——

Q. (Interposing). Can you give me the name of any literature that you read wherein that doctrine has been announced, the doctrine of hypocrisy and deceit?

A. I think it is announced pretty clearly in "Out of the Night."

Q. "Out of the Night?"

A. Yes; by Jan Valtin.

Q. By Jan Valtin? A. Yes.

Q. Is Jan Valtin a member of the Communist Party?

A. He states in his book that he was at one time. [4594]

Q. Was he speaking in his book as a member of the Communist Party?

A. He is speaking now, and writing now, as one who has discredited the Party and announced that he has repudiated it.

Q. You say Mr. Jan Valtin speaks of the doctrine of hypocrisy and deceit?

A. I think it appears in there over and over again.

(Testimony of Wayne Lyman Morse.)

Q. In what manner?

A. That the true Communist is a person who will use subversive tactics in order to undermine, and hypocrisy and deceit, as you use it, or untruthfulness, are tools that he will use to accomplish his vicious ends. I might add, it is my understanding, and I don't think a Communist, within the outline as placed before this Court today, would stop at anything to carry out his ends.

Q. Do you believe a member of the Communist Party would, even if appearing before you in an arbitration matter, testify falsely under oath if it was on a matter touching upon the interests of the Communist Party?

A. I am satisfied a Communist would. But if I caught him at it he wouldn't do it the second time——

Q. What would you do if you caught him at it?

A. He would not be allowed to testify before me again.

Q. What?

A. He would not be allowed to testify before me again. [4595]

Q. Is that all?

A. That is the only power I would have.

Q. Do you have the power, or did you have the power to administer oaths?

A. Yes; I can administer oaths.

Q. Under what authority?

A. Just by mutual agreement of the parties, as I explained in my direct testimony.

(Testimony of Wayne Lyman Morse.)

Q. Was there any authority under law for you to administer an oath? A. No.

Q. What? A. No.

Q. Then did you ever administer an oath as required by law to Mr. Bridges or any others appearing before you?

A. Not required by law.

Q. Then no one that appeared before you in those proceedings testified under oath, did they?

A. Only the oath that I gave by mutual agreement as to procedure.

Q. Did that oath have any legal effect?

A. No; it wouldn't have any legal effect in the sense that you are using it.

Q. It would be just as binding as though he were not sworn, isn't that correct?

A. Yes. The only power I have, after all, in these [4596] cases is the good faith of the parties.

Q. I thought that your testimony was that at one time you administered oaths and finally you did not?

A. My testimony was, sir, that at the very beginning of these arbitrations, back in 1938, the common practice was, as is the common practice before most voluntary arbitration boards, to administer oaths but they are not legal oaths in the sense you are using it.

Q. I didn't know what you had in mind, but that was the inference I got and I suppose that was the inference the Court got.

A. I am glad to correct it.

(Testimony of Wayne Lyman Morse.)

Q. Have you ever had any contacts with Mr. Bridges other than those before your arbitration—is it an arbitration board, or what do you call it?

A. There is one Arbitrator. He is the Arbitrator under the Agreement. As that Arbitrator, I am careful, as I have testified, to see to it that I don't have contacts with the parties outside the record. If you will permit me to answer further——

Q. (Interposing) Surely.

A. (Continuing) There have been examples of this type: On one occasion, I think in April 1940, the Union had its convention in North Bend, Oregon, and asked me to come down and give a speech on arbitration procedure. I met Mr. Bridges on the platform at the convention and the last I saw of him was [4597] on the platform at the convention. When I finished the speech I returned to Eugene.

Likewise, the employers have invited me to, or through the good offices of the employers, I have been invited to speak to institutes of industrial leaders on arbitration procedure.

Those are the only so-called off-the records contacts I have ever had with the parties, and I have insisted that they be kept on a highly professional plane.

Q. Then you have no personal knowledge of Harry Bridges' activities other than those which you learned through his appearance before you in the capacity of an Arbitrator?

(Testimony of Wayne Lyman Morse.)

A. That is my testimony.

Q. You gave substantially similar testimony on behalf of Mr. Bridges in the last deportation hearing, did you not?

A. No; they didn't let me go nearly that far in the last deportation hearing. I don't think more than two or three questions were put to me.

Q. I don't believe you have seen the transcript or you wouldn't have stated that.

Mr. Grossman: That is correct.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. It is considerably more than that.

A. I mean outside of qualifications. They proceeded to qualify me, as here, but I mean as to the other matters there were only one, two or three questions put. I haven't [4598] read the transcript. I would be interested in seeing it some time.

Presiding Inspector: Is that all?

Mr. Del Guercio: No. I have one or two more questions.

Presiding Inspector: I beg your pardon.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Mr. Morse, did you at any time make this statement:

"My impression of him"—referring to Harry Bridges—"is that he is more sincere in his convictions concerning democratic processes than many of his critics who seek to deport him?"

A. Yes, I made that statement. I think that is in an article that I published some place on arbitration, and I think that is to be found in either the body of the article, or the report of the open forum discussion that followed the speech, which constitutes the body of the article.

(Testimony of Wayne Lyman Morse.)

Q. Was this during the time that you were sitting as an arbitrator?

A. I think that is the speech that I gave at North Bend.

Q. Mr. Bridges has continued to appear before you in the capacity of an advocate, I believe you said, and as a witness in cases before you?

A. Yes. If you may permit me to add, I have also said that in my opinion Mr. Gregory Harrison, of the Employers, was the most brilliant lawyer I have ever seen work.

Q. And you knew at the time that you made this statement [4599] that Mr. Bridges would appear again before you? A. Yes.

Q. And that you would have to sit and decide for or against Harry Bridges? A. Yes.

Q. In the matters before you? A. Yes.

Q. And you had no compunction of making a statement of that kind? A. Why no.

Q. Now, you used the word "critics." Who did you refer to as "critics?"

A. Well, there are certainly a great many of them. Any critic that would make——

Q. (Interposing) Did you have in mind the Attorney General of the United States?

A. Well, I would have him in mind if he didn't share that view.

(Testimony of Wayne Lyman Morse.)

Q. If he didn't share what view?

A. If it was his view that he did not believe in the democratic process I would say, "Mr. Jackson, my opinion is, on the basis of my experience, that you are wrong."

Q. Did you have him in mind at the time?

A. I had in mind anyone that shared the view that he did not believe, on the basis of my experience, as I have stated. [4600]

Q. Will you answer the question?

A. Yes, I will answer the question if you will put it in a form so it can be answered "Yes" or "No".

Mr. Del Guercio: Read the question.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as follows:

"Q. Did you have him in mind at the time?")

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Let me ask you this question, Mr. Morse. Who is trying to deport Harry Bridges?

A. Who is trying to deport him?

Q. Yes.

A. Why, I didn't know that anybody was trying to deport him. I thought they were trying to find out what the facts are to see whether or not there was a basis for deportation.

Q. Well, now, referring back to this statement, you said you used this languege: "* * * than many of his critics who seek to deport him." Who did you have reference to?

(Testimony of Wayne Lyman Morse.)

A. Those groups that have passed resolutions urging his deportation.

Q. Did you mean any governmental agencies?

A. Well, my statement was a general statement, and still is, that I mean any group that definitely takes the position that he should be deported.

Q. Well, this is a Governmental agency that is taking the stand that he should be deported and it is seeking to [4601] deport him. Did you have that Government agency in mind?

A. You mean the agency that you represent?

Q. Yes.

A. Of course, I think we are arguing a technicality. I am of the opinion that if, as a result of a hearing such as this, your agency should be convinced, on the basis of the record made by the defense, that he is not deportable, then you wouldn't want to deport him.

Q. And if a finding was made that he was subject to deportation——

A. (Interposing) That you would want to, and that is what the hearing is for. But I haven't taken a position, and it would be a surprise to me if you have any pre-judgment on that.

Q. Do you believe that the Attorney General would have issued a warrant for Mr. Bridges' deportation if he did not believe there was some evidence before him to show that he was a member of the Communist Party?

A. I am certain he must have thought at the time a prima facie case existed that justified the hearing.

Q. And when you referred to "* * * critics who seek to deport him * * *" you did not have in mind, I assume, a Governmental agency?

A. I certainly wouldn't have in mind any judicial body because that isn't the way we administer law. We don't pre- [4602] judge a case. I recall that Attorney General Cummings, one time in his career he became convinced——

Q. (Interposing) Or any other Governmental agency?

A. Yes; or any other. I think that is basic in our democratic form of government, that is, to wait and see what the record shows.

Q. Did you wait to see what the record showed before you made this statement?

A. Yes. The record of which I was speaking was my experience with Mr. Bridges, and on the basis of that experience I made the statement.

Q. Did you have in front of you the record that the Government had, that your Government had?

A. I don't recall whether that speech was made before or after the Angel Island hearing. If it was made after I undoubtedly had that in mind because my judgment was, after that hearing, that the decision was proper.

Q. Did you have that record before you, and did you study it, look at it, before you made this statement, the record of either the last hearing, or the record of this proceeding?

A. I didn't have this one before me. That was April 1940.

Q. Did you have the record of the other proceeding before you? [4603]

A. Simply my knowledge of it, if it was prior to the hearing. I don't recall whether that statement was made prior to the Angel Island hearing or afterward. If it was made afterward I say I undoubtedly had in mind that as a background. If I made it prior thereto I simply had my general information based upon my associations through these hearings with him.

Q. You say you made that statement in April 1939?

A. I think it was April 1940. I think your manuscript you have in front of you must bear a date.

Q. I don't have a manuscript, Mr. Morse. I have a pamphlet.

A. All right. You know one in my position can't make a speech but what it gets into various stages of misinterpretation.

Q. Yes. I would be glad to show you what I have in front of me here. I have a pamphlet published by the Harry Bridges Defense Committee, National Headquarters, 593 Market Street, San Francisco, wherein they quote that portion of your speech you testified that you made.

A. They must have taken it from some other published document because they didn't get it from me.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is all.

Presiding Inspector: That is all.

Mr. Grossman: I think we have one or two more questions. Could we have a short recess first? It is past time for our afternoon recess now. [4604]

Presiding Inspector: We will take a short recess.

(Whereupon a short recess was taken.)

Presiding Inspector: Now, Mr. Grossman, we will hear you further.

Mr. Grossman: We have no further questions, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I think you are excused.

(Witness excused.)

Presiding Inspector: Now, if you will call back the witness Craycraft.

ROSCO GEORGE CRAYCRAFT

a witness called by and on behalf of the Alien, having been previously duly sworn, was examined and testified further as follows:

Direct Examination

(Resumed)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, Mr. Craycraft, I think at the noon recess we were talking about the meeting in the Clyde

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Hotel on a Saturday afternoon, at which meeting were present you, Mr. Maurice Cannalonga and myself; and you had covered the conversation to the point, substantially this is it, where Mr. Cannalonga had stated in your presence and in mine that he had told the two FBI agents, Mr. Madala and Mr. Dickstein, that he had never been in a meeting with William Schneidermann and Harry Bridges at the same time; and that he refused to sign a statement to that effect because it would be a falsity. Thereafter, did Mr. Cannalonga say that, referring to the second time when he had [4605] been with the FBI agents, Madala and Dickstein —did he then say to you and to me that one of these FBI agents asked Cannalonga what had become of the girl Cannalonga picked up in Reno?

A. That's right.

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I object to that. I object upon this ground: That the question itself carries only implications and nothing else, and on that ground it is improper and the answer that may have been given thereto is improper.

Mr. Gladstein: This is part of the conversation, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: This you claim to be competent under my ruling as going to impeach the statement that he made, that he was not subject to any intimidation or threats of any kind?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, and in light of the fact that Mr. Del Guercio read into the record in this hearing three statements which the two FBI agents had taken from Mr. Cannalonga. Therefore, the conversation on this Saturday, in which Mr. Cannalonga referred to and refuted those three statements saying they were contradictory, were tied up with his further statements as to why he signed those statements that he gave to the FBI.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, may I have the question read?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.) [4606]

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, if you will notice, counsel apparently has asked that question of Cannalonga.

Mr. Gladstein: No, I didn't. I didn't intend that the question should indicate that. I intended the question merely to ask of this witness—we are going back to the conversation in the Clyde Hotel. I am asking this witness if it isn't a fact that Cannalonga, while he was discussing this second occasion of meeting these two FBI agents, in telling us what he said had taken place, made this statement, namely, that at the second occasion of his meeting with the FBI agents, after certain things had already transpired, then one of the FBI agents asked Cannalonga what had become of the girl that he, Cannalonga, had picked up in Reno. This is Cannalonga's statement.

Presiding Inspector: You may say whether that occurred.

(Testimony of Rosco George Crayeraft.)

A. He did.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did Mr. Cannalonga at the Clyde Hotel say that he, in response to the FBI agent, said, "What girl"? A. That is correct.

Presiding Inspector: This is all under your objection.

Mr. Del Guercio: It is.

Presiding Inspector: Proceed.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did Mr. Cannalonga then say in the Clyde Hotel that the FBI agent had said to him, Cannalonga, "You know [4607] the girl we are talking about."? A. That is right.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that also, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did Cannalonga say in the Clyde Hotel that, referring to the occasion when he was with the two FBI agents, the second occasion, he, Cannalonga, turned hot and cold? A. That's right.

Mr. Del Guercio: The same objection, if the Court please.

Presiding Inspector: What about that? I don't see how that is pertinent.

Mr. Gladstein: This happens to be exactly what he said and this is his picturesque way, I take it.

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, if the Court please, counsel is testifying. He says "This is exactly".

(Testimony of Rosco George Crayeraft.)

Presiding Inspector: I want to hear his argument as to why this is admissible.

Mr. Gladstein: This is Mr. Cannalonga's way of expressing his emotional or psychological reaction to the statement made to him by the FBI agents. It is his way of talking. This witness has already said that he used that expression.

Mr. Del Guercio: There is no evidence in the record to that effect, if your Honor please.

Presiding Inspector: No. But counsel claims, as I under- [4608] stand it, that this whole episode shows intimidation and, therefore, it contradicts what he said on the stand.

Mr. Gladstein: That is right, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: That is one interpretation of it. With that understanding, I will take it.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, your Honor.

Mr. Del Guercio: You say, "episode". Which episode do you mean? The episode that Mr. Gladstein is talking about?

Presiding Inspector: The episode at which inquiry was made concerning this.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did Mr. Cannalonga then say in the Clyde Hotel in your presence and in mine that he, Cannalonga, told the FBI agents "No, I don't know anything about any girl"? A. That's right.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, your Honor, on the same ground.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it. It is part of the history.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Then did Mr. Cannalonga then go on and say that one of the FBI agents had said to him, "Oh, yes. You know who we mean."?

A. That's right.

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that also.

Presiding Inspector: There is an objection to all this [4609] testimony. Go ahead.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did Mr. Cannalonga then say in the Clyde Hotel that one of the FBI agents, referring to the second occasion of Mr. Cannalonga's meeting with Mr. Madala and Mr. Dickstein, proceeded to tell Mr. Cannalonga by name the various places in the various states where Mr. Cannalonga had stayed with a girl?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, if your Honor please.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, I will take it as bearing on the contradiction.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, your Honor.

A. That is correct.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did Mr. Cannalonga in the Clyde Hotel say that the FBI agent told him, described Mr. Cannalonga's itinerary with this girl from the State of Nevada into the State of California, into the State of Oregon and thence into the State of Washington? A. That's right.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, if your

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Honor please, as being incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial and contradicts nothing.

Presiding Inspector: Well, it may not and yet it may. It is the way that it is looked at. I will take it. You see, [4610] he says he wasn't intimidated.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did I at the Clyde Hotel ask Mr. Cannalonga whether the FBI agents on this second occasion had him cold?

Mr. Del Guercio: What is that?

Presiding Inspector: What is that?

Mr. Gladstein: "Had him cold". It is pretty bad language for a lawyer.

Presiding Inspector: I am going to hear the question.

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to counsel's statement. Had whom "cold"? The attorney or the witness or who?

Mr. Gladstein: I will clarify it. I will rephrase the question.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did I ask Mr. Cannalonga in the Clyde Hotel substantially this question:

"Did they have you cold?" A. Yes.

Presiding Inspector: I will allow that.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. In response to that question of mine did Mr. Cannalonga nod his head in the affirmative?

Mr. Del Guercio: Well now, if your Honor

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

please, I submit that questions of this kind, even when they want to derive some implication from what a witness acts or reacts to a certain question, and that kind of a question propounded by what counsel [4611] himself has termed unusual language "even for an attorney", and then seeking to introduce it in this Court and have you believe it, that is indeed unusual "even for an attorney".

Presiding Inspector: Yes. But I think Mr. Gladstein is attempting to show the effect of what he claims is intimidation by the statements which have been proved by this witness that Cannalonga made to Mr. Gladstein. I will take it over your objection.

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes, over my objection. The Court has noted, as I have noted, no doubt, that in answer to one of Mr. Gladstein's questions Mr. Cannalonga said he didn't know any such girl. Now, if he didn't know of any such girl how could it be possible for him to have been intimidated even though ten thousand FBI agents may have accused him and even if they described the itinerary which they traveled? Counsel would have us believe that Cannalonga did make that statement, that he told the FBI men that he didn't know of such a girl. I suppose that is what he is getting this for. He wants us to believe that and this Court to believe that, and Cannalonga told him, Mr. Gladstein, that Cannalonga had stated to the FBI men that he didn't know of such a girl.

(Testimony of Rosco George Crayeraft.)

Presiding Inspector: Yes. But if he subsequently made certain statements somewhat in contradiction of that, I think I will take that.

Mr. Del Guercio: Contradictory in the same inquiry now? In Mr. Gladstein's inquiry? [4612]

Presiding Inspector: Yes. I don't know much about the psychological occurrences, but sometimes they say one thing concerning the opposite sex, and then when matters are called to their attention they change their statements. I think that is what is claimed.

Mr. Gladstein: If I had been unclear in my questioning so that Mr. Del Guercio got an erroneous impression, I would like to state this, your Honor. I don't know what the record shows on this, but it is my intention by my questions to bring out not that Mr. Cannalonga told me that he was denying to me that he knew such a girl, but that in describing what had taken place with the two FBI agents on this second occasion, he Cannalonga, did respond in a certain way to their accusation and his first way was, as the witness has already testified, that he said he didn't know any such girl and then what took place after that. I can't believe for the life of me that Mr. Del Guercio really is serious when he says——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): Never mind whether he is or not. Ask the next question.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will assure counsel and the Court that I do mean every word that I say.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Presiding Inspector: We will take that, too.

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes, you may take that. That may stand.

Mr. Gladstein: What is the last question, please?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as follows: [4613]

"Q. In response to that question of mine did Mr. Cannalonga nod his head in the affirmative?")

A. Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: The witness responded "Yes." I understand the question was whether he indicated by a nod in the affirmative?

Presiding Inspector: Did he nod his head?

Mr. Gladstein: The witness said "Yes".

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. When you said "Yes", you mean that he did do it? A. He did nod his head.

Q. Now, Mr. Craycraft, did Mr. Cannalonga then say in the Clyde Hotel, referring still to this second occasion of this meeting with Mr. Madala and Mr. Dickstein, that the FBI agents then went back to questioning him again concerning Harry Bridges? A. Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, if your Honor please. That isn't contradictory of anything that Mr. Cannalonga said.

Presiding Inspector: Well, I suppose that is preliminary.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Mr. Gladstein: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: That is not contradictory.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did Mr. Cannalonga——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): Are we going to get pre- [4614] liminary things into this thing, too? This is all a conversation, you know.

Presiding Inspector: That is what I mean: preliminary to something that is material occurring thereafter in the conversation.

Mr. Del Guercio: Then I misunderstood the Court's ruling, because I understand that your ruling is that you were only going to admit those portions of Mr. Cannalonga's conversation that tended to contradict statements that he had made on the witness stand here, and nothing else.

Presiding Inspector: That's right. But I think his statement that an occurrence happened and then there was a pause or they went out and took a drink of water would come within the general story of what occurred. I don't think it can be differentiated from the rest. I don't see any great importance to it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did Mr. Cannalonga say that he continued to tell the FBI agents that he knew nothing about Harry Bridges' membership in the Communist Party and that he had never attended any Communist Party meetings with him?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

A. That is right.

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that as being a compound question.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. I will take it. It is com- [4615] pound.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did Mr. Cannalonga say that the FBI agents told him that they wanted him to sign a statement to the effect that he, Cannalonga, had been in Communist Party meetings with Bridges?

A. That's right.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did Cannalonga say that he told the FBI agents that he had never been in such meetings with Bridges and could not make such a statement?

A. That's right.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that aiso.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did Cannalonga say that the FBI agents then told him to return the following day?

A. Correct.

Q. Did Cannalonga say that he did return the following day to see Mr. Madala and Mr. Dickstein?

A. Yes. [4616]

Q. Did he say that they, the FBI agents, on this third occasion had a prepared typewritten statement for him, Cannalonga, to sign? A. Yes.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to it.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did Mr. Cannalonga say that he refused to sign the statement because it contained falsehoods?

A. Yes.

Q. Did Mr. Cannalonga say that one of the FBI agents then turned to the other and asked, "How much will he get under the Mann Act?"

A. Yes.

Mr. Myron: Are these contradictory statements?

Presiding Inspector: Contradictory to the fact that he was not intimidated.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did Mr. Cannalonga say to us in the Clyde Hotel that the two FBI agents on this third occasion computed imprisonment for Cannalonga on charges under the Mann Act at probably 20 years?

A. That is right.

Q. Did Cannalonga say that after that discussion of 20 years the FBI agents handed this statement to him to sign? [4617]

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to the question.

A. Yes.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did Cannalonga say then in the Clyde Hotel that he signed the statement that the FBI agents gave him?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

A. With a few notations of corrections; yes.

Q. Did Mr. Cannalonga—withdraw that. Did I then ask Mr. Cannalonga whether the second statement signed by him for the FBI was also prepared in advance by the FBI? A. Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What was his answer?

A. That it was.

Q. Did I ask him whether it also contained false statements? A. Yes.

Q. What was his answer? A. It did.

Q. Did I ask Mr. Cannalonga whether the third statement signed by him for the FBI was also prepared in advance by the FBI agents? A. Yes.

Q. What was his answer? [4618]

A. That it was.

Q. Did I ask him whether it, too, contained false statements? A. Yes.

Q. What was his answer? A. It did.

Q. Did Mr. Cannalonga say that after he testified in court in this case when he got off the stand the FBI gave him hell because his testimony was not strong enough? A. That is right.

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that.

Presiding Inspector: I will exclude it. It hasn't anything to do with a contradictory statement.

Mr. Gladstein: I think the next question that I wish to ask will show that it does.

(Testimony of Rosco George Crayeraft.)

Presiding Inspector: Perhaps so. We will exclude it until we hear the next question.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did Mr. Cannalonga say that after the FBI men gave him hell because his testimony was not strong enough he said, Cannalonga, to the FBI, "Well, what did you expect?"

A. That is correct.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Strike it out. I will exclude it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did I ask Mr. Cannalonga to come to San Francisco and [4619] testify to the whole truth?

A. Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I have noted here that counsel, in some of his questions, used, "Did I ask," but in some of these other matters wherein the FBI is besmirched, he doesn't indicate that he asked, and put the question in the witness' mouth. Now, I think he ought to be cautioned about that, and he ought to be made to state whether or not he did ask that or not.

Mr. Gladstein: I will be glad to. It is quite apparent, at least to anybody with any intelligence, that by my questioning. I am trying to bring out the way this entire conversation occurred.

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

You withdraw that remark?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes. I am trying to bring out the method in which this conversation occurred. I think the record will show that preliminary after the introductions, it was my intention to bring out from Mr. Craycraft that I asked Mr. Cannalonga to tell about what had taken place in the various FBI meetings in his own way, and that he proceeded to discuss those without questioning by me; that at various points I did interrogate him, I did throw in a question; that after he finished with the first statement——

Presiding Inspector: I don't know what you are talking [4620] about. Go ahead with your questions.

Mr. Gladstein: He wanted to know whether I had proceeded by specific——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): We can find that out from you when you are on the stand.

Presiding Inspector: Neither of you should lead the other into discussions.

Go ahead and ask your next questions.

Mr. Gladstein: What was the last question?

Presiding Inspector: You are talking something about Mr. Cannalonga testifying here in this court room.

Mr. Gladstein: Do you want this without leading questions? I am willing to abide by your Honor's ruling.

Presiding Inspector: It should be without leading questions. This is to show why he isn't here, I suppose.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Mr. Gladstein: To show what took place.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now——

Presiding Inspector: The question is excluded or was it withdrawn? Ask what was said between them with respect to Cannalonga coming down here.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Would you please state to the Court what occurred at that conversation in the Clyde Hotel on that Saturday afternoon [4621] in your presence, and in the presence of Cannalonga, and in the presence of myself, with respect to any discussion relative to Mr. Cannalonga coming down to testify again in this hearing?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, if your Honor please.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it as bearing on his absence.

A. Mr. Cannalonga stated that he would be glad to come down to San Francisco and he would be willing to get up and tell the same story he told us that day, and the only request that he wanted was that he would be allowed to go to Seattle first to see some other parties whom he thought would be involved; and then proceed to Friseo to testify.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, on that occasion was there any discussion with respect to Mr. Cannalonga giving a deposition?

A. Mr. Gladstein asked Mr. Cannalonga if he wanted to take the time out to go to Seattle, would he have any objection to making a deposition at that time that he could take back to Frisco with him.

Mr. Cannalonga said, "No, I will be willing to do that up to the part where it involves the FBI and the Mann Act charges."

Q. Was there any discussion with respect to when such a deposition could be taken? [4622]

A. We agreed that we would meet the next morning, Sunday morning, and have a court reporter present to take the deposition.

Q. Did Mr. Cannalonga say something about wanting to sleep over the matter? A. Yes.

Q. Was that in reference to his going to Seattle and getting some kind of a clearance?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, we didn't make an objection to the last one as leading and suggestive, but clearly this is—of course not that the witness needs it, I don't say that—suggestive.

Presiding Inspector: I don't quite understand the point of this.

Mr. Gladstein: It is all on the question of the deposition, the discussion that took place later on.

Presiding Inspector: The statement before this lawyer?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Mr. Gladstein: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: Well, now, all this occurred after Mr. Cannalonga said he would come down here.

Mr. Gladstein: The witness didn't say that. He said he was ready to come down, but he said that he would come down if he could first go to Seattle and do something.

Presiding Inspector: I understood him to say he was willing to come down and make a clean, come clean, or whatever it is. [4623]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Craycraft, will you state to the best of your recollection all of the things that Mr. Cannalonga said with respect to his coming down and testifying?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, if your Honor please.

Presiding Inspector: I think we have had it once. It is just for clarification. Go ahead.

A. The only point that Mr. Cannalonga raised

Presiding Inspector: What did he say?

A. (Continuing) He said he would come down and testify to everything up to the point that involved the Mann Act charges and the FBI; but if he was going to testify on that he wanted to go to Seattle first to see some other people whom he said were involved; and if it was agreeable to them then he would testify to that part too.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Didn't I state in substance to Mr. Cannalonga that if he was going to testify we wanted nothing but the whole truth and not just part of it?

A. That is correct.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that.

Presiding Inspector: It is perfectly self-serving. I will exclude that.

Mr. Gladstein: I am going to start with the following day, [4624] and I see that it is after our hour for adjournment, and we cannot finish the direct today with this witness anyway.

Presiding Inspector: I think you can.

Mr. Gladstein: No. There are a number of meetings yet to be covered, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: You are not going over what the stenographer has testified to?

Mr. Gladstein: No, but there were other meetings besides that, not with me, but meetings that Mr. Craycraft had with Mr. Cannalonga which I wish brought out in the record.

Presiding Inspector: Let's go along a little ways. Would you rather adjourn?

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, we are willing to abide by the Court's wishes.

Presiding Inspector: We will go on for five or ten minutes. These are short court days for me.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What were the arrangements, if any, Mr.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Craycraft, that were made with respect to meeting Mr. Cannalonga again?

A. I left your room with Mr. Cannalonga to take him back to the ship, but Mr. Cannalonga and I were to work out the time when we could meet the next day, and I was to call you back and let you know what time it would be.

On the way down to the ship we discussed this matter and Mr. Cannalonga said the best time for him to get off would be [4625] around a quarter to ten in the morning. I was to pick him up at a quarter to ten in the morning and bring him up to the Clyde Hotel at ten o'clock.

Q. Did you communicate that information to me? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well——

Presiding Inspector: This is just the history of it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What arrangements, if any, were made with respect to making available a court reporter—withdraw that.

Presiding Inspector: How is that material? You did get a court reporter.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, I would like to have all these facts before the Court because I distinctly recall a statement by Mr. Del Guercio to the effect that I intimidated Mr. Cannalonga, and I would like to have all this come out just the way it happened, rather than allow any such statement to go in unanswered by testimony.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, if the Court please, we have the true facts from this witness here in his own defense that he did not intimidate Mr. Cannalonga.

Mr. Gladstein: I haven't been called as a witness, and I think Mr. Del Guercio knows better than to make a statement like that.

Mr. Del Guercio: On the contrary, he stated——

[4626]

Presiding Inspector: We are getting again into recriminations; criminations and recriminations.

Now, you want to show what was done?

Mr. Gladstein: I certainly do.

Presiding Inspector: All right. Go ahead. Be brief about it. I will take it.

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I understand this is for the purpose of showing that Mr. Gladstein did not intimidate Mr. Cannalonga.

Mr. Gladstein: It is none of your—I will withdraw the remark. I have a right to introduce testimony on any tenable theory and I am not under any limitation by Mr. Del Guercio.

Presiding Inspector: Mr. Del Guercio has a right to object.

Mr. Gladstein: But not to impose conditions beforehand on the purpose for which I ask questions.

Mr. Del Guercio: I have a right to address the Court at any time.

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. On that Saturday after Mr. Cannalonga left

(Testimony of Rosco George Crayeraft.)

my room in the Clyde Hotel, are you familiar with the arrangements, if any, that were made with respect to getting a shorthand reporter available for a deposition?

Mr. Del Guercio: Your Honor, I will object to that as not [4627] asking this witness as to anything that was said in Mr. Cannalonga's presence —"Are you familiar with what arrangements were made?"

Presiding Inspector: I don't think I would go into that, Mr. Gladstein. How is that material?

Mr. Gladstein: All right. If you rule that it is immaterial, I am satisfied.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think it is material. I would like to advance this examination.

Mr. Gladstein: All right.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. On the following morning, on Sunday, did you meet Mr. Cannalonga?

A. I picked him up at the ship, then took him up to the Clyde Hotel to your room.

Q. What time of the day was it when you picked him up?

A. Approximately 9:45 and we were up to your room about 10:00.

Q. And how long were the three of us in the room together?

A. Oh, I would judge approximately an hour and a half.

Q. And were there discussions at that time?

A. Yes.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. Or was there a discussion? A. Yes.

Q. Did I ask Mr. Cannalonga again questions with respect to the meetings that he had with the FBI agents on the occasions that [4628] he described? A. Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that.

Presiding Inspector: Was that in the so-called deposition?

Mr. Gladstein: This is before the deposition.

Presiding Inspector: Oh.

Mr. Del Guercio: There were matters that were not in that deposition that were discussed? I will withdraw my objection.

Presiding Inspector: I will take that.

Mr. Del Guercio: Was that question answered?

The Reporter: Yes.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did I ask Mr. Cannalonga whether all the statements that he had given me in your presence the previous day were true?

A. That is right.

Q. What was his answer?

A. That they were true.

Q. Did I tell Mr. Cannalonga that arrangements had been made to meet at the office of Mr. William Lord, an attorney, for a deposition to be taken?

A. That is right.

Q. Did Mr. Cannalonga say that he was willing to give testimony in the deposition that the statements he had given to the FBI were false, but that he did not want to admit the inci- [4629] dent concerning the Mann Act?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, if your Honor please, on a number of grounds. First of all, that if counsel did ask Mr. Cannalonga such a question he knew that he was misleading and deceiving the Alien because he could not have taken the deposition within the legal conception of that term, a deposition from Cannalonga under those circumstances.

Mr. Gladstein: I don't know why not.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it just the same.

Mr. Gladstein: I would like to hear Mr. Del Guercio's definition of a "deposition".

Presiding Inspector: There may be some misapprehension as to what is meant by the word "deposition". A deposition may be an affidavit, I suppose. A definition may be testimony taken pursuant to letters interrogatory or any commission. The word has a broad significance.

Mr. Gladstein: In general it means a statement under oath, I suppose, and the usual form in this state, of depositions, is that the person giving the deposition is sworn and then the procedure is that he is asked questions to which he gives answers. That is the usual form in this state.

Mr. Del Guercio: Do I understand that in California, and am I correct in stating, that a deposition is usually taken with notice to the other party?

Presiding Inspector: Well, I don't think we need quarrel [4630] over the use of the word. In some places they use depositions in place of affidavits, I understand. In other places they don't. At any rate I don't think we will quarrel over the use of the word. Go ahead.

Mr. Gladstein: Read the question.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. That is correct. He still wanted to make a trip to Seattle before he would make anything in the deposition on that basis; that is, the Mann Act.

Q. Did I ask Mr. Cannalonga to come to the office of the attorney where I would proceed to ask questions and that he was perfectly free to answer, but I wanted no questions answered untruthfully?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that as being self-serving.

Presiding Inspector: I believe that is self-serving.

Mr. Gladstein: What is self-serving about it?

Presiding Inspector: We don't care what you said about the truth.

Mr. Gladstein: It isn't that I said to him that I just wanted him to tell just the truth. It is that I said to him this: That he was free to answer those questions that he wanted and he was free not to answer those questions that he didn't want; but if he chose to answer a question that answer should be a truthful answer and nothing else. And that is important because it developed that at the deposition there are questions which he [4631] chose not to answer.

Mr. Del Guercio: I still object upon the ground that it is self-serving.

Presiding Inspector: I will take so much of it as is included in what he might or might not answer.

Read the question, please.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Presiding Inspector: You seemed to have some doubt that he would tell the truth. Why should you want that?

Mr. Gladstein: Because it is already indicated by the testimony that he was willing to give a part of the truth but not all of it without first going to Seattle.

Presiding Inspector: I know.

Mr. Del Guercio: And—all right.

Presiding Inspector: If you want it I will let you have the question in that form.

Mr. Gladstein: I would like the question in that form.

Mr. Del Guercio: And our objection is that it is self-serving.

Presiding Inspector: Repeat what he did say.

The Witness: Mr. Cannalonga said that he was willing to go up there and he would testify to that part which brought it down to the FBI in a Mann Act charge.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Presiding Inspector: And what did Mr. Gladstein say?

The Witness: Mr. Gladstein said "That is all I want, is [4632-3] the truth, and I will ask you the questions and you answer those questions truthfully. Those questions which you don't want to answer," he says, "you don't have to answer. But if you do answer one of my questions I want a truthful answer."

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did we then proceed to the office of Mr. Lord? A. Yes.

Q. Do you know where it is located?

A. In the Guardian Building on Third and Alder.

Q. And who were the persons that went to that building?

A. Mr. Cannalonga, yourself, myself.

Q. And how did we go from the hotel to the Guardian Building?

A. Drove down in my car.

Q. And when we got to the offices of Mr. Lord whom, if anyone, did we find?

A. Mr. Shoemaker and Mr. Lord.

Q. How long were we in the office of Mr. Lord on that occasion?

A. I believe it would be around an hour and twenty or thirty minutes all told.

Q. And were you present throughout all that took place? A. Yes.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. Were you present while Mr. Cannalonga was there answering [4634] questions? A. Yes.

Q. And while I was there asking questions?

A. Yes.

Q. Was Mr. Lord present? A. Yes.

Q. And Mr. Shoemaker? A. Yes.

Presiding Inspector: Now we will take a recess until tomorrow morning.

(Whereupon, at 4:15 o'clock p.m. an adjournment was taken until Wednesday, May 21, 1941, at 10:00 o'clock a.m.) [4635]

Court Room 276,
Federal Building,
San Francisco, California,
May 21, 1941.

Met, pursuant to adjournment, at 10:00 A.M.

[4636]

PROCEEDINGS

Presiding Inspector: The hearing will proceed. Are you going to continue, Mr. Grossman?

Mr. Grossman: Mr. Gladstein will continue.

Mr. Gladstein: I have been put in a lower chair.

Presiding Inspector: Are you going to change?

Mr. Gladstein: No, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead.

ROSCO GEORGE CRAYCRAFT

called as a witness on behalf of the Alien, having been previously duly sworn, testified further as follows:

Direct Examination (Resumed)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, Mr. Craycraft, we concluded yesterday's hearing at the point, I believe, where you, Mr. Cannalonga and I, on a Sunday morning in May of this year, went to the office of Mr. William Lord and there found Mr. Lord, and a court reporter by the name of Shoemaker. Did I ask you how long we were in that office?

A. Yes. I answered approximately, to the best of my recollection, about an hour and a half.

Q. And were you present during all of that time? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, after the proceedings which took place in that office were over did you go out to see Mr. Cannalonga when he was [4687] leaving?

Mr. Del Guercio: Just a minute. I object to the question, and object to the use of the word "proceedings." There were no proceedings in that office in any sense of the word.

Mr. Gladstein: I will take a suggestion as to the word that should be used.

Presiding Inspector: Transaction. I don't know just what the word would be. Go ahead.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Do you have in mind the question?

Presiding Inspector: The use of a word would not in any way be evidence of any official character of what took place.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Mr. Del Guercio: It characterizes the nature of it.

Presiding Inspector: It might be thought to, but that wouldn't be the inference that this Inspector would draw from it.

Go ahead.

A. I went to the elevator with Mr. Cannalonga, and we agreed there that he was to call me that night at 7:00 o'clock and at that time we were going to discuss ways and means of going to Seattle the next morning. [4638]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did he call you up that evening?

A. No. One of the winches broke down on the ship and he was unable to get to the telephone. So I went down to the ship approximately 8:00 o'clock.

Q. That was on the Sunday night?

A. On a Sunday night.

Presiding Inspector: Can you hear the witness, Mr. Del Guercio?

Mr. Del Guercio: Not very well.

Presiding Inspector: Do the best you can.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did you see Mr. Cannalonga that night?

A. Yes. That night we discussed what would be the soonest time he could get off the ship, and he felt he could get off the ship by noon on Monday and I was to come down to the ship on the next morning at 10:00 o'clock to see if it would be possible for him to get his release.

Q. When you saw Mr. Cannalonga that evening, that Sunday night, where did you see him?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to this line of inquiry, if your Honor please.

Presiding Inspector: I think we might as well get all of the story. I will take it.

A. On the West Kussetta. Terminal No. 1.

By Mr. Gladstein: [4639]

Q. On what part of the ship?

A. On the afterdeck between No. 4 and No. 5 hatch.

Presiding Inspector: This, I take it, is in explanation of why he isn't here.

Mr. Gladstein: It leads up to the last time that Mr. Craycraft saw him.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

By Mr. Gladstein

Q. Was there anybody else present besides yourself and Mr. Cannalong on that occasion?

A. Just Mr. Cannalonga and myself.

Q. How long were you with him at that time?

A. Not over seven or eight minutes. All we were doing was agreeing on what time we would meet the next morning to work out our plans to go to Seattle.

Q. Before you left Mr. Cannalonga that Sunday night did you agree on a time when you should see him again?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

A. The next morning at 10:00 A.M.

Q. Did you see him then? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you see him?

A. I went down to the ship at 10:00 A.M. on Monday morning. The agent of the Marine Firemen was there. He was trying to get a relief so he could get off the ship.

Mr. Myron: Of course, this is objected to, your Honor. [4640]

Presiding Inspector: This I am taking as part of the history of Cannalonga's absence. I don't know whether there is anything of pertinence or not, but I will take it and we will determine that afterwards.

A. (Continuing) And he had stated that they had sent a man uptown already to try to get his license so that he could sail as an electrician; that they expected his relief around noon and he should be there not later than 2:00 P.M. And at 2:00 P.M. he would call me at Third and Couch in Portland.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. How long were you with him on Monday morning? A. Oh, not over five minutes.

Q. Did he call you?

A. He didn't call me at 2:00. He called me at 3:30.

Q. Where were you when he called you?

A. At Maleti's Grocery Store at Third and Couch.

Q. Had you previously told him where he could reach you?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

A. That was agreed between the two of us.

Q. How did he have the telephone number of the Maleti's Grocery?

A. I give it to him so he could reach me there.

Q. You say he phoned you about 3:30 Monday afternoon.

A. He phoned me at 3:30 Monday afternoon, said he had been unable to get his relief, that he was going to try to get off that evening at the latest, and if he hadn't heard from me up to the dinner hour for me to come down to the ship at that time. [4641] And I went down to the ship at about 7:00 P.M. Monday evening.

Q. Did you see him on that occasion?

A. When I first came aboard the ship he was off the ship doing a little shopping. I waited about ten or fifteen minutes, then Mr. Cannalonga came back and I stayed with him until about a quarter to nine or nine o'clock.

Q. On that occasion were you alone or was anyone else present?

A. Mr. Mowery, a member of our union, was with me.

Q. What is his full name?

A. Jack Mowery; M-o-w-e-r-y.

Q. Had the name of Jack Mowery come up in these discussions with Mr. Cannalonga prior to that Monday night?

A. Yes. In previous discussions with Mr. Cannalonga he had made the statement that he wanted to see Jack Mowery, that he happened to be a personal friend of his and he went ahead and give me a little background of when he had been with him before. And he said, if I run into Jack to bring him down to the ship, that he wanted to talk to him.

Q. What took place that Monday night when you, Jack Mowery and Cannalonga were together on the ship?

A. Cannalonga had missed his meal hour. So he went out and made up a big pile of sandwiches, had a whole platter full of them. He brought those in and we sat there and ate sandwiches. We had a drink with our sandwiches, and then he give me more of the history of what went on in Seattle.

[4642]

Q. When you say "What went on in Seattle," are you referring to the times when Mr. Cannalonga was meeting with the FBI agents?

A. He gave me a list of all the places that the FBI agents had said they had checked up on him and found him in these different auto camps and hotels when he was registered with this woman.

Q. Did you make notes in Mr. Cannalonga's presence of this information?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, if your Honor please. I don't like, in court, to characterize this man's testimony, but I will object to this line of inquiry as being entirely improper, irrelevant and immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: You have got everything that you want. What difference does it make?

Mr. Gladstein: All right. Of course, my purpose, if I may state it for the record, in bringing out this fact, is to show the specific data supporting——

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Presiding Inspector: What?

Mr. Gladstein: (Continuing) ——the specific data supporting the charge of intimidation.

Presiding Inspector: I think you have gone far enough.

Mr. Gladstein: All right.

Presiding Inspector: I think you have got everything that [4643] you need. Of course, if cross examination opens this further why you may on rebuttal examine further.

Mr. Gladstein: Thank you.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. On that same evening did Mr. Cannalonga state whether or not he was willing to come to San Francisco and testify and, if so, under what circumstances? A. He did.

Q. What did he say?

A. When we left there it was agreed between Mr. Cannalonga and Mr. Mowery—M-o-w-e-r-y—that Mr. Mowery would come down to the ship the next morning at ten o'clock, and if he was able to get his relief that they would proceed to Seattle, and after leaving Seattle they would come to San Francisco; after he made his trip to Seattle and seen certain parties—he didn't mention the names of these people he had to see—and if they were willing he would come to San Francisco and testify to the whole truth, even including the intimidations of the FBI.

Q. Now, during your conversations with Mr. Cannalonga did he ever state that he believed he was surveillance by representatives of the Government while he, Cannalonga, was working on the ship?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I don't see its materiality. [4644]

Mr. Gladstein: It goes to why these arrangements were being made for Mr. Cannalonga to go to Seattle and then come to San Francisco.

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to counsel's reference to this as "arrangements". I think it should be referred to as "concoctions."

Mr. Gladstein: I move that be stricken.

Presiding Inspector: Yes; I will strike that out. I don't see that that is material, what was in Mr. Cannalonga's mind.

Mr. Gladstein: It is what he stated. Of course, as I remember it, it seems to me that your Honor stated at some time during this question concerning Mr. Cannalonga, that you had received information to the effect that—or, perhaps you had received this information from us, and that we had received it from the north, that there were some representatives—I remember now: I made a statement that some FBI agents were watching that ship on Tuesday morning, and Mr. Del Guercio got up in court and said that wasn't true; that they were not FBI agents, but they were Immigration Inspectors.

Presiding Inspector: I think that is as I recall it.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is a misstatement of counsel.

Presiding Inspector: In a general way, something of that kind occurred.

Mr. Del Guercio: That was on Wednesday.

[4645]

Presiding Inspector: I don't know when it was.

Mr. Gladstein: Was it on Wednesday? Anyway, I think——

Presiding Inspector: Let me hear that question again.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Presiding Inspector: You mean at this time, working on the ship at this time?

The Witness: Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: Maybe the witness saw him. You might ask him if he saw him.

Presiding Inspector: I don't know. I will take the answer for what it is worth. It doesn't seem to be material.

A. Mr. Cannalonga seemed to be under that impression, and that is why——

Presiding Inspector: Did he say that?

The Witness: Yes. That is why he requested—

Presiding Inspector: Did he say that?

The Witness: Yes. That is——

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Presiding Inspector: That is all.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, on that Monday night, after you made notes in Mr. Cannalonga's presence of the information that he gave concerning the data which the FBI agents said they had on Cannalonga with reference to this woman, did Cannalonga himself write anything?

A. Yes. I told Mr. Cannalonga, when I went down the [4646] first part of the evening, that I was leaving for San Francisco that night. So, after he volunteered all this information, and he stated he was going to Seattle, he gave me a note to Harry Bridges telling him that he would meet him in San Francisco on Tuesday night.

(Mr. Gladstein passed a document to Mr. Del Guercio.)

Mr. Del Guercio: We have no objection to this going in evidence, your Honor.

Mr. Gladstein: I haven't shown it to the witness, yet.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. I show you a slip of white paper. Is that the note that Mr. Cannalonga wrote?

A. (Examining paper) That is correct.

Mr. Gladstein: I offer it in evidence.

Presiding Inspector: Received without objection.

(The document referred to was received in evidence and marked Alien's Exhibit No. 24.)

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Mr. Gladstein: If there is no objection I will read this into the record, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Certainly.

Mr. Del Guercio: What?

Presiding Inspector: He wanted to read it into the record.

Mr. Gladstein: "May 5, 1941. Will see you tomorrow nite. Blackie."

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Have you ever seen Mr. Cannalonga since that Monday [4647] night?

A. No, sir.

Q. On that Monday night did you leave Portland?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I object to any further questioning along that line as to what this witness did.

Presiding Inspector: I will receive it just as a termination of the incident. A. I did.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. And by means of what type of transportation?

A. I left there on the 10:20 plane from Portland.

Q. For where?

A. For San Francisco; arriving here about a quarter to three.

Q. And were you in San Francisco all of Tuesday? A. Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday.

Q. Of that week? A. Of that week.

Q. During your various conversations with Mr.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Cannalonga did you on any occasion make any notes in Cannalonga's presence of any of these things that he told you?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, if your Honor pease.

Presiding Inspector: There hasn't been any failure of this man to remember. [4648]

Mr. Gladstein: All right, your Honor.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Craycraft, I direct your attention to a convention of the International Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union in the year 1938. Do you know where such a convention was held?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, if your Honor please.

Presiding Inspector: This is an entirely different subject now?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, it is. And this is preliminary to a different subject. It has nothing to do with Mr. Cannalonga.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

A. In Aberdeen, Washington.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Were you present at the convention?

A. No. I made a trip while the convention was on on the first Saturday after the convention started.

Q. Do you know the date on which you made that trip?

Presiding Inspector: Now, just a moment. Have

(Testimony of Rosco George Crayeraft.)

we had anything about the Aberdeen convention?

Mr. Gladstein: No. But we have had something that relates to it and this is preliminary to that subject. We have had testimony from Mr. Wilmot with respect to an alleged occurrence prior to the Aberdeen convention. [4649]

Presiding Inspector: Will you just wait a moment? I want to send for the record.

Does this simply fix a date?

Mr. Gladstein: No. It is to lay the basis for a conversation to bring out matter directly contradictory to the testimony of Mr. Wilmot.

Presiding Inspector: I am waiting just a moment.

Exactly what was the question?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Presiding Inspector: I will take it so far merely as fixing the date.

A. It was the first Saturday after the first Monday in April, 1938.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. And that enables you to fix it that way, Mr. Crayeraft?

A. Our annual convention starts on the first Monday in April.

Q. And you recall that your trip was on the Saturday following that?

A. That is correct.

Q. When you got to the convention did you have a conversation with Harry Bridges on the general subject of Mr. John M. Brost?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

A. I did. [4650]

Q. Who else was present at that conversation?

Mr. Myron: I object to this line of inquiry, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I haven't any idea of what this is all about.

Mr. Gladstein: Shall I explain it, your Honor?

Presiding Inspector: No, just a moment.

Mr. Del Guercio: If the Court please, this is a conversation apparently had with the Alien who is on trial.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Gladstein: I suppose that means that the conversation is illegal for some reason?

Presiding Inspector: Not competent, and self-serving.

Mr. Gladstein: I beg your pardon?

Presiding Inspector: Not competent, and self-serving.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, you haven't heard the conversation.

Presiding Inspector: No. I suppose that is the objection, I say.

Mr. Gladstein: I haven't heard that stated.

Presiding Inspector: I gleaned that that was the gist of the objection. Maybe I am wrong. I had to guess at it.

The question was exactly what?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Presiding Inspector: Who else was present? I will take that.

A. Jack Mowery, a Trustee of our Union; myself, Secre- [4651] tary of the Portland Local; and I made this trip up there to see Brother Bridges.

Presiding Inspector: No, no, who was present at this particular conversation that you were asked about? That is all that is before us right now.

A. (Continuing) Well, other individuals that came in and out of the room while the conference was going on, and I don't recall their names.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. In what room was the conference being held?

A. Hotel Morck, M-o-r-c-k, in Mr. Bridges room.

Mr. Del Guercio: May I have the name of that hotel, Mr. Reporter?

The Witness: M-o-r-c-k.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Was Matt Meehan present at that conversation at any time?

A. He might have been in and out of the room because other individuals were, but they didn't participate in this discussion.

Q. Now, what was the purpose of the discussion that you sought with Mr. Bridges?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, if your Honor please.

Presiding Inspector: I can't see that it has the slightest relevance. [4652]

Mr. Gladstein: Well, if you don't let him answer the questions it could never become apparent.

(Testimony of Rosco George Crayeraft.)

Presiding Inspector: This is a conversation with Mr. Bridges and some people who are not interested in this proceedings.

Mr. Gladstein: I will be glad to explain it. I asked your Honor if you were willing to let me do so.

Presiding Inspector: No. I think you have got to make such a matter clear.

Mr. Gladstein: I will put it directly this way.

Presiding Inspector: Very well.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. In that conversation, Mr. Crayeraft,——

Presiding Inspector: Don't answer this.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. (Continuing) ——did Mr. Harry Bridges express himself in your presence and in the presence of any others that you have mentioned at that conversation with respect to the question of removal of John M. Brost as an organizer for the CIO in Oregon?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that.

Presiding Inspector: I will reject it. I will exclude the question; not material to what Mr. Bridges may have said to anyone.

Mr. Grossman: Your Honor, may I recapitulate the testimony of Mr. Wilmot that makes this relevant in case your [4653] Honor may not have it in mind?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Grossman: Mr. Wilmot—and I am stating it from memory, but I think I have it correct in substance—stated that there was a meeting at the Lennox Hotel at which there was a discussion concerning the removal of John Brost from a CIO position in Oregon.

Mr. Wilmot stated that it was made clear before that meeting began and during that meeting that Harry Bridges desired to remove John Brost from that position; that he had this meeting, which Wilmot called a Communist meeting, convened for the purpose of discussing that thing and reaching a conclusion similar to the one that Mr. Bridges already had, that Mr. Brost should be removed; that when this meeting had reached that conclusion then he, Mr. Bridges, had the power and the willingness to cause Mr. Brost to be removed. All right.

Therefore, there is involved necessarily in that at that time, or else Mr. Wilmot's testimony is not correct, the fact that Mr. Bridges first desired that John Brost should be removed and, second, would if this so-called Communist meeting decided to do so definitely follow out their decision to remove Mr. Brost? Therefore, it becomes relevant to show not just as a statement of Mr. Bridges but as action of Mr. Bridges that shortly after that time—very shortly after it, I think it will appear to be two, three or four days, at least a very short time after that—Mr. Bridges and, as I say, not as words, [4654] but as action, when being confronted with the request by people interested that Mr. Brost be removed, not only refused to do so, but stated his position, which was thoroughly inconsistent with what Mr. Brost had testified.

In other words, we are dealing here not only with——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) That would be nothing more than what Mr. Bridges can cover by his own testimony, and what he said to someone else I rule as immaterial and, therefore, I reject this question.

Mr. Grossman: Isn't it true, your Honor, that what one says can contribute not only words, but action also?

Presiding Inspector: It may be.

Mr. Grossman: In other words, if a request or demand is made, if that demand is refused, that is not just words but that is action. That is action of Mr. Bridges which is completely inconsistent with his state of mind as Mr. Wilmot testified to it.

Presiding Inspector: I suppose that was only conclusion of Mr. Wilmot as to what Mr. Bridges' state of mind was. I will reject this testimony. We will have no more argument about it.

Mr. Gladstein: May I ask a question, your Honor?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Gladstein: Suppose Mr. Bridges at the convention had publicly and openly expressed himself on the subject of Mr. John Brost in a way completely inconsistent with what Mr. [4655] Wilmot said Mr. Bridges had been just prior to that time, or as of the same time; would we not be permitted to prove it by people who heard Mr. Bridges?

Presiding Inspector: Well, I am not going to answer hypothetical questions of that kind.

Mr. Gladstein: Well,——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I exclude this question. Now, go on to something else.

Mr. Gladstein: I wish to make an offer of proof, then.

Presiding Inspector: You have already shown what you want by the argument. What more will the offer add?

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Craycraft, at the time that you spoke to Mr. Bridges in the hotel that you have mentioned did Mr. Bridges take any action in your presence to reject a request for the removal of John M. Brost?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that on the same ground, if your Honor please.

Presiding Inspector: I don't see any materiality to it or relevancy. Therefore I will exclude it.

Mr. Gladstein: By that ruling does your Honor wish to convey the implication to us, as defense counsel, that you regard also as irrelevant the testimony of Mr. Wilmot on this question of the alleged desire of Mr. Bridges to have Mr. Brost removed and the alleged method? [4656]

Presiding Inspector: I can't sufficiently remember the testimony of Mr. Wilmot to answer that question, which I think is improperly put to me.

(Testimony of Rosco George Crayeraft.)

Mr. Grossman: Your Honor, may I ask this, then, which will properly raise the question? If it is immaterial whether Mr. Bridges had the state of mind in the beginning of April, 1938 to remove Mr. Brost, if it was agreed to by a Communist meeting; if that is immaterial, because this goes to that same question, I now move to strike all the testimony of Mr. Wilmot dealing with the alleged Lennox Hotel meeting, because this is the same subject matter we are now asking Mr. Crayeraft.

Presiding Inspector: You may show anything that occurred at the Lennox meeting. You may show by Mr. Bridges what his intentions were. You can't show by a witness that Mr. Bridges at some different time made some inconsistent statement.

Mr. Grossman: In the first place, it is not a different time. It is the same period of time because it is close by two or three days. Secondly, it is not a statement. It is action. It was stated that Mr. Bridges——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Now, Mr. Grossman, do you understand that the Inspector has the right to rule on the acceptance and exclusion of evidence?

Mr. Grossman: That is right.

Presiding Inspector: Isn't it the duty of counsel to accept the decision and go on to the presentation of evidence?

Mr. Grossman: I am making a new motion now, your Honor, [4657] not dealing with Mr. Crayeraft's testimony.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Presiding Inspector: I deny that motion. Now go on.

Mr. Gladstein: May we state an offer of proof for the record?

Presiding Inspector: No, because you clearly show what you want to prove.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, your Honor, for our clarification, because the balance of our case involves matters of this kind, would you be good enough to let us know what your position is on this?

Our theory is, your Honor, that if a witness testifies that Mr. Bridges at a certain meeting, which the witness characterizes in his own way, and that the subject for discussion was "X" and Mr. Bridges' position was pro-X, are we not permitted to show that actually in fact through witnesses that we can produce Mr. Bridges' position was not pro-X but was anti-X. Would that not go to the credibility, to the weight to be given to the testimony of the Government's witness who says there was such a meeting and that Mr. Bridges' position was pro-X?

Presiding Inspector: I would say that what Mr Bridges said at other times does not establish that and isn't pertinent. What Mr. Bridges may testify himself about these matters——

Mr. Gladstein: (Interposing) Well, you must remember, your Honor, that Mr. Wilmot did not claim that Mr. Bridges was present at this meeting. Mr. Wilmot said that he saw Mr. [4658] Bridges first—I am not even sure that he said that, but I think he did. Then there was a meeting later on at which he said Mr. Bridges was not present, but at which Mr. Bridges' policy or desires were laid down by someone.

Now, can we not show to go to the very essence of that testimony, which we contend is fabricated—can we not show that Mr. Bridges' position since he couldn't have talked about his position there, when he is not even claimed to be there; that his position on that very same subject at that very same period of time in various places that he was is contrary to the position claimed by the Government's witness?

Presiding Inspector: You are showing something that occurred afterwards.

Mr. Gladstein: It happened afterwards by a few days.

Presiding Inspector: Afterwards by a few days?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: I don't see that it has any pertinence to or bearing on what his position was at the time. [4659]

Mr. Grossman: If I may say——

Mr. Myron: (Interposing) With all due courtesy to counsel for the Alien I think the Court has ruled on the admissibility of this evidence and that there should be no further argument. There is no question about its admissibility.

Presiding Inspector: I will conduct these proceedings.

Mr. Grossman: If your Honor please, for the purpose of clarification may I call this to your attention——

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Presiding Inspector: I have this fairly clearly in mind.

Mr. Grossman: I am positive about this: Mr. Wilmot testified concerning this Lennox Hotel meeting. Mr. Wilmot, at various times in his examination, gave several different dates as the time of that meeting; one of those dates was April 1st or 2nd, of 1938; another one of those dates was April 12th of 1938. Now, we may think that one or another of those dates was what he should have intended, perhaps, or something like that; but nevertheless, he testified equally to both dates. He did not correct this other reference and state "I now take it back."

This meeting that Mr. Craycraft is now testifying to took place in between those two dates. In other words, before the meeting at the Lennox Hotel, if the meeting at the Lennox Hotel took place on April 12th.

I wonder if that doesn't change the perspective?

Presiding Inspector: I will have to read the testimony of [4660] Mr. Wilmot, I see, to refresh my recollection.

Mr. Gladstein: Does your Honor wish us to wait on this until you have done so?

Presiding Inspector: Yes. You can go on with something else?

Mr. Gladstein: That is the only other subject matter I desire to cover with Mr. Craycraft.

Presiding Inspector: We will take a short recess. I will look it up. Was that on direct or cross?

Mr. Grossman: I believe you will find different dates on both. I wish I could shorten the time. You will probably have to read both.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Presiding Inspector: We will take a short recess.

[4661]

Presiding Inspector: Now, I have read the testimony which is to the effect that at this meeting at the Lennox Hotel, which happened some time not too definitely fixed, that "Jo-jo" or Joe Ring said that it was Mr. Bridges' intention to remove both O'Grady and Brost. But there is nothing to show that that is the fact except that Mr. Bridges said that Jo-jo would give him the line, or something of that kind. But that's entirely un-checked up.

It appears at this meeting that Ring somewhat definitely stated that Mr. Bridges would attend to the matter, and at the meeting the witness Wilmot said that he objected to the removal of Brost, that Brost was his friend, and that he didn't want his place, which had been suggested that he should have, and that at the meeting there was a general vote, or it was the conclusion that this should be done, but it should be done subject to the ratification of Mr. Bridges. He had independent action.

There is testimony that Mr. Wilmot afterwards saw Mr. Bridges, told Mr. Bridges he didn't want the job and there was no very definite statement by Mr. Bridges at that meeting.

Now, it is pretty shadowy.

Mr. Gladstein: Mr. Wilmot's testimony?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Presiding Inspector: To show that it was not Mr. Bridges' intention to remove Brost, I don't think it would affect the credibility of Mr. Wilmot to any substantial extent. However, in order that you may have no opportunity to complain on this [4662] point I will let you show what Mr. Bridges said. I think it may corroborate Mr. Wilmot, as a matter of fact.

Do you think it will corroborate Mr. Wilmot?

Presiding Inspector: I think it will to me. I don't know.

Mr. Gladstein: Notwithstanding your Honor's statement we desire to have the facts in there.

Was there a question that I asked which was not permitted? I would like to hear that last question.

Presiding Inspector: I think you will have to go away back.

Mr. Gladstein: I won't ask the reporter to get his notes. I think I can recall it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, referring to this meeting that you had with Mr. Bridges in the hotel in Aberdeen—By the way, what is the name of that hotel?

A. I believe they pronounce it "Morck."

Q. How do you spell it?

A. M-o-r-c-k.

Q. At the Morck Hotel did Mr. Bridges take any action at that meeting with reference to a request to have John M. Brost removed?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, if your Honor please.

Presiding Inspector: I will sustain the objection in that form. Let us hear what the request was, who it came from.

Mr. Gladtsein: All right. I will follow your Honor's [4663] suggestion.

Presiding Inspector: It pre-supposes a lot of things, your question.

Mr. Gladstein: I will follow your Honor's suggestion.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Craycraft, in your own words, please tell what took place at this meeting that you, Mr. Mowery and Mr Bridges were present at, with the occasional presence or the intermittent presence of Mr. Matt Meehan, or others whom you do not remember?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to the form of the question.

Presiding Inspector: Now, has he given the date of this as closely as he can?

Mr. Gladstein: He gave the exact date, which he said was the Saturday following the first Monday of the month of April, 1938. I think a calendar would fix that.

Presiding Inspector: All right.

Mr. Gladstein: And it is my impression that that date is April 9th, but I am not certain.

Presiding Inspector: Very well. On April 9th or thereabouts.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

A. In March of 1938——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) No, you are asked about April. [4664]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Tell us about what was discussed at this meeting, Mr. Craycraft, in Mr. Bridges' room. What did you say?

A. I have to give the reason why I went up there.

Presiding Inspector: No, never mind. We will assume that you are probably there. Go ahead.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. You can give your reason by referring to the conversation that actually occurred at that time.

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, if your Honor please, I will object to counsel instructing him as to what he may or may not give.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, that is merely amplifying his question and explaining it. Now, at this meeting—I will ask the question and perhaps it will satisfy—was there some discussion and some decision as to the removal of Brost or O'Grady from their positions or either of them?

The Witness: I requested Bridges as Coast CIO Director that Brother Brost, O'Grady, would be removed from their positions in thhe State of Oregon and the funds that was expended to maintain the office and their salaries be turned over to the Portland Industrial Union Council; that the Council have full charge of these funds, and if it was necessary to send an organizer into any certain area or any certain industry that they be fully responsible for the funds. [4665]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. When you say "they" do you mean the Portland Industrial Union Council?

A. Portland Industrial Union Council.

Mr. Del Guercio: I move his entire answer be stricken.

Presiding Inspector: I will let it stand. It is really at my suggestion. Go ahead. That is to explain the situation.

A. (Continuing) Brother Bridges stated to me that he had received——

Presiding Inspector: Was this in public, in the meeting?

A. (Continuing) In the meeting where I made this request.

Brother Bridges stated to me that it would be impossible to carry out my suggestion; that he had already received letters from the National CIO; that he would have to dispense with these officers eventually anyway; second, it would be against the policy of the National CIO to turn this money over to the Industrial Union Council; that it would be more in the matter or in the form of a subsidy for the Council. He also stated that his policy had been, as Coast CIO Director——

Presiding Inspector: We don't care anything about his general policy.

(Testimony of Roseo George Craycraft.)

Mr. Gladstein: That is not general; it goes to Mr. Brost.

Presiding Inspector: We want his attitude toward Mr. Brost.

Mr. Gladstein: He is going to come to that.

[4666]

Presiding Inspector: He had better come to it right now.

A. (Continuing) All right; that as long as Mr. Brost had been appointed, because he was elected as President of the Portland Local, as long as he was elected by a referendum vote, that he would remain in office as long as the office would be maintained; and that had always been his policy and he was going to adhere to that policy of appointing officials in appointive positions who had been elected by the membership.

Presiding Inspector: So he rejected the proposition to remove Mr. Brost and Mr. O'Grady?

The Witness: That is correct.

Presiding Inspector: That is all you need. That is in accordance with Mr. Wilmot's testimony.

Mr. Gladstein: What?

Presiding Inspector: In accordance with Mr. Wilmot's testimony, I suppose.

Mr. Grossman: I don't think it is, your Honor.

Mr. Gladstein: I think it is 100 per cent inconsistent. I can't understand why your Honor says that.

Presiding Inspector: I just read the testimony. I think you haven't it well in mind. It is what he submitted to Mr. Bridges. Matters occurred in this meeting, and a dispute had arisen. They hadn't fully followed this Joe Ring, and it was submitted to Mr. Bridges. This gentleman submitted this to Mr. Bridges and Mr. Bridges rejected it. [4667]

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Mr. Grossman: I think you will find that on cross examination——

Presiding Inspector: I read it.

Mr. Grossman: There was something else on cross examination.

Presiding Inspector: There may be.

Mr. Grossman: When I asked the specific questions about this meeting with Mr. Bridges, which he testified to on direct examination, he claimed to have taken place after the Lennox Hotel meeting, then he said he wasn't even sure there had been a meeting with Mr. Bridges. On cross examination, when I tried to get the details, he said: "I am not even sure I discussed this with Mr. Bridges after the meeting." You are stating what he said on direct, but on cross he stated he wasn't sure of such a meeting taking place.

Presiding Inspector: If there wasn't such a meeting between Mr. Bridges and Mr. Wilmot, this was the presentation of the matter, or one of the presentations to Mr. Bridges, and Mr. Bridges rejected the suggestion of this witness.

Mr. Gladstein: Does your Honor have in mind the testimony of Mr. Wilmot where he says that it was Bridges' purpose to have Brost removed and Bridges wanted this Communist meeting to O.K. that?

Presiding Inspector: Where did he get that idea?—From Mr. Ring. [4668]

Mr. Gladstein: It doesn't make any difference.

Presiding Inspector: It isn't any evidence he got it from anything except what Mr. Ring said, except that Mr. Bridges said that Mr. Ring would give them the line.

Mr. Gladstein: There is something else too. Wilmot said at this meeting the discussion was to the effect that Brost was to be removed and that Wilmot was to be put in his place, and we are showing the facts are exactly the contrary; that that was never Bridges' position.

Presiding Inspector: Wilmot never claimed he was put in his place. I say, Mr. Wilmot was never put in his place and doesn't so claim. He said he didn't want to be put there.

Mr. Gladstein: He said there was a decision that he was to be put in the place.

Presiding Inspector: Of the Fraction—we have to take this up when the matter is considered. I have allowed you to put this in. I say it might corroborate Mr. Wilmot. You took the risk of that. Perhaps it doesn't and perhaps it does. That is a matter to determine. I think it is of very doubtful materiality still.

Go ahead.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Who was the ranking official in the State of Oregon in the longshore unions at the time that you had this discussion with Mr. Bridges? [4669]

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to the question as being immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: What discussion?

Mr. Gladstein: The discussion in the Morck Hotel.

Presiding Inspector: It doesn't make any difference what you call it, whatever happened at the Morck Hotel; that is all right.

Mr. Gladstein: I am asking now for identification as to who was the ranking or top official among the longshore unions in the State of Oregon.

A. I was the Secretary of the Local in Portland.

Mr. Gladstein: You may cross examine.

Cross Examination

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. You testified you first met Cannalonga in the 1936-1937 strike, is that right?

A. That is correct.

Q. How often did you meet Cannalonga during the 1936-1937 strike?

A. In the Strike Committee meetings.

Q. How many times?

A. Well, I can't give you the exact number. Some days we would hold Strike Committee meetings once a day, and some days two or three times, and sometimes we would skip a day.

Q. How many times would you meet him?

A. The minutes, or record, would show it. [4670]

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. Don't you know?

Mr. Gladstein: I object to the question as argumentative. The witness hasn't been given an opportunity to finish his explanation as to how many meetings there could have been.

Mr. Del Guercio: I didn't ask him how many meetings there were. I asked him how many times he had met Cannalonga. The witness should know that. He said he didn't know.

Mr. Gladstein: I move that that be stricken as a misstatement of the evidence.

Presiding Inspector: I will let the evidence stand as it is.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. How many times did you see Cannalonga after the 1936-1937 strike up to the time you state you saw him on April 30?

A. I never seen him.

Q. Did you correspond with Mr. Cannalonga during that period of time from the 1936 strike to the time you saw him on April 30, 1941?

A. No.

Q. Was he ever a member of your union?

A. No.

Q. Were you an officer of the union during the 1936-1937 strike?

A. I was Chairman of the relief Committee.

Q. Is that an office? A. Yes. [4671]

Q. A paid office? A. Not a paid office.

Q. Were you a paid officer of your union during the 1936-1937 strike?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

A. No; we had no paid officers during the strike period.

Q. Who was the President of the Union at that time, of your local?

A. I wouldn't say positively at that time, but I believe it was Bob Smith.

Q. Was he a paid officer?

A. No one is paid during strikes.

Q. Were you a paid officer at any time after the 1936 strike?

A. I went in as Secretary of the Local Union in March 1937.

Q. That is the first time you had a paid position?

A. That is the first paid position I held.

Q. What is the local number of your union?

A. At that time it was Local 38-78 of the ILA.

Q. You say you were on the Strike Committee during the 1936 strike. Let me have the names of some, or all the members of the Strike Committee?

A. It would be impossible for me to remember all the names.

Q. Give me as many as you can? [4672]

A. Charles Peabody.

Q. Charles Peabody. Is this the Strike Committee of your own union, or the Joint Strike Committee, if there was a Joint Strike Committee?

A. Well, we had our own Strike Committee of the Local Union, and then we had a Strike Committee of all the unions.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. Were you a member of both?

A. I was a member of both committees.

Q. Let me have the names of those that you can recall on the Strike Committee of your Local Union first.

A. Henry Luch—L-u-c-h. It is going to be almost impossible to answer that because I have——

Presiding Inspector: Do the best you can.

A. (Continuing) I have been a member of the Executive Board all the time, and of the Strike Committee, and I believe it would be a confusing question, or answer. [4673]

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Would be a confusing question to whom?

A. Yes. I might name men that had been members of the Executive Board either prior to that time or right after that time. I believe if you want that question answered what you should get is the roll call of the strike committee.

Q. You mean that your answer is that you don't know who the members of the strike committee were of your Local Union?

Mr. Gladstein: Just a moment! I object to that as argumentative, improper question.

Presiding Inspector: I will let the witness tell the names as far as he can. Of course, he has explained that he may make mistakes.

Give them as well as you can.

A. Well, Johnny Beaton, Frank Brost, John Brost——

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. (Interposing) Wait a minute! John Brost?

A. John Brost.

Q. Charles Peabody also?

A. Charles Peabody. Frank Brost.

Presiding Inspector: Beaton, did you say?

The Witness: Beaton.

Presiding Inspector: Did you get Beaton, too?

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. How do you spell that?

A. B-e-a-t-o-n. [4674]

Q. Do you know his first name?

A. John. Bruce Borden.

Q. I didn't get that.

A. Bordon; B-o-r-d-e-n.

Q. And his first name?

A. Brude. Have you got Frank Brost? Have you got Frank Brost?

Q. Yes. A. M. Norbeck, Frank Leedy.

Q. Frank who?

A. Leedy, L-e-e-d-y. Fred Games.

Q. Will you spell that last name?

A. G-a-m-e-s. Well, I wouldn't say definitely on the rest right now, I may recall some.

Q. That is all that you can recall at this time. How many members were there on the committee, strike committee of your local union?

A. It varies at different times. Sometimes the committee would be larger some weeks. It varies, but we generally start in with around twenty-five.

Q. Start in with about twenty-five?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

A. Which is our normal Executive Board.

Q. On what strike committee was Cannalonga?

A. On the Marine Firemen.

Q. Marine Firemen's? A. Yes. [4675]

Q. Now, can you give me the names of any other members of the Marine Firemen's Strike Committee during that time?

A. No, I couldn't.

Q. Not a single one?

A. Not a single one, because Cannalonga done most of the speaking for the Marine Firemen.

Q. Now, was there also a Joint Strike Committe? A. There was.

Q. Huh? A. There was.

Q. Now, you served on the Joint Strike Committee?

A. I was very inactive on the Joint Strike Committee because the Joint Strike Committee met in the day time and I had complete charge of the commissary and the relief. So my duties on the Joint Strike Committee was very nil.

Q. How many meetings of the Joint Strike Committee would you say that you attended?

A. My meetings of mostly with the Joint Strike Committee would be to go in the morning and make my report on the activities, expenditures and so on and what was going on, and then go about my regular duties as Chairman of the Relief Committee.

Q. How many times did you do that?

A. Oh, in the normal course of the strike I should say around 40 or 50 times.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. And did you ever see Cannalonga during those 40 or [4670] 50 times that you did those things? A. Yes.

Q. How many times?

A. Well, I couldn't say upon how many times.

Q. About?

A. Well, I would be safe in saying 20.

Q. Did you know Cannalonga well at that time?

A. Yes, because he was fighting like the devil to protect the firemen.

Q. What?

A. He was fighting to protect the firemen, the relief, to keep up the soup kitchen and so on.

Q. Now, what are the names of some of the other members?

Presiding Inspector: Of what?

Mr. Del Guercio: Of this Joint Strike Committee.

A. Well, I wouldn't say to be positive.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. What?

A. I wouldn't say to be positive.

Q. Cannalonga is the only one you remember?

A. Oh, I can remember several more, all right. But——

Q. (Interposing) I will give you all the time you want to remember.

Mr. Gladstein: I move that that be stricken as not a question.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. I don't suppose that is. [4677]

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Mr. Gladstein: I am wondering about the materiality of this, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I don't see it.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, I will object to it.

Presiding Inspector: I will let him answer, but I don't see the materiality.

The Witness: In answering a question like that——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Well, do the best you can.

The Witness: (Continuing) ——I would rather have the records of the Strike Committee and go over it, because I don't want to involve anybody.

Presiding Inspector: Do the best you can. You won't involve anybody.

Mr. Del Guercio: The materiality of this, if your Honor please, is that I doubt that this witness saw Mr. Cannalonga during that period of time.

Mr. Gladstein: I move that that be stricken as an improper statement and hardly becoming someone who purports to be a counsel in a case.

Mr. Del Guercio: Wel. now, what do you purport to be?

Presiding Inspector: Now, both of you!

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, if your Honor please,

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) You may address the Inspector if you are going to quarrel. I don't see any point in these constant interchanges of recriminations. [4678]

(Testimony of Rosco George Crayeraft.)

Let the witness answer as best he can.

The Witness: I believe I answered this last question.

Presiding Inspector: Ask the next question. He says he has answered it.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you know Cannalonga before the 1936-'37 strike? A. No, sir.

Q. Had you ever met him?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Anywhere? A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. At any time?

A. I might have seen him on the ship, but I don't recall him.

Q. Have you ever sailed on a ship?

A. I never have.

Q. Now, you said that sometime in April you were down here in San Francisco, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

A. And you live in Portland?

A. That is correct.

Q. And when were you down in San Francisco in April?

A. It was on my way back from the ILWU convention at Los Angeles.

Q. When did that convention occur?

A. It started on Monday the 7th. [4679]

Q. When did you leave?

A. I left Los Angeles on Wednesday of the next week.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. By what mode of transportation?

A. Pardon?

Q. By what mode of transportation?

A. Car; automobile.

Q. Your own car? A. No.

Q. Whose car?

A. Dewey Van Brunt of Longview.

Q. Who? A. Dewey Van Brunt.

Q. And what was your destination at that time?

A. Portland.

Q. Did you go to Portland?

A. No. We stopped over in 'Frisco.

Q. And when did you arrive in San Francisco?

A. Well, it was on Wednesday. I believe it was the 16th of the month.

Q. The 16th of April?

A. If I had a calendar I could be sure of the date.

Q. How long did you remain in San Francisco?

A. Thursday and Friday.

Q. Two days? [4680] A. Two days.

Q. Did you see Harry Bridges on those two days? A. On Friday evening.

Q. Friday evening. Where did you stay? Where did you stay? A. Lincoln Hotel.

Q. What hotel? A. Lincoln.

Q. Both days? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you register in your own name?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You saw Bridges in Los Angeles, did you not? A. Yes, sir.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. At the convention? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see him every day down there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you say you saw Bridges again Friday in San Francisco? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where? A. In his office.

Q. Who else was there?

A. Jack Price, Vice-President of the International [4681] Longshoremen.

Q. What? A. Jack Price.

Q. P-r-i-c-e? A. P-r-i-c-e.

Q. Anyone else?

A. Not that I can recall.

Q. How long did you remain in Bridges' office at that time?

A. Oh, I judge about 20 minutes.

Q. Did you see Bridges again at any other time during your stay in San Francisco?

A. None that I can recall.

Q. Where did you stay in Los Angeles during the time of the convention?

A. I don't remember the name of the hotel, but it is just where Avalon Street runs,—well, I can't even recall the name of that street.

Q. Did you stay at more than one hotel?

A. Just the one.

Q. You say it is on Avalon?

A. Well, it's right near—I believe Avalon runs into San Pedro, it seems like. It's on that corner.

Q. Is that the same hotel that Bridges stopped at? A. I don't know where he stopped.

(Testimony of Rosco George Crayeraft.)

Q. Are you married? [4682] A. Wife.

Q. Was your wife with you in Los Angeles and in San Francisco? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, you say the first time you saw Cannalonga was on April 30, 1941, after this 1936-'37 strike? A. That is right.

Q. And you saw him where?

A. On the West Cussetta at Irving dock.

Q. And who went with you?

A. I drove my own car down, but a man by the name of Rodman took me down or directed me to the ship.

Q. Who is Rodman?

A. Secretary of the Bridges Defense Committee in Portland.

Q. Are you on the Bridges Defense Committee also? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you tell Rodman what you were going down there for? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Did Rodman go with you on the ship?

A. He went on the ship to show me where Cannalonga's room was and then he immediately left and went ashore.

Q. Did he see Cannalonga? Did Rodman see Cannalonga? A. Yes.

Q. Rodman didn't remain there during your conversation [4683] with him?

A. Cannalonga wasn't in his room, so we had to go up forward to look for him.

Q. Both you and Rodman?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

A. I went up—I went on up forward to speak to some of the longshoremen on the ship. Rodman stood on the 'midships deck. Cannalonga come by and he come up to the forward end and yelled at me, and then I came on down.

Q. And then Rodman went away?

A. Rodman went ashore.

Q. Immediately? A. Immediately.

Q. After you had located Cannalonga?

A. That is correct.

Q. Where did you locate Cannalonga on the ship?

A. Just as you crawl up from No. 2 hatch up on 'midships deck.

Q. Was anyone with Cannalonga at the time?

A. No.

Q. What did you do then?

A. We went on into his room.

Q. Who suggested that you go into his room?

A. Cannalonga. He led the way.

Q. You went with him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you say you had a few drinks? [4684]

A. Oh, I wouldn't say "a few". It was only one.

Q. Not more than one? A. Pardon?

Q. More than one drink? A. Only one.

Q. Only one? A. Yes.

Q. Who offered to have a drink, you or Cannalonga? A. Cannalonga.

Q. Did he have a bottle?

A. He had a bottle.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. How many drinks did Cannalonga have?

A. Cannalonga didn't have a drink. He said he was busy working on the winches.

Q. Is that the only time you saw him on April 30, 1941?

A. No, I went on over to the Union meeting and then I came back that night and seen him again.

Q. What time did you go on the ship before the meeting? What time was it?

A. Oh, I would judge it would be around 6:30.

Q. Did Rodman have to go back to the meeting, too?

A. No. This is a regular longshore meeting. He couldn't attend that.

Q. How long were you with Cannalonga the first time before the meeting?

A. Oh, just a few minutes. I wouldn't say over eight [4685] or ten minutes; around there.

Q. Now, I believe you testified Cannalonga was glad to see you? A. He was.

Q. And you hadn't seen him since 1936?

A. No. He impressed me that the man had something on his mind and he wanted to get it off.

Q. Wanted to get it off to you?

A. Well, I have an idea I substituted for any worker knowing him up there during the 1936-'37 strike. He would have been glad to talk to any of them.

Q. How much do you weigh?

A. How much do I weigh?

Q. Yes. A. About 203 pounds.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. Are you known as the "strong arm man" of your Union?

A. We have no "strong arm men" in our Union.

Q. Do you have a beef squad? A. No, sir.

Q. You have never been on a "beef squad"?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you ever been in a fight?

A. No, sir.

Q. Never? [4686]

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you ever been on what is called the "goon squad"? A. No, sir.

Q. Are you a private detective?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you ever been a private detective?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you ever been employed as one?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did Rodman say he knew Cannalonga?

A. I don't recall him ever making a statement whether he knew him or whether he didn't.

Q. Do you know if Rodman knew Cannalonga?

A. I don't know.

Q. You said he took you down to the ship?

A. That is correct.

Q. Did Rodman say he knew where Cannalonga was at that time?

A. That is right. He came up to my house while I was eating dinner and said that Cannalonga was down on the West Cussetta and that he had talked to him that afternoon and he mentioned about if he would like to have a talk with Craycraft, and Cannalonga said "Yes". So he said "I'll go out and see if he is out home and I will bring him down to the ship."

Q. Oh, then Rodman had first seen Cannalonga on April 30th? [4687] A. Correct.

Q. In the afternoon. And Rodman had made the arrangements for you to see Cannalonga that evening? A. That is correct.

Q. Is that right? Did Rodman tell you what Cannalonga told him?

A. He never had any conversation with Cannalonga whatsoever, according to what he told me, outside of asking Cannalonga if he wanted to have a talk with me.

Q. Well, when did you—did you have any conversations at all with Rodman prior to April 30th?

A. No, sir.

Q. When did you see him on April 30th, Rodman?

A. About 5:30 in the evening when he came out to my house.

Q. 5:30 in the evening. And you had never seen him before April 30th?

A. I haven't seen him since I got back from San Francisco, as I can recall, up until April 30th.

Q. And then you saw him on April 30th, you say, about 5:30 P.M.? A. That is correct.

Q. Now, you say you went back to the ship that evening after the meeting, after your Union meeting? A. That is right.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. And was there a meeting of your Union?

[4688]

A. No, there wasn't a quorum present, so the meeting adjourned for lack of quorum.

Q. Who was the Chairman, if there was any? What kind of a meeting was it to be?

A. Union meeting.

Q. Well,——

A. (Interposing): A regular Union membership meeting.

Q. Membership meeting?

A. In the Harmony Hall in Portland.

Q. Where? A. Harmony Hall.

Q. Was it to be a regular meeting?

A. Special meeting called for reports of delegates to the convention.

Q. Special meeting. And who called the special meeting?

A. The membership at the regular meeting—at the regular membership meeting the Wednesday night previous.

Q. And what was the purpose of the special meeting?

A. To hear the report of the delegates to the INWU convention.

Q. Who was the delegate to the ILWU convention? A. Hugh Adams.

Q. Was Hugh Adams there the night of this meeting?

A. I don't think he showed up. [4689]

Q. How many showed up?

A. Of the delegates?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. Of the membership of the Union.

A. I don't believe over 25 showed up at any one time.

Q. Let me have the names of some of these.

A. Of the delegates?

Q. No, the 25 that showed up.

A. Well, the Secretary of the Union.

Q. What is his name?

A. M. J. Eddy. The business agent of the Union.

Q. The what?

A. The business agent, Willie O'Keefe. The President of the Union, Ernie Baker. I don't think it is necessary to name the membership.

Q. Why not?

A. Well, I am not going to name the membership. I named the officials. You can check on that.

Q. What objection do you have to naming the membership of your union?

A. Well, I'm not going to name the membership. I named you the officials and I told you that there wasn't over 20 or 25 showed up.

Q. Let me have some of the names of the membership of your Union that showed up at that meeting.

Mr. Gladstein: I will object to that as immaterial [4690] and more——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): I don't see how it is material.

Mr. Del Guercio: There is a question here as to whether this man even went to such a meeting.

Presiding Inspector: He has given enough to find out.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Mr. Del Guercio: What objection, if the Court please, would there be to giving the names of the membership of a bona fide Union?

Mr. Gladstein: In the first place, the Union has a membership of about 1200, I think, your Honor.

Mr. Del Guercio: And only 25 showed up?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes. Why don't you ask him why only 25 showed up?

Mr. Myron: He is asking the questions, not you.

Presiding Inspector: If Mr. Craycraft can give the names of the people who were there, I think perhaps you have a right to have them. It seems to me that it is unnecessary.

The Witness: I gave him the names of the three titled officers of our Union.

Presiding Inspector: I know. He wants to know who the others were that were there, if you can remember them.

The Witness: I don't recall any names.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. You don't recall a single one?

A. That is right. [4691]

Q. You can't name a single member of the Union that was there at that meeting?

A. I don't recall a one.

Q. And you are the what? What position do you hold in the Union, in the Local?

A. In the Local?

Q. Yes.

A. I hold no position in the Local.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. What took place at the meeting?

A. Nothing. There was no quorum. There was no meeting. They waited about an hour and adjourned.

Q. Did anybody get up and speak?

A. No.

Q. Did you? A. No. [4692]

Q. Did anyone preside?

A. It takes 300 for a quorum to hold a membership meeting in our organization, and after a delay of about an hour the Chairman just adjourned the meeting for lack of a quorum. There was no discussion, or no motion, or no speeches or talking on the floor.

Q. Did you remain there for an hour?

A. I remained until after it adjourned.

Q. To when?

A. I remained until after the meeting adjourned.

Q. Well, did the meeting adjourn?

A. They called it to order and adjourned for lack of a quorum.

Q. Who called it to order?

A. The Chairman.

Q. Who was that? A. Ernie Baker.

Q. What time did the meeting adjourn?

A. I couldn't make it specific, but some time shortly after 8:00 o'clock. The minutes of the book would show it.

Q. Did you talk with anybody at the meeting?

A. I have an idea I talked to quite a few of the members standing around.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. Let me have the names of some of those you talked to?

A. I don't recall any of the names. [4693]

Q. You don't recall the name of a single person you talked to during that meeting?

A. No. I talked to the officials considerable of the time.

Q. With whom of the officials?

A. Pardon?

Q. With whom of the officials did you talk during the meeting? A. The Secretary.

Q. That is M. J. Eddie? A. Yes.

Q. Who else—Willie O'Keefe? A. Yes.

Q. Did you talk to Ernie Baker? A. Yes.

Q. During the meeting?

A. There was no meeting.

Q. Or during the time of that alleged meeting?

A. While waiting for a quorum; yes.

Q. And you refuse to give the name of any of the membership of your union with whom you talked at that time? A. I don't recall their names.

Q. Were they members of the Communist Party that you talked to? A. I couldn't say to that.

Q. And where did you go after the meeting was adjourned? [4694]

A. I went back down to the West Cussetta.

Q. Did you leave the meeting with anyone?

A. I went back down to the West Cussetta alone.

Q. How did you go down from this Union hall to the West Cussetta?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

A. Across Broadway at about——

Presiding Inspector: I think he means whether you went on foot or—— A. In my car.

Presiding Inspector: In your car.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. What kind of a car?

A. Pontiac, 1933 model.

Q. Registered in your name? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the license number? Do you have an operator's license with you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does it show on there?

A. No, it don't show in Oregon.

Q. Do you know what it is?

A. No, I couldn't say.

Q. It is an Oregon license?

A. An Oregon license.

Q. What kind of a car—is it a sedan?

A. Coach, Pontiac 1933 Coach. [4695]

Q. When you went—was anybody in the car with you when you went to the West Cussetta?

A. No.

Q. Did you pick up anybody on the way?

A. No.

Q. Did you talk to anybody on the way?

A. No.

Q. Not a single person?

A. No—well, yes, I did—going from my car over to the ship?

Presiding Inspector: He was asking about while you were in the car. A. No, no.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you talk to anybody while in the car?

Presiding Inspector: He said twice he didn't talk to anybody while he was in the car.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. And where did you park your car when you arrived at the ship?

A. Right in front of the walk going by the Irving Dock.

Presiding Inspector: Your next question.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you meet anyone there?

A. Well, they had just brought a load out of the hold just previous to the time I was going aboard ship, and they [4696] broke in the side of the building, and a couple of officials of the steamship company were there, one a member of the Labor Relations Committee of the Waterfront Employers, and they thought I had come down on this dispute and wanted to know what I was going to do about it to have the Union pay for it. That was the only thing I talked about, or the only ones I talked to.

Q. What were their names?

A. Morris, a member of the Labor Relations Committee of the Employers' Committee in Portland.

Q. You went on the ship?

A. Then I went aboard ship.

Q. Did anyone accompany you aboard ship?

A. What?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. Did anyone accompany you aboard ship?

Presiding Inspector: Did anyone go with you when you boarded the ship?

A. No.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Where did you go?

A. I went to Mr. Cannalonga's room.

Q. Directly? A. Directly.

Q. Did you see anybody from the time you boarded the ship to the time you went into Mr. Cannalonga's room?

A. I believe about four or five gangs were working on the ship. [4697]

Q. Did you stop to talk to any of them?

A. No.

Q. Did you ask for permission to go aboard ship? A. No. I just walked aboard.

Q. Do they have a watchman there?

A. If they did I didn't see him.

Q. And was Cannalonga there in his room?

A. Yes.

Q. You say "room." What kind of a room was it?

A. The electrician has a private stateroom. He don't have to bunk like the sailors or the firemen.

Q. Was there anyone with Cannalonga when you went in his room?

A. There were some shipmates that were sitting in there listening to his radio.

Q. Do you know their names? A. No, sir.

Q. How many were there?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

A. I believe there were two when I first came in, two or three, and a couple left, and one sat there, or the other way around. There were two or three involved. One was sitting there reading a magazine all the time and never moved.

Q. Did you have any conversation with Cannalonga while the shipmates were in there?

A. No.

Q. Were the shipmates asked to go out? [4698]

A. No, sir.

Q. What? A. No, sir.

Q. Did they remain in there?

A. They remained in there. Cannalonga and I went back to his little workshop, between No. 4 and No. 5 hatch, on the afterdeck.

Q. How long after you arrived there?

A. Just a few minutes.

Q. Did you ask him to step out?

A. He made the suggestion himself.

Q. And you followed him?

A. Yes, sir; he led the way.

Q. And both of you went to No. 5 hatch, you say?

A. Between No. 4 and No. 5; there is a little tool room there.

Q. That is on the deck?

A. That is on the deck.

Q. Was there anybody else on deck?

A. Well, just the gangs working.

Q. Was there anyone within hearing on the deck? A. No.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. Who chose that spot?

A. Mr. Cannalonga.

Q. And you then had a conversation with Cannalonga? [4699] A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you seated or standing up?

A. Cannalonga sat down on the work bench and I just stood up.

Q. Did anyone hear what conversation you had?

Presiding Inspector: He said there was no one in earshot, I think.

Do you want to ask that over again?

Mr. Del Guercio: No. I will withdraw it.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. How long did you talk with Cannalonga on that occasion?

A. I judge about 20 minutes, around that.

Q. How many questions would you say you asked him during those 20 minutes?

A. I didn't get a chance to ask him any questions. It seems like he was too willing to talk.

Q. This first time, going back to the first time you met him, did you speak about the old times you had together, you and Cannalonga?

A. No. About the only conversation I can recall at that time was, "Well, where have you been ever since the 1936-1937"——

Q. (Interposing): I am asking you if you had a conversation about old times, you and Cannalonga, together?

A. (Shaking head negatively.) [4700]

(Testimony of Rosco George Crayeraft.)

Presiding Inspector: Show a negative answer.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. When did you next see Cannalonga?

A. A little louder.

Q. What?

Presiding Inspector: He didn't hear you.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. When did you next see Cannalonga?

A. Friday night, the following Friday.

Q. Had you made any arrangements with Cannalonga to see him again?

A. On Wednesday night I had mentioned to Cannalonga about going to Seattle the next day to report to the Seattle Local Membership meeting on Thursday night; so Cannalonga requested that I go in and see Dr. Buckner, in Seattle.

Q. To see who?

A. Dr. Buckner, in Seattle, and he would substantiate the statement that he had just made previously to me.

Q. Now, with reference to Dr. Buckner——

A. (Interposing): I haven't finished. And on my return from Seattle he was coming out to my house the next Monday or Tuesday night and he was going to give me the full story of everything that happened.

Q. As I understand it, he wanted, Cannalonga, at this first conversation you had, the first or second conversation you [4701] had on Wednesday night, wanted you to go to Seattle to see Dr. Buckner?

A. No. I had mentioned prior to leaving that I was going to Seattle, so Cannalonga requested that I stop in and see Dr. Buckner while I was in Seattle and he could tell how he was all doped up in the hospital there.,

Q. Did you go up to Seattle? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see Dr. Buckner? A. No, sir.

Q. When did you go up to Seattle?

A. Thursday.

Q. Thursday night. That was April—Thursday after the Wednesday you saw Cannalonga?

A. That is right. That would be on April 31.

Q. And how did you go up to Seattle?

A. Drove with Jack Price.

Q. Drove with Jack Price? A. Yes; sir.

Presiding Inspector: That is what he said.

Mr. Gladstein: Your Honor, I think it is a matter of which you will take Judicial notice, that there isn't any April 31.

The Witness: It was May 1st.

By Mr. Del Guercio: [4702]

Q. When did you arrive in Seattle?

A. Oh, the best I can remember was around 3:00 o'clock in the afternoon.

Q. 3:00 o'clock on Thursday afternoon?

A. On Thursday afternoon.

Q. Was there anyone else in the car besides Jack Price? A. Mr. Price and his wife.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. How long did you remain in Seattle?

A. Until Friday afternoon.

Q. Where did you stay?

A. At the Atwood Hotel.

Q. You registered there in your own name?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see anyone on Thursday afternoon after your arrival in Seattle?

A. After my arrival in Seattle I went to Matt Meehan's office, Secretary of the International, and discussed some minor union problems with him.

Then I went over to the——

Q. (Interposing): Just a minute, please. Did you discuss with Matt Meehan what Cannalonga had told you?

A. No. I didn't discuss that with Matt. But I wrote a letter to Harry Bridges at that time——

Q. (Interposing): I didn't ask you about that. I asked you if you discussed what Cannalonga told you with Matt Meehan. [4703]

Presiding Inspector: He said "No."

The Witness: I am trying to answer that I showed him the letter after I wrote it.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, where else did you go?

A. I went over to the longshore hall of the local union.

Q. How long did you remain there—how long were you with Matt Meehan?

A. Oh, I judge I was there in his office maybe an hour or an hour and a half.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. How long were you at the longshore hall?

A. Well, I was at the longshore hall, or in that immediate vicinity, approximately an hour.

Q. Did you meet anyone at the longshore hall?

A. I met several of the membership; but not being familiar with them I don't recall their names.

Q. You don't——

A. (Interposing): The Secretary of the Union was busy collecting dues and I didn't get a chance to speak to him. He had quite a line-up there.

Q. Did he see you?

A. Well, I couldn't say for sure whether he did or didn't.

Q. What is the name of the Secretary of the Union? A. Youngberg. [4704]

Q. Then where did you go?

A. I went up to the restaurant to eat.

Q. Was anyone with you? A. Jack Price.

Q. Was Jack Price's wife there also?

A. Yes.

Q. You went to eat?

A. That is right.

Q. Then where did you go?

A. I didn't hear you.

Mr. Del Guercio: Read the question.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. After finishing eating, which I judge was close to seven o'clock, we went back up to Mee-han's office, and from there I went to the regular membership meeting.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. How long were you in Meehan's office the second time? A. Just about five minutes.

Q. Was there anyone else in Meehan's office besides you and Jack Price?

A. Matt Meehan, Jack Price and myself.

Q. No one else. You went back to a meeting, you say?

A. A special meeting of the Seattle Local, which was called for the report of the delegates to the convention.

Q. Did you go to Seattle on business of the International [4705] Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union? A. That is correct.

Q. At that time did the meeting end?

A. The meeting started at 7:00 o'clock and it was over some time between 11:00 and 11:30—I wouldn't say exactly.

Q. Where did you go from there?

A. Matt Meehan, Price and myself went up the street a couple of blocks, and stopped, and had a bottle of beer and went on home.

Q. The next morning what did you do?

A. The next morning I went over to the Secretary's office, Youngberg, and talked with him a while, with the President of the Local, Mr. Doyle, and went over and visited officials of the Warehouse Local a few minutes; and then I went back to Mr. Meehan's office.

(Testimony of Rosco George Crayeraft.)

Q. Did you discuss with Youngberg what Cannalonga had told you?

A. I never discussed Cannalonga with anyone in Seattle.

Q. You say you went home, you started home?

A. To the Atwood Hotel.

Q. To the Atwood Hotel? A. Yes.

Q. Did you make any effort at all——

A. (Interposing): Just a minute, pardon me. Are you referring to the next day or that night?

[4706]

Q. Friday morning.

A. I went back up to Matt Meehan's office.

Q. Did you make any effort to locate Dr. Buckner? A. No.

Q. Did you ask anyone who Dr. Buckner was?

A No, sir.

Q. Do you know who Dr. Buckner is?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you promise Cannalonga that you would see Dr. Buckner? A. I did.

Q. When did you return to Portland from Seattle?

A. I left Seattle on a plane that afternoon and came down to Portland about 3:30.

Q. Did you leave your car in Seattle?

A. I didn't have my car. I rode up with Jack Price.

Q. I thought it was your car. You arrived in Portland when? A 4:30.

Q. 4:30 Friday afternoon?

(Testimony of Rosco George Crayeraft.)

A. Friday afternoon.

Q. Was anyone with you on the plane?

A. Pardon?

Q. Was anyone with you on the plane from Seattle to Portland?

A. No; I came down alone, that is, outside of the passengers that I didn't know. [4707]

Q. Now, I want to get these dates straightened out. You returned to Portland on Friday you say. That would be May 2?

A. That would be correct.

Q. Did you see Mr. Rodman that day?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you see Cannalonga that day?

A. I went down to the ship that night about 8:00 o'clock at the Sunset Oil docks and talked to Mr. Cannalonga then.

Q. Now, before you went down to the dock did you see Jack Mowery? A. No, sir.

Q. That is, "Big Jack" Mowery, isn't it?

A. I never seen him no more.

Q. He is referred to as "Big Jack" Lowry, isn't he? A. The one I referred to?

Q. Yes. A. Yes.

Q. How big is he?

A. Oh, he is a little larger than I am.

Q. Heavy set? A. Yes.

Q. How long have you known Jack Mowery?

A. Well, he used to watch me play football in my high school days.

Q. Oh, you played football? [4708]

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Presiding Inspector: That is what he said.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did Jack Mowery play football too?

A. No; he didn't play football.

Q. How long have you known Jack Mowery all together?

A. Well, that would be around 17 or 18 years.

Q. You are good friends?

A. We have been ever since I started longshoring in Portland.

Q. And you have continued to be good friends since? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You visit his home?

A. I have been there several times.

Q. Does he visit your home? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long has Jack Mowery been a member of the Communist Party? A. I don't know.

Q. Do you know if he is a member of the Communist Party? A. I don't know.

Q. Has he ever told you?

A. He has never told me.

Q. Have you ever heard that Jack Mowery was a member of the Communist Party?

A. I have heard lots of people make that statement. I have never heard Jack come out and tell me, or he never did ask [4709] me to join the Communist Party, or talk Communism to me.

Q. Is Jack Mowery a member of any union?

A. A member of our union.

Q. A member of your union? A. Yes, sir.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. And you say—from whom did you hear Jack Mowery was a member of the Communist Party?

A. Oh, I hear those remarks around the hall about every one of us, anyone active in the labor movement.

Q. Did Mowery ever deny he was a member of the Communist Party in your presence?

A. I have heard him deny it, and I have heard him say, "Do you want me to sign you up today?" or something like that.

Q. Now, did anyone go with you to the ship on May 2? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who? A. Burt Nelson.

Q. Burt who? A. Nelson.

Q. N-e-l-s-o-n—how do you spell it?

A. Spell "Nelson"?

Q. Is it Ellison or Nelson?

A. Nelson; Burt Nelson.

Q. Who is he?

A. He is the organizer put in by the International in charge of the office in the Guardian Building. [4710]

Q. Where did you meet Burt Nelson?

A. I called him from our union office in Seattle at the Union office in Portland and asked him to come out there and meet me in the car.

Q. That was after you got off the airplane?

A. That was before I left Seattle.

Q. Did he meet you in Portland, Burt Nelson?

A. Yes, sir.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. I believe you said you went to the ship immediately after you arrived?

A. We went out to my home first.

Q. Burt Nelson and yourself?

A. Yes. I spent a little time with the wife and children and then went on down to the ship.

Q. Did you invite Burt Nelson to go along with you?

A. I asked him to drive me down there.

Q. Did he go on the ship with you?

A. He went on the ship, but he wasn't with me when I was talking to Cannalonga. He went on back aft to watch them work.

Q. Did Burt Nelson see Cannalonga on the ship?

A. You mean that night?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes. Of course, Cannalonga walked to the gangplank with us. We walked back where Burt was standing on the [4711] afterdeck.

Q. Where did you meet Cannalonga that night?

A. In his room.

Q. In his room? A. In his room.

Q. And you and Nelson went to Cannalonga's room?

A. No, no. Nelson didn't. He went on aft and was standing on the afterdeck watching them load lumber. I spoke to Cannalonga alone.

Q. How long were you in Cannalonga's room?

A. Oh, just a few minutes. The only question I asked him was if he would be willing to talk to the defense attorneys and tell them the same story that he had told me the other night, and he said "Yes."

(Testimony of Rosco George Crayeraft.)

I said, told him, "I will try to get hold of Mr. Gladstein tonight, and if I am able to reach him tonight, then I will come down to the ship tomorrow morning and tell you what time you can meet him."

After that was settled there was no use sticking around so I left. [4712]

Q. You were with him all together, you say, about four or five minutes?

A. Maybe ten minutes all together.

Q. Did you talk about anything else?

A. I don't recall anything specific that time outside of making arrangements to meet Mr. Gladstein.

Q. When did you next see Cannalonga?

A. I didn't understand.

Q. When did you next see Cannalonga?

A. The next morning at 10:00 o'clock. I went down to the Crown Mills.

Q. Who was with you?

A. I was alone when I met him. No one was with me.

Q. Did you go on the ship?

A. I went on the ship, talked to him on the ship, told him that Mr. Gladstein would be on the 1:30 plane in the afternoon, and then I would ask him about how I would meet him.

Q. This was on Saturday morning?

A. This was on Saturday morning.

Q. About what time?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

A. That was around ten o'clock in the morning. And he said that the ship was going to shift at noon down to Terminal No. 1, so he didn't know whether the FBI would be watching him there or not, and he said he thought it would be a good idea if he walked off the ship and I picked him up off the street around [4713] a quarter to three.

Q. When you went on the ship did you see anybody who was watching the ship?

A. Not that I could see watching them.

Q. Did you see any FBI men?

A. I wouldn't know one if I seen one.

Q. Did you ask permission all the time you went on the ship? A. Pardon?

Q. Did you ask for permission to go on the ship at any time?

A. I never have. I have went on and off those ships for years. I have always been admitted freely in Portland.

Q. And how long did you talk to Cannalonga at that time, this Saturday morning?

A. Just a few minutes; just enough to arrange to meet him that afternoon.

Q. What?

A. Just a few minutes; just enough to arrange to meet him that afternoon.

Q. And who suggested the meeting place?

A. Mr. Cannalonga.

Q. And he said what in regard to the meeting place?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

A. He said, instead of me coming aboard ship that he would meet me outside on the dock or on the street front.

Q. On what street, did he say? [4714]

A. Front Street.

Q. Any particular place on Front Street?

A. Terminal No. 1.

Q. What? A. Terminal No. 1.

Q. And I believe you stated that he set the hour?

A. A quarter to three.

Q. And is that the next time you met Cannalonga?

A. I went back. I got there a little bit early, about, I guess, around twenty-three, twenty-five minutes to three, and Cannalonga was out on the street then waiting for me then.

Q. Was anyone with you at that time?

A. I was alone.

Q. Huh? A. I was alone.

Q. Where did you go with Cannalonga?

A. We went up to the Clyde Hotel. There is a restaurant next door to the Clyde Hotel, the Virginia Cafe. We went in and had a cup of coffee to kill time until three o'clock, and then we went up to the room.

Q. At the hotel? A. That's right.

Q. And you arrived at the hotel about what time?

A. Three o'clock, why, we was in Mr. Gladstein's room.

Q. And where in the hotel did you go? Did you go [4715] directly to Mr. Gladstein's room?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You knew where it was?

A. I went up in the elevator.

Q. And who was there in Mr. Gladstein's room?

A. Mr. Gladstein.

Q. Anybody else? A. No.

Q. I believe you stated you remained in that room with Mr. Gladstein, yourself and Cannalonga for how long? A. Around one hour.

Q. You were present all the time?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Gladstein: I didn't hear that.

(The question and answer referred to were read by the reporter as above recorded.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you participate in the questioning of Cannalonga?

A. I introduced Mr. Cannalonga to Mr Gladstein and briefly outlined what—

Q. (Interposing): Just a moment on that! You introduced Cannalonga to Mr. Gladstein. What did you say when you introduced him?

A. "Mr. Cannalonga, this is Mr. Gladstein."

Q. Did Mr. Gladstein act as though he had never seen [4716] Cannalonga before?

A. Naturally, under the circumstances both of them knew one another.

Q. Why was it necessary for you to introduce them?

A. Well, what do you do when you take anyone to meet anyone else?

(Testimony of Rosco George Crayeraft.)

Q. Did you introduce Gladstein to Cannalonga too?

A. I started to introduce Mr. Gladstein to Mr. Cannalonga. Both of them said "Well, we know one another". But they shook hands just the same.

Q. You didn't know that they had met each other?

A. I knew that they had met in the Court room here.

Q. Now, you say you asked Cannalonga questions that time, at that time, in Mr. Gladstein's room?

Mr. Gladstein: What was the question?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. I briefly made the statement to Mr. Gladstein to formally open it up what Mr. Cannalonga had told me down on the ship. Mr. Gladstein then stated to Cannalonga—he says, "You give me the story in your own words, right from the beginning". And he said, "Give me all the truth", and he says, "I don't want nothing but the truth and the whole truth". And then Mr. Cannalonga started in giving him the story.

Q. How many questions did you ask Cannalonga?

A. Oh, I might have interjected a question or two, but I [4717] don't recall it.

Q. You don't recall. And did Mr. Gladstein ask any questions?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

A. Mr. Cannalonga started right in from the beginning of when he was in the Firemen's Hall and told the entire thing up to the time that the FBI agents had put him on the train for Seattle, with Mr. Gladstein interposing questions at various times.

Q. And it took Cannalonga—you say, he talked about an hour? A. Yes.

Q. Now, where did you go after this meeting here with Mr. Gladstein in the Clyde Hotel?

A. I took Mr. Cannalonga to Fourth and Oak. I let him out there to do a little shopping.

Q. Was this in your car?

A. In my car. And then I went on down to Third and Couch, and I waited for him at Third and Couch. And then he came on down to Third and Couch. I picked him up there then and took him on back to the ship.

Q. You took him back to the ship?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In your car? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was anyone with you? [4718]

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you go on board the ship?

A. No, sir.

Q. What time did you arrive at the ship?

A. Oh, I judge it would be a little after 5:00; around there.

Q. In the evening? A. In the evening.

Q. When did you next see Cannalonga?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

A. The next time he was to call me by phone Sunday morning at Broadway 0718.

Q. What?

A. Broadway 0718. That's on Third and Couch. He was to meet me there.

Q. What telephone number is that?

A. Broadway 0718.

Q. Is that your telephone number?

A. Grocery store.

Q. Grocery store?

A. That's a grocery store on the corner of Third and Couch.

Q. Did you give Cannalonga that telephone?

A. He was to meet me on the corner of Third and Couch the next morning at a quarter to ten. So I gave him the phone number, so if anything happened he could call me there. I had [4719] given him the phone number previous to that time. It was raining so hard the next morning he called me up and told me to come down to the ship and pick him up.

Q. Where did he call you? Broadway 0718?

A. Broadway 0718.

Q. You were there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In the grocery store? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you have a home phone? A. No, sir.

Q. Do you have an office phone?

A. I have no office at the present time.

Q. Did you have at that time? A. No.

Q. You do use the Union office, do you not?

A. I use the Union office for all my work.

(Testimony of Roseo Geofge Craycraft.)

Q. Huh? A. That is the Union.

Q. Do they have a phone there?

A. Beacon 9888.

Q. That isn't the answer. Did Mr. Gladstein tell you that he was going to remain in Portland all night? A. Please?

Q. Did Mr. Gladstein tell you that he was going to remain in Portland all night? [4720]

A. Yes. The night previous I had arranged with Bill Lord, the attorney, to be available.

Q. I am talking about this Saturday. Did Mr. Gladstein tell you that he would be in Portland all Saturday night and Sunday?

A. Yes. I arranged for an attorney to meet with Mr. Gladstein, Mr. Cannalonga and myself the next morning.

Q. Does the Clyde Hotel have a telephone?

A. I should judge they would.

Q. Now, did Mr. Gladstein say that—you say Mr. Gladstein told you that he would remain in Portland that night and Sunday morning?

A. That he would remain?

Q. Yes. A. Yes.

Q. And do you know if he did? A. Yes.

Q. You say that you testified on direct examination that arrangements were made this Saturday night while you and Mr. Cannalonga and Mr. Gladstein were in the room to take a deposition or some kind of a deposition of Cannalonga the next day?

The Witness: Repeat the question again.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. That's correct. [4721]

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. And when were those arrangements made with regard to the conversation you had with Mr. Gladstein on Saturday night?

Presiding Inspector: Do you mean the time?

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes.

A. Approximately ten o'clock at night I called Bill Lord.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. You what?

Approximately ten o'clock at night I called Mr. William P. Lord, the attorney.

Q. You misunderstood my question. I understood you to say on direct testimony that when Cannalonga was in the room, this hotel room, arrangements had then been made for Cannalonga to return so that he could make a statement. Is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, when were those arrangements made?

A. Just prior to the time that Mr. Cannalonga and I left the room.

Q. And what was said with respect to that matter only?

A. Mr. Cannalonga said that he would be willing to make it up to a certain point on the information he gave us, and that was up to the point where it involved the FBI and the Mann Act charges. [4722]

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. Was anything said as to when that was to be made, this statement was to be made?

A. The following morning, on Sunday morning. That was when it was to be made.

Q. Who suggested that it be made on Sunday morning?

A. Mr. Cannalonga first suggested that he wanted a night to think it over.

Q. To think what over?

A. Well, to see how far he wanted to go in telling the whole story. So then it was understood that I go ahead and make the arrangements to get ahold of an attorney and a Court Reporter for the following morning.

Q. Well, were any arrangements made to take a statement from Cannalonga that night?

A. No.

Q. Did Mr. Gladstein ask Mr. Cannalonga to make a statement that night?

A. Yes. He asked him to make a statement that night. That was before we left around 4:00 o'clock, and Mr. Cannalonga said he wanted a night to think it over to see how far he would go in telling everything. But there had been no arrangements made for an attorney or a Court Reporter at all. That's on Saturday.

Q. And when did you next see Cannalonga?

A. I picked him up at the ship at 10:00 o'clock on Sunday morning. [4723]

Q. In your car? A. In my car.

Q. Was anyone with you? A. No, sir.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. You went on the ship?

A. Yes—no. Well, I think I started on the ship and he met me coming off. I believe I met him right at the gate.

Q. Now, how were you dressed?

A. How as I dressed? I had on a pair of pants something the color of this (Indicating); and, oh, a coat something the color that that man is wearing there (Indicating).

Q. Which one? A. The third one there.

Q. Green? A. Whatever color that is.

Q. Green coat? A. That's it.

Q. How long did you remain on the ship that morning?

A. I didn't remain on the ship. We went right on up to Mr. Gladstein's room.

Q. Did you and Mr. Cannalonga get off the ship at the same time, come off the ship at the same time?

A. No, I met him up in front there.

Q. Oh, you met him in front. Was there somebody watching the ship? [4724]

A. I don't know.

Q. You met Cannalonga right in front of the ship? A. That's it.

Q. And how long had Mr. Cannalonga been waiting for you out at the front?

A. Well, just from the length of time I guess he called me by phone.

Q. Wasn't it raining down there?

A. Yes. That's the reason he called me up, to come down and pick him up. It was raining so hard.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. He stood out there in the rain waiting for you?

A. I have an idea that he stood under the roofs of the shed. I have an idea.

Q. What?

A. I have an idea that he stood under the roofs of the shed. He wouldn't stand out in the rain.

Q. And you took him where?

A. Up to Mr. Gladstein's room.

Q. Immediately? A. Pardon?

Q. Did you stop anywhere on the way?

A. We stopped in the Virginia Cafe and he had a cup of coffee.

Q. Is that all he had?

A. Well, he had a hunk of ice. I couldn't understand the ice and coffee. [4725]

Q. What did you have? Did you have anything?

A. I don't recall whether I had a cup of coffee or not.

Q. What time did you arrive at the hotel?

A. Right at——

Q. (Interposing) What?

A. Just a few minutes after ten.

Q. That is in the morning?

A. Two or three minutes after.

Q. Who was in Mr. Gladstein's room when you arrived there? A. Just Mr. Gladstein.

Q. No one else? A. No one else.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. How long did you remain in Mr. Gladstein's room at that time?

A. We were in Mr. Gladstein's room approximately an hour and a half.

A. Just the three of us.

Q. And did you go over again the same matters that you went over the day before?

A. That is correct.

Q. Exacting the same?

A. Well, I wouldn't say "exactly the same" because there was this difference:—— [4726]

Q. (Interposing) Well, I don't want to go into the substance of the conversation.

A. Well, how can I answer the question then?

Q. Generally, were the same questions asked?

A. After he had thought it over all night he said what he would rather do first was to go to Seattle, and if he had seen these certain parties he would come on down to San Francisco and testify to the entire matter.

Q. And when did he say that in regards to the time that you arrived in Mr. Gladstein's room?

A. Oh, I couldn't say just exactly.

Q. He indicated that he didn't want to say anything unless he first went up to Seattle?

A. No. He was willing to go so far, but that was up to the part where it involved these other things and his contention was that it involved some other people in Seattle. Now, who those people were he never did say, but he went up and he had a talk with those people, and if they were willing

(Testimony of Rosco Georg. Craycraft.)

he would come back to San Francisco and testify to the entire matter all the way through. [4727]

Q. He never gave you the names of those people?

A. He never did at no time.

Q. And were any arrangements made at that time in regards to meeting Cannalonga again that day?

A. No. We proceeded then on down to Mr. Lord's office where he went down to make a deposition.

Q. Did Mr. Cannalonga indicate that he was willing to make what you call a deposition?

A. He did; up to the part that it involved the intimidation of the FBI, and he said he wouldn't answer any questions regarding that.

Q. That he wouldn't answer any questions as to whether or not the FBI intimidated him, is that correct?

A. He said, after he went to Seattle and talked to these parties in Seattle, then he would come on to Frisco and testify on that.

Q. But he did say he would not answer any questions as to whether or not the FBI had intimidated him?

A. It was understood when we went down to Mr. Lord's office that he could answer any questions that he wished, any questions put to him by Mr. Gladstein, and it was entirely up to him whether he wanted to answer them or not.

Q. And you remained in Mr. Gladstein's room

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

all the time that Mr. Gladstein was talking to Cannalonga? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you go from Mr. Gladstein's room? [4728]

A. From Mr. Gladstein's room I went down to my car and I drove the other two and myself down to Third and Alder to Mr. Lord's office.

Q. And who were there?

A. Mr. Shoemaker and Mr. Lord.

Q. Were they the only people that were in the room at the time that Mr. Cannalonga was there?

A. Mr. Lord's wife came up one time and just asked her husband how long it would be before he could leave.

Q. Where was "Big Jack" Mowery about this time? A. I hadn't seen him.

Q. Didn't see him at all Sunday morning?

A. He don't enter into this.

Q. What? A. He don't enter into this.

Q. Don't enter into what?

A. Into any of these meetings.

Q. And did you participate in the questioning of Mr. Cannalonga while you were in Lord's office?

A. I sat there all the time. I don't recall of even saying anything at any time.

Q. Who asked you to remain?

A. Well, I can't say as anyone did.

Q. Did Mr. Gladstein ask you to remain?

A. No. [4729]

Q. Did he ask you to leave? A. No.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. Did Mr. Cannalonga ask you to stay?

A. No.

Q. Now, how many times did Cannalonga go out of that room? A. Twice.

Q. Twice. And you went out with him each time?

A. Cannalonga and I went out to the rest room once; and shortly after that he left the room again.

Q. You went out with him again?

A. And I went out in the hallway and started talking to him, and then I came on back and Mr. Lord stood there and talked to him a few minutes, and he came on back in the room.

Q. You went out every time Cannalonga went out? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Followed him out? A. Pardon?

Q. You followed him, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir. I wouldn't say I followed him. I went out jointly with him.

Q. When did you go out to the rest room?

A. Oh, I couldn't say exactly the exact time. I judge——

Q. (Interposing) With regard to the taking of this statement?

A. I judge after we had been there about half an hour. [4730]

Q. Were questions being asked Cannalonga at that time?

A. From the first time we entered the room, until the entire thing was over.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. Was the reporter taking down all of the questions and answers? A. Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: May I see that exhibit, please?

(The exhibit referred to was passed to Mr. Del Guercio.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. How long were you out in the rest room?

A. Oh, I guess not over two minutes.

Q. And you came back into Mr. Lord's office together? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where was the rest room?

A. Oh, just about the length of this court.

Q. What?

A. About the length of this court down the hall from the office.

Q. And when did Mr. Cannalonga go out of Mr. Lord's office the second time with relation to his being questioned by Mr. Gladstein?

A. Oh, I wouldn't be exact on that, but there were several questions before the termination.

Q. Did Mr. Cannalonga say why he was going out there?

A. No; he never did give any reason. [4731]

Q. Did he ask you to go with him? A. No.

Q. You followed him out?

A. That is right.

Q. What took place outside? Did you mention Mowery's name to him? A. No, sir.

Q. Huh? A. No, sir.

Q. What did you say?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

A. I told him that as long as he had started I would like to see him go through with it, get it off his chest and be done with it.

Q. Just what words did you use outside there?

A. That is it.

Q. Huh? A. That is it.

Q. Were those your exact words?

A. I wouldn't say exactly; that is exactly what I meant.

Q. Did you ask him why he had gone out of the room? A. No.

Q. What? A. No.

Q. Did you ask him where he was going?

A. No. I didn't even ask him where he was going. He wasn't really going no place. It seems like he was more or less [4732] pondering over in his mind whether to go ahead and answer all the questions.

Q. What did you follow him out for, to help him make up his mind?

A. No; I wouldn't say to help him make up his mind. I did want to see him go ahead and answer all the questions because he had already given the answers to us previous to that.

Q. To "us"—who did he give the answers to?

A. To Mr. Gladstein and myself.

Q. He was talking to both you and Mr. Gladstein?

A. No. That was the previous day, when I said he had already given us the answers.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. Did you follow Cannalonga out immediately or how far behind were you?

A. Well, I would say the first time we went out together.

Q. And the second time?

A. The second time I would say we were together, all right, because when he started out I started out with him.

Q. Where did you stop him?

A. I didn't have to stop him. He took a few steps away from the door, got away from the door, from the earshot of the room inside.

Q. Did he look back? A. No.

Q. Did he know you were there? [4733]

A. Sure; he knew I was there.

Q. Did you have your hands on him?

A. No.

Q. Was the door closed—did you close the door?

A. Well, the door to the outer office, it closes itself. In the inner office, I have an idea that door might have stayed open all the time.

Q. And what was the first thing that was said?

A. I asked him, I said, "Blackie, why don't you come clean with this, and tell all you told us yesterday? Why not answer the questions and straighten this up once and for all?"

Q. What did Cannalonga say?

A. He said, "There is only one thing. I want to go to Seattle first. I don't mind all the first part of the testimony but I would like to make a trip to Seattle first."

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

"Well," I said, "I think that maybe Mr. Gladstein would be willing for that, and let the last part of the questions go unanswered."

Q. You said maybe Mr. Gladstein would be willing to have him go up to Seattle?

A. Instead of completing it.

Q. What else was said, anything else?

A. That is about all.

Q. And then what happened?

A. Well, Mr. Cannalonga came back in and Mr. Gladstein [4734] started asking questions.

Q. Did he come in first, precede you inside?

A. Well, I wouldn't say whether he preceded me or not; both of us came back walking side by side up the hall. The hall is plenty wide for that.

Q. And you returned together, is that correct?

A. That is right.

Q. And after you returned did Mr. Gladstein ask him questions immediately? A. Yes.

Q. Did you talk with Mr. Gladstein before he started asking Cannalonga questions?

A. Oh, no. Everybody was in the room, Mr. Shoemaker, Mr. Lord.

Q. Did you talk to Mr. Gladstein aside?

A. No.

Q. You are sure of that? A. Positive.

Q. Did you tell Mr. Gladstein what Mr. Cannalonga had said outside to you? A. No, sir.

Q. At no time?

A. I don't recall whether I told him after Mr. Cannalonga left or not. I could have.

(Testimony of Rosco George Crayeraft.)

Q. Was anything done about making arrangements for [4735] Cannalonga to go to Seattle?

A. When Mr. Cannalonga left, him and I discussed it before he got in the elevator. He was going to try to be sure and get a replacement in the morning, and then I would take him on to Seattle.

Q. Did you and Cannalonga go out of that office together?

A. I walked to the elevator with him. I left him at the elevator on the fourth floor.

Q. Was there any question open at the time you followed Mr. Cannalonga down the last time?

Mr. Gladstein: What was the question?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Mr. Gladstein: I don't understand it. Maybe the witness does.

Presiding Inspector: I don't quite understand that.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Was Mr. Gladstein still asking Cannalonga questions when Cannalonga left the last time?

A. He asked him a question. Mr. Cannalonga didn't say "Yes", "No", or nothing. He just turned around and walked out.

Q. And you followed him out again?

A. So I walked out to the elevator with him.

Q. And did he ask you to go out with him?

A. No, he didn't ask me to. I just walked with him. [4736]

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. You walked behind, you mean, don't you?

A. No. I walked alongside of him.

Q. Did you have a hold of him, arm in arm?

A. Well, I did have my arm up around his shoulder.

Q. Oh, you had your arm up around his shoulder? A. Just put there.

Q. And did you go out the door together——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) He said he had his arm around his shoulder.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Were you behind him when you were going out?

A. I might have been a step behind him when he was going out the door.

Q. Did you have your hands on him when he was going out the door?

A. No, sir. But the boy was feeling pretty blue. After we got out in the hall I just put my hand on his shoulder and I asked him, reverting back to the previous conversation I had with him out in the hall,—I asked him what time he wanted to leave for Seattle tomorrow morning and get it all straightened out. And we stood there at the elevator and talked it over a while and I, well, he said, "I will call you at 7:00 o'clock tonight". I said, "O K." Then he went on down the elevator and I went back inside.

Q. How long were you with him outside before you returned to the office?

A. About four minutes. [4737]

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. Not more than four minutes?

A. It could have been five.

Q. Could it have been ten?

A. No, I don't think time went that fast.

Q. Was Jack Mowery outside?

A. No, sir.

Presiding Inspector: I think we will recess at this point until two o'clock.

(Whereupon at 12:40 o'clock P.M., a recess was taken until 2:00 o'clock P.M. of the same day.) [4738]

After Recess
2:00 o'Clock P.M.

Presiding Inspector: All right, Mr. Del Guercio.

called as a witness on behalf of the Alien, having been previously duly sworn, testified further as follows:

Presiding Inspector: Do you want the last question read?

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: What was the last question?

The Reporter: I will have to go and get my notes.

Mr. Del Guercio: Never mind: I think I remember where we left off.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Presiding Inspector: All right.

Cross Examination (Resumed)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Your last answer was that you had escorted Cannalonga to the elevator, is that correct?

A. No. I hadn't escorted him. I walked to the elevator with him.

Q. And you then returned to the room which Mr. Gladstein was in?

A. Mr. Shoemaker and Mr. Lord; yes.

Q. Did Mr. Gladstein continue asking questions after you returned? A. No, sir. [4739]

Q. Did you tell Mr. Gladstein then and there what you had told Cannalonga and what Cannalonga had told you?

A. When we left the office.

Q. Did you tell him in the office?

A. No. We left the office and went up to Mr. Gladstein's room where he was to pack and get ready to go to Frisco.

Q. Who else went to Mr. Gladstein's room besides yourself? A. Mr. Gladstein and I.

Q. Anyone else? A. No, sir.

Q. Was there anyone in Mr. Gladstein's room when you arrived? A. No, sir.

Q. How long did you remain in Mr. Gladstein's room?

A. Just long enough for him to pack up and then we went down to the Virginia Cafe.

Q. Did you make any arrangements with Mr.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Gladstein in regards to getting Cannalonga up to Seattle?

A. No; I made no arrangements with Mr. Gladstein whatsoever. I told Mr. Gladstein that he told me at the elevator that he would call me that night.

Q. That who would call you?

A. That Mr. Cannalonga would call me and tell me what time he thought he could make the trip on Monday morning, and [4740] I was going to take him to Seattle to see these people that he wanted to see in Seattle, and then I would come on down to San Francisco with him.

Q. Oh, you were going to take him to Seattle?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was Cannalonga agreeable to that?

A. He was the one that suggested it.

Q. Did you tell that to Mr. Gladstein?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When?

A. During—while he was packing his suitcase and during the meal hour.

Q. No one else was present? A. No, sir.

Q. And then did Cannalonga call you that Sunday night?

A. I was down on Third and Couch around 7:00 o'clock where he was supposed to call me.

Q. You were down where?

A. Third and Couch, where he was supposed to call me and he never called. I went down to the ship about 8:30 and I had a talk with him then.

Q. Well, now,——

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

A. (Interposing): And the reason he hadn't called me was one of the winches had broken down and he had been unable to go to the telephone.

Q. How long did you remain at Third and—Couch, did [4741] you say?

A. Third and Couch.

Q. How long did you remain there?

A. Oh, I judge around 8:00, 8:10. I went down to the ship. I got there about 8:30.

Q. 8:30. And you stayed there until when?

A. Oh, just a few minutes.

Q. Just a few minutes. Well, how many minutes?

A. Just long enough to make arrangements to meet him the next morning at ten o'clock to see what time he would get off the ship.

Q. I am speaking about Sunday night.

A. Well, that's what I said. Just long enough Sunday night.

Q. Did you get a call from Cannalonga?

A. No.

Q. He was to call you, you say, at what time?

A. 7:00.

Q. At 7:00. And you got down—where was he to call you?

A. Well, he called me from the phone on the dock.

Q. Where was he to call you?

A. He was to call me at the Maleti's Grocery.

Q. And did you go down there at 7:00 o'clock to this grocery store?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

A. I was down there at 7:00 o'clock waiting for the [4742] call.

Q. And you remained there how long?

A. Well, I remained there—well, it was after 8:00.

Q. From 7:00 to 8:00? A. Yes.

Q. You were there an hour?

A. I waited better than an hour.

Q. And you didn't get any call?

A. No, sir.

Q. And then what did you do?

A. I went on down to the ship.

Q. Now, was any one with you at the grocery store?

A. Yes, sir. I visited with one of the members of our Coastwise Labor Relations Committee, Cole Jackman.

Q. What is his name? A. Cole Jackman.

Q. Will you spell the first name?

A. C-o-l-e.

Q. Cole Jackson? A. Jackman.

Q. Was he with you during that hour that you spent at the grocery store?

A. He was with me up until almost 8:00 o'clock. So I made a remark then that I was waiting for Mr. Cannalonga and I wondered why he didn't show up. So Cole Jackman went down to the ship so that I wouldn't miss him then if he did call. [4743] Cole Jackman went down to the ship and said that Cannalonga was working on one of the winches and couldn't get to the phone, and he wanted me to come on down there. So I went back to the ship.

Q. You sent Cole Jackman down to the ship?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when did you send him down?

A. Oh, sometime around, maybe, 7:30.

Q. Why did you tell Cole Jackman that you expected Cannalonga would come there?

A. He had invited me out to his house and I told him that I couldn't leave there, that I was expecting a call from Mr. Cannalonga.

Q. You did say that you were expecting a call?

A. That's right. That's where I was waiting for the call.

Q. And you say Cole Jackman, you sent Cole Jackman to the ship and he returned when?

A. Oh, he wasn't gone very long. I guess it's maybe a mile, a mile and a quarter from there down to the ship.

Q. Did he go down in your car?

A. No, in his own car.

Q. Did you have a car? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You saw Cannalonga, did you, that night?

A. Yes, sir. [4744]

Q. That Sunday night? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did anyone go down to the ship with you? A. No, sir.

Q. You went alone? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And how long did you talk to Cannalonga then?

A. Well, he was pretty busy. The winches had gone haywire, and just as I walked aboard the ship the after lights went on on the deck. And so I just spoke to him long enough to tell him that I would come down tomorrow morning at 10:00 o'clock and I would fix transportation for us to go to Seattle.

Q. Let us get to this Sunday night when you talked to him on the ship.

A. That's what happened that Sunday night.

Q. Was anyone working with him?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was Cannalonga working alone?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. On the winch?

A. No, he wasn't working on the winch right then.

Q. What was he doing?

A. He was in the machine shop wrapping cords and electrical work. [4745]

Q. Was anyone else in the machine shop?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you have any drinks with Cannalonga that night? A. No, sir.

Q. How long did you remain with Cannalonga?

A. Oh, I wouldn't say it would be a total of five minutes. [4746]

Q. Then where did you go?

A. Where did I go?

Q. Yes. A. Home.

Q. Did you see anyone that night?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you see Mr. Gladstein?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

A. I put Mr. Gladstein on the 4:40 plane for Frisco.

Q. Did you tell him you had been on the ship that night and seen Cannalonga? A. No.

Presiding Inspector: 4:40 in the morning?

The Witness: That afternoon.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Before you went to the ship to see Cannalonga?

A. I don't know just what you mean there.

Q. You said you saw Cannalonga on the ship there about a little after 8:00 P.M.?

A. That is correct.

Q. And when you left the ship you went home. I asked if you saw Mr. Gladstein that night after you left the ship?

A. I put Mr. Gladstein on the 4:40 plane in the afternoon for San Francisco.

Q. Sunday afternoon?

A. On Sunday afternoon. [4747]

Q. Did you get in touch with anyone by phone?

Presiding Inspector: When do you mean?

Mr. Del Guercio: Sunday night.

Presiding Inspector: After he left Cannalonga on the ship?

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. After you left Cannalonga?

A. I don't recall getting in touch with anyone Sunday night.

Q. When did you next see Cannalonga?

A. Monday morning at ten o'clock.

(Testimony of Roseo George Craycraft.)

Q. Where did you see him?

A. At Terminal No. 1 on West Cusseta.

Q. On the ship? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did anyone go with you? A. Yes.

Q. Who? A. Jack Mowery.

Q. Where did you pick up Jack Mowery?

A. Sunday afternoon, on my way to taking Mr. Gladstein to the plane, I stopped by Jack Mowery's house and told him that Cannalonga wanted to see him; that I was going to Seattle the next day with Cannalonga, and I wanted to know if he wanted to go down to the ship with me to see him.

Q. You two had this conversation on Saturday afternoon [4748] before you took Gladstein to the ship?

A. Not Saturday; but Sunday afternoon; yes, sir.

Q. And you told Mowery that Cannalonga wanted to see him? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did Cannalonga tell you that?

A. Cannalonga told me that several times previously, that he would like to get hold of Jack Mowery and have a talk with him because he was an old acquaintance of his.

Q. Did he say that in the room when Mr. Gladstein was asking Cannalonga's questions?

A. I don't recall him ever making that statement in front of Mr. Gladstein.

Q. Did he make that statement in front of anyone besides yourself? A. No, he didn't.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. Did you tell Mr. Gladstein that Cannalonga had asked to see Jack Lowery.

Q. (Interposing): I mean Mowery, instead of Lowery. That is who you have in mind, Mowery?

A. State your question again.

Q. What is Jack's last name? A. Mowery.

Q. M-o-w-r-y? A. M-o-w-e-r-y.

Q. Mowery—now, will you answer the question? [4749]

A. State the question again, please.

Presiding Inspector: Read it.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. After we finished eating our dinner Sunday we went up to my house on Curry Street——

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. (Interposing): Who is "we"?

A. Mr. Gladstein and I—we went to my house on Curry Street and visited with my children. I had to put Mr. Gladstein on the 4:40 plane. We stayed there to about 3:15 or 3:20 talking to the two girls.

Then I drove right straight on out to 82nd Street, out Foster Road, to where Mr. Mowery lives. I stopped there a few minutes and told him I wanted to see him tomorrow morning.

Q. Was Mr. Gladstein present?

A. Mr. Gladstein was present.

Q. Did you go into Jack Mowery's house?

A. Yes, sir.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. And how long were you and Mr. Gladstein with Jack Mowery that Sunday afternoon?

A. Long enough for me to drink a cup of coffee. Mr. Gladstein didn't care for any coffee. We just had our meal a couple of hours ahead of that.

Q. How long would you say? [4750]

A. Six or seven minutes.

Q. Could it have been more than ten minutes?

A. I doubt it because we were rushed trying to get over to the plane.

Q. And you say that you then told Mowery that Cannalonga wanted to see him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you say—did you say that in Mr. Gladstein's presence? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that the first time that Mr. Gladstein knew that Cannalonga wanted to see Jack Mowery?

A. I would say, yes, it was.

Q. In any event, that is the first time you ever told him?

A. I told him on my way to the plane that I wanted to take time enough to stop in and see Jack Mowery; that Cannalonga had requested that Jack come down to the ship to see him. So that would be the first time he could have possibly heard it.

Q. You and Jack Mowery went to the ship to see Cannalonga Monday morning? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you got there about when, ten o'clock?

A. I would say around ten.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. Did you see Cannalonga? [4751]

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you see him?

A. In his stateroom.

Q. Was there anyone else present besides you and Mowery?

A. I could be wrong on whether it was actually in the stateroom or not, but the agent of the Marine Firemen's Union was down signing the men on for the next cruise. I don't believe they ever came into the room, but I do know they were in the doorway. I don't recall them coming into the room.

Q. Did you have a conversation with Cannalonga at that time?

A. The only conversation I had with Mr. Cannalonga at that time——

Q. (Interposing): I don't want the gist of it. I am asking if you had a conversation.

A. I am telling you what was said.

Q. I am not asking you what was said.

Presiding Inspector: He just wants to know if you had a conversation.

A. Yes.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did Mr. Lowery——

Mr. Gladstein: It is still "Mowery".

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did Mr. Mowery say anything? [4752]

A. I don't recall him saying anything.

Q. Did Mr. Mowery raise his voice at any time while you were in that stateroom? A. No.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. Did you? A. No.

Q. Was it possible for you to have been heard from the outside?

A. Sure; the door was wide open.

Q. The door was wide open. How long did you and Mowery remain with Cannalonga in this stateroom?

A. Well, the electrician came, that is, the shore electrician, and asked him a question, and he stepped out. As far as being present with him is concerned, that was a matter of a few minutes.

Q. How long were you and Mr. Mowery in that stateroom with Cannalonga?

A. Oh, it couldn't have been over four or five minutes, and Mr. Cannalonga walked out to the rail with us.

Q. Did you have anything to drink while you were in the stateroom? A. No.

Q. By "stateroom" you mean Cannalonga's room, don't you? A. That is right.

Q. You say Cannalonga accompanied you and Mowery off the [4753] ship?

A. No, not off the ship; out to the ladder which goes up on the top deck where the gangplank was.

Q. Did he remain on the ship? A. Yes.

Q. And you and Mowery left together?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you go? A. Cannalonga?

Q. No. Where did you and Mowery go?

A. I went home to pack my suitcase to go to Seattle; and Mowery went to his home to pack

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

his suitcase to go to Seattle, and came back by my house and picked me up at a quarter to two and we went down to Third and——

Q. A quarter to two, when?

A. In the afternoon—and we went down to Third and Couch to wait for a telephone call from Mr. Cannalonga when to come down to the ship and pick him and his gear up.

Q. You were with Mr. Mowery at Third and Couch in the same grocery store?

A. That is from two o'clock on.

Q. Two o'clock until when?

A. 3:30, when Mr. Cannalonga called up and stated that he had been unable to get his relief so far, and he would try to get off the ship by five o'clock that night. [4754]

Q. Who did he talk to on the telephone?

A. To me.

Q. He didn't ask for Mowery? A. No, sir.

Q. All right. He told you that he couldn't get a relief?

A. He told me that he had been unable to get a relief, that they hadn't been able to get a replacement and if he wasn't able to get off for supper that night for me and Mowery to come down to the ship that evening.

Q. Now, you and Mowery were prepared then and there to go to Seattle, is that it?

A. That is correct.

Q. When did you next see Cannalonga?

(Testimony of Rosco George Crayeraft.)

A. Around 7:00 o'clock that evening Mowery and myself went down to the ship. Cannalonga wasn't there at the time. We waited around on the dock for a while and he got there about a quarter after 7:00. He had been uptown with an electrician, that is, the shore electrician, making a few purchases and so on.

Q. How did you and Mowery get to the ship?

A. Pardon?

Q. How did you and Mowery get to the ship?

A. Drove down in Jock Mowery's car. [4755]

Q. Were you trying to hide when you went down to the ship?

A. Not the way I would walk up and down those docks.

Q. And you walked right up the ship, right up the gangplank on the ship?

A. As I have always done.

Q. And did you see Cannalonga that night?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That Monday night? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What time?

A. Well, I believe it would be around between 7:15 and 7:30 in the evening.

Q. And where did you go? In the stateroom again? A. In his stateroom.

Q. And how long did you and Mowery remain with Cannalonga that night?

A. Oh, I judge we was there an hour.

Q. Did you have anything to drink?

A. Yes, sir.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. What did you drink?

A.) Cannalonga had a bottle of rum there. He had some Coca Cola and made what he called a "brown bomber", Coca Cola and rum mixed. He had missed his supper, so he went out in the mess room and made up a big platter of sandwiches, and I had a couple of drinks with my sandwiches. Mowery might have [4756] had a couple of drinks and Cannalonga, to the best of my knowledge, did not take any drinks at all that night. The shore electrician——

Q. (Interposing): "All that night". Were you with him all that night?

A. Well, that hour we were with him. And the shore electrician, he came in and he had a drink with us. The mate came down.

Q. What is his name?

A. I never asked him.

Q. What did you say his position was?

A. He is the shore electrician boss.

Q. Shore electrician boss. Did you see the Customs Guard at that time?

A. If I did I didn't pay any attention to him.

Q. As you got on the ship, you and Mowery, did you see him? A. I never noticed any.

Q. And then what happened?

A. One of the mate's radios went haywire upstairs. Cannalonga went upstairs and fixed his radio. We sat down there and ate sandwiches while he was gone. Then he came back down. I told him that I had talked to Mr. Gladstein in San Francisco that evening, that I was going to leave for San Francisco tonight on the ten o'clock plane to tell what had already transpired here in Portland. I said, "Mr. Mowery will take you on [4757] to Seattle in the morning. Then you can leave Seattle tomorrow night and then come on down to 'Frisco". Then I asked him if there was anything further he could tell me at this time. So that's when he gave me the list of the names and places where he was supposed to stop or did stop, and he also gave me the note to Harry Bridges.

Q. This was in the presence of Jack Mowery?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You took these notes down in the presence of Jack Mowery? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then what did you do?

A. (No response.)

Q. Then what did you do?

A. I didn't get that yet.

Q. Then what did you do?

Presiding Inspector: Then what did you do?

A. Well, I left. Mr. Mowery and I left. We went down to Maleti's Bros. I called up my father over in East Portland and talked to him a few minutes over the phone—or talked to my sister. He couldn't get to the phone. He was sick.

Q. Was Mowery with you all the time?

A. Mowery was with me. Then Mowery drove me on out to the plane.

Q. You got on to the plane when?

A. 10:20. [4758]

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. When did you have this telephone conversation with Mr. Gladstein?

A. Oh, I judge around 5:30 Monday evening.

Q. 5:30 Monday evening? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Gladstein call you up or did you call him up? A. Mr. Gladstein called me.

Q. What did he say to you?

A. He wanted to know—well, he really called, I guess, to find out whether Cannalonga and I had went on to Seattle, because I was supposed to leave the next day with Cannalonga to Seattle. And I told him what a hard time we had of getting a relief, that I checked with the Firemen's Hall at five o'clock that night and the business agent, Warwick, of the Firemen's Union had told me that they had been unable to get a replacement for Cannalonga and it looked like we were going to have to stay over another day. So he advised me then to come down to San Francisco and then Mr. Mowery could go on to Seattle with Cannalonga.

Q. Did he tell you why he wanted you to come down to San Francisco?

A. I guess for the same reason that I am here now.

Q. What is that?

A. As a witness. [4759]

Q. What?

A. Just why I am on here as a witness now.

Q. What did he say about that?

A. Nothing specific; that he wanted me to come on down to San Francisco.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. To testify? A. To testify.

Q. To testify regarding what?

A. To all these meetings with Mr. Cannalonga, what had been said and so forth.

Q. How long was your telephone conversation with Mr. Gladstein, do you know?

A. Oh, I don't recall.

Q. That was about what time now, again, Monday?

A. I believe it was around 5:30 in the evening.

Q. Now, where did Mr. Gladstein reach you on Monday? A. At Broadway 0718.

Q. That's this same grocery store?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was Mowery with you at the time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he ask Mowery to come down, too, to testify? A. No, sir.

Q. Now, did Mr. Gladstein say that he also wanted you to testify—strike that, please.

When did you next see Cannalonga? [4760]

A. I haven't seen him since.

Q. You left for San Francisco when?

A. On the 10:20 plane out of Portland Monday evening, May 5th.

Q. And you arrived here when?

A. Oh, around three in the morning.

Q. Three in the morning. And how long did you remain in San Francisco?

A. Thursday night.

Q. Until Thursday night of last week?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then what did you do?

A. I went back to Portland.

Q. Where did you stop while you were in San Francisco? A. Lincoln Hotel.

Q. Lincoln Hotel. And you got in touch, I assume, with Mr. Gladstein?

A. I did, the next morning.

Q. Did you go to his office? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did he then tell you that he wanted you to appear here to testify?

A. I didn't understand.

Q. Did he then tell you that he wanted you to come to [4761] Court, that he might call upon you to testify?

A. He told me that he might call upon me to testify.

Q. That day, on Tuesday?

A. I believe he had somebody on the witness stand and he didn't know whether he would use me or not, Tuesday.

Q. Did he tell you that he had arranged with Mr. Shoemaker to come down?

A. I came down on the plane with Mr. Shoemaker.

Q. Oh, you came down with Mr. Shoemaker?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, who asked Mr. Shoemaker to come down?

A. I have an idea the Defense.

Q. Who? What do you mean?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

A. I don't know. I didn't ask Mr. Shoemaker.

Q. Did you take Mr. Shoemaker to the Airport in Portland?

A. No. I met him as we started to get on the plane.

Q. Did you know before that that Mr. Shoemaker was going to come?

A. Naturally, after Sunday.

Q. What? A. Naturally, after Sunday.

Q. Did you understand my question?

A. You asked me if I knew Mr. Shoemaker previous to that time?

Q. No. Did you know that he was coming to San Francisco [4762] prior to the time you met him at the Airport? A. Oh, no, I didn't.

Q. Where did Mr. Shoemaker go, if you know, when you arrived at San Francisco?

Presiding Inspector: I can't hear your questions.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Where did Mr. Shoemaker go, if you know, upon your arrival in San Francisco?

A. We came over on the limousine from the Airport. Mr. Shoemaker got out at the Palace Hotel and they took me on down to the Lincoln. Now, whether he went into the Palace, I don't know.

Q. Did you give any money to Cannalonga at any time? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you give Cannalonga $200.00?

A. No, sir.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. At any time? A. No, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Gladstein give you any money at any time to give to Mr. Cannalonga?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Mowery give you any money?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you see Mr. Mowery give any money to Cannalonga? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you meet Cannalonga in Portland at any of the [4763] places other than you have described here on the stand? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you meet Cannalonga in a sporting house in Portland, Oregon. A. No, sir.

Q. Did you follow him into such a house?

A. No, sir.

Q. You know what I mean by "sporting house," don't you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you catch or see Cannalonga in such a house? A. No, sir.

Q. With a girl? A. No, sir.

Q. Did Mowery tell you of such a situation?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Gladstein? A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know who took Mr. Cannalonga's clothes off the ship West Cussetta?

A. I know by hearsay.

Q. Do you know of your own knowledge?

A. I can't say that I know of my own knowledge. I only know what the Immigration Department said.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. Is this the—strike that, please.

What is your present position in the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union?

A. Executive Board Member for the Columbia River District. [4764]

Q. Executive Board Member. And how long have you had that position?

A. I was elected first term in June, 1939, re-elected in 1940.

Q. Do you occupy any other offices?

A. At the present time I am candidate unopposed for Vice-President of the International.

Q. Who proposed your candidacy for Vice-President?

A. The man who was Vice-President last year nominated me in the convention.

Q. Is Mr. Bridges interested in your candidacy; I mean, in a slight way?

A. Well, I have an idea he would be as President of the Union.

Q. Well, does he want you to be Vice-President?

A. He never personally told me so.

Q. Would you say that he doesn't want you to be Vice-President?

A. I think it is immaterial to him so long as the man really gets out and works for the Union.

Q. Well, do you think that you could become

(Testimony of Roscoe George Craycraft.)

Vice-President of that Union without Bridges' support?

A. If I had the support of enough delegates, yes.

Q. Without Bridges' support.

A. Yes. [4765]

Q. You have been pretty close to Mr. Bridges, have you not?

A. In trade unions, yes.

Q. You have always admired him?

A. I have.

Q. You have? A. I have.

Q. Have you ever made the statement to anyone at any time that the fact that Harry Bridges was a Communist made no difference to you?

A. No. I never made that statement.

Q. Did you make a statement substantially that?

A. I might have made a statement to this effect: That from all I have seen of Harry Bridges do in the trade union movement, even if he was a Communist it wouldn't affect me.

Q. Now, this meeting that you spoke of with Jack Mowery and Mr. Bridges in Portland sometime in April, 1938, is that the same Jack Mowery that went with you to see Cannalonga on the ship?

A. I have an idea you are referring to the meeting in Aberdeen?

Q. Aberdeen or Portland in the Morck Hotel; M-o-r-c-k, as you spelled it?

A. That is the same Mowery.

(Testimony of Rosco George Crayeraft.)

Q. Huh? [4766]

A. That is the same Mowery.

Q. That is the same Mowery. Was that in Aberdeen or was it in Portland?

A. In Aberdeen.

Q. Were anyone else present other than Mowery and yourself and Bridges?

A. There were other individuals in and out of the room at different times. I don't remember of anyone that stayed in there permanently all the time with Brother Bridges, Brother Mowery and myself. [4767]

Q. Well, you described it as a meeting. What kind of a meeting was it?

A. Previous to that time I called a meeting of the trustees of my union in Portland, because I didn't like the way the money was being expended in the State of Oregon. Brother Bridges was the only one that had the power, as Coast CIO Director, to make any change in the way it was done. So Brother Mowery and myself proceeded to Aberdeen to see if we couldn't do something to make a more solid union in Oregon and to see if we couldn't get these funds established in the hands of the Portland Industrial Union Council. And then we could hire a man for a specific job; that is, if we had a job down in a certain sawmill, and one man could do it better than another, that we could do it that way, and it would be better and we could get a competent man to do it. The Portland Industrial Union Council would be in charge of disbursing the money.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

That was the proposition we went to Aberdeen about.

Q. You and Jack Mowery left Portland to go to Aberdeen to see Bridges about this?

A. Jack Mowery was elected by a referendum vote by the trustees of our organization, and he was the man to go with me.

Q. When was he elected?

A. In the elections in December.

Q. December of what year?

A. 1937, to be installed in the first meeting in January [4768] 1938.

Q. How many persons are there on the Executive Board? A. 25 on the Executive Board.

Q. 25. And how many on the Board of Trustees? A. Three.

Q. Who are they?

A. There was Jack Mowery, Ed Lyons and Harry—I can't think of his name right now.

Q. Harry something? A. Harry——

Q. Were you on the Board of Trustees?

A. I was Secretary of the Union.

Q. You were Secretary, but you were not on the Board of Trustees? A. That is correct.

Q. Well, where was Ed Lyons at that time?

A. The Trustees would come up and go over the books once a month, or go over any other matters concerning the union.

Q. Where was Harry?

A. You mean why didn't all three not go? Is that what you mean?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. You are anticipating my question.

A. Mowery and I were the only two that was going to come up there and see him.

Q. You said Ed Lyons and Harry——

A. (Interposing): Just a minute. It is up to the [4769] Board of Trustees to decide that.

Q. Did Jack Mowery have authority to speak on behalf of the other two members?

A. Why I take it for granted he would.

Q. Did he tell you so?

A. Well, Jack Mowery and myself would have the authority to speak.

Q. Was Harry Pilcher there?

A. I don't recall Harry Pilcher.

Q. You know who Harry Pilcher is, don't you?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you see him in Aberdeen?

A. I tell you I don't recall seeing Harry Pilcher in Aberdeen at all.

Q. How about Howard Bodine?

A. I saw Howard Bodine and he stayed at the same hotel I did.

Q. In Aberdeen? A. In Aberdeen.

Q. Was he at that meeting?

A. He might have been.

Q. What was he doing at the meeting?

A. Well, the President of the organization, naturally, his hotel room is more or less his headquarters and anyone that had any business with the President naturally would come to his room. [4770]

Q. In whose room was this meeting held?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

A. In Harry Bridges'.

Q. Did you attend a convention in Aberdeen in about October 1940 of the International Woodworkers of America? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In what capacity did you go to that convention?

A. Representing the international of the ILWU.

Q. Did you also go there as a supporter of Bridges?

A. No, I wouldn't say I went as a supporter of Bridges. I went there representing the entire organization of the longshoremen.

Q. Were attacks made in that convention on Communists. A. Lots of them.

Q. Did you oppose the attacks that were being made on Communists?

A. I never had a word to say in that convention; never opened my mouth. I sat up in the Balcony as an observer.

Q. You didn't say anything at all? A. No.

Q. Did you distribute or cause to be distributed any literature? A. No.

Q. What? A. No.

Q. Was Mowery at that convention? [4771]

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Have you received any communication from Cannalonga since you saw him the last time which, I believe, was Tuesday night?

A. Monday night.

Q. Monday night?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

A. I never received a communication from Cannalonga in my life outside of a telephone.

Q. Was there a telephone call?

A. No, sir.

Q. Or any communication through another person? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you do anything to frighten Cannalonga into not communicating with you?

A. Louder.

Q. Did you do anything that would frighten Cannalonga into not communicating with you?

A. No, sir.

Q. I believe you testified that he was glad to see you? A. He was.

Mr. Gladstein: Could I ask the reporter to read a question that occurred two or three questions before the last one? I didn't hear it. My attention has just been called to it by Mrs. King. I wonder if it could be read.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. [4772]

Mr. Gladstein: The one in which the witness was asked whether he had ever received a communication, and then what follows thereafter.

(The portion of the record referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I don't know if I asked the witness this question before but if I have I will withdraw it.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. I believe you testified on direct examination that you saw a newspaper article regarding Cannalonga appearing at this trial, is that right?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

A. I don't know. You objected so much right there that I thought it was stricken. I did see a newspaper article.

Mr. Del Guercio: Was that stricken?

Presiding Inspector: I think going to the contents—the question that embodied the contents was disallowed as I recall.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. When did you see this article with respect to your return from the convention in Los Angeles?

A. I read it here in San Francisco. When I read the article, and it got down to the bottom and said, "Yes or no," then after repeated questioning I just figured maybe there was something wrong.

Q. I didn't ask you anything about that. All I asked you [4773] was when you saw the article in a newspaper with respect to the time of your return from the convention in Los Angeles. Do you understand my question?

A. Friday, April 18.

Q. Had you seen Harry Bridges prior to that time?

A. That is when I went up to see him, when I read this article

Q. And as a result of seeing that article you went up to see Harry Bridges?

A. That is correct.

Q. And as a result of seeing Harry Bridges you went up to Portland and saw Rodman, is that correct? A. That is wrong.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. Huh? A. That is wrong.

Q. And as a result of your seeing Rodman you met Cannalonga, is that correct?

A. No; I said that was wrong.

Presiding Inspector: I think the witness denies the causation that is implicit in the question.

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: I think that is the substance of his answer.

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes. That is all.

Presiding Inspector: Any further questions?

Mr. Gladstein: We have a few, your Honor.

[4774]

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Do you know what Jack Mowery's correct name is?

A. I don't know his correct name, but I know his initials from keeping records so long. It is W. H. Mowery.

Q. You say "from keeping records." You mean as Secretary of the Union? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know why he is called "Big Jack"?

A. He has another brother designated as "Jack Mowery," so to distinguish between the two boys one is "Big Jack," and the other is "Little Jack."

Q. Is that the way they are known on the waterfront?

A. It is very common on the waterfront to call them "Little Jack" and "Big Jack," or "Snooze-face," or using some other term to designate a man,

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. When you were a delegate to the convention of the International Woodworkers of America what was your capacity, a true delegate of that organization or something else?

A. I was not a delegate to their convention. I was there as an observer and more to see just what was going on in the convention to make a report to my own officials, my own organization.

Q. Do you know whether there is any custom or practice in the trade union movement for an international union, when it is about to hold a convention, to invite fraternal observers [4775] or delegates from other unions?

Mr. Del Guercio: Just a minute. I will object to that as improper redirect.

Presiding Inspector: I don't see how that is very material.

Mr. Gladstein: It is a subject that was touched on and, if your Honor recalls, something was said about why Mr. Craycraft, whether he did or did not take certain action at that convention on a certain issue. I think we are entitled to bring out in what capacity he was actually there.

Mr. Del Guercio: But not to beat around the bush. He can ask a direct question.

Presiding Inspector: Haven't you asked it and hasn't he answered it? He said he went as an observer.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Mr. Gladstein: All right.

Presiding Inspector: I don't see what difference it makes as to what the custom is. I don't see any impropriety in going as an observer.

Mr. Gladstein: I don't either, but I want to show there is such a custom in the labor movement.

Presiding Inspector: Are there observers at these conventions?

The Witness: When an International holds——

Presiding Inspector: You can answer that "yes" or "no."?

The Witness: Yes, there are. [4776]

Presiding Inspector: Is this a closed meeting, this convention?

The Witness: No. The delegates have a voice and vote. Then the public can sit in the balcony, and that is where I was seated.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, I think you testified, in response to questions by Mr. Del Guercio, that on the Friday night when you saw Cannalonga, the same night on which you telephoned to me, when you went down to the dock you met some people there. Do you have your mind on that incident?

A. You are mistaken. It wasn't Friday night; it was on Wednesday night when I went back after the Union meeting.

Q. I beg your pardon. What people did you meet there?

A. I met one of the members of the Employers

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Labor Relations Committee. The gang working on No. 4 hatch was bringing out a load of flour, a load of sugar, and swing it against the side of the dock and cared it in, and——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) Your Honor, all this has been gone into.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, but it came out, didn't it—I don't recall whether it was on cross or direct.

Mr. Del Guercio: I wouldn't say positively. But I remember this same line of talk by the witness.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think it will do any harm. We would have to look it up to see what the witness said. [4777]

Mrs. King: It came out on cross, I am pretty sure, your Honor.

Mr. Gladstein: May the witness continue?

Presiding Inspector: I will allow him to state it again.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Will you continue, please?

Presiding Inspector: Although I wouldn't devote much time to it.

Mr. Gladstein: I don't intend to.

A. It came out when——

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. No, no. Just continue with your answer as to what happened that Wednesday night.

Mr. Del Guercio: His position is apparent.

Mr. Gladstein: I move that be stricken.

Presiding Inspector: I will let it stand. It is just running comment.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Will you continue with what took place on this evening when you met a member of the Labor Relations Committee—by the way, who was that?

A. Mr. Morris.

Q. What is his full name, do you know?

A. No, I can't say as I do.

Presiding Inspector: He isn't the professor?

[4778]

The Witness: Mr. Morris is from the Employers.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What is his position?

A. He is a member of the Labor Relations Committee and does all the hiring for the Portland Stevedoring Company.

Q. Did you talk to him on that occasion?

A. Yes. When he first came down there he thought I was down there to see if there wasn't some way he could make the stevedores pay for breaking in the side of the building, and that I came down there to look over the damage.

Q. Was this at the West Cussetta?

A. At the West Cussetta dock, where the West Cusetta was tied up. [4779]

Q. Were there any others there besides Mr. Morse or Morris?

A. Oh, there were several; the sling men and the walking boss and so on like that. But Mr. Morse was the only one that discussed it with me.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. Now, has there been anything in your past relationship with Mr. Cannalonga that would make him friendly to you?

A. I would say, Yes. In the 1936 and '37 strike I was Chairman of the Relief Committee and the Marine Firemen's Union was practically bankrupt and they were having a hard time of raising any money to feed their members. So I went before the longshore organization and other organizations and I got them to pay in their pro-rata share of expenses in running the soup kitchen. And when the 1936-'37 strike was over they owed us approximately $1,700.

Q. Who is "they"?

A. The Marine Firemen. And Mr. Cannalonga naturally would remember that because that was one way they were able to keep their membership solid on the waterfront during the strike, was because they were being fed.

Mr. Del Guercio: I move to strike the witness' entire answer.

Mr. Gladstein: Why, it is quite responsive.

Mr. Del Guercio: Improper.

Mr. Gladstein: It shows——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) We have gone into the [4780] question of the friendliness of these people.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: I think I will let it stand.

Mr. Gladstein: Thank you, your Honor.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Presiding Inspector: There might be implications from it either way.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, do you know whether Mr. Mowery during the 1936 and '37 strike took a position similar to yours on the question of feeding members of the Marine Firemen's Union?

A. Well, I couldn't swear to that.

Q. What was your position on that publicly and openly?

A. My position was that every man that was out on strike should be taken care of regardless of whether the Union had any money or not. The Unions that did have the money should help and support their fellow brothers.

Q. And is that the position which prevailed during the strike?

Mr. Del Guercio: I move that——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) You can draw inferences either way.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to any further questions. Well, the—if you want it in I will let it go in.

Presiding Inspector: Well, Mr. Gladstein wants it in. It might as well go in. [4781]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Will you please answer it.

A. The question please.

Mr. Gladstein: Read it back.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft:)

A. It did after many heated debates.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. You mean that there was opposition to the policy that you were in favor of?

Mr. Del Guercio: Well now, if your Honor please, we are going into opposition, too? Now, what next?

Presiding Inspector: You have got the statement that this was his attitude. Now, what difference does it make?

Mr. Myron: With the exception of Mr. Gladstein's testimony. Apparently he is framing his questions to——

Mr. Gladstein: (Interposing) I still haven't heard an objection.

Presiding Inspector: What is that?

Mr. Gladstein: I still haven't heard an objection.

Mr. Myron: No objection.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, there was an objection.

Mr. Del Guercio: The objections aren't addressed to you.

Presiding Inspector: Read the objection.

(The objection referred to was read by the reporter as follows: [4782]

"Well, now, if your Honor please, we are going into opposition, too? Now, what next"?)

Mr. Gladstein: That is a question. What is the objection?

(Testimony of Rosco George Crayeraft.)

Presiding Inspector: I think there is an objection implicit in that.

Mr. Gladstein: All right.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. When you were Secretary of the Portland Longshore Local the time that you went to the Aberdeen convention to have this meeting with Mr. Bridges did your position include the job of being Treasurer?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the title of your position?

A. Secretary-Treasurer.

Q. Why did you go to Aberdeen to see Mr. Bridges?

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, if your Honor please, we have gone all over that. Now, he wants to go over it again.

Mr. Gladstein: We are now on redirect. This was asked on cross examination.

Presiding Inspector: I know. But he merely covered the same thing that you brought out on direct. There was no new matter there, was there?

Mr. Gladstein: I think there was, yes, on this question.

Mr. Del Guercio: The Aberdeen meeting was brought out by counsel on direct. [4783]

Mr. Gladstein: Yes. But it was gone into on cross examination.

Presiding Inspector: But I don't think there was anything new on the matter.

Mr. Gladstein: There were a few names mentioned, for example.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Presiding Inspector: Yes, there were some names mentioned. You may ask about those names. But I don't see any point in wasting and taking any time on that.

Mr. Gladstein: Well now,——.

Presidng Inspector (Interposing): This ruling is for the sake of expedition.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Why didn't you see Mr. Bridges in Portland on that subject?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I will object to that question.

Presiding Inspector: I will let him answer that.

A. To the best of my recollection, Mr. Bridges didn't stop in Portland on the way to Aberdeen. That was the reason I had to go to Aberdeen to see him. If he had stopped in Portland naturally I would have seen him there.

Presiding Inspector: That covers both questions.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, the name of Howard Bodine was mentioned as being at Aberdeen, that there was this convention going on, [4784] was there not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. It was a convention of what Union?

Mr. Del Guercio: That has already been gone into, your Honor. There is no question about what convention was going on.

Presiding Inspector: I will allow it for the sake of expedition again.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Mr. Del Guercio: For what?

Presiding Inspector: For the sake of expedition. If I don't allow it there will be a lot of other questions.

Go ahead.

Mr. Gladstein: Will you read the question?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. Of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Do you know whether Howard Bodine was a delegate to that convention?

A. Duly elected delegate.

Q. From what Union?

A. From Local 1-8.

Q. That is located where?

A. The Portland Local. [4785]

Q. That is the same Local of which you were an officer? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In your testimony concerning the night that you arrived in San Francisco, or I think you said something about 3:00 A.M. the time when you came down on the plane with Mr. Shoemaker, your testimony was that Mr. Shoemaker stopped off at the Palace Hotel and then I think you said "he" took you to the Lincoln Hotel. When you used the pronoun "he" did you refer to Mr. Shoemaker or somebody else?

A. No. I referred to the man driving the cab.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Q. In your cross examination you testified that after the ILWU convention in the year 1941 in Los Angeles you drove back with a man named Dewey Van Brunt. Who was he, please?

A. Dewey Van Brunt is the elected delegate of the Longview Local on the Columbia River.

Q. A delegate to the convention that you attended? A. To the convention.

Q. And who were the people in the car when you drove back from Los Angeles?

A. Mrs. Van Brunt and my wife.

Q. And yourself? A. The four of us.

Q. I want to call your attention to the time that you went up to see Mr. Bridges in his office on the Friday after reading this newspaper article. What took place in that office? [4786]

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that, if your Honor please.

Presiding Inspector: If this is just about making engagements or requesting something for the future, I will take it. But if it is any oration of past events, of course, it would not be competent.

Mr. Gladstein: It has to do with Mr. Cannalonga.

Presiding Inspector: Well, if it was something to do with what this witness had to do with Mr. Cannalonga, I will take it.

Mr. Gladstein: That's right, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I excluded it before under the usual hearsay rule, which I applied in this instance, because I thought it was very insignificant as an oration of past events.

Mr. Gladstein: All right.

Presiding Inspector: Just an arrangement for the future, I will take it.

Mr. Del Guercio: Oh, your Honor, I will make the further objection, too, that Mr. Bridges is here and on trial.

Presiding Inspector: Well, I know.

Mr. Myron: Of course, this isn't proper redirect. It wasn't brought out on cross examination.

Presiding Inspector: I know. But I excluded it the other time on a general objection. Now, I will modify that. If it is an oration of past events, of course, it is not competent and I don't want such an oration. But on the assurance [4787] of counsel that it has something to do with some arrangement, I will take it.

You may state what happened so far as the conversation related to the future, what you would do about Cannalonga or anything of that kind. That is all you want, I understand?

Mr. Gladstein: Well, of course, he was asked on cross examination about this newspaper.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. But the detail of it wasn't given.

Mr. Gladstein: No.

Presiding Inspector: It was just a newspaper article. I don't think we ought to go into dispute about it.

(Testimony of Roscp George Craycraft.)

Mr. Gladstein: He was asked some questions about the causation, if you remember.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, he was.

Mr. Gladstein: Therefore, I would like to get the facts in which will show the causation or the chain of circumstances or whatever they are.

Mr. Del Guercio: Causation only as to time, your Honor, not as to——

Mr. Myron (Interposing): It was merely a reiteration of what was asked on direct examination.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it with the understanding that we will first hear about any arrangements that were [4788] made, any request that was made by Mr. Bridges to this witness.

Mr. Gladstein: Or vice versa.

Presiding Inspector: Or vice versa. Any suggestion that was made.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: Any arrangement between them, any talk between them as to the future.

Mr. Gladstein: All right.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Do you have that in mind, Mr. Craycraft?

Presiding Inspector: I think that is all you want.

Mr. Gladstein: That is, yes.

A. Well, after I read the newspaper article——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): You have already read the newspaper article and you are there with Mr. Bridges.

Presiding Inspector: You are up in Mr. Bridges' office. Now, did you suggest that you do something or did he suggest it or what did happen along that line?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Mr. Gladstein: Your Honor, maybe the witness has the newspaper article with him. I don't know. I think he should be permitted to tell what happened.

Presiding Inspector: We don't care about that. The newspaper article must have been something about what happened here.

Mr. Gladstein: In Court. [4789]

Presiding Inspector: I think we generally know as much about it as the newspapers, but I see that that isn't always the case.

A. I went up to see Mr. Bridges, told him that I had never read anything so screwy in my life. I said "If you know where Mr. Cannalonga is——"

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): If your Honor please, that is what this witness has been wanting to say for a long time and it is apparent that what he saw was something "screwy".

Presiding Inspector: It is only criticism of the newspaper, or it may be a criticism.

Mr. Del Guercio: You have been wanting to say that.

Presiding Inspector: We are all tolerant of criticism of the newspapers. Now, go on.

A. (Continuing) ——That if he knew where he could reach Mr. Cannalonga I would be glad to talk to him. So I told him that I would go on back to the hotel and I would wait in the hotel. And I waited there all the rest of the night for a call from Mr. Bridges, and I guess he was unable to reach Mr. Cannalonga that night.

Presiding Inspector At any rate, you didn't hear from him?

The Witness: At any rate I didn't hear from him that night. [4790]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. When did you next hear as to where Cannalonga was?

A. Well, I had even forgotten about it until Mr. Rodman had come out to the house that night.

Q. Did you when you were with Mr. Bridges express some desire to talk with Mr. Cannalonga?

A. I did.

Q. Will you state what was said on that occasion?

A. I said "I would sure like to sit down and talk to 'Blackie', that I believe that 'Blackie' would give me the true story on it."

Q. What was in the newspaper—what was the question and the answer that caused you to seek out Mr. Bridges and have this conversation with him?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, your Honor. It is an apparent attempt by——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): I don't think we need to go into that.

Mr. Gladstein: All right. I will withdraw it.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Do you know whether Jack Mowery is a veteran of the World War?

A. He is a member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I object to that on the following grounds: First, it couldn't possibly be [4791] within this witness' knowledge. There is no foundation to show that he has ever been in the Army or in the Veteran's Bureau or connected with the United States Army in any manner, shape or form.

Presiding Inspector: We have heard a little bit of football and so forth. I will take this. I don't see that it amounts to anything particularly.

Mr. Del Guercio: The question on cross examination was whether Mowery was a Communist or not.

Mr. Gladstein: The question always is in this case by Mr. Del Guercio, "Have you heard that so and so is a Communist?"

Presiding Inspector: I think this doesn't need any argument. Go ahead.

Mr. Gladstein: Has the question been answered?

The Reporter: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: I didn't hear it.

(The answer referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Presiding Inspector: Well, that is implicit that he was, I suppose.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Do you know whether Mowery has any physical defects?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, if your Honor please, unless he—upon the ground it is improper cross examination or redirect.

Presiding Inspector: You asked him how large Mowery was, [4792] And you asked him some questions about—no, you didn't ask him about his clothing. I think I will take it as passing on identification.

Mr. Gladstein: All right.

Presiding Inspector: If he is lame or has one eye or any obvious physical defects.

A. Well, he has been wounded in the World War in the leg.

Presiding Inspector: Has it left a limp or anything?

The Witness: Not so noticeable.

Presiding Inspector: Then it isn't very material.

Mr. Gladstein: May we have a short recess?

Mr. Del Guercio: Do you have another witness?

Mr. Gladstein: I don't have one here.

Presiding Inspector: Better get him. We will have a short recess.

(Whereupon a short recess was taken.)

Presiding Inspector: Now, we will go on.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, Mr. Craycraft, I think you said it requires 300 members of your Union to constitute a quorum. Is that right?

A. That is correct.

Q. You can't have a meeting unless you have 300? A. That is correct.

Q. On this evening when there was to be a special meeting at which delegates were to report on the convention, I believe you said that there were only around 25 who were there?

A. I doubt if there were that many. [4793]

Q. Did the personnel of that 25, or whatever the group was, change during the period of an hour or so during which time you were waiting for a quorum?

A. I couldn't say definitely. Maybe one or two drifted in and drifted out.

Q. When you were up in Mr. Lord's office on the Sunday, will you state where the various persons who were present were seated in that room?

Mr. Del Guercio: Your Honor, I will object to that as already having been gone into, and not proper redirect.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it, if he can answer it.

A. To my left sat Mr. Gladstein.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. First of all, let me ask you this: Was there a desk in the office?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

A. There was a desk in the office, not quite as long as the one you are sitting before and just about the same width.

Q. Where was I sitting in that room with reference to the desk?

A. You were sitting behind the desk as at present.

Q. Now, was there anybody else who was seated in proximity to the desk?

A. Cannalonga was sitting just about where Mrs. King is sitting only away from the desk. Cannalonga's chair sat in the corner just where my seat is. Mr. Lord sat at this end of [4794] the desk (Indicating)) with his back up against the wall.

Q. Would you say that I was sitting alongside or close to Mr. Cannalonga?

A. I would say about four, five, six feet.

Q. Where was Mr. Shoemaker, the Court Reporter, sitting?

A. Mr. Shoemaker was sitting across from you across the desk, and I was sitting over here about, oh, four or five feet from the desk.

Q. Now, would it be correct to say that you were seated almost on the opposite side of the room from where I was?

Mr. Del Guercio: I would object to that, if your Honor please. Leading and suggestive.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think that is quite right. He was seated at your right, wasn't he?

Mr. Gladstein: Let me ask him.

(Testimony of Rosco George Crayeraft.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Where were you seated?

Mr. Del Guercio: That has already been asked and answered, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, But I don't understand it myself. I will let you ask that, of course, because I don't understand it.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes. All right.

A. In relation to where—— [4795]

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): It was answered, Mr. Del Guercio, but I don't understand it.

A. (Continuing) In relation to where you are seated now I would be sitting off this end of the desk (Indicating) about four or five feet back.

Presiding Inspector: That was at Mr. Del Guercio's right, but just at the end.

Mr. Del Guercio: I was going to resent that. I think you meant "Mr. Gladstein's right". You used my name.

The Witness: Right where Mr. Gladstein is sitting now, I would be sitting at about where this paper is up on top of the desck (Indicating).

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. That is the clerk's desk? That is the clerk's desk, Mr. Crayeraft? A. Yes, sir. [4796]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. That is, you were not actually at the desk at all? A. No, sir.

Presiding Inspector: You were across the table and slightly at the right of Mr. Gladstein?

The Witness: That is right.

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Presiding Inspector: But away from the table?

The Witness: That is correct.

Mr. Gladstein: That is all, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Anything further?

Recross Examination

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. You were facing Cannalonga?

A. No; I wouldn't say that I would be.

Q. Was your back to him?

A. No; my back wouldn't be to him. I was sitting more like I am sitting now, and Cannalonga would be sitting in this direction (indicating) from me.

Q. You could see him without making any effort?

A. Oh, yes. I didn't have to turn around to see him.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is all.

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Have you ever been appointed to any office by the Governor of your State? [4797]

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to this, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

A. I was appointed by Governor Sprague, at the 1939 Legislature, to make a study of the Accident Commission Laws in Oregon, and make a report back to the 1941 Legislature.

Q. Are you active in that matter now?

(Testimony of Rosco George Craycraft.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Is this preliminary to something?

Presiding Inspector: This is reopening for identification.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes; with your permission.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. This is really the only question?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: Are you still active?

The Witness: No. That Commission would go out when the 1941 legislature would meet. Our report was for the 1941 Legislature.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. When was that report made?

A. That was made over a period of 1939-1940 and completed around November in 1940.

Mr. Gladstein: That is all.

Presiding Inspector: That is all.

(Witness excused.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Your Honor, I have a motion to make. [4798]

Presiding Inspecotr: Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: In view of the testimony elicited here from this witness it is apparent that Cannalonga was available, was available to counsel, and could have been brought here had they wanted to.

You will recall this witness testified that he had been asked to come down here by Mr. Gladstein to testify in this case on Tuesday. Cannalonga was still available on Tuesday, his whereabouts were known. It is obvious, therefore that Mr. Gladstein, or anyone else, didn't want Cannalonga to come down here.

Presiding Inspector: Well, the evidence is that he said he would come if everything went well in Seattle.

Mr. Del Guercio: Further, arrangements had been made to have Shoemaker come down here.

Cannalonga, according to this witness' testimony, was going up to Seattle. Why didn't they wait until after what-you-call-him returned from Seattle?

Presiding Inspector: I don't know. But under all the circumstances I will deny the motion.

Mr. Gladstein: We had expected the cross examination of Mr. Craycraft to take the balance of the day and we, frankly, are not prepared to place another witness on the stand this afternoon.

Under the circumstances, we will ask that we may be per- [4799] mitted to take up one matter which Mrs. King desires to take up now. I think it requires the presence of Major Schofield.

Mrs. King: If he is not prepared to come in at this time we can go into the reading of further testimony from the previous hearing.

Presiding Inspector: I am sure he is prepared. Will you ask Major Schofield to come in?

(Whereupon Mr. Del Guercio left the room to summon Major Schofield.)

Mr. Del Guercio: He will be in here in a moment.

Presiding Inspector: Just a moment.

(Whereupon Major Schofield entered the court room.)

Presiding Inspector: Now, Mrs. King?

Mrs. King: If your Honor please, I believe that Major Schofield has seen the paper which I am holding in my hand, which purports to be a copy of a letter dated December 19, 1934, from the Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization, the then Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization, D. W. MacCormack, to Mr. George O. Brisbois, Chief of Police of Phoenix, Arizona, with reference to the testimony of Mr. Honig at a trial before Mr. Justice Edwad J. McGoldrich, in Special Term, Part V, Supreme Court, on October 6, 1933.

I believe that Major Schofield has very kindly consented to assure your Honor that this is a copy of the letter which was sent by the Commissioner of Immigration to Mr. George O. [4800] Brisbois under that date, and that there is a carbon copy of that letter in the files of the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Presiding Inspector: Is that right?

Mr. Del Guercio: With this further observation: That not only did the Major see that letter, the copy that Mrs. King has, but the Major gave it to her.

Major Schofield: If your Honor please, I verified that fact by telephoning to the Central Office in Washington that the letter, a copy of the letter shown to me is a copy of a carbon copy of a letter allegedly written, purportedly written by one of my predecessors, Colonel MacCormack, now deceased, on December 19, 1934, apparently a reply to a letter from the Chief of Police of Phoenix, Arizona, dated November 18, 1934.

Presiding Inspector: That, in the Major's own words, is what you stated.

Mrs. King: Yes; stated in my own way.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mrs. King: I should like to offer in evidence this copy of the letter from Commissioner MacCormack upon the ground that it contains statements tending to contradict the testimony of the witness, Honig, with reference to the disaffiliation of the Trade Union Unity League from the Red International of Labor Unions, which we believe to be an important question in this case. [4801]

As your Honor knows, and I think as the Immigration Service will concede, the stenographic minutes of the hearing before Justice Edward J. McGoldrich, in Special Term, Part V, Supreme Court, on October 6, 1933, have been destroyed so that we do not have the minutes of that hearing.

This is the only available evidence of what was said by Mr. Honig at that trial.

In the letter Commissioner MacCormack says the following:

"With reference to the Trade Union Unity League and its former connection with the Red International labor unions, we have sworn statements in our files as to the motion adopted at a meeting of that organization in New York City on July 1, 1933 'to discontinue and sever the then existing affiliation with the Red International of Labor Unions, an international organization of trade unions, of the said Trade Union Unity League and of all its constituent parts and associated organizations.' It appears that testimony to the same effect was given by Nathaniel Honig, then editor of 'Labor Unity', in the case of Chatham Shoe Company v. Shoe Workers Industrial Union at the trial had before Mr. Justice Edward J. McGoldrich in Special Term, Part V, Supreme Court, on October 6, 1933."

At the hearing in this case, under date of April 22, 1941, Nat, or Nathaniel Honig, testified there had been no such disaffiliation and all that had happened was that the affiliation was dropped off the letterhead. But he stated most positively [4802] that there had been no disaffiliation. We believe that this contradicts his testimony, and his testimony in an important issue of which he had personal knowledge because of his connection with the Trade Union Unity League, he being then the editor of its paper, Labor Unity, and as going to the credibility of Nat Honig, we believe that this letter is admissible and we offer it in evidence.

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I assume that Mrs. King was not arguing in support of her motion to admit the letter.

Presiding Inspector: She may have it marked for identification at this time.

(The copy of letter referred to was thereupon marked for identification as Alien's Exhibit No. 25.)

ALIEN'S EXHIBIT No. 25
FOR IDENTIFICATION

U. S. Department of Labor
Immigration and Naturalization Service
Washington

December 19, 1934.

Mr. George O. Brisbois,
Chief of Police,
Phoenix, Arizona.

My dear Mr. Brisbois:

Thank you for your interest in writing me your letter of November 18, 1934.

The situation in Phoenix has caused us much concern, and we already have a representative of the Department making investigations in Arizona and are assigning a specially qualified man to study the set-up of the organizations concerning which there has been the charge that their principles are such as to bring them within the scope of the immigration acts.

With reference to the Trade Union Unity League and its former connection with the Red International labor unions, we have sworn statements in our files as to the motion adopted at a meeting of that organization in New York City on July 1, 1933 "to discontinue and sever the then existing affiliation with the Red International of Labor Unions, an international organization of trade unions, of the said Trade Union Unity League and of all its constituent parts and associated organizations." It appears that testimony to the same effect was given by Nathaniel Honig, then editor of "Labor Unity", in the case of Chatham Shoe Company v. Shoe Workers Industrial Union at the trial had before Mr. Justice Edward J. McGoldrich in Special Term, Part V, Supreme Court, on October 6, 1933.

We appreciate your interest and cooperation and hope that, in the event you discover evidence which will permit proceedings under the immigration act, you will be good enough to communicate with the local officials of the Immigration and Naturalization Service or to advise me directly.

Very truly yours,

D. W. MacCormack

D. W. MacCORMACK

Mr. Del Guercio: We object to this letter for a number of reasons. We don't, of course, attack the authenticity of the document as such. That has been admitted by the Major. But we object to its introduction for the reason that it is not evidence of anything. It doesn't contradict, or appear to contradict anything that Mr. Honig has testified to in this trial.

Mrs. King has quoted a portion of this letter as follows:

"With reference to the Trade Union Unity League and its former connection with the Red International Labor unions, we have sworn statements in our files as to the motion adopted at a meeting of that organization in New York City on July 1, 1933 [4803] 'to discontinue and sever the then existing affiliation with the Red International of Labor Unions, an international organization of Trade Unions, of the said Trade Union Unity League and of all it constituent parts and associated organizations.'"

And then follows this:

"It appears that testimony to the same effect was given by Nathaniel Honig."

To the same effect as what? To the effect that a resolution had been passed.

Now, your Honor, I don't believe that counsel here would contend, or are contending, or propose to offer evidence that the Trade Union Unity League at any time actually disassociated, disaffiliated, as counsel said, itself from the Red International of Labor Unions. There is, however, positive testimony in this record, uncontroverted, that the Trade Union Unity League never did disassociate itself from the Red International of Trade Unions.

Now, Mrs. King has spoken of the manner in which this document was written, or some connection with it.

We are informed that the late Mr. MacCormack only had before him information. I believe he had a letter from Roger Baldwin to the effect that Roger Baldwin had received a telegram from Jack Stachel to the effect that a motion had been made, or a resolution had been adopted, severing affiliations.

Now, the Court knows who Jack Strachel is. There is [4804] evidence in this record to show that he occupied, and still occupies, a high position in the Communist Party. He was a member, and had been a member, and probably still is a member of the highest Communist Committee here in this country, the Politbureau, Political Committee of the Communist Party of the U. S. A..

As the Major has told the Court, there are no sworn statements of any kind in the Immigration files; and while the deceased MacCormack speaks of sworn statements in our files he may have said that inadvertantly and meant they had information in the files.

So, for those reasons, I object to the introduction of this letter in evidence.

Mrs. King: If your Honor please, I believe in the first place, with reference to what Mr. Del Guercio says about our not being prepared to prove this disaffiliation, I doubt very much whether it, being a collateral matter, would be admissible in any event. I believe that everything that Mr. Del Guercio says may have to do with the weight of this evidence, but not of the question of its admissibility.

You have here a letter in which the highest official in the Immigration Service, short of the Secretary, states that he had certain things before him, and there is an assumption that those things were then before him.

I think that everybody who has had to do with the Immigration [4805] Service knows that the files of that office are extremely complicated. It is quite possible that sworn statements which were then before Commissioner MacCormack are not now available, without throwing any doubt on the fact that they were, and that Commissioner MacCormack had them at the time this letter was written.

Furthermore, with specific reference to the testimony of Mr. Honig, there is nothing else to show what he testified to. These sworn statements may very well have contained evidence of that, but here is a man high in the Immigration Service, in the very Government Department that is prosecuting this case, that makes a statement with reference to what Mr. Honig testified to. And it seems to me that after his death we are not in a position to say what he acted upon particularly when all of those things are not before me. This is the nearest thing we have to proving what Mr. Honig said at that trial, and it is in conflict with his testimony at this hearing.

We believe, on the question of his credibility and even, if there is any question of the admissibility of it, the problem of disaffiliation, that it is admissible on both of those grounds. But I don't believe that the question of disaffiliation is before your Honor. I think what your Honor is interested in is the credibility of the witness Honig. I don't see how, in view of the state of the record, in view of the fact that these stenographic minutes have been destroyed, and where you [4806] have a man of Colonel MacCormack's position making a statement of this kind, you can doubt that there was testimony of that kind before him, or evidence of that testimony which satisfied him as to what Mr. Honig testified to in the Chatham Shoe case.

Presiding Inspector: I will ask for the sworn statement first.

Of course, I couldn't receive the letter in that respect because that is entirely indefinite and unsatisfactory.

As to the statement that Mr. Honig testified in some certain way, that must be on information because we can't suppose that Colonel MacCormack was present at the trial in New York. There is no evidence of that kind. So it is a matter of information that he received which he undoubtedly believed. But that, I think, is far from proving that the testimony of Mr. Honig, as given, was to the effect that he there states. Consequently, I regretfully reject the offer of this letter but it may be marked for identification so you will have the benefit of the offer.

Mrs. King: Now, if your Honor please——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) May we have a five-minute recess? The Major is going away tonight and I want to consult with him.

Mrs. King: As far as we are concerned, and the fact that we have no other witnesses present, we are willing to adjourn for the day. [4807]

Presiding Inspector: I think the Major wants to, perhaps, come back.

We will take a recess.

Major Schofield: For about five minutes.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. We will take a five-minute recess.

(Whereupon a short recess was taken.)

Mr. Del Guercio: If the Court please, information has already been furnished you that Major Schofield must leave for Washington tonight. We would like to put the Major on the stand as a witness at this time.

Presiding Inspector: Very well. This is what they reserved, do you remember?

Mr. Gladstein: Well,——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) They reserved the introduction of testimony of Major Schofield.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, your Honor, I assume that we would have the right to cross examine, of course.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, yes.

Mr. Gladstein: And I don't have a notebook containing some notes on which I would want to cross examine.

Presiding Inspector: Send for it.

Mr. Gladstein: I will send for it, yes.

LEMUEL B. SCHOFIELD called as a witness on behalf of the Government, being first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows: [4808]

Direct Examination

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Will you state your name, please.

A. Lemuel B. Schofield.

Q. And what is your occupation at the present time?

A. I am Special Assistant to the Attorney General in charge of the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Presiding Inspector: And your address?

The Witness: Washington, D. C., Department of Justice.

Q. Now, Mr. Schofield, were you in San Francisco on April 22, 1941.? A. I was.

Q. And did you at any time on that day—were you at any time on that day present at the time that James O'Neil was present? A. I was.

Q. And where was that?

A. It was in an office building, I think the number is 111 Sutter Street, San Francisco.

Q. Is that in the office of the FBI?

A. It was.

Q. And who else was present?

A. Mr. E. J. Connelley, Assistant Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation; a Federal Bureau of Investigation Agent by the name of Michael Cassidy; yourself, Mr. Del Guercio, and myself.

[4809]

(Testimony of Lemuel B. Schofield.)

Q. And was Mr. O'Neil there? A. O'Neil.

Q. Did you have any conversation with Mr. O'Neil that night? A. I did.

Q. Did the rest of those present have any conversation in your presence with Mr. O'Neil?

A. Yes. You and I, I think, asked most of the questions and conducted most of the conversation. There were, as I recall it, some questions and some statements made by Cassidy. I don't recall that Mr. Connelley said anything. And, of course, O'Neil made statements.

Q. Will you state what Mr. O'Neil said that night at that time and place? What was the conversation?

A. He was asked whether he had been a Communist and stated he had been a member of the Communist Party and had been active in its behalf here in San Francisco. He was asked whether or not Harry Bridges was a member of the Communist Party, and he said he was. He then said and volunteered this: That he, O'Neil, so far as he knew, was the only man who had visual evidence of the fact that Bridges was a Communist. We asked him what he meant by that, and he said that on one occasion he had actually seen Bridges pasting dues stamps in Bridges' membership book in the Communist Party.

Mr. Gladstein: I move to strike that answer upon the ground that this is impeachment of their own witness, your [4810] Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it. I think they may impeach their own witness. Of course, it isn't original proof of the matter.

(Testimony of Lemuel B. Schofield.)

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, it isn't only exactly on that line, but you will recall that O'Neil testified that what he had said that night at that time and place to Mr. Schofield and myself, Mr. Connelley and Mr. Cassidy, was true and correct.

Presiding Inspector: I remember that. I will take it.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Do you recall any other statement?

Presiding Inspector: It gets into a web of statement and contradiction, of course, but I will take it.

The Witness: What was the question?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. Yes. I recall that you said to him, and I also recall that I said to him, that we wanted only the truth and was he prepared to tell the truth. And he said, Yes, he was, and that what he had told us was the truth.

Q. Do you know if——

A. (Interposing) Then he was asked whether or not he would testify, and he said he would not testify. You pointed out to him that as an American citizen it was his duty to tell the truth, and we asked him why he wouldn't testify and he said that [4811] he was afraid of losing his job he had described obtaining and how he had obtained a position as broadcaster for a radio station. As I recall it, I think it was located in a place called Marysville, California.

Q. Did he say anything as to how close he and Bridges had been?

A. He said that he didn't want to testify because he had been Bridges' friend, was still his friend and, in fact, had been asked by Bridges to head the Bridges Defense Committee.

Q. And did he also make any statements as to what would result in the event he did appear to testify?

Mr. Gladstein: Could I suggest that the witness not be led but be asked to give the conversation?

Presiding Inspector: Yes, I think that is so.

A. Well, he said that he would be known as an enemy of labor if he testified against Bridges and that he would lose all his friends in the labor movement and the labor crowd, and he wouldn't be able to live in San Francisco if he testified against Bridges. I remember that I asked him, I said, "Are you afraid?" He said, "No, I am not afraid, but I just won't testify against Bridges".

Q. Do you recall any other conversation with Mr. O'Neil at that meeting?

A. That is all that I can think of at the moment. After the meeting, oh, I do recall this, too: That it was ex- [4812] plained to him that he would be subpoenaed and, as I recall it, the subpoena was served on him then and there. And he then said that he wouldn't honor the subpoena and respond to it, and then it was explained to him—I took part in this explanation—that if he failed to answer that subpoena we would, of course, under our duty be obliged to ask the Court to subpoena him and a subpoena would be served by a Deputy Marshal. And we pointed out to him the risks he ran if he failed to answer and respond to that kind of a subpoena. He then said that he didn't think that he would testify anyway or answer any subpoena, but he would make up his mind what he was going to do. And he also said that if we forced him to testify we "would be sorry", as he put it.

Q. Now, Major, did anyone in that room at any time threaten or intimidate or coerce James O'Neil?

A. Not in any way.

Mr. Del Guercio: You may cross examine.

Cross Examination

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Major, how many times have you seen Mr. O'Neil?

A. Except seeing him in Court on the attachment proceedings, I believe that's the only time I ever saw him.

Q. That is the only time you ever had a meeting in which there was a discussion?

A. That was. [4813]

Q. What day of the week was it, do you recall?

A. I think it was Tuesday, the 22nd of April.

Q. And what time did the meeting begin?

A. Well, Mr. Del Guercio and I went there, as I recall it, around 5:30. I know it was after the completion of the afternoon hearings here, and I believe O'Neil got there somewhere shortly before 7:00 o'clock.

Q. And how long were you and Mr. O'Neil together with the others in that room?

A. It would be hard for me to state exactly, but I would say approximately three-quarters of an hour; maybe a little longer.

Q. When was the subpoena served on him?

A. During that meeting while he was in the room.

Q. What did the subpoena require him to do?

A. I think it required him to appear the following morning, though I won't be certain about that.

Q. Where? A. In this proceeding here.

Q. Did you see the subpoena?

A. I didn't.

Q. Then you don't know where it required him to appear, do you?

A. No, but it was discussed.

Q. What was the discussion on that? [4814]

A. I don't recall the discussion beyond it was a subpoena, an Immigration Service subpoena.

Q. Wasn't it a subpoena to require him to appear at 111 Sutter Street?

A. No, it was not; not that I know of.

Q. You really don't know, do you?

A. I am not certain, and I said so.

Q. What was Mr. O'Neil's condition as to sobriety?

A. Well, he was perfectly sober as far as I could tell.

(Testimony of Lemuel B. Schofield.)

Q. How close did you get to him?

A. Oh, after the meeting was over I talked with him a few minutes. Not a few minutes. I would say really a few seconds.

Q. Where?

A. In a little passageway. It was the vestibule, you might say, from the inner office out to the outer office.

Q. Is that when you told him something about helping him out on his job?

A. I told him that on two occasions. I told him that first in the room in the presence of the others, and I repeated it when I said "good-bye" to him, in that little room, in that little corridor.

Q. Were you and he alone then?

A. Yes. It lasted probably about a half a minute or maybe three-quarters of a minute, and I was as close to him as [4815] I am—closer to him than to the stenographer, and I smelled no liquor on him. He might have had some, but he didn't look like that or act like that.

Q. Did you see that evening either of the Inspectors or FBI Agents, whichever they were, who brought Mr. O'Neil down from Marysville?

A. He entered the room with Cassidy and he was very friendly with Cassidy.

Q. I didn't ask you whether he was friendly with Cassidy.

A. No, but that's how I remember it.

Q. I wanted to know——

A. (Interposing) I got the impression that Cassidy had come with him from someplace. Where it was I don't know, and who the other agent was, if there was an agent, I don't know.

(Testimony of Lemuel B. Schofield:)

Q. Did it appear to you at that time that Mr. O'Neil had been drinking?

A. No, it did not.

Q. Now, what precisely is your position in the Department?

A. I am an Special Assistant to the Attorney General in charge of the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Q. Well, specifically with reference to the Immigration Service you are in charge of it, are you?

A. That is correct. [4816]

Q. Could you describe in a general way what that entails as to your duties or authority?

A. Well, the office of Commissioner of Immigration is vacant and I am filling that position.

Q. In effect, therefore, you are the Acting Commissioner, although you don't have that exact title?

A. I would say that is a correct statement.

Q. What would you say in general is the authority of the Commissioner?

A. Well, in what respect? That is a pretty broad question.

Q. Let us take with reference to deportation cases. What are the duties and what is the authority of the Commissioner with respect to deportation cases?

Mr. Del Guercio: Your Honor, I will object to this line of questioning here and I don't think it is material or relevant.

(Testimony of Lemuel B. Schofield.)

Presiding Inspector: Does this call for a statement of the statutes of the United States?

Mr. Gladstein: I don't think so. I am asking simply for—I am not sure that it is covered by a statute. I don't know.

Mr. Del Guercio: The Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization, if your Honor please, derives his authority from the statute and, of course, that would be authorized under the rules.

[4817]

Mr. Gladstein: If he can answer the question by referring to a statute he may do so, of course, but I am asking him for a general statement of the duties and authority of the position that he is now filling as Acting Commissioner.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think that is a proper question, but if the Major will answer it it will expedite the proceedings.

A. I don't know whether I can answer it, but I will make an attempt.

The authority that I have is derived from the statutes and also from the Attorney General.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What is that authority?

A. I would say, to describe it generally with respect to deportation, you ask?

Q. Yes.

A. It is to supervise the issuing of warrants of arrest and deportation and, in a general way, supervise the hearings and take jurisdiction over those who conduct the hearings and determine through subordinates the propriety of issuing warrants of deportation after the Attorney General or those delegated by the Attorney General has decided that on the evidence an order of deportation should issue, and then under my jurisdiction comes the carrying out of the order of deportation. [4818]

Q. To what extent, if any, does your position involve you in the determination of a deportation proceeding?

A. Well, I don't know what you mean by "determination". You mean of the final decision?

Q. Well, of any part of the decision or any decision during the course of the proceedings or at any stage of it?

A. I would say the prosecution of the case, comes exclusively under my jurisdiction subject, of course, to the Attorney General, who is my superior.

Q. Yes.

A. But after the case has been finished and it is reported, it goes before the Board of Immigration Appeals, which is not under my jurisdiction; and then from the Board it goes to the Attorney General.

Q. Well now, in your position as Special Assistant to the Attorney General is it or is it not the fact that you may be called on by the Attorney General to give your recommendations or your views with respect to a particular case?

A. Oh, he could. It isn't customary, but he could.

(Testimony of Lemuel B. Schofield.)

Q. And, therefore, it is possible that the Attorney General of this country may call on you for your views or your opinions with respect to whether or not there should be a deportation order issued against Harry Bridges?

A. Well, he might. But if he didn't I would think it my duty to give him my views. [4819]

Q. I see. And you have pretty definite views on this matter, don't you, Major?

A. I do, based upon the evidence that I have examined and testimony that I have heard and the results of the investigation that has been made.

Q. You have pretty definite views against Mr. Bridges along this line, too, don't you, Major? That you have expressed yourself before a Congressional Committee in the United States Government to the effect that you are of the positive conviction that Bridges and his counsel intended by their request to obtain the names of Government witnesses or statements of Government witnesses, that they intended to obtain such information as might be given them for the purpose of fabricating a defense, haven't you?

A. I don't recall that.

Mr. Del Guercio: I object.

Presiding Inspector: I will allow it.

A. (Continuing): I don't recall that I testified before a Congressional Committee to that effect. I might have. It is my belief. [4820]

(Testimony of Lemuel B. Schofield.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Didn't you know that you expressed that belief? A. I think I have.

Q. Do you know where you have expressed it?

A. I don't recall every place. I don't know as I have expressed it more than once or twice.

Q. Do you recall any Committee in Washington before which you expressed it?

A. I frankly don't. I might have if I were asked.

Q. Do you recall testifying recently before a Sub-Committee of the Committee on Judiciary of the United States Senate? A. I do.

Q. Do you recall that you were being asked your views as to the advisability of adopting certain then pending bills? A. I do.

Q. Do you recall expressing your views as to certain provisions in those bills? A. I do.

Q. And do you recall that you, without any request from any of the members of the Committee, adverted to the Bridges case and made certain references in which you exposited your views?

A. I might have used the request made by counsel for Bridges for permission to examine all our evidence prior to [482t] the hearing as an illustration of the futility of adopting such a method of procedure in administrative hearings.

Q. That is, you chose to speak about the Bridges case without any reference having been made theretofore to it by any of the members of the Committee to serve as an illustration of your general views on the subject matter of the bills concerning which you were testifying, correct?

A. No. I don't recall just how that incident occurred, if it did occur. It might have occurred. I remember I was called upon to testify there, asked to testify, on how the three proposed bills, setting up what you might call a Code of Administrative Procedure, would affect the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Mr. Gladstein: Now, your Honor, I have sent for, but it has not yet arrived, some material that is in my office, and I believe it is probably on the way now. With the exception of some further questions on the basis of that material I do not think that I have any other questions of Major Schofield.

I am wondering whether it would be satisfactory to you, and with the witness, to recess temporarily until that material reaches me.

I have asked that it be sent by taxi.

Presiding Inspector: How far away is it?

Mr. Gladstein: My office is not far away, about five minutes or ten minutes by taxi. But the young man had to go [4822] there with a key and also come back.

Presiding Inspector: It ought to be here very soon?

Mr. Gladstein: I think so.

Presiding Inspector: Well, we will recess for a moment. Let me know when it arrives.

(Whereupon a short recess was taken.)

(Testimony of Lemuel B. Schofield.)

Presiding Inspector: You may proceed.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, Major, Senator O'Mahoney was one of the members of the Sub-Committee before which you testified, isn't that true? A. He was.

Q. How is it pronounced, O'Mahoney? (Giving pronunciation). A. I believe it is.

Q. And that testimony was given on May 2, of this year?

A. I wouldn't be sure of the date.

Q. Now, do you recall Senator O'Mahoney asking you in these words, or in substance, the following question:

"In the case of deportation proceedings, for example, the issue is probably rather clear, is it not?"

A. I don't remember that specific question, but I have no doubt that something like that was asked.

Q. And your answer was, Major:

"I think so."

A. It may have been.

Mr. Del Guercio: Does counsel purport to have the [4823] questions and answers asked before the Sub-Committee? I think if he does, he should show them to the Major here.

Mr. Gladstein: I don't know—this is to refresh his recollection—and anyway it doesn't purport to be official. I don't know whether the Major has ever seen this.

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead.

(Testimony of Lemuel B. Schofield.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Do you recall Senator O'Mahoney asking you this:

"Now, then, what right—under your procedure now—has a person in such a proceeding, to go over the record and files?"

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, is this for impeachment or what?

Mr. Gladstein: This is cross examination.

Presiding Inspector: That is to show bias.

Mr. Gladstein: It is, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it for that purpose. That is leading to something.

A. I think a question of that kind was asked of me.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. And your answer, Major Schofield, was: "None at all." A. Yes.

Q. And then Senator O'Mahoney asked you: "What notice does he have of the issue?" [4824] Didn't he ask you that?

A. I think that was asked and I told him that he got the notice through the warrant.

Q. As a matter of fact, your answer was in the following words, was it not:

"He is served with a warrant, just as in any other proceeding, based upon a warrant, and the warrant must be specific in its allegations, and he is therefore put on notice, and then a time is fixed for the hearing, and the witnesses must then be present, and he must be confronted with them, and he has a right to question them and to cross examine them.

"Now, that same issue was recently raised in San Francisco, from where I have just returned in the Bridges case.

"As a matter of fact, the alien in that proceeding made an application before the hearing opened—he made an application to Judge Sears, the special immigrant inspector, who was presiding in the case here in Washington, for permission to have access to all of our file, all of our investigation, every statement made by every witness, taken either by the Federal Bureau of Investigation or by our service, thus to be put on notice in advance, not only of the nature of the charges against him—which is all anybody under our system of Government is entitled to—but, in addition to that, to all the evidence that we had so that, ostensibly, they could meet what they allege to be framed-up evidence." [4825]

Did you give that answer?

A. If you are reading from the official transcript I would say "Yes." It sounds the way I recollect that I answered the question.

Q. And Senator O'Mahoney then asked you:

"Was that request of Bridges denied?"

Didn't he ask you that? A. I think he did.

Mr. Del Guercio: May I ask if counsel purports to read from the official record?

Mr. Gladstein: I can't say that this is official. If the Major wishes he can say that in substance he did or did not answer as this appears.

(Testimony of Lemuel B. Schofield.)

Presiding Inspector: I will allow it. It doesn't make any difference whether it is official or not.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did you, Major, answer in these words:

"It was refused. A. Yes.

Q. Did Senator O'Mahoney then ask you:

"Then I take it to be your testimony that, if this provision contained in Section 306 of S-674 were the law now—"

At which point you, Major Schofield, interrupted to say:

"You would have to do it."

Is that correct? [4826]

A. That is a little confusing to me by what you mean by that. The point is that there was a provision in one of these three proposed bills which, in every Administrative hearing, not only in our service, but the Interstate Commerce Commission, and every other type of Administrative Hearing, would require the Government to, upon request, give to the other side, whatever it might be—in our case the Alien in a deportation case—complete access to every bit of information that the Government had, including a right to go through the records and the file. I opposed that.

Q. And then didn't Senator Mahoney ask you this:

"Mr. Bridges would be entitled to go into all the files of the F.B.I., and of your bureau, the Department of Justice, to search out anything that might seem to him to have a bearing on his case?"

(Testimony of Lemuel B. Schofield.)

A. I know there was a question like that asked and I recall I said this was too broad; he wouldn't have the right to go the whole file, but under the provision of the proposed legislation he would have the right to be informed of all the information that the Service had in connection with his case.

Q. And your answer was then substantially this, was it not, Major.

"Well, Senator, I wouldn't go quite that far. I don't think he would have the right to go through all the files to find out what he thought pertained to him, but I do think it would place [4827] a duty upon us to supply him with information in the form of copies of statements or whatever form it could be agreed upon that it should be done."

A. That is substantially what I said.

Q. And then the Senator asked you:

"But this says, 'shall have access to the file or record of information upon which the agency has acted—and shall be notified of such right before the record is closed or informal or tentative decision is made.'"

Didn't he ask that?

A. I don't remember it. I suppose he did.

Q. Don't you remember saying:

"Well, sir, it is bad enough, if that is interpreted merely to mean that he shall have the right to information, but it would be a monstrous suggestion,

(Testimony of Lemuel B. Schofield.)

if you were to say that an alien could go through all your files, physically."

"Now, in the Bridges case, that same motion was renewed at the hearing itself in San Francisco."

Did you say that?

A. I wouldn't be sure, but I think I referred to the motion that was first made in Washington and repeated here.

Q. Didn't Senator O'Mahoney ask you this:

"What was the disposition of the motion then?"

A. I think he did.

Q. Didn't you say this:

"Major Schofield: It was again refused. At that time [4828] the hearing judge—Judge Sears—suggested, because of the precedent in the first hearing, in which the hearing commissioner rather surprisingly had requested the Secretary of Labor to hand over to Mr. Bridges' counsel, and to the alien, all of their statements, and all of their records having to do with the evidence against him, which was done, and, because of that precedent, Judge Sears requested me to take up with the Attorney General the request that had been made, although he, himself, refused to make any such order, but requested me to take it up to the Attorney General, which I did, and the Attorney General left it to the discretion of the hearing inspector—that is, our officer who was prosecuting the case—and myself, and we promptly refused the request. The request was made ostensibly to enable the alien to investigate in advance the witnesses who were to be called against him to check on the statements in an effort to bolster their contention that the evidence was in large respect untrustworthy and manufactured. We are positively convinced that the real purpose was for the alien to concoct false alibis, false testimony, and endeavor falsely and corruptly to meet the evidence that was fairly presented against him. Now, to permit such a thing by elective enactment, to my mind would be ruinous to any successful enforcement of the deportation statutes, and yet this provision, it seems to me, would compel it. I am only using that as an illustration but it isn't only in an important case like that——"

(Testimony of Lemuel B. Schofield.)

[4829]

At which point there was an interruption.

Do you remember giving that answer?

A. I wouldn't say I gave it word for word, but that, in substance, is what I said; and I said it because I believed it, and because of the experience in the first case, and because of intimidation of Government witnesses, and the efforts made to prevent witnesses to testify.

Q. Did I understand you to say "Intimidation of Government witnesses?"

A. Prospective Government witnesses.

Q. For this or the last case? A. Both.

Q. Do you have any in mind?

A. I wouldn't be specific as to details but I know the great difficulty that the Government has encountered in obtaining witnesses who were willing and not afraid to testify.

Q. Please state one example, name one person who was a prospective Government witness who was intimidated by the defense?

(Testimony of Lemuel B. Schofield.)

A. I don't carry those details sufficiently in my mind, Mr. Gladstein, to give you specific cases. But I know the difficulty that Mr. Del Guercio and the prosecution has been up against.

Q. Well, now, I am not interested in difficulties. I am interested in this intimidation on the part of defense counsel [4830] of prospective Government witnesses. Do I understand that you are unable to give me a single example?

A. I won't give you names because I won't trust my memory. In fact, I didn't try to remember the names.

Q. Do you have any objection to my request, which I am now making, that you consult your records—and I don't want you to be required to stay over for this if it will take long, but it is perfectly all right with me if you authorize Mr. Del Guercio to take this matter up and testify, or anybody else—but I am interested in knowing whether you will supply from the witness stand any instance of a person that you claim as a prospective Government witness who was intimidated by the defense, either in this case or in the last case.

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, in the first place it is not a question. It is argumentative. In the second place, as counsel knows, and as the witness has indicated here, his testimony is based upon what I told him and what others have told him, and everybody else has told him.

(Testimony of Lemuel B. Schofield.)

Presiding Inspector: Well, if the witness wants to answer this request he may do so. Of course, I have no control over such a request as that.

Mr. Gladstein: All right.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What is your answer to the request?

A. My answer would be that I wouldn't do it if I did know [4831] it.

Q. Then you really——

A. (Interposing): The case is not c r yet, Mr. Gladstein.

Q. No, I understand. But you really don't have of your own knowledge—you don't know of your own knowledge any single case, do you?

A. I haven't talked to more than, I think, two witnesses who testified here, or prospective witnesses. So I wouldn't know of my own knowledge. I mean, even to that extent, that they had told me.

Q. Well, then, your statement a few moments ago concerning intimidation by the Defense, not only in the present case but in he prior Bridges case, was a statement which you are making solely on the basis of hearsay? Correct?

A. Well, if you'll look at the answer that you say I gave I said that I was convinced. And I am convinced.

Q. Well, I am afraid that isn't a responsive answer, Major. Could you say in answer to my question whether your statements in the case now that you have just made under oath regarding intimidation by the defense against potential Government witnesses, both in this proceeding against Mr. Bridges and in the proceeding two years ago, whether or not that testimony of yours was based purely on hearsay?

A. But my testimony only had to do with my belief. Now, [4832] my belief I have arrived, at first of all, with respect to the first hearing by what I've read in the record and—I mean, I have got my whole appraisal of that hearing from hearsay and from reports, of course. I wasn't even connected with the Department then.

Q. Including, I take it, the decision of Dean Landis?

A. Yes. I have read that, all of it,

Q. Now, Major, when you testified before the Sub Committee to the effect that the Hearing Commissioner in the first case—incidentally, I take it you were referring to Dean Landis? A. Yes.

Q. When you said that he "rather surprisingly had requested the Secretary of Labor to hand over to Mr. Bridges' counsel, and to the Alien, all of their statements, and all of their records having to do with the evidence against him, which was done. . . ", were you saying that of your own knowledge?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I object to the manner of counsel conducting himself and the manner of his reading.

Presiding Inspector: I can't control——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing): No, I realize you can't control it.

(Testimony of Lemuel B. Schofield.)

Presiding Inspector: I will let the question be asked.

A. Why, of course not. I have nothing to do with that. [4833]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Then why did you testify under oath that such a thing had been done when you didn't know it?

A. Well, because I know it was done from the record. But you say whether I know it "from my own knowledge". In fact, I heard you and Mrs. King state that to the Court here.

Q. State what, please?

A. That Dean Landis had requested the then Secretary of Labor to furnish Counsel for the Alien in advance information as to what the nature of the testimony was; copies of statements, as I recall it.

Q. Well, now, Major, isn't it a fact that in the first Bridges hearing it is not true that all of the statements and all of the records having to do with the evidence against Harry Bridges was handed over by the Secretary of Labor to Mr. Bridges' counsel?

A. Well, I don't know that I said "Handed over." I am not sure. If you tell me that that is a transcript I wouldn't deny the accuracy of the reporter and I certainly didn't mean that the whole thing was physically handed over in that sense. But I mean information as to the testimony, as I understand it, was furnished the Alien in the other case in contrast to this hearing.

Q. Now, you said that you had read the Landis opinion. Before I ask you the next question on this same subject matter, I want to refer you to a portion of it which begins on page 4 of [4834] the Landis decision under the subdivision entitled "Production of Documents."

Mr. Myron: We object to that, your Honor. What is the purpose of the reference to the Landis decision?

Mr. Gladstein: It is the basis of the next question.

Mr. Myron: I think we should have the purpose of the reference. He is claiming he is referring to a decision of Landis.

Presiding Inspector: I will allow him to refer to this opinion of Dean Landis. Go on.

Mr. Gladstein: I am quoting now, Major.

Presiding Inspector: You haven't got to the question yet.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. "Two circumstances in this connection deserve comment. The first relates to a series of requests made by the alien for the the production of certain documentary evidence in the possession of the Government. This evidence consisted either of affidavits of witnesses taken before immigration officials—witnesses who were later called to the stand —or of correspondence between officials of the Department of Labor stating facts that tended to impeach the testimony of witnesses called by the Government. This evidence was sought purely to impeach testimony already given by witnesses for the Government. Obviously the examiner as a subordinate official of the Department of Labor could not issue compulsory process for the production of documentary evidence within the possession of the Department. Counsel [4835] for the Government claiming to be bound by Department regulations, refused in each instance to produce the evidence requested even though it was then in their possession.

"The first of these requests was granted by the secretary. Thereafter to afford greater expedition the examiner was empowered to refuse or grant any such request that might be made. Some requests of this character were denied, others were granted, the basis of decision in each case being the relevancy of the documentary evidence requested."

Now, in the light of that statement, Major, aren't you able now to say that the testimony that you gave before the Sub-Committee of the Committee on Judiciary was not accurate?

A. No, I wouldn't say so at all.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is not so and counsel here is purposely doing it. He knows what was in mind.

Presiding Inspector: He has answered the question.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, I am making an objection to it.

Presiding Inspector: The witness has already said that he would not say so.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Then I understand, do I Major, that you see no inconsistency between the portion of the Landis opinion which I read to you and your answer, which has previously been read to you and which you recognized in substance as correct, your answer given to a question before the Sub-Committee of the [4836] Committee on Judiciary? Correct?

A. No, I don't, Mr. Gladstein, for this reason: I was making a general statement. For instance, I don't recall that I said anything about "correspondence" at all in that answer. I don't think the word is used.

Q. I haven't used the word "correspondence".

A. No, but Dean Landis did.

Presiding Inspector: Is that all, Mr. Gladstein?

Mr. Gladstein: I am just looking, your Honor.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Major, do you consider it in accordance with the American tradition with respect to the judicial process for you, as the Chief of the Service, prosecuting this case, to play a role, give any view, express any opinion or exert any influence for the purpose of affecting the final decision of this case?

A. Well, I don't know what you mean by that. I think it is my duty, yes, or I wouldn't be doing it. I think it is my duty to do everything I can to see that the evidence is presented here to support my conviction that Harry Bridges is a Communist, is one of the leading Communists of the United States. Yes.

Q. And to exert every influence within your power upon the Attorney General or anyone else to secure a decision in accordance with that view?

A. Every legitimate influence, except that I wouldn't [4837] include the Attorney General, no.

(Testimony of Lemuel B. Schofield.)

I mean, I would prefer him to make up his own mind after he reads the record.

Q. But you would not bar yourself from expressing your views or exerting your influence in the making of that decision?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please,——

A. (Interposing): I wouldn't bar myself, you say?

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Yes.

A. No. I would regard it my duty to give him what I think the evidence shows.

Mr. Gladstein: I think that is all.

Presiding Inspector: That is all, Major.

Mr. Del Guercio: Just one question, your Honor.

Re-Direct Examination

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Was there any conversation there in the corridor with O'Neil?

A. Yes. As I said a minute ago to Mr. Gladstein, that took probably a half a minute or three-quarters of a minute. To be accurate, I wouldn't say it took a minute. I simply said "Goodbye" to him and shook hands, "Goodbye" to him. And I asked him this. I said, "What is it that is really worrying you here, O'Neil? Is it your job in Marysville?" And he said, "Yes." And I said, "Well, you can trust us that we will do everything we can to see that you don't lose your job [4838] or that there is any other reprisal taken against you. I don't believe that any employer would fire any man who came into court in response to a subpoena and testified to the truth." And I said, "Won't you think it over before you make up your mind?" And he said he would, and that was the end.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is all.

Re-Cross Examination

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Do you know, Major Schofield, that Mr. O'Neil was fired from his job before he ever took the witness stand here?

A. No, Mr. Gladstein. I didn't know it, but I read it in the newspaper that he said so on the stand.

Mr. Gladstein: That is all.

A. (Continuing): And I know that we had nothing to do with it.

Mrs. King: May I ask simply this? I don't care whether it is off the record or on the record: Whether that letter of Major MacCormack's was turned in to the reporter by Mr. Del Guercio?

Presiding Inspector: Yes. I think it is marked for identification.

(Witness excused.)

Met, pursuant to adjournment, at 10:00 A. M. [4840]

PROCEEDINGS

Mr. Gladstein: If your Honor please, I would like to recall Mr. Henry Schmidt for a brief questioning on a matter which was brought up on cross examination of the witness.

Take the stand please.

HENRY A. SCHMIDT

called as witness on behalf of the Alien, having been previously duly sworn, testified further as follows:

Re-Direct Examination

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Schmidt, when you were on the stand earlier in this case you testified in substance that you had never written any articles for the People's World. You were shown an article which purported to be written by you appearing in the issue, I think, of April 7, 1938, of the People's World. Since leaving the witness stand have you made a check-up to determine how that article happened to appear in the People's World?

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, I will object to this question, your Honor, as having all been gone into, asked and answered.

Presiding Inspector: I think, for the sake of showing the truth, if Mr. Schmidt has refreshed his recollection by other matters that weren't before him at that time, I will allow this evidence.

Mr. Myron: Is this a case of changing his testimony?

Mr. Gladstein: No; it is a case of substantiating his [4841] testimony.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it whichever way it is.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What is the answer to the question?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. Now, on that check-up what have you discovered with respect to the article?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object.

Presiding Inspector: With respect to its publication?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes.

A. Our Union has for years issued a weekly mimeographed bulletin, which is written, sometimes by myself and sometimes by the regularly elected publicity man, and I checked records of the middle of the year and prior to that time, of 1938, and I found a bulletin dated March 30, 1938, which has exactly the same article that was shown me in the People's World. That bulletin is dated March 30. The same article appears in the Voice of the Federation, that is, the following day, which would be March 31, 1938. There is one portion of the bulletin which is not reproduced in the Voice of the Federation, and I don't think it is reproduced in the People's World that was shown me here.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. What is the Voice of the Federation to which you have referred?

A. The Voice of the Federation is the official organ of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific.

[4842]

Mr. Del Guercio: Are you calling my attention to this place that you have marked here?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, the one that begins "Rising like a monolith."

Mr. Reporter, do you have the People's World issue that is in evidence, or is it for identification?

Mr. Del Guercio: It is in evidence.

Presiding Inspector: It is in evidence.

The Reporter: Government's Exhibit 274.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, Mr. Schmidt, you made reference in your testimony just now to a bulletin of the ILWU. I show you such a bulletin with the heading "ILWU, Local 1-10, Bulletin CIO No. 27", date "Wednesday, March 30, 1938", purporting to have been put out by the ILWU Publicity Committee, Local 1-10 at 27 Clay Street, San Francisco, and ask you if this is a bulletin to which you made reference. A. It is.

Q. And the article to which you made reference, is it the one which begins at the fourth paragraph with the initial words "Company town" and the opening sentence "Rising like a monolith besides the yellow swirling tides of the Carquinez Straits"?

A. That's it.

Mr. Gladstein: I offer this in evidence. [4843]

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to its introduction in evidence as not tending to either confirm or to contradict any previous testimony given by this witness.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it for what it is worth.

Mr. Del Guercio: And it is no comparison at all with the article.

Presiding Inspector: Well, we will leave that for argument in the briefs. I will take the article. I can't stop to examine every word.

Mr. Gladstein: May we have the right, your Honor, to have the stenographic reporter make a photostat of that bulletin and substitute it for the original, and we can withdraw the original?

Presiding Inspector: Yes, that is the general practice.

(The bulletin referred to was received in evidence and marked Alien's Exhibit No. 26.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, Mr. Schmidt, you made reference to an issue of the Voice of the Federation under date of March 31, 1938. I show you what purports to be that issue and ask you if this is the issue to which you made reference in the testimony given by you a few moments ago. A. It is the same.

Q. Now, I call your attention to an article which appears in column seven on the front page under the headline [4844] "Sugar Union Melts When CIO Strikes", purporting to be written by Henry Schmidt, and beginning "Rising like a monolith besides the yellow swirling tides" and so forth. Is that the same article?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. That's the same article that appears in a bulletin of the day before.

Mr. Gladstein: I offer this in evidence.

Mr. Del Guercio: I object on the same ground.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it. We will have the privilege of reading that extraordinary sentence in three different publications.

(The bulletin referred to was received in evidence and marked Alien's Exhibit No. 27.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did you ever, Mr. Schmidt, have any communications with anybody with respect to the publication or reprinting of the article in the ILWU bulletin, the one which is reprinted in the Voice of the Federation for reprinting or republication in the People's World on April 7th?

A. No. On April 7th I was out of town and I had been gone from San Francisco for four or five days.

Q. Where were you on April 7th, 1938?

A. In Aberdeen, Washington. [4845]

Q. For what purpose?

A. To attend the annual convention of the ILWU.

Q. Do you recall when you left San Francisco to attend that convention?

A. The convention opened on the morning of the 4th which, according to the calendar that I checked was a Monday, and I couldn't have left later than the Saturday morning prior to that which would be the 2nd.

Q. Of April? A. Right.

Q. Have you checked the official proceedings—withdraw that. Were you present on the day that the convention opened on April 4, 1938?

A. I was.

Q. Have you checked the official proceedings to see whether your name appears as answering in the affirmative when the roll call was made?

A. Yes; I answered as being present.

Q. Have you checked the proceedings to see whether you were present and active in the convention on the following day, April 5th?

A. Yes. I believe my name appears on one of the pages as having said something.

(Whereupon Mr. Gladstein handed the convention proceedings referred to to Mr. Del Guercio.) [4846]

Presiding Inspector: Is there any question about his being there? We haven't had any testimony about it.

Mr. Del Guercio: There has been no previous testimony.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Then I will ask this question: Have you checked the official reports—withdraw that. Were you present at the convention from the opening day in Aberdeen, that is to say, from April 4th through April the 8th or thereafter?

A. I was there every day until the last day.

Mr. Gladstein: That is all.

Presiding Inspector: Cross examination.

Recross Examination

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Have you, Mr. Schmidt, checked on the truth or falsity of any other testimony that you previously gave in this hearing?

Mr. Gladstein: I object to that as argumentative and improper.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, but I think——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): On the contrary——

Presiding Inspector: Just a minute. Let me rule. I think I will allow it.

A. I don't quite understand you.

Mr. Del Guercio: Read the question.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.) [4847]

Presiding Inspector: I don't take any implication in that.

Mr. Gladstein: All right, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: It is just a question as to what he has done, considering and reconsidering his testimony and making a check of it.

A. No.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Do you recall the date on which you appeared here to first testify?

A. You mean the day of the week or the day of the month?

Q. The day of the month or the day of the week, either.

A. No, I really don't.

Q. Have you no recollection?

A. Well, you see, I was in here several times before I testified. I didn't make any effort to keep track exactly.

Q. Did you, the day before you appeared here to testify, make a speech on behalf of the American Peace Mobilization Plan?

Mr. Gladstein: I didn't hear that.

Mr. Del Guercio: American Peace Mobilization.

Mr. Gladstein: I didn't hear the question. I heard the last part of it.

Presiding Inspector: Did you, the day before you testified here, make a speech on the American Peace Mobilization Plan? I think that was the question.

Mr. Del Guercio: American Peace Mobilization.

[4848]

A. No, I don't think so.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. You mean you have no recollection?

A. Well, I recall that I was advertised as a speaker last week, or the week before, somewhere on the waterfront, but I didn't speak. If that is what you have in mind—I don't know.

Q. Would you say that you did not speak, Mr. Schmidt, last week on behalf of the American Peace Mobilization?

A. I don't think I did.

Mr. Del Guercio: If the Court please, this hasn't been so very long ago and I think we are entitled to a "Yes" or "No" answer from this witness.

Presiding Inspector: You may press him on that.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Can you answer "Yes" or "No" as to whether you did or did not speak on the American Peace Mobilization?

Mr. Gladstein: I move the question be required to be made more definite as to place, date and city.

Presiding Inspector: It is too recent.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will give the date—on May 13, 1941, at Pier 42. Maybe that will refresh your memory.

A. I did not speak.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Having been advertised up and down the waterfront there by sound trucks? [4849]

A. Yes; I didn't speak.

Q. You did not speak?

A. That is right.

Q. You were not present at the time?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. No, sir; I was in this court room.

Q. On May 13, 1941? A. Yes.

Q. And did you see Walter Stack on that day?

A. No; I am sure I didn't.

Q. Do you know if you were introduced as a speaker on that date from a truck on the waterfront?

A. I have no way of knowing. I wasn't near there.

Q. You mean you don't have any recollection?

A. I have no way of knowing. I was uptown.

Q. Now, this Voice of the Federation, Alien's Exhibit 27, who are the editors of it?

A. You mean at the present time?

Q. At the time this was issued, on March 31, 1938?

Mr. Gladstein: I object to that as immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it. I don't see it's materiality.

A. I believe it was——

Presiding Inspector: It is background.

A. (Continuing): I think O'Neil was the editor at that time.

By Mr. Del Guercio: [4850]

Q. Jim O'Neil? A. Yes.

Q. And anyone else—were there co-editors or associate editors?

A. There was the so-called Executive Board, or Executive Committee, I believe.

Q. And I call your attention here to page 4 of this issue——

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Mr. Gladstein (Interposing): May I see what you are calling his attention to?

(The newspaper referred to was passed to Mr. Gladstein.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. That is the same James O'Neil who appeared here at this hearing to testify?

Mr. Gladstein: What is the question, please?

Presiding Inspector: If that is the same James O'Neil that appeared here to testify.

A. Yes. [4851]

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. I call your attention here to page 4 of this issue under "Editorial and Executive Board". Do you know any of the people that are mentioned under it? For instance, J. W. Engstrom, President?

A. Yes.

Q. Huh? A. Yes.

Q. Is J. W. Engstrom a Communist?

A. I don't know.

Q. You have no information about him?

A. No.

Q. Is——

Mr. Gladstein (Interposing): I might mention that he testified for the Government in the last case two years ago, your Honor. That is a matter of record.

Mr. Del Guercio: In which he admitted that he was a Communist?

Mr. Gladstein: I didn't say that. I say he testified for the Government in that case.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, I also notice the name of Z. R. Brown. Is that the same Z. R. Brown that you have mentioned in your testimony?

A. It must have been the same man. I don't know of any- [4852] body else by that name.

Q. Is that the same Z. R. Brown who was at that time a member of the Communist Party?

A. I have no way of knowing.

Q. Now, I also notice the name of John Schomaker. Is that the same John Schomaker that you have mentioned in your testimony?

A. The same man.

Q. Do you know him to be a member of the Communist Party?

A. No, sir. I never bothered to inquire about it.

Presiding Inspector: I didn't hear the answer.

The Reporter: "No, sir. I never bothered to inquire about it".

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you ever bother to inquire about the Communist affiliations of anybody in your union?

A. No.

Q. Of Harry Bridges? A. No.

Q. Did you ever ask Harry Bridges if he was a member of the Communist Party? A. No.

Q. Did you ever tell Harry Bridges whether or not you were a member of the Communist Party?

[4853]

A. No.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Did you ever deny to Harry Bridges that you were a member of the Communist Party?

A. No recollection of him ever asking me.

Q. The question of whether or not there were members of the Communist Party in your Union has been brought up time and time again, has it not?

Mr. Gladstein: I will object to that as immaterial and improper cross examination.

Presiding Inspector: I don't see that that is very material. You mean brought up officially?

Mr. Del Guercio: Officially, yes, sir; and otherwise in his union. The witness here says that he has never bothered with it.

Presiding Inspector: I will allow that.

The Witness: Will you read the question back, please?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. Well, the word is frequently used, but it is considered a big joke and it would be usually unofficially. Officially, very seldom.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Didn't you consider that a matter of public interest as to whether or not your Union was controlled and dominated by Communists?

A. Well, I don't know how to answer that. As I said [4854] before, the matter is considered a huge joke.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. Well, do you think it is a huge joke for a person to be accused of being a Communist?

A. No, I don't think so. But I am trying to explain how the thing is looked upon in our Union. It's just—in the course of years people have been called this, that and the other thing in the newspapers and by word of mouth. You develop a habit of paying no attention to it.

Q. Now, the question of whether or not there were Communists in your Union has been discussed in the papers also, for a long period of time, has it not? A. Oh, yes.

Q. And you never bothered to determine who were and who were not Communists in your Union?

A. That's right; yes, sir.

Q. And you are the President of the Union?

A. That's right.

Q. You claim to be a labor leader?

A. Well, I'm not boasting about it.

Q. What? A. I'm not boasting about it.

Q. You are not? Are you proud of it?

A. Not necessarily. It has caused me a lot of hard work.

Q. Do you consider your Union a typical American Union?

A. Well, I think we have done a pretty good job. [4855]

Q. You know that Communists are controlled and dominated by a foreign power, don't you?

A. I have often read that and often heard it, but I have no direct knowledge.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. You have never bothered to inquire?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, did you write both articles that appear, the one that appears in this Voice of the Federation and the other that appears in the People's World?

Mr. Gladstein: What is the question?

A. I don't know how to answer that. I wrote the article.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Well, are they same articles?

A. They certainly read the same.

Q. Are they identical?

A. Well, I didn't bother to proof-read it, if that's what you mean.

Q. Didn't you check them?

A. Well, I didn't have a copy of the People's World to check against the——

Q. (Interposing): Are they headed the same?

A. The heading might be different.

Q. Do they start out the same way?

Mr. Gladstein: Do you mean the article or the headline? [4856]

A. Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: The article and the headline.

Mr. Gladstein: Which is it? The article or the headline?

Mr. Del Guercio: I am asking the question.

Mr. Gladstein: Then the question is compound and I object to it.

Presiding Inspector: One by one. Are the headlines the same?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

The Witness: Do you mean the headlines as compared——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): In these two publications.

The Witness (Continuing): ——as compared with the Voice of the Federation and the People's World that you showed me the other day?

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Yes.

A. Right now I don't recall what the headlines were in the People's World.

Q. How much check did you make? You said you made a check on it.

A. I didn't bother to get another copy of the People's World. I just looked into our files, if we had a Voice and if we had a Bulletin. As I recall——

Q. (Interposing): The article that appeared in the Voice of the Federation, to which you testified about and which you testified you wrote, is headed "Roth's Move Falls Flat in Dock [4857] Plot", and the article in the People's World is headed "In Spite of Terror, Sugar Mill-Owners, Stick-Up Man Kennedy—Crockett Workers Build Union".

Presiding Inspector: It sound like a telegram.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did that apply to the same article?

A. The heading?

Mr. Gladstein: Just a moment. Let the witness answer.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Are you making an objection?

Mr. Gladstein: I am.

Presiding Inspector: He is.

Mr. Gladstein: My objection is that counsel is not permitting the witness to answer. He started to answer the question.

Presiding Inspector: You may answer the question.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. If you had any recollection.

Mr. Gladstein: I move that that be stricken.

Mr. Del Guercio: Your Honor, the witne has continually said that he didn't have a recollection.

Mr. Gladstein: I move that that also be stricken as improper.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. Let us have the question answered.

The Witness: Is your question still the same?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter [4858] as above recorded.)

The Witness: There must have been a question just before that.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as follows:

"Q. The article that appeared in the Voice of the Federation, to which you testified about and which you testified you wrote, is headed "Roth's Move Falls Flat in Dock Plot", and the article in the People's World is headed "In Spite of Terror, Sugar Mill-Owners, Stick-

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Up Man Kennedy—Crockett Workers Build Union".)

Mr. Gladstein: I think the question is very ambiguous, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I don't quite understand it.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Well, the article that you have identified in the Voice of the Federation as being the same one which appears in the People's World on April 7, 1938 starts off "Once more Almon E. Roth, notorious shipowner's Charlie McCarthy"—no, excuse me.

A. You're reading the wrong article.

Q. How do you know that? I thought you didn't have any recollection.

Mr. Gladstein: I move that that be stricken as argumentative and improper. [4859]

Presiding Inspector: Yes. I think we had better get along with the questions.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you write the article yourself?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you got a copy of it?

A. You mean, is there——

Q. (Interposing): Did you retain a copy of it?

A. The copy that we retained is the bulletin.

Q. Does that bulletin purport to contain the entire article that you wrote?

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

A. The bulletin has more material than the article that appears in the Voice of the Federation.

Q. Did you write the entire bulletin?

A. Yes.

Q. Yourself? A. Well, I am pretty sure.

Mr. Del Guercio: I was looking at another article in the Voice of the Federation. I thought that that was the one that was pointed out.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Is Harry Bridges responsible for your holding the present position which you occupy in the Union?

A. No; the membership is responsible.

Q. Did Harry Bridges have anything to do with obtaining [4860] that position?

A. No. The membership elected me.

Q. Did Harry Bridges support you?

A. I think so.

Q. Well, don't you know?

A. Well, I'm sure of it.

Q. And do you support Harry Bridges?

A. Yes.

Q. And who is the—what is Mervyn Rathborne's position in your Union?

A. He doesn't belong to our Union.

Q. Does he occupy any position at all in the CIO set-up?

A. Yes. At the present time he is the Secretary of the San Francisco Industrial Union Council.

(Testimony of Henry A. Schmidt.)

Q. And where does he have his office?

A. In the Balboa Building.

Q. The same building you do?

A. No. I don't have my office there.

Q. The same building as Harry Bridges?

A. Yes.

Q. And in the same suite of offices.

A. Well, they have an entire floor there. There is the State CIO. The whole business is there.

Q. You know Mervyn Rathborne, don't you?

A. Yes. [4861]

Q. How long have you know him?

A. Since the '36-'37 strike.

Q. Has Mervyn Rathborne ever given you any order as to what you should do in your Union or anywhere else? A. Has he given me what?

Q. Orders? A. No.

Q. Huh? A. Certainly not.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is all.

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Schmidt, did you write the headlines that appeared above the article of yours in the Voice of the Federation?

A. No. The only thing that is produced in our office that I wrote in connection with it is the material that appears in the bulletin, and what happened after that I have no way of knowing. The newspaper people themselves, they write headlines.

Q. Now, how are the union bulletins, the ILWU Union bulletins, prepared? Who is responsible for the preparation of them and what is the actual practice?

A. Well, it's my responsibility to see that it gets out, although I don't always do the actual writing unless one of the publicity fellows gets sick or doesn't show up, and he usually appears on Tuesday morning in the office and gathers up his [4862] material and I give him some material that has accumulated during the week. Then during the course of the day the stencil is cut. Sometime in the afternoon somebody runs it off on the mimeograph machine, and then the following morning the bulletin is distributed to the members on the waterfront.

[4863]

Q. Is it a practice of the Voice of the Federation to reprint the official bulletins of the Longshore and other unions?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, what the practice was.

Presiding Inspector: Is there any such thing as a practice in that respect?

Mr. Gladstein: There may be.

Presiding Inspector: Let's find out whether there was a practice.

Mr. Gladstein: I asked if there was such a practice.

A. As far as our union is concerned, yes; the stenographer has instructions to send that bulletin to the labor papers immediately after it comes out of the mimeograph machine; and it is not only sent there, but it is sent to all the other longshore locals on the Coast.

Mr. Del Guercio: I move to strike out the witness' answer as not being responsive. He was asked to give the practice.

Presiding Inspector: That is what he said, the practice was to send this bulletin to all these papers he mentioned. I will let it stand.

Mr. Gladstein: I think that is all.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is all for the present.

Presiding Inspector: That is all.

(Witness excused.) [4864]

Presiding Inspector: Next witness, Mr. Gladstein.

Mr. Gladstein: I understand that that copy of the Voice of the Federation, which I offered, and which was received in evidence, I think that is our last exhibit—you say that is the last copy the Voice has?

Mr. Schmidt: The only one we have in our office.

Mr. Gladstein: That is the only one that the Union has—and Mr. Schmidt would like to have it back, so I am going to ask the same permission for photostating this.

Presiding Inspector: Yes; that may be done.

Will you stand and raise your right hand?

FRED HEINER

called as a witness on behalf of the Alien, having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Presiding Inspector: Give your name and address to the reporter.

The Witness: Fred Heiner,—H-e-i-n-e-r.

Direct Examination

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Heiner, where do you reside?

A. 155 Ellington Avenue.

Q. Ellington—how do you spell it?

A. E-l-l-i-n-g-t-o-n.

Q. San Francisco? A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is your occupation? [4865]

A. Ship clerk.

Q. By whom are you employed?

A. Waterfront Employers Association.

Q. Here in San Francisco?

A. That is correct.

Q. How long have you been engaged in the occupation of being a ship clerk?

A. Approximately two years.

Q. Prior to that time what did you do?

A. Longshoreman.

Q. For how long had you been a longshoreman before that? A. Since 1922.

Q. And in what ports did you work as a longshoreman?

A. The Port of San Francisco.

Q. As a longshoreman did you belong to a trade union of longshoremen?

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

A. I belonged to the only union which was here, which was the Blue Book.

Q. When was that?

A. In 1923 I joined.

Q. For how long were you a member of the Blue Book?

A. From 1923 until 1933.

Q. That is a period of about ten years?

A. That is correct.

Q. Thereafter did you become a member of any other union? [4866]

A. I then joined the ILA.

Q. That was the San Francisco Local, was it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that ILA 38-79?

A. That is correct.

Q. Do you remember when in 1933 you joined it? A. Approximately October.

Q. Since that time have you continuously remained a member of the ILA and its successor, the ILWU? A. That is correct.

Q. While you were in the longshore union have you ever held any positions or offices?

A. Yes; I was a member of the Labor Relations Committee.

Q. For which union?

A. For the longshoremen's union.

Q. When did you hold that position?

A. In 1935 and '36.

Q. What other positions?

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

A. I was a member of the Board of Trustees of the Local.

Q. When did you hold that position?

A. In 1934, I believe.

Q. Any other positions?

A. I was on the Defense Committee during the '34 strike.

Q. What Defense Committee was that?

A. That is the Legal Defense Committee for the Local. [4867]

Q. Who were the members of that Committee?

A. Eugene Dietrich and myself.

Q. Have you held any other positions in longshore unions besides those you have mentioned?

A. One other; I believe I was a member of the District Executive Board.

Q. Well, you were a member of that?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. When did you hold that office?

A. 1937 and 1938.

Q. What is the first union you ever joined?

A. The first union I joined was the "Wobblies."

Q. When did you join them?

A. 1921 or 1922.

Q. How old were you then?

A. Oh, about 15 or 16 years old, I believe.

Q. Where were you when you joined?

A. In Belden, California.

Q. How long did you remain a member of the "Wobblies"? A. For about three years.

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Q. Was is after that that you became a member of the Blue Book union?

A. That is correct—no, simultaneous I think I belonged to the two unions.

Q. Now, in 1934 you say you were a member of the Legal [4868] Defense Committee for the longshore union? A. That is correct.

Q. Did you hold that position from the first day of the strike?

A. No. It was a few days after the strike I think when the Defense Committee was formed.

Q. Within how short a period after the strike began?

A. I would say the first week.

Q. And what, in general, was the nature of your responsibilities as a member of that Committee?

A. Well, the responsibility that we had was to see that the charges on which the members of the union were booked and to secure defense for the members of the local.

Q. Did it include getting the men out on bail?

A. That is correct.

Q. And did you serve from the time of the creation of that committee until the end of the strike?

A. That is right.

Q. That would be from May 9, 1934 to and including July 31.

A. That is correct.

Q. While you were a member of that Committee—withdraw that. Did that Legal Defense Committee have any connection with the Strike Committee?

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

A. It was part of the Strike Committee.

Q. In what way would the Legal Defense Committee work [4869] with or as a part of the Strike Committee?

A. Daily they would give their reports to the Strike Committee and receive instructions from the Strike Committee as to how to proceed.

Q. And who was the Chairman of the Strike Committee? A. Mr. Bridges.

Q. From the time that you became a member, from the time that the Defense Committee was created, did you attend as a member of the Defense Committee all meetings of the Strike Committee throughout the period of the Strike?

A. That is correct. I attended all but three, I believe.

Q. When did those three occur?

A. Right after the general strike. Oh, I think, July 5th was the first—July 6th must have been the second, or the first day that I missed.

Q. During the period of the general strike?

A. Yes.

Q. How long was the general strike?

A. Three or four days; I don't remember exactly.

Q. You say that you missed a period of how many days? A. Three days.

Q. What was the occasion of your missing those meetings?

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

A. I received an injury. I was kicked by a policeman's horse and laid up for a couple of days. [4870]

Q. Was that the only occasion that you missed Strike Committee meetings?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, do you know whether members of the Strike Committee were required to receive special permission from the Strike Committee in order to leave San Francisco?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I will object to that question.

Presiding Inspector: I don't understand where we are going; probably you do. I trust you to connect this up with something that is material.

Mr. Gladstein: I think it is, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I don't see how it is material as yet, but I will take it with that understanding.

Mr Gladstein: Do you want the question read?

The Witness: Yes.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Presiding Inspector: Is that a resolution, or a practice, or what was it—required how? The question is very indefinite.

Mr. Gladstein: Let us see if the witness can answer it.

A. For any member of the Strike Committee to leave the City of San Francisco, or do anything connected with the strike, he must have gotten permission from the Strike Committee. [4871]

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Presiding Inspector: You say "must." Was that by the law of the State, of the United States, or by rule of the organization?

The Witness: That was by rule of the organization.

Presiding Inspector: I think you should produce the rule of the organization, if it was a written one.

Was it a written rule?

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. In what form——

Presiding Inspector: No. Answer my question.

Mr. Del Guercio: The Court has asked a question.

Presiding Inspector: Just a moment. Was it a written rule?

The Witness: It was a rule, I believe, that was established in the Strike Committee itself and should appear in the minutes of the Strike Committee.

Presiding Inspector: I think we ought to have those minutes, if this is of any importance. I can't see how it is of the slightest importance. Suppose someone disobeyed the rule? Are you trying to show that someone couldn't have gone away from here because he didn't get permission of the Strike Committee? Is that the idea?

Mr. Gladstein: I am showing that in the normal course of events it was required, if a member of the Strike Committee wished to leave the City of San Francisco during the time that the strike was on, that he receive permission from the [4872] Strike Committee. I am trying to show that men who served on the Strike Committee, and on committees that were integrated with it, know of their own recollection that Mr. Bridges never asked, was never given permission to leave San Francisco, or to leave that strike; that it is their recollection that Mr. Bridges was in San Francisco on every day of the 1934 Strike.

Presiding Inspector: Let us hear from Mr. Bridges first before we have that.

Mr. Gladstein: He will testify on that. But we are not confined to just the testimony of Mr. Bridges.

Presiding Inspector: Of course you are not; but at the present time I can't see any point in this.

Mr. Gladstein: Your Honor will recall the testimony of Mr. Laurence on this matter. Do you remember Mr. Laurence's testimony?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Gladstein: He said that occurred during the 1934 strike on Thursday night.

Presiding Inspector: That doesn't make any difference whether it was a rule or not. You can't show by observance of a practice whether or not a man was or was not in a place.

Mr. Gladstein: I differ with your Honor on that.

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Presiding Inspector: That is my understanding.

Mr. Gladstein: I think the law entitles us to introduce [4873] evidence to the effect that there was a practice or a rule, what the circumstances were that involved——

Presiding Inspector: Let us hear whether there was a rule.

Mr. Gladstein: I think that law entitles us to in- Strike Committee, by its own action, required members of the Strike Committee to remain, not to leave the vicinity of the strike without special permission from the Strike Committee. I think that is quite natural and logical. It would seem very, very unusual for men engaged in a strike of the scope and character of the 1934 Waterfront Strike, not to bind themselves by some such rule, but to permit anyone to leave and go anywhere at any time. There must be some sort of responsibility in carrying out the tasks of the strike, and we are trying to show there was this responsibility.

Presiding Inspector: Well, I haven't ruled you couldn't show it, but I have ruled that this is just a loose statement by this witness, without any introduction, and it is scarcely probative. Let us hear how this rule was adopted, or was it just a custom?

Mr. Gladstein: There will be testimony from Mr. Bridges on this very same issue, of course.

Presiding Inspector: All right.

Mr. Del Guercio: Is this for the purpose of giving support to what Harry Bridges may or may not say?

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Mr. Gladstein: It is for the purpose of establishing [4874] one of the parts of the defense. I do not care how Mr. Del Guercio—he hasn't any right to inquire as to just what our specific purpose is. This is the defense case. The theory of our defense——

Presiding Inspector: I have a right to require you to show its materiality.

Mr. Gladstein: Certainly; and I am always glad to respond to any inquiry as to materiality.

Presiding Inspector: I think it is of doubtful materiality. Go ahead.

Mr. Gladstein: What was the last question, please?

Presiding Inspector: I think he answered it. He said there was such a rule.

Mr. Del Guercio: He didn't answer the question that way.

(The last question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

The Reporter: Do you want the answer?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

(The answer referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Mr. Del Guercio: That wasn't the question I had in mind. I had in mind the question asked by the Court.

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Presiding Inspector: How the custom was established, or the rule, or whatever it was.

The Reporter: Do you want me to read that?

Presiding Inspector: Suppose you ask it over again? [4875]

Mr. Gladstein: I think it has been answered.

Presiding Inspector: Very well.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Heiner, with the exception of the period during the general strike itself, that is during the four or five days, whichever it was, of the general strike, with the exception of that part of that time when you were at home with this injury, did you see Harry Bridges on each day of the 1934 Waterfront Strike?

A. It was the custom of the Defense Committee—— [4876]

Presiding Inspector: No. The question is, Did you see him every day.

The Witness: The answer is, Yes.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, will you explain the circumstances under which you saw him every day.

A. It was the custom of the Committees to report to the Central Strike Committee every day, even including Sundays at times, and the Committees had to give their reports and receive their instructions from the Central Strike Committee, the Committee of which Mr. Bridges was Chairman.

Q. Was there ever a day—withdraw that.

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Now, when you say that the various Committees would have to report to the Strike Committee, did that include the Defense Committee, of which you were a member?

A. That is correct.

Q. What other Committees made their reports to the Strike Committee for instructions?

A. The Relief Committee.

Q. What?

A. The Relief Committee.

Q. Any other?

A. The Picketing Committee. The Good and Welfare Committee, and there were numerous other smaller Committees which I don't remember right now. [4877]

Q. Well, was there a regular period of each day, each week day, assigned for the reports of the Defense Committee to the Strike Committee?

A. Yes, there was. It was two o'clock in the afternoon.

Q. Where were those meetings held?

A. At the Union hall at 113 Steuart Street.

Q. How long were they? How long did they take?

A. From an hour to two hours.

Q. Did you have a great deal of business as a member of the Defense Committee?

A. Quite a bit.

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I will object to all this as not being the best evidence. There is available—I assume there is—minutes of this Strike Committee and their activities available there to Harry Bridges and the Defense.

Mr. Gladstein: I am not sure that there are. As a matter of fact, we have been making a search for the minutes of the Strike Committee of the strike of 1934 and we have thus far been unable to locate them.

Mr. Del Guercio: They have been in the possession there of the Defense all along.

Mr. Gladstein: I just got through saying that we have not had them, that we have been making a search for them.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think this goes to any specific question that the objection was made to. The objec- [4878] tion was interposed to the whole line.

Mr. Del Guercio: The whole line; yes, sir.

Presiding Inspector: I will let it stand.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, Mr. Heiner, as a member of the Legal Defense Committee in 1934 can you state approximately how many cases of arrests of longshoremen occurred in San Francisco during that strike?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that as being immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: I don't see how that is material.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, it is preliminary.

Presiding Inspector: What?

Mr. Gladstein: It is preliminary to something that I want to bring out, your Honor.

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Presiding Inspector: I think it may have an ulterior effect, that we can't go into the details of this strike.

Mr. Gladstein: We are not going into the details. I want to show the reason——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) How many cases were there that came under the supervision of this Committee? Is that the idea?

Mr. Gladstein: Of the Defense Committee which would require, as your Honor will see when the figures are mentioned, continuous discussion with and obtaining of instructions from [4879] the Strike Committee daily.

Presiding Inspector: It is pretty remote, but I will allow the number.

How many?

A. I believe we counted them once and I believe there were 705 cases during the period of the '34 strike.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. How many of those men were ever convicted?

A. One, to my knowledge, in San Francisco.

Presiding Inspector: I think that was very improper. I said we couldn't go into the details of this strike.

Mr. Gladstein: I am not going into the details of the strike.

Presiding Inspector: Then you immediately asked a question as to the details of the strike.

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

What difference does it make how many were convicted?

Mr. Del Guercio: I move that it all be stricken.

Presiding Inspector: There is no objection to it, but it seems to me it is an improper question.

Mr. Del Guercio: I move that it be stricken.

Presiding Inspector: I will let it stand.

Mr. Myron: The objection stands to the whole line of inquiry, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Certainly.

By Mr. Gladstein: [4880]

Q. Were you among those arrested during the strike? A. Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, if your Honor please.

Presiding Inspector: We are going right into the strike. I can't see any point in it. You said you weren't going to go into the strike.

Mr. Gladstein: I am asking this witness as to whether he has been arrested.

Presiding Inspector: Is that something to do with his credibility? Is that what you mean?

Mr. Gladstein: Well, I assume that the Government will probably——

Presiding Inspector: It is to avoid the—very well, on that point. I thought you meant this in relation to his knowledge. I thought that you offered this in relation to his knowledge of that the Defense Committee did.

Mr. Myron: I think, your Honor, his question was, Were you arrested during the strike?

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Mr. Gladstein: I asked him was he arrested during the strike. I can ask him that.

Presiding Inspector: I think I will allow it as just a question about arrest and convictions that we have heretofore allowed to be asked of a witness. I will take that.

A. The question was, Was I arrested during the strike? [4881]

Mr. Gladstein: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: I don't know that arrest amounts to anything, but both sides throughout this case have asked whether witnesses have been arrested, and I think I will allow it.

A. Yes, I was arrested twice during the strike.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Were you convicted on either occasion of any crime? A. No, sir.

Q. Have you ever been convicted of any crime?

A. No, sir.

Q. What were you——withdraw that.

Now, in these various positions that you have held while you were with the Longshore Union did you have frequent occasions, Mr. Heiner, to work with Harry Bridges in trade union matters?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that question, your Honor. It doesn't matter whether he worked with Harry Bridges in trade union matters.

Presiding Inspector: What are you going to ask? More questions along the line of the questions put to Mr. Kagel?

Mr. Gladstein: I intend to, yes.

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Mr. Del Guercio: The question as to whether he worked with Harry Bridges on Communist activities would be more pertinent, it seems to me.

[4882]

Mr. Gladstein: I move that that be stricken.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, I will strike it out. You mustn't do that.

Mr. Gladstein: Will you read the question, please.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Presiding Inspector: Now, I suppose you could produce every member of a union that voted for him on these matters. I don't see that it is material in the slightest.

Mr. Gladstein: I don't intend to produce——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I doubted the propriety of the examination of Mr. Kagel, you remember that. But I certainly don't think that from a union man that you should introduce such proof.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, this man, of course, has had contacts in the trade union movement with Mr. Bridges which were in general of a different character from the contacts that Mr. Kagel had.

Presiding Inspector: You see, there is going to be no testimony that he hasn't well performed the duties of his office.

Mr. Gladstein: I am not so sure of that, your Honor. I mean, if we can assume that that is true; if we could assume that that is true, we might consider that the issue was closed. But we don't know what the theory of Mr. Del Guercio [4883] is in this case. It varies from time to time.

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Presiding Inspector: There is no evidence of it so far and his case is closed.

Mr. Gladstein: You must expect, though, that the Defense has a right to anticipate with reasonable grounds positions that the Government may take or may shift to, and attempt in the presentation of the Defense in contemplation of those possibilities to put on testimony refuting a possible or potential or reasonably probable position that the Government may take.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Gladstein: You see, the Defense as always Presiding Inspector (Interposing: I think that is so, but I don't think it is reasonably probable.

Mr. Gladstein: If we can have some assurance from Mr. Del Guercio on this issue, then perhaps

---

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): You can't tell what is coming out on the examination.

Mr. Del Guercio: The Government's position has never shifted. We have had one issue involved here, and that is whether or not Harry Bridges is a member of the Communist Party. We have never shifted from that at any time.

Mr. Gladstein: Of course, I suppose the Government cannot shift from the position taken by its own witnesses, because the Government when it places a witness on the stand vouches for his credibility and for his testimony and is bound, in [4884] theory, by what the witness says.

Presiding Inspector: Not as much as it used to be.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes. While it is no answer for Mr. Del Guercio to say that "Our position has been that Mr. Bridges is a Communist" when we are discussing this issue here as to whether the Government will introduce evidence to the effect that Mr. Bridges has been a bad trade unionist, not a good trade unionist, from which it might claim inferences could be drawn by the Court to the effect that he must therefore be allied with a group that isn't interested in trade unionism but interested in some ulterior purposes.

You see, it is the Government's witnesses, not ours, who took the stand and made a distinct, a very distinct, sharp contrast between a Communist in a trade union and a good trade unionist.

Now, it is their——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): The whole thing is very doubtful. You had a witness named Schmidt who testified that he never inquired whether any of these people that were in his union were Communists or not; never thought it amounted to anything.

Mr. Gladstein: That is true.

Presiding Inspector: That is the essence of his testimony.

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Now, you go over on the other side and want to show that this man is a good trade unionist; now, what bearing has that? [4885]

Mr. Gladstein: Well, your Honor, I think that you must remember that witnesses——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): I allowed it in two cases from what might be called experts, I suppose, who were outside people, who had observed his conduct. I have grave doubt as to the relevancy of that testimony.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, I think you were correct in admitting the testimony of Mr. Kagel and the testimony of Dean Morse. On the other hand, though I agree with you that they are in their fields experts, I do think that the testimony of a trade unionist is of equal or possibly greater value than the testimony of an expert on this question.

Presiding Inspector: This man has been elected to office right straight along by his union.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: Isn't that sufficient proof of the view of the members of the union? Do you have to pile up the testimony on that?

Mr. Gladstein: Well, we are still following this theory of the Government which was enunciated by Mr. Laurence, enunciated by Mr. Chase, enunciated by Mr. Diner. I am not sure whether Mr. Honig had anythig to say about it, but the possibilities are that he did. Mr. Rushmore had something to say about it and Mr. Gitlow had a good deal to say about it. These are the Government witnesses. They are establishing [4886] the only thing in this case that can serve as a criterion of the initia, I suppose, in a trade union or the trade union movement of a Communist or a person who belongs to the Communist Party, that his conduct will be thus and so in such a way for certain reasons.

Now, if that is their theory—I mean, it must be their theory. They have put these witnesses on. They can't be permitted to switch from that. Then we have a right to meet them on that theory.

Now, it may well be, as your Honor indicated a moment ago, that to some extent one could say that there would be inconsistent defenses. But, that of course, is in legal contemplation perfectly all right. If it is the obligation of the prosecution of this case to establish A plus B plus C, then all that the defense needs do is to meet any one of those three or, in attempting to meet all three if it chooses to do so, take positions which are inconsistent with each other.

That's a rather fundamental rule in pleading and in the trial of a case.

Mr. Del Guercio: If the Court please, the only issue that the defense has to meet here are the charges contained in the warrant of arrest and the additional charge lodged.

Presiding Inspector: Do you want to ask him the question so far as his judgment as to whether the action of Mr. Bridges has been uniformly to the advantage of the members of the union. [4887] in order to dispose of this matter, I will allow you to ask him. That's what the question is, isn't it?

Mr. Gladstein: Well, I don't know that I asked that question. I had asked a preliminary question in order to qualify the witness.

Presiding Inspector: I mean, you may arrive at that. We want to dispose once and for all of this kind of testimony.

Mr. Del Guercio: I thought it was disposed of before, but it has been brought up every day, if your Honor please.

Presiding Inspector: It is over your objection. But I don't want all the unions to be coming in here and swearing to this.

Mr. Gladstein: I must say this, your Honor: I know that you have a right to say "Well now, you are producing testimony which is cumulative. I will allow you within reasonable limits to produce such testimony, but I can't permit you to go on forever with a certain type of testimony".

I realize that. But I think before we come to that point that we should have some understanding here, because we are prepared and we intend to have representatives from Portland, Seattle, Los Angeles, San Francisco, from various unions testify on this subject.

We have heard from witnesses produced by the Government who—and I mean no offense by this, but who to our minds are renegades from the trade union movement. We desire by the testimony of men who are high in the trade union movement

[4888] to show that they, as the result of their contacts with Harry Bridges and their opportunities to observe him and to judge, are able to come in and say that he is a good trade unionist, he has never done anything to indicate that he was anything but, or that he had any ulterior purpose in mind or that he was trying to undermine the Government or any trade union or do any of the things which the Government witnesses say in this case are the marks of a Communist.

Now, it is true that your Honor would have a right to say to us "Well, we can't have this go on". But we at least would be entitled to put in some kind of an offer. And I think if we had the usual ethics of a case applied we would at least be entitled to a stipulation that, if so and so were called, if asked, he would testify to such and such.

Presiding Inspector: I have no doubt that you could produce a thousand witnesses who would testify that Mr. Bridges, so far as they have observed, has loyally fulfilled the duties of his office in the trade unions. And I don't believe that the Government is going to question it. Now, I don't see why you should pile this up. There has been no question of it up to this time.

Mr. Gladstein: I beg to disagree with your Honor. I think there is.

Presiding Inspector: No question at all.

Mr. Gladstein: I think the question has been raised. [4889]

Presiding Inspector: No, I think not.

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Mr. Gladstein: Well, your Honor, the Government puts witnesses on the stand who say "Yes, yes, Mr. Bridges is a Communist"; "No, no Communist can be a good trade unionist".

Presiding Inspector: Oh, well, no. I don't find that in any way in the testimony. Mr. Diner is the one to whom you principally refer. Mr. Diner said that, as I recall it, in performing his trade union duties he thought that certain persons should not be appointed to various duties, and that he was called down by his Communist superior, and that he came to the conclusion from that in his experience that he couldn't be a good trade unionist and a good Communist at the same time. That is his testimony.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: Now, you can't generalize from that.

Mr. Gladstein: Mr. Laurence testified that Mr. Bridges was, I think he called him "The greatest menace that the trade union movement has ever known".

Presiding Inspector: That was his opinion. Was there anything to base it on?

Mr. Del Guercio: It was brought out on cross examination.

Mr. Gladstein: Certainly we brought it out on cross examination to show how viciously biased the witness was.

Presiding Inspector: It may show bias, but there was no factual basis of it.

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Mr. Gladstein: Well, there wasn't any more factual basis [4890] in my personal opinion than there was to anything else that was stated by the witness.

Presiding Inspector: Well, that is aside from the question.

Mr. Gladstein: But the point is, when a witness testifies flatly on a question of that kind and the Government is certainly bound by his testimony, we have a right to meet that issue, to meet them on that common ground, and to challenge them on that issue and to meet it with evidence of our own tending to refute it.

Presiding Inspector: Did you put any such evidence in in the other hearing?

Mr. Gladstein: To answer that accurately I would have to review, not the whole transcript but, say, Dean Landis' opinion simply to recall to my mind the witnesses that were put on. I think with a couple of moments' recess I could give you an answer to that.

Mrs. King: Could we have the morning recess now, if your Honor please?

Presiding Inspector: What is that?

Mrs. King: Could we have the morning recess now and then we could probably answer your question?

Presiding Inspector: I have read the report. I don't recall.

Mrs. King: I don't recall any such testimony either. [4891]

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Presiding Inspector: No.

Mrs. King: But the issues were rather differently raised in that case.

Presiding Inspector: They put in these pamphlets, didn't they? Didn't they put in Lenin's "Left Wing Communism"?

Mr. Gladstein: Oh, all those pamphlets.

Mrs. King: There was no effort made to establish at that hearing that there was any affiliation along the lines that is sought to be established at this hearing. In this hearing there is the suggestion that Mr. Bridges' conduct with reference to the Marine Workers Industrial Union was very close, that maybe something could be worked out of that; that also his relation to the Communist Party was one of following a Communist Party line, whether he was a member or not; and from that same deduction might be drawn as to affiliation.

Now, it seems to me that in view of the difference of approach of the Government in this case from the approach of the Government in the last case that the Defense must necessarily meet the issue in a different way; that there was no suggestion in the first case that Mr. Bridges was a member of anything but the Communist Party. There weren't these ramifications into other organizations, and there wasn't really the emphasis upon affiliation that is being made at this time.

Presiding Inspector: That is one of the main attacks here by the Government: affiliation. [4892]

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, but in a different sense. The issue at the last trial was likewise membership in and affiliation with. But the issue was raised and decided on the basis of definitions of "affiliation" as found in Court decisions.

Now, in their opening statement here the Government has sought to point out and throughout its case its theory has been that mere association ——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): No.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, that is what it amounts to, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I don't so understand it.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, I have a recollection that Judge Goodwin——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): He may have, but I don't understand that mere casual association—there must be something mutual about it, I suppose, and there must be aid offered just as in the examples given in the statutes.

Mrs. King: It seems to me, your Honor, that one of the reasons——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): I don't think we need to discuss this matter at this time because that is going to be a very serious matter of consideration when the case is before me for final decision and in making findings of fact and conclusions.

Mr. Gladstein: I am pretty sure in answer to your pre- [4893] vious question, that the Government in the last case did not put on witnesses to testify as the witnesses have in this case, that you can't be a Communist and a good trade unionist, or if you are a good trade unionist you can't be a Communist, or vice versa.

Presiding Inspector: That all comes in the meaning of the word "good", and you and I and the counsel and the witness may have different interpretations of the word "good", "good trade unionist". I allowed that because it crept into some of the examination of the witnesses for the Government. But I think that when you call a member of the union and ask him whether his presiding officer of his union is a good trade unionist, it becomes absurd.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, of course, he is not a member——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): Everyone in the union, I suppose, except some ill-affected person or some opponent, or enemies—and I suppose there are such of the Alien—would come in here and say that. And I don't think the Government in the sense that you are asking this is going to in any way dispute it.

Mrs. King: It seems to me, your Honor——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): On that theory, if your Honor please, if we follow counsel's argument here, why, we could bring in witness after witness here to the effect that Harry Bridges because of his trade union activities has ruined the City of San Francisco, that it has created unemployment [4894] here.

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Presiding Inspector: I am afraid that wouldn't be material.

Mr. Del Guercio: Huh?

Mr. Gladstein: But, you see, your Honor,——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): That isn't material.

Mr. Gladstein: But that is just what is underneath the questions that Mr. Del Guercio has asked. That is implicit in every question that he asked about the Albion Hall group, the Waterfront Worker, the 1934 strike. It is no secret to us that Mr. Del Guercio is using a brief prepared by Harper Knowles and given to the Dies Committee.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is a lie, if your Honor please.

Mr. Gladstein: Because the material is the same.

Mr. Del Guercio: A scurrilous lie!

Mr. Gladstein: The material is the same.

Presiding Inspector: Let the tempers cool off a minute.

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, counsel shouldn't be permitted to be making statements, and they have been using this as a forum. We have had this record full of speeches down here and he takes every opportunity to use this Court as a forum, and we have never been permitted to make answers to those. He goes into one subject after another and continues and continues here for— I was going to say "hours", it isn't quite that bad, but almost. And we forget, then, what he has said. He speaks about the ethics of his profession. I say that he [4895] has no ethics.

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Presiding Inspector: Well, this isn't a place for recriminations.

Mrs. King: What we are trying to say, your Honor,——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): We are trying to resolve a legal question, that is all. Somewhat legal.

Mrs. King (Continuing): ——is that the vagueness of the present charges against Harry Bridges, and particularly in view of the opening statement made by Judge Goodwin at this hearing, is such that we really don't know exactly what we are trying to meet. There are implications in these remarks that Harry Bridges is a Communist because he is a bad trade unionist, according to Laurence. And then there are implications from Mr. Rushmore that every Communist is a bad trade unionist. We are trying to meet both of those coming and going. It seems to me, that either the Government——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): Let me interrupt you, Mrs. King. I don't understand that this Communist doctrine is a very firm one. That is, in the statement in Lenin's famous book the Communist was to get control of the trade unions for an ultimate purpose of control of the trade unions. He said that the control of the trade unions lay at the very basis of the success of the Communist movement.

Now, implicit in that must be that they must win the confidence, these Communist members must win the confidence, and it must be assumed that they must work for the benefit of the [4896] members or they would be quickly ousted. So that you can reason in both directions from this Communist doctrine, and it isn't because a man comes in and says "Mr. Bridges in my judgment is a good trade unionist." That doesn't amount to anything. He may be doing the very thing—I don't say he is, of course, because this is all argument. He may be doing the very thing that Mr. Lenin pointed out, boring from within so as to get control of the trade unionists. So that the judgment on this or that case or on all the cases as to being a good trade unionist from the trade union member's standpoint has no bearing whatever on the question.

Mr. Gladstein: I would like to say this in response to your Honor. Here is the Government coming in with this kind of a proposition. They are trying to show that Harry Bridges—and this came out through their witness Laurence and through others, Chase testified about it, and so on—that Bridges had control of the trade unions. That he ran the ILWU and the CIO on the West Coast. And then they try to get you to draw the inference that he was doing this for an ulterior purpose and to establish the second point they first went on to show, and they do try to show, through their witnesses that Bridges is the head of the Unions here and that what he says goes.

All right. Now, if you accept that kind of a theory then you make it almost impossible for any trade union leader in the United States to defend himself against a similar charge if he has the confidence of the members of the union or the trade union [4897] movement of which he is the head, if he has the kind of control which they say Mr. Bridges has. If, in other words, he enjoys the following of the trade unionists——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) No, they don't draw the inference that because he is a good trade unionist, therefore he is necessarily attempting to secure the control of the union for the Communist Party. They say that that doesn't make any difference one way or the other. It isn't pertinent on the subject, whether he is a good trade unionist or a bad trade unionist.

Mr. Gladstein: But they say——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) But the whole Communist doctrine is one of destruction and chicanery, and they quote the classic examples stated by Lenin himself in that famous pamphlet.

Mr. Gladstein: But your Honor, they say this:

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) But you are trying to force them to take the position that every moment the person must be acting not for the benefit of the union but for the benefit of the Communist Party.

Mr. Gladstein: That is what the witness has said.

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Presiding Inspector: Now, they may both go to the same end. It may be a Communist movement to bore from within and have control of the unions so that in the end they may bring about Communist purpose. [4898]

Mr. Gladstein: Well now, your Honor, you are speculating.

Presiding Inspector: Of course, I am speculating.

Mr. Gladstein: And the evidence——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) We are both speculating.

Mr. Gladstein: But the evidence of the Government witnesses is quite different. The evidence given by——

Presiding Inspector: Have you read these pamphlets?

Mr. Gladstein: No, I haven't read the pamphlets. I am talking about the evidence given by the Government's witnesses.

Presiding Inspector: I think it would be wise for you to read the pamphlets.

Mr. Gladstein: I have read some of these pamphlets in preparing for the last case.

Mr. Del Guercio: Only in pr ration?

Mr. Gladstein: Are you asking this of me or the Court?

Presiding Inspector: No, no. Don't interrupt! We are trying to reach a result here.

Mr. Gladstein: I am trying to point this out:——

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I am stating these things because I don't think that this testimony is in any way conclusive.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, you may not consider it conclusive, but we consider that it has weight in the case [4899]

Presiding Inspector: I think it is very, very, very remotely relevant. [4900]

Mr. Gladstein: Let me put it this way: The Government has said that Harry Bridges is the head of the Union because he is doing this in accordance with a Communist Policy to get control of a Union.

Presiding Inspector: He is head of the Union because he was elected.

Mr. Gladstein: That isn't what they say. They say he is doing this because he is carrying out a Communist Party policy. That is in effect what their position is. We are trying to show that he is head of the union, that he has been the head of it for these years because he is a good trade unionist and his followers on the Coast are legion in support of him because of his good trade union activities.

Presiding Inspector: Of course, we are discussing this on the basis that the Government claims that he is a member; we are discussing it on that basis.

You overlook, it seems, all this evidence, the point that so far as a member of the union is concerned a man may be a good trade unionist, to use that phrase, and still be a member of the Communist Party, just as your witness, Schmidt, said.

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Mr. Gladstein: Some witnesses believe that; it is true they have so stated.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Gladstein: Others think otherwise.

Presiding Inspector: I think likely Mr. Bridges will say that. [4901]

Mr. Gladstein: He has said that at the previous trial.

Presiding Inspector: The fact that he is a good trade unionist doesn't amount to anything.

Mr. Gladstein: These are not witnesses—this has not been said by any witness on the part of the Government.

Presiding Inspector: I think it is implicit in the doctrines of the Communist Party, which are in evidence here.

Mr. Gladstein: I don't know but what I get this impression from you, Judge: That is, that your position on this matter that we are discussing is largely determined by what you have read in documents, and not by what has been the testimony of the Government witnesses.

Presiding Inspector: The documents are in evidence.

Mr. Gladstein: I realize these documents are in evidence.

Presiding Inspector: I think they are better than the testimony of any of the witnesses, even of Mr. Schmidt, we will say. The documents show the policies of the Party more than the testimony of any witness, don't they?

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Mr. Gladstein: I have heard witnesses for the Government say what the policy of the Communist Party is, and what its tactics are, and what its position is, and how it is impossible for a man to be a good trade unionist and a Communist Party member. I assumed that the Government had some purpose in asking those questions of its witnesses. I assumed that Mr. Del Guercio was trying to prove something to buttress his case. [4902] I think we have a right to take him up on any issue that he presents and to show that he is wrong.

Mr. Del Guercio: The only issue is indicated in the Warrant of Arrest.

Mr. Gladstein: There is another——

Presiding Inspector: I will take this testimony. Go on. That leaves, of course, the question as to what effect I shall think should be given to it.

Mr. Gladstein: How do you mean that?

Presiding Inspector: Whether it has any bearing upon the proposition.

Mr. Gladstein: What is the last question?

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead.

Mr. Del Guercio: May we have a short recess?

Presiding Inspector: No; we will go right on with this witness.

Mr. Gladstein: We join in the request for a recess.

Presiding Inspector: Do you want it?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes.

(Whereupon a short recess was taken.)

Presiding Inspector: Now, Mr. Gladstein, I have been thinking this matter over during this recess, which, perhaps was a very good thing to take, and I will limit you to six witnesses. You have had two on this point. That is just six [4903] too many in my judgment. We are going to rule quite sharply now. The witness will listen to the question closely and merely answer the question.

Let us get through with this. Go ahead.

Mr. Gladstein: I don't know whether there was a question unanswered or not.

Presiding Inspector: We had a long discussion.

Mr. Del Guercio: For half an hour.

Presiding Inspector: If necessary we will lengthen the hours of the session if this takes too long.

Mr. Del Guercio: It is agreeable to us to run to five o'clock if necessary.

Mrs. King: I think we should say that that would not be agreeable to us, but if we are forced to do so we will do it. We are pretty well overworked as it is.

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, Mr. Heiner, in addition to the contacts that you had with Mr. Bridges as a member of the District Executive Board, and the other positions that you have already described, have you ever had close contact with him in any strikes involving the Ship Clerks Union? A. Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to the question.

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Presiding Inspector: I will take it. [4904]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. When was that?

A. In 1939, the latter part.

Q. Were you a member of the Ship Clerks Union at that time? A. That is correct.

Q. Were you active in the strike?

A. I was a member of the Ship Clerks Strike Committee.

Q. Did that position, and your activity in connection with that position, bring you into frequent contact with Mr. Bridges? A. Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to the question——

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

Mr. Del Guercio: (Continuing) ——as immaterial and irrelevant.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Have you had an opportunity through these years, to observe the conduct of Mr. Bridges and to be acquainted with his conduct with respect to trade union activities, negotiations, the conduct of strikes, arbitrations, and matters of that kind?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that question unless counsel includes also his activities in the "Wobblies." This witness has testified; and he has qualified himself as being a [4905] good trade unionist, and he started off with being a member of the IWW in 1921 and 1922, and that should be included in the question.

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Mr. Gladstein: I move that be stricken.

Presiding Inspector: There isn't anything to strike. I overrule the objection and the answer may go in. Go ahead.

Mr. Gladstein: I wish your Honor would caution counsel that when he gets a chance to ask questions he can ask anything he wants, and if there is an objection to be made I will object to it. But I have never suggested to him what he should put in his questions and I don't think the Court should permit him to run, not only his side of the table, but to attempt to run the defense too.

Mr. Del Guercio: I wish I could.

Mr. Gladstein: You are attempting to run the whole court room.

Presiding Inspector: Counsel, let's stop. Go ahead.

Answer the question.

The Witness: Will you repeat the question?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Presiding Inspector: Have you had that opportunity?

A. Yes, I have. His conduct——

Presiding Inspector: That is all he asked you, whether you had that opportunity.

By Mr. Gladstein: [4906]

Q. Now, would you say, based on your contact with Harry Bridges in connection with these trade union activities, negotiations, and so on, that he has at all times been a good trade unionist?

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

A. Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: Just a moment, please.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did you ever observe anything in the actions or the positions taken by Harry Bridges to indicate to you that he was trying to recruit workers into the Communist Party in order to prepare them as stooges for a proletarian revolution?

Mr. Del Guercio: Your Honor, I will object to the question.

Presiding Inspector: I have taken that question before?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

A. The answer is "No."

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did you ever, in the course of your trade union contacts with Bridges, observe any conduct on his part, or se him take any position to the effect that workers and employers cannot sit down at a table, bargain collectively in an amicable way, with a result of benefits for the workers involved? [4907]

A. The answer is "No."

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to the question.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. During the course of your contacts with Mr. Bridges did you ever observe any conduct by Mr. Bridges which appeared to you to be in support of a policy of strikes for strikes' sake without regard to the economic interests of the workers involved?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

A. No.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did you ever observe any conduct on the part of Bridges, or any action taken by Bridges, favoring or advocating any policy of sabotage, industrial violence, or unlawful destruction of property?

A. No.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it. None of these things are suggested, you know, that there is anything of this kind. Go ahead.

You are putting in, as I look on it, you are erecting a straw man and knocking him down. There is no suggestion of any such thing. [4908]

Mr. Gladstein: I beg your pardon, your Honor——

Presiding Inspector: That is the way I look on it.

Go on and ask the next question.

Mr. Gladstein: I don't like the record to be left in that condition.

Presiding Inspector: We can't have discussion. I am just warning you about this matter. This is for your own good, as I look at it.

Go ahead.

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. During your contacts with Mr. Bridges has he, within your observation, always followed a policy of advocating strikes only when they were necessary as a last resort to satisfy reasonable economic demands of the workers involved?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, if your Honor please. This witness hasn't been qualified to show that he knows what an economic matter is.

Mr. Gladstein: I move that remark be stricken. It is an insult. I think you ought to do something in the way of admonishing Mr. Del Guercio.

Presiding Inspector: I will allow it to stand. I think it is a proper objection.

Mr. Gladstein: That last statement of Mr. Del Guercio's?

Presiding Inspector: Yes. What is wrong about that?

Mr. Gladstein: I will tell you what is wrong about it: This witness has gone through the 1934 strike, the 1936 strike, [4909] a strike in 1939, and he has been a trade unionist since he was about 14 or 15 years old. Mr. Del Guercio will never know, as long as he lives, one-hundredth of what Mr. Heiner knows in the way of economic demands, trade unions and trade union activity. And you allow him to make a statement like this, insulting a witness, and when I ask you to admonish him you refuse to do it. It is a direct insult to say that the witness doesn't know what an economic demand is.

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Presiding Inspector: Will you sit down, Mr. Gladstein? I won't hear you further. But we will let Mrs. King examine the witness. Go ahead.

It was a proper objection. That was the claim he made.

Go ahead, Mrs. King.

Mrs. King: I am not prepared to examine the witness.

Presiding Inspector: We will take an adjournment then for ten minutes.

I shan't hear you in this proceeding, Mr. Gladstein, further until you apologize to me for the statement.

Presiding Inspector: Now, Mrs. King, you may proceed.

Mr. Gladstein: Before we continue, your Honor, I wish the record to show that I apologize for the remarks that I made. I meant no imputation of any kind as to the partiality or impartiality, or fairness of the Court. My remarks apparently contain an implication which could be interpreted that way. I had no such intention. I am sorry, though, the [4910] remarks contained such implication.

My remarks were the result of feeling that I had, not against the Court, but against counsel on the other side.

I am sorry I made the remarks.

Presiding Inspector: I accept that statement, Mr. Gladstein. You may proceed to examine the witness.

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Heiner, in the course of your contacts with Mr. Bridges have you ever observed any conduct on his part that would indicate that he was a Communist, or a member of the Communist Party?

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to the question.

Presiding Inspector: Indicate to you, that is.

A. No.

Mr. Gladstein: I think that is all.

Presiding Inspector: You may examine.

Mr. Del Guercio: Mr. Myron will take over the examination.

Mr. Gladstein: There is one more question, if I may be permitted.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Aside from the two arrests, Mr. Heiner, that you mentioned that occurred during the 1934 strike, and I think you said you were not convicted on either one——

A. (Interposing): That is correct. [4911]

Q. (Continuing): ——have you ever been convicted of any crime? A. No, sir.

Q. Have you ever been arrested, aside from the two occasions during the 1934 strike?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When?

A. The exact year I don't remember.

Q. How old were you at that time?

A. I must have been around 16 years old.

Q. What was the arrest for and where did it take place?

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

A. In Klamath Falls, Oregon. I was picked up on suspicion of train robbery.

Q. What were the circumstances?

A. The train was dynamited. They picked up everyone in town. Later on three men were convicted of the crime.

Q. Do you know who these three men were?

A. The D'Autromont brothers.

Q. Do you know how many persons were picked up by the police in connection with that?

A. Quite a few in Klamath Falls.

Q. What happened as far as you were concerned? A. I was dismissed.

Mr. Gladstein: You may cross examine. [4912]

Cross Examination

By Mr. Myron:

Q. Are you presently a member of any union?

A. Yes, sir. Of the Ship Clerks.

Q. When did you become a member of that union?

A. Around two years ago, I believe.

Q. Have you held any positions in that union?

A. None whatsoever.

Q. How did you become a member of the union?

A. I transferred from the Longshoremen's Union into the Ship Clerks Union.

Q. Were you appointed to the Union?

A. No, sir. I was elected to the Union.

Q. Elected to membership in it?

A. Yes, sir.

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Q. Originally when you became a member of the Union?

A. Yes, sir; when I became a member of the Union.

Q. Did Mr. Bridges have anything to do with your membership in the Ship Clerk's Union?

A. None.

Q. What is your present position?

A. My present position?

Q. Yes. A. Is a ship clerk. [4913]

Q. A ship clerk? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what is that association that you spoke of and belong to at the present time? Association of ship clerks? A. It is the union.

Q. Is that the union?

A. That is a union. It is an ILWU union.

Q. I see. And that is a union you spoke of that you are now a member of? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you become a member of the IWW?

A. I believe to be exact in 1921.

Q. And how did you become a member?

A. I was working on a construction job for Stone & Webster at Belden, California, on the Caribou Project, a hydro-electric project.

Q. My question is, How did you become a member?

A. Well, it was the only union that I was asked to join and I joined.

Q. Did you receive a membership book?

A. I didn't hear your question.

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Q. Strike that out. Did you apply for membership? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you received the membership book?

A. That is correct. [4914]

Q. Do you have that membership book now?

A. No, sir. I have lost it years ago.

Q. How long did you remain in the IWW?

A. About three years.

Q. And what years were those?

A. I believe '21, '22 and '23.

Presiding Inspector: When were you born?

By Mr. Myron:

Q. Are you a member of the Communist Party?

Presiding Inspector: Just a moment! Let us find out when he was born.

When were you born?

The Witness: October 26, 1906.

By Mr. Myron:

Q. Are you a member of the Communist Party?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you been at any time?

A. No, sir.

Q. A member of the Communist Party?

A. The answer is No.

Q. Are you familiar with the policies of the Communist Party? A. No, sir.

Q. Would you be able to determine the policies of the Communist Party in trade unions, what the policies of the [4915] Communist Party were at the time of any issue being presented before the trade union?

A. I don't believe I would.

Q. How long have you know Mr. Bridges?

A. Since 1923.

Q. And when did you become acquainted with—where did you become acquainted with Mr. Bridges?

A. On the San Francisco waterfront.

Q. You were working at that time?

A. As a longshoreman.

Q. And Mr. Bridges was working at that time?

A. That is correct.

Q. As a longshoreman? A. Yes, sir.

Q. I think you stated that you were a member of the Blue Book Union? A. That's correct.

Q. Was Mr. Bridges a member of the Blue Book Union, too?

A. I do not know, honestly.

Q. Did you know where Mr. Bridges was employed at the time that you first met him?

A. The same employer that I was employed for.

Q. Working for the same company?

A. Yes, sir. [4916]

Q. What company was that?

A. The California Stevedore & Ballast.

Q. And when did you become a member of the ILA?

A. In the latter part of October or the first part of November of 1933, I don't remember. It is either that last week of October or the first week of November.

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Q. That is in what year? A. 1933.

Q. That is about 10 years after you were working on the waterfront? A. That is correct.

Q. And during the time that you were working on the waterfront prior to the time that you became a member of the ILA, were you friendly and associated socially with Mr. Bridges? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that friendship continued over the period of time when you first met him?

A. That is correct.

Q. To date. When did Mr. Bridges become a member of the ILA?

A. I believe in July, 1933.

Q. And what month did you become a member?

A. November.

Q. When was the ILA formed?

A. In the latter part of June. The first initiation, I believe, was in July of 1933. [4917]

Q. And subsequently you became a member of the successor of the ILA; that is the ILWU?

A. That is correct.

Q. How often did you meet Mr. Bridges during the time that you were a member of the ILA?

A. How often?

Q. Yes. A. Weekly.

Q. Once a week?

A. Well, we worked at the same docks. I should say daily.

Q. You met him daily?

A. Practically every noon hour we used to talk to each other.

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Q. And over what period of time would that be?

A. Oh, I guess from around July of '33 until the strike.

Q. July of 1933 until the time the strike began?

A. Yes.

Q. Was he ever absent from work?

A. I didn't hear your question.

Q. Was he ever absent from his work on the waterfront while you were working with him?

A. Not to my knowledge. He may have been, but, I mean, I—he worked at one dock and I worked at the other dock for the same company.

Q. But you stated you met him daily? [4918]

A. During the lunch hour we used to meet quite frequently.

Q. How many times was he absent during the day from work?

A. None to my knowledge. You couldn't leave work in those days.

Q. Then, you say, your testimony is that during his employment there in the same firm that you worked for he wasn't absent from work on any day?

A. Oh, I couldn't say that. He may have been absent on some days, but, I mean, on the days that we were working, why, we would usually meet during the lunch hour.

Q. Then, as I understand it, the only times that you—that is, your conclusion is that when he was working you met him, but you don't know when he was absent from work; is that it?

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

A. No, nor when I was absent. I may have taken some time off or something.

Q. Did you hold any position in the ILA union?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In 1933 or '34, prior to the strike?

A. I held none prior to the strike.

Q. And when did the strike stop?

A. The 9th of May, 1934, I believe.

Q. Now, did you hold any position during the strike in the ILA? [4919]

A. Shortly after the strike was called I was appointed to the Defense Committee by the Strike Committee.

Q. When was that?

A. Oh, after the first week of the strike, I believe.

Q. Do you know the date?

A. No, I couldn't remember it exactly.

Q. How were you appointed?

A. How was I appointed?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, just a group of names were suggested to these Committees and they were appointed by vote of the strike committee.

Q. A group of names was suggested to——

A. (Interposing): That is, the members of the Union.

Q. (Continuing): ——whom?

A. To the Strike Committee.

Q. While you were a member of the Strike Committee?

A. That is correct.

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Q. How did you become a member of the Strike Committee?

A. How did I become a member of the Strike Committee?

Q. Yes.

A. At a Union meeting prior to the strike.

Q. When you spoke of a group of names being suggested what did you have in mind?

A. The Defense Committee. [4920]

Q. Well now, I am talking about the Strike Committee. Were you a member of the Strike Committee? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, how did you become a member of the Strike Committee?

A. At a membership meeting of the Union.

Q. And what was done?

A. Well, the Committees were formulated before the strike and each one was given their assignment. I believe myself, in my particular case, that I was unassigned.

Q. This is the Strike Committee I am talking about. How did you become a member of the Strike Committee?

Presiding Inspector: I think you had better suggest what you mean.

Mr. Myron: I think the witness has in mind the Strike Committee.

Presiding Inspector: I am not sure that he understands how he became a member, what you mean.

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

By Mr. Myron:

Q. Well now, you were a member of the ILA at the time the strike began, is that right, in 1934?

A. That is correct.

Q. And you said about a week later you became a member of the Strike Committee.

A. Of the Defense Committee.

Q. Were you a member of the Strike Committee? [4921]

A. I was a member of the Strike Committee before the strike had started. The Union had set up its Strike Committee before the strike.

Q. How soon before the strike?

A. That I couldn't recolleet. Approximately, I think it was about two or three meetings prior to the strike.

Q. And then how did you become a member of the Strike Committee?

A. Well, most of the men who served on the original Strike Committee volunteered for that service at a union meeting and were given the confirmation there at the meeting.

Q. I am talking about the orginal Strike Committee. How did you become a member of the original Strike Committee? A. That is the way.

Q. How?

A. Most of the men who served on that Committee volunteered on the original Strike Committee.

Q. Did you volunteer?

A. I believe I did.

Q. Did anybody suggest your name?

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

A. None to my knowledge.

Q. And then what was done with the volunteers? Were they all appointed to the Strike Committee?

A. By the membership meeting. They were appointed by the membership. [4922]

Presiding Inspector: That is, a vote was taken?

The Witness: Yes, elected.

By Mr. Myron:

Q. Let me understand you. You say that you were a member of the original Strike Committee. Now, that was a Committee which was established prior to the strike? A. That is correct.

Q. Now, and you became a member of that Committee in what way?

A. Through volunteering at a regular membership meeting.

Q. And was anything done with the names of the persons who volunteered? Were they elected or selected?

A. They were, I believe you would call it, selected at a membership meeting.

Q. And who selected the volunteers?

A. The Chairman of the meeting had them confirmed by the membership.

Q. Who was the Chairman?

A. Lee Holman.

Q. And he selected the names of the persons who volunteered to be members of this original Strike Committee, is that right?

A. Yes, I believe so.

Q. When was that?

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

A. I think about a month or maybe not. I think we met [4923] that time over two weeks and it was either one or two meetings prior to the strike.

Q. That was about two weeks prior to the 1934 strike, is that right? And you say that Lee Holman selected you to serve on this Committee?

A. No. Lee Holman only acted in the capacity of Chairman. The men were elected by the membership present at that meeting.

Q. You say that you were selected to serve on the original Strike Committee, is that right?

A. That is correct.

Q. And Mr. Holman was the one who had charge of selecting the names of those who volunteered? A. That is correct.

Q. And he was Chairman of the Committee, is that right?

A. No. He was President of the Union and Chairman of the meeting on that particular occasion.

Q. When did Holman serve as President of the ILA? A. He was their first President.

Q. And when did his official position in the Union as President end?

A. Right shortly before the strike.

Q. This was at the time——

A. (Interposing) Just shortly——

Q. (Continuing) ——that the original Strike Committee was selected? [4924]

A. That is correct.

Q. Preparations were made for the strike?

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

A. Yes.

Q. And Lee Holman was then President?

A. (Nodding affirmatively.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Did the reporter get the answer?

The Reporter: I got it.

Mr. Del Guercio: Nodding in the affirmative?

The Reporter: That is right.

By Mr. Myron:

Q. And you say subsequently those who served on the original Strike Committee served on the Strike Committee in the 1934 strike, is that right? The general Strike Committee?

A. I don't know what you are referring to.

Q. Well, was there any difference in the personnel of the Strike Committee, the original Strike Committee, and the Strike Committee that served in the 1934 strike?

A. (Shaking head negatively.)

Mrs. King: Mr. Heiner, will you say something instead of just shaking your head ?

Presiding Inspector: I am not sure that he understands.

A. (Continuing): I think the only difference in the personnel was one man, Mr. Holman himself. He was removed as President of the Union.

By Mr. Myron:

Q. And he was removed from the Strike Committee? [4925]

A. I believe that is correct. And Joe Johnson,

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

the Vice-President was then President of the Union. He succeeded the—the Vice-President succeeded the President.

Q. Now, how long did you serve on the Strike Committee?

A. From approximately the first day of the strike, and about a week later I was elected to the Defense Committee, which was part of the——

Q. (Interposing): I am talking about the Strike Committee. How long did your serve on the Strike Committee?

A. The entire length of the strike.

Q. And who were the other members of that Committee? I will withdraw that.

How many members?

A. Approximately a hundred, I would say.

Q. About a hundred members. Now, there were sub-committees appointed? A. That's correct.

Q. And how were they appointed?

A. By selection.

Q. Whose selection?

A. The selection of the men present at the strike meeting, the Committee meetings.

Q. And who was Chairman of the Strike Committee? A. Mr. Bridges.

Q. Now, what sub-committee did you serve on?

A. The Defense Committee. [4926]

Q. And who appointed you?

A. Who appointed me?

Q. To serve.

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

A. Mr. Dietrich, I believe, asked me if I would help. He was Chairman of that Committee and he asked me if I would want to serve on that Committee.

Q. And who appointed Mr. Dietrich?

A. The original Strike Committee.

Q. Then they appointed a one-man committee? The original Strike Committee appointed a one-man committee?

A. No. I believe there was one other man besides him on that, a man named Michaelson.

Q. And how was he appointed?

A. That I don't know. I don't believe I was present at the meeting at that particular time. I was—I believe, if I am not mistaken, I was on the Relief Committee just a few days prior.

Q. Then so far as you know Mr. Dietrich was appointed by the General Strike Committee?

A. That is correct.

Q. To serve on this sub-committee?

A. That is correct.

Q. And then he selected you and another man to serve with him, is that right?

A. That is correct. And then they were brought before the Strike Committee and approved by the Strike Com- [4927] mittee.

Q. The names of these two men, your name and the other man, were brought before the Strike Committee?

A. Speaking in my own case only. I don't know how the other man was selected.

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.).

Q. Was your name brought before the Strike Committee? A. That is correct.

Q. When was that?

A. About a week after the strike.

Q. And what took place at that meeting, if you know? You were there?

A. I was there; yes sir.

Q. What took place?

A. They asked me if I would serve on the Defense Committee.

Q. Who asked you? A. Mr. Dietrich.

Q. This was before the General Strike Committee, is that right?

A. Yes. He had seen me in the morning and he asked me if I would like to serve on the Strike Committee, and I told him that I would. And there was some objection to me being there and finally I was placed there.

Presiding Inspector: You misspoke there. Just read that answer.

(The answer referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.) [4928]

The Witness: I was elected there.

Presiding Inspector: No. You say he asked you if you would like to serve on the "Strike Committee". Do you mean the Defense Committee?

The Witness: The Defense Committee.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

By Mr. Myron:

Q. That was the time that your name was brought before the General Strike Committee?

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

A. That is correct.

Q. And Mr. Dietrich took you aside in the committee room and asked you if you would like to serve on the Committee, and you said "Yes"; is that right?

A. No. It was on the street, I believe, in the morning he asked me.

Q. Well now, you spoke about your name being brought before the Strike Committee. Would you explain that?

A. When any man was elected to any Committee——

Q. (Interposing): No, I am just speaking of your case. What took place in your case? You spoke about your name being brought before the Strike Committee.

A. Well, my name was suggested by Dietrich, I believe. He was the one who brought it up.

Q. At a meeting?

A. At a meeting of the Strike Committee.

Q. Were you there? [4929] A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he proposed your name. Was there a motion?

Presiding Inspector: That isn't the way he said.

Mr. Myron: I am trying to understand just how he was appointed.

Presiding Inspector: As I understand it, Mr. Dietrich had spoken to him on the street in the morning and then he came to this meeting, and at the meeting—before the meeting Mr. Dietrich asked the witness whether he would serve on the Defense Committee and, the witness having said he would, there was a confirmation of it by vote of the members of the Strike Committee. [4930]

By Mr. Myron:

Q. Is that true? A. That is correct.

Presiding Inspector: That was as I understood his testimony.

By Mr. Myron:

Q. Who was the Chairman of that meeting?

A. Mr. Bridges.

Q. Mr. Bridges?

A. You mean of the General Strike Committee?

Q. The meeting at which your name was proposed. A. Mr. Bridges.

Q. How long did you serve on that committee?

A. On the Defense Committee?

Q. That is right.

A. Until after the strike.

Q. That is, Mr. Dietrich, you and another individual? A. Yes.

Q. What was his name?

A. Michaelson, but he withdrew and there was just Mr. Dietrich and I.

Q. What were your duties as a member of this Committee?

A. To try to arrange bail for the men arrested and appoint, or see that they were given proper counsel. We had to arrange for counsel at their trials. [4931]

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Q. Now, did you confer with any individuals, or any associations or organizations in connection with your duties?

A. The General Strike Committee.

Q. That was the only organization?

A. That is the only organization.

Q. You didn't solicit the advice of counsel of any other organization?

A. No, sir. We had our own counsel, a man by the name of Leo Collins.

Q. Neither as an individual, nor as a member of this Committee, on those matters which were in the scope of your jurisdiction you didn't confer with any other organization, or any other individual, with the exception of the Strike Committee, is that right?

A. With the Strike Committee, and attorneys, local attorneys practicing here in San Francisco.

Q. Who were the local attorneys?

A. Mr. Leo Collins was the attorney for the union; and Mr. Vincent Hallahan handled a couple of cases; and Mr. Charles O'Connor was another one. There were two more, but I don't recall their names.

Q. Two more attorneys? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And those are the only individuals, with the exception of the Strike Committee, is that right, with whom you conferred? [4932]

A. That is right.

Q. Now, did you confer with the Strike Committee as a whole, or with individual members of the Strike Committee?

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

A. It was the custom to make a daily report to the entire Strike Committee.

Q. Were they in session every day during the 1934 strike?

A. I believe there were some Sundays they didn't serve, but every week day they did meet.

Q. They met every day with the exception of Sundays?

A. Well, they didn't meet on some Sundays.

Q. What time of the day?

A. At two o'clock in the afternoon.

Q. They didn't change that time at any time during the strike, is that right?

A. On numerous occasions it was changed.

Q. On numerous occasions it was changed?

A. Yes; changed to morning meetings.

Q. When they had morning meetings they didn't have afternoon meetings, is that so?

A. Sometimes they did and sometimes they held meetings in the morning and in the afternoon. Sometimes we met twice daily.

Q. And you say that the membership of that General Strike Committee was approximately 100?

[4933]

A. Somewhere in that vicinity. It was a large Committee.

Q. Did you know any of the members of the Strike Committee?

A. I believe I knew them all.

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Q. You knew them all?

A. Yes; from working with them. They were all longshoremen working on the job.

Q. Could you give us the names?

A. That is, the entire hundred?

Q. The names of some of them.

A. Surely. Henry Morrisse, McGuire——

Q. (Interposing): What?

A. McGuire, Harry Lynch, Robert Boyce, Roger McKenna, Harry Curtis, John Schomaker, Schmidt, Fred Frater, Ralph Mallen—I could go on continuously, I believe.

Q. That will be sufficient. I believe you stated that you conferred with this Committee daily?

A. That is correct.

Q. From the time that you became a member of this Sub-Committee to the end of the strike, is that right?

A. No. I was off a few days; that is, I was off three days on one occasion shortly after—I believe it was during the general strike.

Q. Now, was the entire membership of the Committee present when you gave your report?

A. The entire membership of the General Strike Committee?

Q. Yes. [4934]

A. No. At different times members were missing who were excused because they were doing work so it wouldn't be possible for them to get there at that time.

Q. Would there be records of those meetings at which you made reports to the General Strike Committee?

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

A. There were records kept at that time.

Q. Who kept those records?

A. I believe the Secretary, a man by the name of Frater.

Q. Are those records in existence, if you know?

A. I wouldn't have that knowledge; I really wouldn't know.

Q. Would those records contain the names of the members who were present at various meetings?

A. That is correct; yes, they would.

Q. Was Mr. Morisse present on the days that you made your reports to the strike committee?

A. Mr. Morrisse?

Q. That is right.

A. On some occasions; yes.

Q. How many times was he absent?

A. That I wouldn't have no way of telling.

Q. Do you know what days he was present and what days he was absent?

A. Well, he was there the biggest portion of the time. He was serving on another Committee, I believe, and it is possible [4935] there would be days when he wasn't there.

Q. When you speak of the great portion of the time, how many days would you say he was absent from the Committee meetings? A. Very few.

Q. Would you know what days those were?

A. I wouldn't have no way of knowing.

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Q. You spoke of Mr. Schomaker as being a member of this committee. How many days was he present at which you gave reports to the Committee?

A. He was present practically all the time, with the exception of the time he was in jail, I believe.

Q. When you say "practically" do you know the number of days he was present and the number of days he was absent?

A. Not directly. He was there the biggest portion of the time. He was head of the Publicity Committee.

Q. You wouldn't know how many days he was absent from the meetings, would you?

A. No, that I wouldn't know.

Q. Approximately?

A. I would say approximately not over five or six days during the whole strike, if he were absent.

Q. Do you know—I only want your knowledge.

A. To be truthful about it, I don't know how long he was in jail. [4936]

Q. Well, aside from the time he was in jail, if you know, how many days was he absent from the Strike Committee?

A. Not once to my memory.

Q. That is, of your own knowledge?

A. Well, I believe every time I was present he was there.

Q. And you were there every day, is that correct?

A. With the exception of about three days.

Q. With the exception of three days?

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

A. Yes; and I believe we had a trial at Modesto——

Q. (Interposing): What?

A. I believe there was a trial in Modesto around that time. In the mornings I would go up with the attorney and I wasn't present.

Q. How many days?

A. Two or three, I believe.

Q. That is two or three additional days, in addition to the days you have already mentioned?

A. Yes.

Q. And that may have been about a week in all?

A. Yes; something like that.

Q. About a week in all. And then you might say the meetings of the Strike Committee, which were held during the 1934 strike, about six or seven days?

A. That is correct.

Q. Would it be any more?

A. No, sir. [4937]

Q. How many days during that strike were meetings held in the morning?

A. I would say about, well, to be exact, three times to my knowledge that meetings were held in the morning.

Q. And the rest of the time the meetings were held in the afternoon? A. In the afternoon.

Q. From what time?

A. They would start at 2:00 and last approximately from an hour to two hours, according to the amount of business to be transacted at that meeting.

Q. Would you remain in those meetings?

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. From the beginning to the end?

A. Not always until the end.

Q. How long would you remain at those meetings?

A. If we didn't have any cases in Court, which would come up on the afternoon calendar, we would remain until the meeting was ended; and if we had cases in court why, we would go up to the Hall of Justice in the afternoon. [4938]

Q. Now, if you didn't have any reports to make would you attend the meetings? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You would attend them? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you make the reports yourself?

A. Alternating with Mr. Dietrich.

Q. Well then, when Mr. Dietrich made the reports did you accompany Mr. Dietrich?

A. That's correct. Yes, sir.

Q. To the Strike Committee rooms?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You came with him? A. Yes.

Q. And when you made the reports did Mr. Dietrich accompany you? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Mr. Dietrich would be there on all occasions?

A. Not on all occasions. Sometimes he would have other business to attend to and he would tell me to make the report.

Q. How many times was Mr. Dietrich absent during the 1934 strike?

A. At the Committee meetings?

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Q. At the Strike Committee meetings? [4939]

A. Two days to my knowledge.

Q. Who presided over the Strike Committee?

A. Mr. Bridges.

Q. At all times?

A. Not at all times. Sometimes he would be away and there would be an alternate Chairman selected.

Q. Who was the alternate Chairman?

A. It would be one of the men, whoever they happened to elect. They would elect a Chairman each time.

Q. On how many occasions during the 1934 strike did you have an alternate Chairman?

A. Well, to my knowledge I would say three times: Once Mr. Bridges was sent over to a meeting of the Sailor's Union——

Q. (Interposing): I am talking about the alternate Chairman. How many times did you have an alternate Chairman during the 1934 strike?

A. On three different occasions.

Q. And who was the individual or individuals that acted as alternate Chairmen?

A. On one occasion I remember a man named Davis acting as Chairman; on another occasion I believe Jack Creary, I think was his name; and a third occasion I believe the Vice-President, or the President of the Local, Mr. Joe Johnson acted. [4940]

Q. Did Mr. Schomaker ever act as Chairman?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Well, you would know, wouldn't you?

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

A. The answer would be No.

Q. He didn't? A. No.

Q. He never acted as Chairman? A. No.

Q. Did Mr. McKenna act as Chairman?

A. No, not to my knowledge.

Presiding Inspector: I think this is a good place to recess for lunch.

(Whereupon, at 12:40 o'clock P.M. a recess was taken until 2:00 o'clock P.M. of the same day.) [4941]

After Recess
2:00 O'clock P.M.

Presiding Inspector: Now, Mr. Myron, you may proceed.

FRED HEINER

called as a witness on behalf of the Alien, having been previously duly sworn, testified further as follows:

Cross Examination
(Resumed)

Mr. Myron: May I have the last question read, please?

(The question and answer referred to were read by the reporter as recorded.)

By Mr. Myron:

Q. Do you know of any person, other than the three mentioned, who acted as Chairman at any of these meetings during the 1934 strike?

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

A. No.

Q. Now, in connection with your duties on this Defense Committee, I believe you stated that you made appearances in Court and provided for bail for those people who were arrested, is that right?

A. No; that is not correct. I didn't say we made appearances in court.

Q. You made no appearances?

A. We made no appearances.

Q. I understood you to say that. Did you at anytime appear in court in connection with the arrest—— [4942]

A. (Interposing): I, personally; no.

Q. (Continuing): ——or in connection with the bail of any person who was arrested during the 1934 strike?

A. Usually bail was arranged in the Judge's chambers or at their homes at night.

Q. Did you appear in the Judge's chambers in behalf of the Defense Committee? A. Yes.

Q. And on how many occasions would you say you appeared in that capacity?

A. There were really too many, too numerous to remember.

Q. Well, approximately?

A. I would say about 30 or 40 times.

Q. That is, during the 1934 strike?

A. Yes.

Q. And those appearances would be made during the day, is that right?

A. Or in the evening, if the arrests occurred at night; sometimes we would go to the Judge's home and have him set bail.

Q. How many times did you appear in the Judge's chambers during that period of time?

A. I believe about 30 or 40 times during the strike.

Q. And what time during the day would these appearances be made?

A. Usually in the—— [4943]

Q. (Interposing): At various times?

A. At various times usually in the late afternoon.

Q. I see. A. After Court was over.

Q. Did you ever, as a member of the Defense Committee, pass on a question of accepting aid from the ILD? A. No, sir.

Q. Was that question before the Committee?

A. Yes, it was; before the Strike Committee.

Q. Was it before the Defense Committee?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did the Defense Committee have anything to do with that matter?

A. The Defense Committee at one time were asked to investigate it, and I believe Mr. Dietrich did—I was not present when the investigation was made.

Q. Was the question ever submitted by the Strike Committee to the Sub-Committee, the Defense Committee?

A. No, it was the other way around. I believe it was submitted on recommendation from the Defense Committee to the Strike Committee and it was rejected by the Strike Committee.

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Q. Is it your understanding, then, that the question was originally submitted to the Sub-Committee?

A. First. Yes, I believe that's correct.

Q. And then the Sub-Committee recommended some action on [4944] that to the Strike Committee, is that right?

A. After an investigation by the Defense Committee.

Q. Now, did you participate in that matter when it was before the Defense Committee in any way at all? A. No, sir.

Q. You made no recommendation to have it submitted to the Strike Committee? A. No, sir.

Q. Was the question put to you for consideration by a member—by any member of the Defense Committee?

A. Yes, it was; by Mr. Dietrich. And I don't remember the occasion, but I was busy at the time and I told him "Well, whatever you do is all right with me."

Q. What did Mr. Dietrich say to you in that regard?

A. He said that he was told to—I believe there was, oh, a program of aid to men who were arrested and that he was going to investigate it and asked me if I wanted to go along, and I just happened to be busy at the time and did not go. I had nothing to do with any recommendations of the ILD or to the ILD from the Strike Committee.

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Q. Well, you stated that Mr. Dietrich asked you whether or not you were in accord with obtaining aid from the ILD and you said "Whatever you do I'll go along."? A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. Now, did you report that to the Strike Committee?

A. No, Mr. Dietrich did. [4945]

Q. Were you present when Mr. Dietrich did?

A. Yes.

Q. And what did Mr. Dietrich say in proposing the acceptance of aid from the ILD?

A. He was against it. He was not in favor of it at all.

Q. He stated that to the Strike Committee?

A. That's correct.

Q. Is that right? A. Yes.

Q. And what action did the Strike Committee take?

A. They took the recommendation of Mr. Dietrich and the Defense Committee and voted it down.

Q. Now, isn't it a fact that you went to 121 Haight Street with Mr. Dietrich?

A. I have never——

Q. (Interposing): And conferred with Elaine Black on this question?

A. I have never been to 121 Haight Street.

Q. Did Mr. Dietrich go there?

A. I believe he did.

Q. Do you know that? A. Yes.

Q. Who accompanied Mr. Dietrich?

A. I think Mr. Michelson at the time.

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Q. He was the other member? A. Yes.

[4946]

Q. And you state now that you were not present with Mr. Dietrich and Mr. Michaelson?

A. That's correct.

Q. At 121 Haight Street? A. Yes, sir.

Q. When was that conference held?

A. It must have been in June; oh, I would say the early part of June of 1934.

Q. Was Mr. Bridges there?

A. I do not know.

Q. You know that Mr. Michaelson and Mr. Dietrich were there? A. Yes, that's correct.

Q. You don't know whether Mr. Bridges was there, is that true?

A. That is correct. I don't remember whether he went there or not. I really couldn't say.

Q. And you say that you were not there?

A. That is correct.

Q. When did you learn about this, this meeting at 121 Haight Street between or among Mr. Dietrich, Mr. Michaelson and Elaine Black, as you have stated?

A. Well, the meeting between Mr. Michaelson and Mr. Dietrich and who they were to meet at 121 Haight Street, I don't know. Whether it was Elaine Black or anyone else. But [4947] I knew that they were going there to discuss the question of the ILD.

Q. Who told you that?

A. At the Strike Committee. It was brought up in the afternoon.

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Q. At the Strike Committee?

A. Meeting. Yes, sir.

Q. And when was that? Prior to the time that it came before the Defense Committee?

A. No, at the same time. I believe on the same afternoon.

Q. Then Mr. Dietrich—let me get this straight. You say that it was first brought up before the Defense Committee, is that right. A. Yes.

Q. And then the Defense Committee brought it into the Strike Committee? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then Mr. Dietrich and Mr. Michaelson proceeded to 121 Haight Street and conferred with somebody there, is that right?

A. Well, when they went there—I mean, directly from the Strike Committee meeting, I do not know. But they did go, I believe.

Q. Well, subsequent to the time it was brought before the Strike Committee they went to 121 Haight Street? A. That is correct. [4948]

Q. And after that you learned about their visit to 121 Haight Street? A. That is correct.

Q. Now, how soon after that?

A. h, I believe around three or four days after the meeting I was talking to Mr. Dietrich down in the Hall of Justice one morning and he told me what had transpired there.

Q. And what did he say to you?

A. He told me that he wasn't in favor of——

Q. (Interposing): What did he say to you about this meeting at 121 Haight Street?

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

A. Nothing at all. I mean, he stated their proposition of aiding the Local in defense, and that he was not in favor of it. And that is all there was to it.

Q. Did he say that he had gone to 121 Haight Street?

Mr. Gladstein: I think that has been asked and answered three or four times.

Presiding Inspector: He says that he knows they went and that he learned it from Mr. Dietrich. Of course, I am not sure that it is very clear when he learned.

Mr. Myron: Will you ask the question again?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Presiding Inspector: That is what you are asking.

The Witness: And the answer was "Yes."

[4950]

Presiding Inspector: He has answered that.

By Mr. Myron:

Q. He told you that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when did he tell you that?

A. A couple of days later—at the Hall of Justice.

Q. Now, when did he ask you if you were in favor of accepting aid from the ILD?

A. Previous to his going to 121 Haight Street.

Q. How soon thereafter, or how recent?

A. If I am not mistaken, the day before.

Q. The day before he went to 121 Haight Street?

A. It was either that day or the day following, I believe.

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Q. Now, that was the first time you heard anything about the question of accepting aid from the ILD, is that right? A. That is correct.

Q. Then what you stated about hearing this brought up in the Defense Committee, and in the Strike Committee, is not true, is that right?

A. It is. It happened on the same day; it all occurred on the same day. He came to me before the meeting. It was brought up at the meeting and, I believe——

Q. (Interposing): What meeting are you referring to?

A. The meeting of the General Strike Committee.

Q. What was brought up then? [4951]

A. As to the sending of someone up to 121 Haight Street to investigate the ILD.

Q. And then subsequent to that time it was brought before the Strike Committee?

A. I believe it was brought to the Strike Committee on the same day.

Q. And nothing was done aboue it, is that right?

A. I believe they were told to go and investigate it, if I am not mistaken.

Q. And you say four or five days later Mr. Dietrich told you that he had been to 121 Haight Street? A. That is right.

Q. Now, was it referred back to the Strike Committee? A. Yes, it was.

Q. A report of that conference at 121 Haight Street? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who reported that? A. Mr. Dietrich.

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Q. Would that be in the minutes of the meeting? A. Yes, sir; it should be.

Q. In considering this question before the Strike Committee who was Chairman, who presided? A. Mr. Bridges.

Q. And as a result the Strike Committee requested Mr. Dietrich and others to go down to 121 Haight Street and investi- [4952] gate, is that true?

A. Yes.

Mr. Gladstein: One moment.

Mr. Myron: His answer is "Yes."

Mr. Gladstein: I move that the answer be stricken for the purpose of making an objection.

Presiding Inspector: That may be done.

Mr. Gladstein: The form of the question is such that it contains an implication that should not be in the record. I object to the question. It says "As a result," undoubtedly referring to the previous question. That is the only reference it could have. The previous question had to do with who was the Chairman. The question was phrased, "as a result, was the matter submitted to the Strike Committee."

Presiding Inspector: I think you had better rephrase the question.

By Mr. Myron:

Q. Well, the matter was brought before the Strike Committee, is that true?

Mr. Gladstein: I want to object to this because counsel is not making clear in his questions which occasion he is referring to. It appears by the testimony of the witness that there were at least two, and perhaps more, I don't know, instances when the Strike Committee considered the matter.

Presiding Inspector: I am a little confused about it myself, [4953] although it may be clear to the witness. But there seems to have been some questions, and some answers, which are capable of different interpretations.

Mr. Gladstein: That is why I suggest that counsel when he is asking the witness aboue the matter being brought before the Strike Committee——

Mr. Myron: (Interposing): I think the witness understands the question.

Presiding Inspector: Maybe the witness does. I wouldn't attempt to say that he didn't. I am a little confused myself.

Mr. Myron: I would rather have the witness answer the questions than have Mr. Gladstein answer them.

Presiding Inspector: The witness, of course, is the one to answer the questions.

Mr. Gladstein: I am concerned about the state of the record. I think when we read the record we will have difficulty in understanding what is referred to.

Presiding Inspector: You will have a chance to straighten that out, if you desire, on redirect. Go on. I think there is some difficulty in my mind, but maybe not with the witness.

Mr. Del Guercio: Does your Honor desire it cleared up?

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Presiding Inspector: I think it ought to be cleared up some time; now or on redirect.

By Mr. Myron:

Q. Let's see if we understand you correctly, Mr. Heiner. [4954] You say this matter of accepting aid from the ILD was first brought to your attention as a member of the Defense Committee, is that right? A. That is correct.

Q. Now, when was that?

A. It was on the same afternoon on which it was brought up before the Strike Committee by Mr. Dietrich.

Q. Well, who brought it to your attention?

A. Mr. Dietrich.

Q. And what was said at that time?

A. He told me that he had been advised that the ILD wished to lend aid to the strikers who were arrested, and that he was going to investigate it and he would have to take it up with the Strike Committee first, I believe.

Q. Did he tell you who advised him?

A. No, that he did not.

Q. Now, immediately after that you say on the same day the matter was brought before the Strike Committee, is that true? A. That is correct.

Q. And Mr. Dietrich was the one that brought it before the Strike Committee?

A. That is correct.

Q. And you were present. Now, five or six days later they went to 121 Haight Street—and when

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

I say "they" I mean Mr. Dietrich and some others —and conferred with somebody at 121 Haight Street in regard to this question, is that [4955] true?

Mr. Gladstein: Just a moment.

Mr. Myron: I am asking the witness, is that true?

Mr. Gladstein: I still have a right to object on the ground that it misstates the evidence. As I recall it, the witness has already been asked and has answered this question.

Mr. Myron: I would rather have the witness answer the questions. If there is an objection to the question, and a ruling, I will ask another question.

Mr. Gladstein: I object and wish to explain the ground.

Presiding Inspector: I will allow the question, but let's make sure he understands it.

Is it true that four or five days later these people, Dietrich and the other men on your committee, went to 121 Haight Street?

The Witness: That is not correct.

Presiding Inspector: In what respect is it not correct?

The Witness: I believe that day, or the following day, they went.

By Mr. Myron:

Q. When the matter was brought to the attention of the Strike Committee who was the Chairman?

Mr. Gladstein: One moment.

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Presiding Inspector: Which time do you mean?

[4956]

Mr. Myron: The first time it was brought before the Strike Committee.

Presiding Inspector: Before they went to 121 Haight Street.

A. Mr. Bridges.

By Mr. Myron:

Q. And was there a vote taken on the question? A. Yes.

Q. And as a result of the vote which was taken on that question, subsequent to that time Mr. Dietrich and others went to 121 Haight Street, is that correct? A. I believe so: yes, sir.

Presiding Inspector: Speak a little louder so they can hear.

The Witness: Surely.

Presiding Inspector: I don't know whether you heard the answer.

Mr. Myron: I think he said "Yes." That was my understanding.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. He gave an affirmative answer.

By Mr. Myron:

Q. Did you vote on the question?

A. Yes, I believe I did.

Q. Did Mr. Bridges?

A. No, he couldn't vote. He was Chairman.

[4957]

Q. How did you vote on the question?

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

A. I voted in the negative myself.

Q. Now, after the meeting at 121 Haight Street was it again brought to the floor of the Strike Committee? A. That is correct.

Q. And Mr. Dietrich was the one who brought it to the attention of the Strike Committee the second time? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you present? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say now that you did not go to 121 Haight Street? A. That is correct.

Q. Do you know Elaine Black?

A. I met her once in the Hall of Justice.

Q. Is that the only time that you have ever met her?

A. That is the only time that I personally have ever met Elaine Black.

Q. Was that in connection with Strike matters?

A. Yes, sir. She had a man from the MWIU arrested and she was down there.

Q. What was your interest in that case?

A. None whatsoever.

Q. You talked with her on that occasion?

A. I didn't hear your question.

Q. Did you talk to her on that occasion? [4958]

A. Yes. She came over and asked some information on arranging bail or something of that nature.

Q. She was asking you about arranging bail. Did you advise her?

A. Well, I did. I told her that there was nothing that we could do about it because we were separate and apart from the MW—Marine Workers Industrial Union.

Q. And that is the only occasion on which you met Elaine Black, is that right?

A. That is correct.

Q. When did you learn that Mr. Michaelson accompanied Mr. Dietrich to 121 Haight Street on a matter of accepting aid from the ILD?

Mr. Gladstein: I think that has already been asked and answered a couple of times.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. But we are trying to straighten the whole thing out.

A. To my knowledge I believe it was when it was returned to the Strike Committee because I believe, if I am not mistaken, Mr. Michaelson was for it and Mr. Dietrich was against it. That is how I know presumably he had gone there.

Q. Was the question at any time submitted to the Defense Committee for action other than when it was brought to your attention by Mr. Dietrich?

A. No.

Q. At no time? [4959] A. No.

Q. When Mr. Dietrich——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): Just a moment! I think the witness wants to say something.

Mr. Myron: That is right.

A. (Continuing) The Defense Committee was not an autonomous body. They had to get permission from the General Strike Committee.

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

By Mr. Myron:

Q. Now, did you talk to Mr. Bridges during the meetings of the Strike Committee?

A. On numerous occasions, yes.

Q. Over that period of time?

A. Definitely, yes.

Q. In 1934? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Other than the reports—the subject matter of the reports that you made? A. Yes.

Q. You have talked to him? A. Yes.

Q. On how many different occasions?

A. I think nearly daily. We used to discuss coming meetings and strike events. I mean, other than the business of the Defense Committee.

Q. And, as I understand you, there were three meetings [4960] held in the morning?

A. To my knowledge. Maybe more. But, I mean, to my own recollection. Maybe more.

Q. And the rest of the meetings were held in the afternoon? A. That's correct.

Q. Were there any days during the 1934 strike on which there were no meetings held?

A. I believe two.

Q. What's that?

A. I believe there were two days.

Q. Two days on which there were no meetings held? A. Yes.

Q. That's to your best recollection?

A. Yes, that's correct.

Q. Would there be more?

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

A. Well, there would be a possibility when I wasn't there that there would be more.

Q. Well now,——

A. (Interposing) I mean, to my knowledge.

Q. I am excepting Sundays, and you say——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): And excepting the time that he was——

Mr. Myron (Interposing): That we was away from the meetings. [4961]

Presiding Inspector: Yes, when he was under arrest. He has described that.

A. To my knowledge, the answer would be none other than the ones that I have stated.

By Mr. Myron:

Q. On two days, you say? A. Yes.

Q. Would you say that there were any more than two days? A. That I don't remember.

Q. You don't remember? A. No.

Q. There could have been many more days, couldn't there?

A. No. Not "many more" because I was there most of the time.

Q. Would you say that there were as many as ten days on which meetings were held?

A. Definitely no.

Q. And your best recollection now is that on two days no meetings were held?

A. That's correct.

Q. That was on days other than the days that you have stated you were away? A. Yes.

Q. Do you know Edward Russell?

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Mr. Gladstein: What's the name? [4962]

Presiding Inspector: Russell.

A. Do I know Edward Russell?

By Mr. Myron:

Q. Yes. A. The answer is "No."

Q. What's that? A. No.

Q. Did you ever know a man by the name of Edward Russell?

A. I knew a man who was connected with the American-Hawaiian Steamship Company, who were my previous employers, by that name.

Q. Did you ever have any trouble with him?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, you have known Mr. Bridges since the time you worked on the waterfront to date?

A. That's correct.

Q. You have always been very friendly with Mr. Bridges? A. Quite friendly.

Q. Have you ever been appointed by Mr. Bridges to any position? A. No, sir.

Q. Isn't it a fact that Mr. Bridges had you appointed to this Clerks' Association?

A. That is not correct.

Q. And isn't it a fact that you were subsequently elected [4963] into your union after Mr. Bridges had appointed you?

A. I was elected into the Union, but I was not appointed by Mr. Bridges.

Q. Would the minutes of the meeting of your union show that, how you became a member?

A. Yes, sir.

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Mr. Myron: That's all.

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Heiner, did the Defense Committee in the 1934 strike have any power to commit the Strike Committee on the question of accepting ILD support? A. None.

Q. What was the extent of the power that the Defense Committee had on that subject?

A. To make recommendations only.

Q. Is that what the Defense Committee actually did? A. Yes.

Q. So that the actual determination of whether the proffered aid of the ILD should be accepted was up to the Strike Committee?

A. That is correct.

Q. And the Strike Committee made the decision on it? A. That is correct.

Q. Do you recall whether Mr. Bridges was Chairman of the meeting at which the Strike Committee ultimately rejected the [4964] proposal?

A. I do.

Q. He was? A. He was the Chairman.

Q. Now, you mentioned on cross examination some occasions when Mr. Bridges did not act as Chairman of the Strike Committee meetings. Do you have those in mind?

A. I believe I can remember three.

Q. Well, now, how did those occasions arise?

A. Once he was ordered by the Strike Committee to attend a meeting of the SUP, the Sailor' Union of the Pacific.

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Q. Where was Bridges when the Strike Committee made that order?

A. He opened the meeting and then as soon as the meeting opened, why, they took it up as a special order of business. There was immediate action necessary, and he was told immediately to leave and turn the chair over, and another Chairman was duly elected.

Q. So on that occasion Mr. Bridges actually opened the meeting as Chairman but did not preside throughout? A. That is correct.

Q. What was the procedure on the other two occasions? I think you have mentioned that there were three?

A. On the next one, to my memory, he was part of a Committee that was sent up to see the Board of Supervisors. [4965]

Q. Do you remember what that was about?

A. In reference to opening the Port, I believe. The Supervisors or the City Administration had some meeting in which they were going to reopen the Port.

Q. Now, was this occasion one on which the Strike Committee ordered Bridges and those who went with him to take this action?

The Witness: Repeat your question, please.

Mr. Gladstein: Will you read it, please, Mr. Reporter?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

A. Yes.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Can you state whether Bridges acted as Chairman up to the time where the Strike Committee ordered him and the others to go to the Board of Supervisors?

A. Yes, he did act as Chairman.

Q. Do you recall what the third instance was?

A. He went to get a permit from the Chief of Police for a parade.

Q. Was he ordered to do that?

A. He was ordered to do so by the Strike Committee.

Q. By whom?

A. By the Strike Committee.

Q. And can you state whether on that occasion also he [4966] began as Chairman of the meeting and was then relieved?

A. Yes, I believe he was.

Q. Now, you mentioned that you were away from town for two or three days, I think you said, in connection with some Modesto cases. During what part of the strike did that occur?

A. During, oh, I would say just about the middle of the strike.

Q. Would that be some time in the month of June?

A. Yes, prior to the general strike.

Q. You mentioned that on some 30 or 40 occasions you were in the chambers of a Judge in connection with arranging for the release of arrested strikers. On any of those occasions, Mr. Heiner, were you arranging for bail or release of a goup of men at one time, that is, more than one?

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

A. Yes; on numerous occasions more than one man.

Q. Can you give your best recollection of the maximum number of men who at one time you were arranging bail or release for?

A. I believe on July 5th, the morning of July 5th, we had approximately between 70 and 80 arrests that day.

Q. And that occasion when you were arranging for the release of those 70 or 80 men, that would represent one occasion of your going to court; is that correct? A. That is correct.

Q. Or going to court chambers. [4967]

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, you mentioned that there were two days that you recall that the Strike Committee did not meet. Was July 4th one of them?

A. July 4th and July 5th.

Q. Any others?

A. That is to the best of my knowledge.

Q. Well, now, did anything unusual happen on July 5th with respect to the—withdraw that. Where were the strike Committee meetings held?

A. 113 Steuart Street.

Q. Headquarters of the Union?

A. Correct.

Q. Was there anything unusual that occurred on July 5th at the union hall?

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

A. Yes. The Police shot tear gas into it.

Mr. Gladstein: I think the Court can take judicial notice of the fact that July 4th was Independence Day.

Presiding Inspector: I think so.

Mr. Gladstein: I think that is all.

Recross Examination

By Mr. Myron:

Q. You were a member of the Defense Committee you were a member of the Strike Committee, is

A. The Defense Committee was part of the Strike Committee. [4968]

Q. And being a member of the Defense Committee you were a member of the Strike oCmmittee, is that true? A. That is correct.

Q. And the matter was brought to your attention first as a member of the Defense Committee?

Presiding Inspector: What matter?

Mr. Myron: The matter of accepting aid from the ILD. A. Correct.

By Mr. Myron:

Q. And subsequently brought before the Strike Committee? A. That is correct.

Q. By Mr. Dietrich? A. Yes, sir.

Q. The Chairman of your Committee——

Presiding Inspector: I think he testified to that.

Mr. Myron: That is right.

By Mr. Myron:

Q. How do you recall that your absence during this Modesto case occurred in the middle of July?

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

Mr. Gladstein: He didn't say "July". He said "June."

Mr. Myron: In the middle of the strike.

A. It was prior to the general strike.

By Mr. Myron:

Q. That is July 16 to 19 were the dates of the general strike?

A. I believe that is correct. [4969]

Q. Some time prior to that?

A. Some time prior to that.

Q. Well, would it be the beginning of the strike on May 9? A. No, sir.

Q. What date would you place the Modesto case?

A. Pardon me—Modesto? Did I say Modesto?

Presiding Inspector: I think you did.

By Mr. Myron:

Q. Didn't you?

A. Well, I may have. I evidently became confused then. The Modesto case—that was where the men were arrested on the Standard Oil premises—I believe that was after the 1934 strike. The case that I was referring to was in Santa Rosa when I went away with counsel.

By Mr. Myron:

Q. You say the Modesto case occurred after the 1934 strike? A. Yes.

Q. Isn't it a fact that the Modesto case occurred prior to the 1934 strike, or right at the beginning of it? A. No, sir.

Q. Are you sure of that?

(Testimony of Fred Heiner.)

A. I am sure of it. I think the men had returned to work and the men were working when the Modesto case occurred. [4970] I was in error. If I said "Modesto" I meant Santa Rosa.

Q. It was your testimony that you remembered being absent during the Modesto case, which you say occurred about the middle of the strike, is that right?

Mr. Gladstein: Just a moment——

Presiding Inspector: He wanted to correct that.

Mr. Myron: I will let him correct it. I want to get his original testimony.

Mr. Gladstein: He already corrected it.

Presiding Inspector: It may be he is confused between the two events, and maybe not; but whatever he said is on the record.

A. The Modesto case definitely occurred after the 1934 strike. The case that I was referring to was the Santa Rosa case.

Mr. Myron: I think that is all, your Honor.

Mr. Gladstein: That is all, your Honor.

(Witness excused.)

Mr. Gladstein: If it is of any importance in the record—I don't know as it is actually material, but probably counsel has a record of this—the Modesto case I recollect occurred in connection with another strike in 1935.

Presiding Inspector: Of course, we can't take that as proof. I mean we cannot take the statement as any proof of it.

Call your next witness. [4971]

Raise your right hand.

COLE JACKMAN

called as a witness on behalf of the Alien, having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Presiding Inspector: Give your name and address to the reporter.

The Witness: Cole Jackman—J-a-c-k-m-a-n.

Direct Examination

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Where is your residence?

A. Portland, Oregon.

Q. And what is your occupation?

A. I am a longshoreman.

Q. How long have you been following that occupation? A. Since 1925.

Q. In the City of Portland? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you the holder of any office or position in the Longshore Union? A. Yes.

Q. What position do you hold?

A. I am a member of the Local Labor Relations Committee, and a member of the Coast Labor Relations Committee.

Q. Have you held any other office in the Local Union?

A. Yes; I was a Business Agent during 1940, and previous to that I was a member of the Local Labor Relations [4972] Committee; also some other local Union Committees.

Q. Were all those positions, that is, on the Local Labor Relations Committee, Business Agent, and so on, positions to which you are elected?

A. Yes; that is correct.

(Testimony of Cole Jackman.)

Q. Now, Mr. Jackman, you have been in court during this hearing, have you not?

A. Yes; on three or four different occasions.

Q. Were you present in court when Mr. Cannalonga testified? A. No, I was not.

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, in view of that statement—this is the second witness counsel here told us has been in the court room during this hearing. The other witness was Schmidt. It appears that the rule has been violated.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. The Presiding Inspector can take that into consideration, but I don't think it is a reason for excluding the testimony. Go ahead.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Jackman, when was the last time that you were in court?

A. I believe it was Monday morning. I was here until they adjourned for lunch.

Q. Do you recall who was on the stand that day?

A. Henry Schmidt. [4973]

Q. Now, since that time you have not been here, is that correct? A. No, sir.

Presiding Inspector: That is correct?

The Witness: That is correct.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, do you know a man by the name of Maurice J. Cannalonga?

A. Yes, I know who he is. I knew him casually before, and I had seen him, rather, I don't know him personally but I know who he is.

(Testimony of Cole Jackman.)

Q. Have you had occasion to personally meet with and talk to him during recent weeks?

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Del Guercio: With whom?

Mr. Gladstein: Cannalonga.

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to any further questioning of this witness along that line.

Presiding Inspector: Ask the question, and don't answer until Mr. Del Guercio has an opportunity to object.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. When was the last time you saw Mr. Cannalonga?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

A. Sunday, May 4th.

By Mr. Gladstein: [4974]

Q. With reference—how do you fix that date, that Sunday?

A. Well, I know it was a Sunday. It was the Sunday before he disappeared. I think he disappeared on Wednesday, and that was the preceding Sunday.

Q. Where did you see Mr. Cannalonga that day?

A. On board the West Cussetta, the ship that he was working on.

Q. What time of the day was it that you saw him?

A. It was about 7:30 in the evening.

Q. And how did you happen to see him?

(Testimony of Cole Jackman.)

A. Well, I met Rosco Craycraft in a grocery store down on Third Stret in Portland, there at Maleti's Brothers Grocery, and he was waiting for Cannalonga to either come up or telephone him. He was supposed to have been there at 7:00. About 7:20 Rosco asked me if I would go down and see what was holding Blackie up.

Q. When you refer to "Rosco" you are referring to Rosco Craycraft? A. Yes.

Q. Have you known him long?

A. Yes; I have known him for many years.

Q. Now, when Mr. Craycraft asked you to see Mr. Cannalonga did he tell you where you could find him? A. Yes, he did.

Q. What did he tell you? [4975]

A. He told me he was on the West Gussetta, and this boat was down at Pier B, Terminal 1. That is a dock in Portland.

Q. And do you know why Craycraft asked you to go to Cannalonga, rather than go himself?

Mr. Myron: I object to this, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: If he knows he can tell.

A. He was waiting for Cannalonga——

Presiding Inspector: This is all in the record.

A. (Continuing): ——waiting for Cannalonga to meet him there at this grocery store, and it was past the time when Cannalonga was supposed to have arrived there, and he didn't want to leave because he thought Cannalonga might telephone or be on his way up, so he waited there and I went down to see what was holding him up.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. All right. How did you go down there?

A. I drove down in my car.

Q. Where was the West Cussetta docked at that time? A. Terminal No. 1.

Q. What did you do when you got down to Terminal No. 1?

A. Well, I looked up Blackie Cannalonga. He was an electrician on board the ship.

Q. Where did you go to find him?

A. Well, I went on the ship and I asked one of the [4976] fellows if he was aboard, and he said "Yes." He was in the Chief's quarters, I think, or some room close to his own, and I found him there.

Q. Do you remember who it was that you asked, who was the person who you spoke to when you asked where Cannalonga could be found?

A. No. He was some, looked like a fireman, or some member of the crew.

Q. Where did you find Cannalonga?

A. I believe it was in the Chief Engineer's quarters. There were two or three fellows in there.

Q. Do you know who they were?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Was Cannalonga there? A. Yes.

Q. What took place?

(Testimony of Cole Jackman.)

A. Well, I introduced myself to him. I didn't know if he remembered me or not. I had just seen him a couple of times previously. He apparently knew me. We went to his room and talked for a while.

Q. How long were you with him that evening?

A. About half an hour, I would say.

Q. What took place in his room?

A. Well, I told him that Rosco was waiting for him up at Maletis Brothers; and he told me that he was stuck there on the job and would have to work that night. He was the electrician. [4977] The winches had broken down during the day and he said he would have to work until about midnight.

That was why he didn't show up.

Q. What other conversation did you have with him?

A. Well, we talked about several different things. I told him that I had been down in San Francisco for the past two or three months as a member of the Coast Committee——

Q. (Interposing): Coast Committee for what?

A. The Coast Labor Relations Committee, and——

Mr. Myron: (Interposing) I object to this conversation as not being material at all.

Presiding Inspector: I can't see its materiality.

Mr. Gladstein: It will shortly appear to be. It is simply that I don't wish to lead the witness.

(Testimony of Cole Jackman.)

Presiding Inspector: So far it is immaterial.

Mr. Myron: It is irrelevant also. There is no purpose in getting the conversation. The conversation is not admissible.

Presiding Inspector: No.

Mr. Gladstein: We will show its materiality or it is subject to a motion.

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead. I will allow it. I have disregarded the general rule as not having to lay a foundation for such evidence on account of the circumstances involving this case. [4978]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. You started to say, Mr. Jackman, that you were telling Mr. Cannalonga that you had been down in Court.

A. Yes. I told him that I had been down in San Francisco for two or three months as a member of the Coast Labor Relations Committee for the longshoremen. And I told him that I had had the opportunity to attend a few hearings here in the Bridges deportation. And he asked me if I had heard him testify, and I told him "No", but that I had read about it in the papers. And I told him that I was a little surprised at his testimony, and——

Q. (Interposing): Now, did he say to you——

Mr. Myron: (Interposing) Let him finish.

Mr. Gladstein: All right.

A. (Continuing): Well, he told me, he said "I hope that you fellows know the kind of a spot that

(Testimony of Cole Jackman.)

I was in". He says, "The FBI had the heat on me" and he says "I had to do pretty much what they told me to do."

Q. Was anything else said concerning the FBI on that occasion?

A. No. I didn't go into it any further. He told me that he had told Rosco and you about it.

Q. When did you leave Mr. Cannalonga that evening?

A. Well, I guess it was about 8:00 o'clock.

[4979]

Q. Before you left did he give you any message to be delivered to anybody?

A. Well, he told me to tell Rosco to come down there and see him down on the ship, and he told me where I could find him—where to tell Rosco to find him.

Q. When you left Mr. Cannalonga what did you do?

A. I went back to this grocery store and told Rosco that he would have to go down on the ship to see Cannalonga. He told me to tell Rosco to see him back in the control room, electric control room opposite No. 4 hatch on the ship.

Presiding Inspector: Cannalonga did that?

The Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did you convey that information to Mr. Crayeraft? A. Yes.

Q. Then what, if anything did you do?

(Testimony of Cole Jackman.)

A. Well, I went home then: I left Craycraft shortly after I told him that.

Q. Have you seen Cannalonga since?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you heard from him in any way?

A. No.

Mr. Gladstein: Cross examination.

Cross Examination

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. How did you happen to be with Craycraft at that [4980] grocery store?

A. Well, I drop in there occasionally for a sandwich or a glass of beer. It is a place down near where a lot of the fellows——

Q. (Interposing): Do you want us to believe that it was just a casual meeting between you and Craycraft at that time?

A. Well, yes. I believe it was.

Q. It wasn't an arranged meeting?

A. Well, I am not certain. I may have talked to him on the phone. I know I wanted to get in touch with him.

Q. Did he ask you to come down to the grocery store?

A. I don't remember exactly. He may have. I know I talked to him on the phone, I believe it was, that morning.

Q. Then you didn't meet him there casually, did you?

A. Well, I am not certain. I drop in there quite frequently anyway.

(Testimony of Cole Jackman.)

Q. Well, on this particular occasion were you there by pre-arrangement?

A. Well, I don't remember exactly. I think I told Rosco that I would either see him at the union meeting or see him down there.

Q. Did he ask you to come down? Did Craycraft ask you to come down and meet him there at this grocery store?

A. Well, as I recall it, he told me that he would probably be in there that afternoon or that evening. [4981]

Q. Well now, you have gone over this matter several times since this occurred, haven't you?

Mr. Gladstein: With whom?

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. With Mr. Gladstein or anyone else?

A. No. I haven't gone over it.

Q. You haven't talked with Mr. Gladstein about it at all? A. Yes.

Q. When did you talk to Mr. Gladstein about it?

A. Well, I told him Monday afternoon when this hearing recessed.

Q. While you were in Court here?

A. No, after Court.

Q. When were you here in Court last?

A. Monday morning.

Q. Monday morning. Did you tell him then?

A. No. I told him after the hearing was over.

Q. After the hearing was over?

A. After it was recessed.

(Testimony of Cole Jackman.)

Q. And did Mr. Gladstein go over all of the circumstances surrounding your being here at this grocery store?

A. No. I just told him briefly that I had gone down to the ship to see why Cannalonga didn't keep his date with Craycraft.

Q. And he didn't ask you how you happened to be at the [4982] grocery store at that opportune time?

A. No. I told him that I had met Craycraft there. We didn't——

Q. (Interposing): Well now, just what did Craycraft tell you to do? A. When?

Q. At the time you met him there at the grocery store.

A. Well, he told me that he was waiting for Cannalonga to come up and see him there. He was supposed to be there at 7:00 o'clock.

Q. Did you talk about Cannalonga and about what Cannalonga had testified to at this hearing?

A. No.

Q. You didn't talk about anything like that?

A. No, we didn't.

Q. No conversation at all? A. No.

Q. About Cannalonga and what he had testified to? A. No.

Q. Had you ever talked to anybody regarding what Cannalonga had testified to prior to your meeting Craycraft at this grocery store?

A. No, I don't believe I did.

Q. Did you talk to Mr. Gladstein?

A. Just what I told you about. [4983]

(Testimony of Cole Jackman.)

Q. Prior to the time that you met Craycraft at this grocery store?

A. No, no. I did not.

Q. Did you talk to Mr. Rodman?

A. Who?

Q. Rodman?. A. No, sir.

Q. Kenneth Fitzgerald?

A. No, sir. I don't even know him.

Q. Jack Mowery? A. No.

Q. You know Mowery, don't you?

A. Yes. I know Mowery. He is a member of my Local.

Q. Did you talk to him about it? A. No.

Q. Was he there at the grocery store?

A. No, he wasn't.

Q. Did you see him at any time prior to that incident at the grocery store? A. Prior——

Mr. Gladstein: (Interposing) Do you mean at any time or when?

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. When was the last time that you saw him prior to meeting Craycraft at the grocery store?

A. Saw Mowery? [4984]

Q. Yes.

A. Oh, I don't know. I think he was at the union meeting. I was at my Local union meeting the last time I was up north.

Q. When was that? A. A week ago.

Q. With respect to the time that you met Craycraft at the grocery store.

(Testimony of Cole Jackman.)

A. Well, I think—I think that was the previous Wednesday.

Q. Now, your testimony is that you didn't talk to anybody about the Cannalonga matter up to the time you met Craycraft at the grocery store?

A. Not so far as I can recall. I read his testimony.

Q. Well, how far can you recall?

A. Well, I don't—I had no occasion to talk to anybody about it.

Q. Now, just what did Craycraft tell you to do?

A. He told me he was waiting for Cannalonga to come up to see him.

Q. And so what?

A. And so he said he was supposed to be here at 7:00 o'clock, and——

Q. (Interposing): Well, were you there at 7:00 o'clock?

A. Yes, I was there a little before 7:00. [4985]

Q. A little before. When did he tell you this? Before 7:00?

A. Yes, I think it was before 7:00. About——

Q. (Interposing): What else did he tell you?

A. Well, that's all. He said he was waiting to see Cannalonga.

Q. And that's all he said? A. Yes.

Presiding Inspector: No. That is all he told him.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. You say he sent you down to the boat to see what was holding up Cannalonga? A. Yes.

(Testimony of Cole Jackman.)

Q. Is that your testimony?

A. That's right.

Q. What did he say in regard to that, about going down to the boat?

A. That was about 7:20. He said something must have happened to hold Cannalonga up.

Q. When was this? Before 7:00?

A. No, after 7:00.

Q. After 7:00. How long after 7:00?

A. It was about a quarter after, 20 minutes after.

Q. It couldn't have been more than that?

A. No, I don't think so.

Q. About a quarter after 7:00 or 20 minutes after 7:00? [4986] A. Approximately.

Q. And were you with him all the time?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you talking? A. Yes.

Q. What were you talking about?

A. Oh, different things; the convention and union matters.

Q. And about a quarter after 7:00 or 20 minutes after 7:00 he told you to go down to do what?

A. To see what was holding up "Blackie" Cannalonga.

Q. Did he ask you to do anything else?

A. No.

Q. That's all he said? A. That's correct.

Q. And you were to go to the boat to see Cannalonga to see what was holding him up?

A. Yes.

Q. Nothing else?

(Testimony of Cole Jackman.)

A. Blackie was supposed to be there at 7:00 o'clock and he didn't show up.

Q. Well, you weren't to do anything else?

A. No, sir. I told you that already.

Q. Yes. All right. Now, you got down to the boat, didn't you? A. Yes. [4987]

Q. And you saw Cannalonga? A. Yes

Q. Why did you remain with him a half hour?

A. Because we were talking about a few things. He asked me some questions about some people that I know and he knows, and I told him something about the convention and he knew that I was a delegate.

Q. Weren't you worrying about Crayeraft waiting for you?

A. Well, I was only there about a half hour.

Q. You hadn't communicated with Crayeraft during that half hour, did you?

A. I got back shortly after 8:00 o'clock.

Q. Did you communicate with Crayeraft during that half hour you were with Cannalonga?

A. No. I couldn't communicate with him excepting to go back.

Q. But that's all that Crayeraft told you to go down there to do? To see what was holding up Cannalonga?

A. Absolutely. All that I went down there for was to see what was holding him up. Crayeraft thought he probably had to work, and that happened to be the case. The winches went haywire on the ship and Cannalonga had to work until midnight to repair them.

(Testimony of Cole Jackman.)

Q. Did this take you a half an hour to find out what was holding him up? [4988]

A. No, but he wanted to talk and he asked me about a few people that we both knew, and I told him a few things about the convention that we recently held.

Q. Well, as a matter of fact, you were sent down there to intimidate Cannalonga, weren't you?

A. I should say not.

Q. Huh?

A. I should say not.

Q. Was Cannalonga working when you found him in the chief engineer's quarters? A. Yes.

Q. What kind of work was he doing in the chief engineer's quarters?

A. Well, I think he was making out his time, his hourly time, or something.

Q. Time report? A. Yes, I think so.

Q. What was he doing?

A. Well, he was writing. I think he was making out the number of hours we was working or something.

Q. Do you call that "work"?

A. Well, I wouldn't know. I guess it all depends. They call it "work" in an office.

Q. Is that the kind of work that Cannalonga does?

A. No. I think he was just doing that for a few minutes. He had on his working clothes. [4989]

Q. When did you get back to the grocery store?

(Testimony of Cole Jackman.)

A. It was a little after 8:00, about five or ten minutes, after, maybe.

Q. Then you were gone more than a half hour, weren't you?

A. No, I don't think so. I was gone, well, possibly 40 minutes. But I drove down and back.

Q. How long did it take you to drive from the grocery store to the West Cussetta?

A. Oh, eight or ten minutes, I guess. It is about a mile and a half or two miles away.

Q. How long have you known Craycraft?

A. Well, I have known him about 10 years anyway, I think.

Q. Are you a member of the same Union?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you pal around together?

A. Oh, not a great deal. We know each other pretty well. We have been associated somewhat in union business.

Q. How well do you know Mowery?

A. About the same.

Q. As well as you know Craycraft?

A. Well, yes. I guess so.

Q. Have you three ever been together, you, Craycraft and Mowery?

A. Oh, I suppose we may have been.

Q. Gone out on parties together drinking? [4990]

A. No, sir.

Q. What? A. No, sir.

Q. Have you ever been a member of a goon squad?

A. No, sir.

(Testimony of Cole Jackman.)

Q. Of your Union? A. No.

Q. Who are the members of the goon squad in your Union?

A. I wouldn't know. We don't have them. We don't deal that way.

Q. You know what a "beef squad" is, don't you?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Have you ever been on a beef squad?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know if Craycraft has been on a beef squad? A. I know that he hasn't been.

Q. Huh?

A. I know that he hasn't been.

Q. Your Union doesn't have a beef squad?

A. No, sir. We don't.

Q. Does it have a Communist Party fraction?

A. Not so far as I know.

Q. Huh? How far do you know?

Mr. Gladstein: I think that question is ambiguous.

Mr. Del Guercio: He said not as far as he knows. It [4991] indicates that he might have some knowledge.

Presiding Inspector: No, I don't think it does. It denies knowledge in the usual manner of speech. "So far as I know" means——

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. (Interposing): How far does your knowledge go, then?

Presiding Inspector: It means that "that is as far as my knowledge goes".

(Testimony of Cole Jackman.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Are you active in the Union?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, do you know if there is a Communist fraction in that Union? A. I don't know.

Q. Would you know if there was?

A. Not necessarily.

Q. Would the officers of the Union know?

A. Well, I don't know whether they would or not. I don't see why they should know.

Q. Would you be interested in knowing if there is, if there was or if there is a fraction in your Local Union?

A. Well, I would like to know anything pertaining to the Union that affects the Union.

Q. Have you ever inquired? A. What?

[4992]

Q. Have you ever inquired if there was a Communist Party fraction within your Local Union?

A. No. I don't know who I would inquire to.

Q. You know Mowery, don't you?

A. Yes.

Q. Is he a member of the Communist Party?

A. I wouldn't know.

Q. Did you ever inquire? A. No.

Q. He is a member of your Union, isn't he?

A. Yes.

Q. And you have been friendly with him?

A. We've never discussed anything like that.

Q. Did Mr. Gladstein indicate to you while you were sitting in Court that you would be called as a witness?

(Testimony of Cole Jackman.)

A. No, sir. The first time he—I had any idea that I would be called was when I told him about going down to the ship.

Q. You mean he didn't know about you having been with Craycraft at this grocery store on—what day was that?

Mr. Gladstein: I think that is calling for a conclusion.

Mr. Del Guercio: After all, your Honor, we are trying to go into all of the circumstances here on the part of every actor in this episode and the part he has played.

Presiding Inspector: You needn't argue it.

Mr. Gladstein: Did you see what the form of the question [4993] is?

Presiding Inspector: The objection is as to the form of the question, not the subtsance.

Read it, please.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as follows:

"Q. You mean he didn't know about you having been with Craycraft at this grocery store on—what day was that?")

The Witness: Sunday.

Mr. Gladstein: How could this witness know whether I knew about something that is being inquired about.

Presiding Inspector: I think you had better reframe that question.

(Testimony of Cole Jackman.)

Mr. Del Guercio: The reason for that is——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): You split the question and said "What day was this"? and it rather destroyed the continuity, and I think you had better reframe the question.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. On what day was it that you were at this grocery store with Craycraft?

A. It was Sunday, the fourth of May.

Q. Sunday the fourth of May. Did you tell Mr. Gladstein at any time after Sunday, the fourth of May, that you were with Rosco Craycraft at that grocery store at that time?

A. Yes. I told him Monday, Monday afternoon after this hearing adjourned. I was in the hearing that morning and I [4994] told him.

Q. That is the first time?

A. That's right.

Q. Have you ever told anybody else that you were there at that grocery store at that time and place at any time after May 4th?

A. No, I don't think so.

Q. Mr. Rodman? A. No, sir.

Q. You know who Mr. Rodman is, don't you?

A. Yes, I know him just slightly. I haven't seen him for quite a while.

Presiding Inspector: I don't quite get this myself. This meeting with Craycraft happened on Sunday night?

The Witness: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: The 4th?

(Testimony of Cole Jackman.)

The Witness: That's right.

Presiding Inspector: Did you come down there that night?

The Witness: No.

Presiding Inspector: You speak of "Monday".

The Witness: Let me see.

Presiding Inspector: What Monday was that that you were here?

The Witness: Oh, that was last Monday; this last Monday.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, last Monday? [4995]

The Witness: Yes. I came down here, I think it was, the following Thursday after that Sunday.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. I was confused about the Sundays and Mondays.

The Witness: No. The Monday I referred to was last Monday, this last Monday.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Have you been reading the papers, to follow this case?

A. Yes, to some extent. I haven't read everything on it.

Q. Well, you have read about the disappearance of Cannalonga, haven't you? A. Yes.

Q. And you had seen Cannalonga on May 4th?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you tell anybody? A. No.

Q. What? A. No, sir.

Q. You didn't tell Mr. Gladstein?

A. No. I wasn't even——

Q. (Interposing): Mr. Margolis?

(Testimony of Cole Jackman.)

A. No, not until——

Q. (Interposing): Mr. Grossman?

A. No, sir. [4996]

Q. Mrs. King? A. No.

Q. Anybody connected with——

Mr. Gladstein (Interposing): One moment! Let the witness answer the question.

A. There is a lot of people seen Cannalonga after I seen him apparently. I understand he disappeared Wednesday morning. That was the Wednesday following the Sunday that I seen him, and I didn't even get down here until the following Thursday.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. And you want us to believe, having read about Mr. Cannalonga's disappearance and knowing the part that you took in having something to do with Mr. Cannalonga's—the taking of Mr. Cannalonga's so-called deposition there, that you didn't tell anybody that you had seen Cannalonga on May 4th? Is that correct? Is that what you want this Court to believe?

A. Well, I had nothing to do with taking any deposition. I mererly went down to see what was holding him up. It was entirely a casual meeting of me going down there. As a matter of fact, I didn't even want to go down because I was supposed to be home at 7:00 o'clock.

Q. Well, if it was so casual why did you spend a half hour with Cannalonga on that ship talking to him about this case, about what he had testified?

(Testimony of Cole Jackman.)

A. Well, you don't like to rush away from a fellow when [4997] he is talking and we talked about a few things. He asked me about a fellow that we both knew pretty well in Portland and what he was doing, and so forth.

Q. What fellow was that that you both knew in Portland. A. Moose Norbeck.

Q. Moose who? A. Norbeck.

Q. Is he a member of your Union?

A. He is a former member of our Union. He is now head of the Line Service Bureau there. He is a former business agent of the Local. He asked me what he was doing.

Mr. Del Guercio: This may be a repetition, if your Honor please, but I want the record to be clear on this point.

Presiding Inspector: All right.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. You didn't tell Mr. Gladstein or anybody connected with the Defense that you saw Cannalonga on May 4th and had this conversation, had the conversation that you had related, until last Monday?

A. No, I don't think I ever saw Mr. Gladstein until Monday.

Q. Well, is that correct, then?

Will you read my last question?

Presiding Inspector: There is an implied affirmative in that.

Mr. Del Guercio: Sir? [4998]

(Testimony of Cole Jackman.)

Presiding Inspector: There is an implied agreement with your question in there. He adds the reason.

The Reporter: Do you still wish the question?

Presiding Inspector: No, I don't think it is necessary.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. And you told it to Gladstein on Monday, last Monday? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is the only time you spoke to anyone concerning this incident, concerning the incident about which you have testified?

A. Well, that was the first time I had talked to anybody about it, was Monday.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is all.

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Since that first time when you talked to me, Mr. Jackman, have you talked to me again before going on the stand? A. Yes.

Q. And what was the nature of that discussion?

A. Well, I just told you a little more in detail what had happened. That was today at noon. [4999]

Q. Now, on the day that you talked to me and told me about your having seen Cannalonga, did I give you any advice with respect to leaving Court?

A. Yes.

Q. What was it?

A. You said I had better not sit in any more because you might want to use me as a witness.

Q. Now, when you went down to see Mr. Cannalonga that Sunday evening did you have any weapons with you? A. No, sir.

(Testimony of Cole Jackman.)

Q. Did you make any show of force?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you do anything in the way of coercing Mr. Cannalonga? A. Not a bit.

Q. Was Mr. Cannalonga apparently afraid of you?

A. No, he wasn't. He was with a couple of other fellows in the Chief's room and he asked me into his own room, shook hands with me, and he apparently knew me, although I didn't know him very well, although I had seen him a time or two.

Q. Did he seem friendly at all?

A. Yes; very friendly.

Q. Did he seem afraid of Rosco Craycraft in any way? A. No, he did not.

Mr. Gladstein: That is all.

Presiding Inspector: Anything more? [5000]

Mr. Del Guercio: No, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: You are excused.

Mr. Gladstein: That is all, Mr. Jackman.

(Witness excused.)

Presiding Inspector: Next witness.

Mr. Gladstein: May we have a recess, your Honor?

Presiding Inspector: Yes. We will take a short recess.

(Whereupon a short recess was taken.)

Presiding Inspector: Now, we will proceed.

I understand you are going to take up the testimony of Mr. Bridges.

Mr. Del Guercio: The reading of it?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mrs. King: When I terminated this testimony on the last occasion I was suggesting that I intended to read from page 3075 to 3092.

Mr. Del Guercio: Does the Court have the testimony before him?

Presiding Inspector: No. What is this about, Mrs. King?

Mrs. King: It is the background of the 1934 strike and the explanation of a tie-up with the MWIU, reference to which occurs on the second page of this, and I contend that the entire matter serves to give a background of the situation which gave rise to the cooperation between Mr. Bridges and the Marine Workers Industrial Union; and also it explains somewhat the Waterfront Worker and its policy. [5001]

Mr. Myron: I think at that time there was an objection made by the Government that that had no reference at all to the admissions introduced by the Government.

Presiding Inspector: I will have to look at it.

Mr. Myron: I think you had gone over it.

Presiding Inspector: I will refresh my memory.

Mrs. King: I don't believe there had been a ruling.

(Whereupon Mr. Del Guercio handed the Presiding Inspector a copy of the testimony referred to, taken at the former hearing.)

Mrs. King: From the beginning of page 3075—may I call to your Honor's attention page 3074, and that was all read by the Government, beginning at the bottom of page 3073 and through 3074.

Now, I am proposing to read 3075 through 3092.

Presiding Inspector: How far do you want to read?

Mrs. King: Through 3092, down to the last question on that page.

Presiding Inspector: I can't see how that is material to what they have read. It is an interesting story. Of course, I may not grasp what they have read. It is very difficult to rule on these things without having——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): What we read had to do with two subjects; one, the Waterfront Worker, and the other the Marine Workers Industrial Union.

Presiding Inspector: This is a general history of the [5002] strike.

Mrs. King: That is correct.

Presiding Inspector: You don't want to offer that as a general subject for discussion here, do you?

Mrs. King: Yes, I do, and for this reason: That the conduct of Mr. Bridges in relation to the Marine Workers Industrial Union was due to the facts surrounding the outbreak of the strike. What he would have done in another connection with reference to the Marine Workers Industrial Union might have been very different. But here he was confronted with a very interesting situation, presented in these pages, and he acted as he did because of this situation. Now, to just give his conduct, without the facts which gave rise to that conduct, it seems to me to give a one-sided picture of the situation. I think he is entitled to his defense, if they put in the admission.

Presiding Inspector: Where were these admissions?

Mrs. King: I am not sure that I can find them. But they did, in general, suggest that Mr. Bridges cooperated in having people join the Marine Workers Industrial Union, which he said he did because the SUP was not backing the strike; whereas the Marine Workers Industrial Union went out the day after the strike, and that because of the intense need for cooperation at that time, because of the seriousness of the situation, he felt that any union that was out on strike, it was better to [5003] get people in it regardless of its political views, than it was to try and get people into a union that was refusing to cooperate in the strike.

The picture of the outbreak of the strike, and the cooperation of the Marine Workers Industrial Union, is brought out in these pages and it seems to me that it is most relevant to the question of why Mr. Bridges conducted himself as he did.

I am sorry I don't have the exact reference to what the Government read, but I think the Government has made plain that their interest is in his cooperation with the Marine Workers Industrial Union.

Presiding Inspector: Yes; that is true.

Mr. Del Guercio: I don't find any reference at all to the matters that we read into the record that Bridges gave as a reason for cooperating and affiliating with the Marine Workers Industrial Union because of the conditions of the strike.

Presiding Inspector: Let me see—there is a statement as to the date that the Marine Workers went out, I think, here.

Mr. Del Guercio: 3074.

Presiding Inspector: 3074.

Mr. Del Guercio: Having in mind also, if the Court please, that we read these matters into the record as admissions of the Alien, admissions against interest.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mrs. King: I think the material read by the Government [5004] was on page 2605 through 2608, and then starting again on 2608 through 2614. It is really 2605 through 2614, with one line omitted, which I subsequently read.

Then there is some more along the same line on pages 2589 through 2591.

I would also like to call your attention to the two or three lines on 2489.

Presiding Inspector: 2489. I have read that.

Mrs. King: I think that is the simplest, shortest place where it comes out clearly.

Presiding Inspector: 2489?

Mrs. King: Beginning with the question:

"Q. Were you ever a member of the MWIU?"

[5005]

That's the shortest.

Presiding Inspector: "Were you ever a member"? I have it.

Mrs. King: Just through "Yes, but was never a member."

Now, it seems to me we are entitled to show why he worked closely with the MWIU, and I think these pages indicate that; the stress of the situation.

Presiding Inspector: Was there any objection to this testimony before Dean Landis?

Mrs. King: No, there was no objection to it. As Dean Landis said, there were very few objections throughout that hearing.

Presiding Inspector: On legal questions.

Mr. Del Guercio: If the Court please, assuming that what Harry Bridges admitted or the admissions of Harry Bridges that we introduced are sufficient to show that he was affiliated with the Marine Workers Industrial Union, certainly under such circumstances the reasons why he affiliated himself with the Marine Workers Industrial Union would be of no significance.

Presiding Inspector: Well, under the claim of Mr. Bridges' counsel they would say, I think, that that has some bearing on whether it was such affiliation as is meant by that term within the statute.

Mr. Del Guercio: Would the stress of circumstances under [5006] which a person joins a prescribed organization or affiliates himself——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I am not ruling on it. I am saying that that would be the contention, I think——

Mrs. King: (Interposing) If the Court please —excuse me.

Presiding Inspector: (Continuing) ——of the counsel.

Go ahead.

Mrs. King: If the Court please, Mr. Del Guercio has talked about "joining" an organization. We are trying to explain with reference to an organization where there is no testimony that he joined whatsoever why he worked with it. And it would seem to me on the question of affiliation the reason why he worked with an organization might be very relevant on the question as to whether he was or was not affiliated. In other words, you might not have any kind of a permanent relationship with an organization and still, under the stress of circumstances, might work up a temporary cooperation which would not amount to affiliation.

I think what Mr. Del Guercio has said made much clearer than anything that I have said the need for reading in the material which explains what the Government took as admissions. The Government's position is, Mr. Bridges admits working closely; the reasons for that are immaterial. Because they have nothing to do with whether he was or wasn't affiliated. [5007]

I say, as your Honor suggested I would say, that they have a very clear bearing on whether he was or wasn't affiliated.

Presiding Inspector: Well, Mr. Del Guercio. I wouldn't want to pass on that question, upon a ruling on the exclusion of evidence. That is a question that needs consideration.

Mr. Del Guercio: I mentioned that merely for the Court to consider, not as the sole ground, of course.

Mr. Myron: Of course, it is the Government's contention, if your Honor please, that this matter which the Alien is now attempting to read into the record has no reference or in no way explains or qualifies the testimony which the Government introduced as admissions at a prior hearing. I don't think there is any reference to the Waterfront Worker or any reference to the MWIU in the testimony which the Alien is now attempting to read into the record.

Mrs. King: There are two references to the Marine Workers Industrial Union in the pages that I am intending to read.

Mr. Myron: If that is so, if there are references we will allow those two pages to be read in. But not the complete story. I don't remember the evidence, but as I remember it, there were no references.

Presiding Inspector: Where are those?

Mrs. King: On page 3075 just below the middle of the page. [5008]

Presiding Inspector: That is the one that says "They were then on strike?"

Mrs. King: Yes. And on page 3077, about the middle of the page, there is another reference to the MWIU, just before the long paragraph, the end of the first long paragraph and before the second.

Presiding Inspector: "That together with our picket lines and together with the pressure of the MWIU already on strike forced the seamen to call the strike."

Mrs. King: It seems to me——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) It really is pretty remote from what the Government introduced.

Mrs. King: I don't see that it is remote, because it seems to me that his relationship with the MWIU was conditioned by the things that are set forth on these pages. That is the explanation for it. In other words, they, in my opinion, want to put in the admission but they don't want to give the background against which the facts of the admission occur.

Presiding Inspector: I will read this over again more carefully and rule on it tomorrow.

Mrs. King: All right.

Presiding Inspector: What is the next one?

Mrs. King: I want to read in pages 3100 to 3104. May I explain in that connection that the Government went into a very extensive consideration in the admissions that they put [5009] in as to the character of the MWIU constitution, and this was the explanation by the Alien of the fact that that constitution was very little different from the A. F. of L. constitution. And I believe that we have a right to show that.

Presiding Inspector: How far did they read?

Mrs. King: Beginning at the first question on 3100 through——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Is this what you want to read or is this what the Government read?

Mrs. King: This is what I want to read. Through the middle of page 3104 to where Trial Examiner Landis comes in. I am basing my interest in that on the matter read by the Government.

Mr. Del Guercio: What particular portion read by the Government, so that we may properly follow?

Mrs. King: The portion read by the Government with reference to the constitution of the Marine Workers Industrial Union, which I am now looking for the page reference to. The part that I have in mind is the part that the Government read on pages 2617 through page 2628. In fact, the first question that I am proposing to read has a specific reference to the other testimony.

Mr. Del Guercio: We have no objection to the first one then, but we do to the rest of it.

Mr. Myron: We don't have a record to follow.

Presiding Inspector: No. [5010]

Mr. Myron: We don't know what question she refers to.

Presiding Inspector: I think I will exclude that.

Mrs. King: If your Honor please, here——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I don't see what difference it makes what may be in other constitutions or that a bringing about of a socialistic age is of any importance here. I think it was Juarez who was asked when the socialistic age would come, and he replied that "It has already come. We are in it now."

Mrs. King: I don't know how to answer that question. I am not sure that the reference is correct, but presumably it is.

Presiding Inspector: It may not be, but at any rate is was said by some prominent French socialist.

Mrs. King: Yes, I think it was. But in this instance you have a situation that the Government read pages and pages——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) You know, perhaps you noticed as we were going over these matters I have interposed several times and asked witnesses what they meant by "revolution."

Mrs. King: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: You have noticed that. Now, of course, that word is an ambiguous term. It may be figuratively used, it may be used in the literal sense of a revolt by force and arms. It is very customary to say that the world is in a revolution and has been for some time. This discussion, it [5011] seems to me, is remote from the matter which has been introduced by the Government.

Mrs. King: The matter that has been introduced by the Government on pages 2617 and following?

Presiding Inspector: It seems to be so.

Mrs. King: Because the Government, it seems to me, in the instant hearing makes a lot of capital about what the Alien says was insignificant in the Marine Workers Industrial Union constitution. He said he wasn't concerned with all these big phrases. Now, it seems to me——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) They were there, though.

Mrs. King: So are they in the other constitution.

Presiding Inspector: No. They can be treated otherwise, and these he refers to are in Australia and the A. F. of L., and so forth. I don't think it adds anything.

Mrs. King: It seems to me the explanation concerns his attitude toward the Marine Workers Union constitution.

Presiding Inspector: Supposing it does perhaps explain the workings of his particular mind toward that?

Mrs. King: There are ten pages of the Government's admissions having to do with the operations of his mind on precisely that question. And it seems to me, if we are interested in the operations of his mind, we are interested in why his mind operated that way. [5012]

Presiding Inspector: Where is that matter that you refer to?

Mrs. King: Pages 2617 through pages 2628.

Presiding Inspector: 2617?

Mrs. King: Yes. [5013]

Presiding Inspector: I think the statement that was introduced is a very able argument on the proposition. I do not think it is affected by these examples of these other unions. I don't see very much harm, however, in having them in as a part of this general argument which the witness in the other proceeding gave.

Of course, it can be argued that from his statement —and I don't say that you have to accept this—that he is very able, and that he has a very good understanding of all the causes and picked out those that were correct, and those that were incorrect, or those which were dangerous and ought to be changed—he doesn't use that word "dangerous"—with extraordinary acumen.

I don't think it will add much, but I will accept these statements in comparison if you really want them. They are illustrative of his argument; that is all.

Mr. Del Guercio: I understood that you excluded them.

Presiding Inspector: I have been sort of thinking aloud, Mr. Del Guercio: I don't see that they add anything to what is already there. I don't say that they are not in a general way on the subject of these preambles in labor union constitutions.

Do you want to read them?

Mrs. King: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: I will let you read them. Go ahead.

Mr. Del Guercio: Did you say you excluded them? [5014]

Presiding Inspector: No. I will admit these matters.

Mr. Del Guercio: May I be permitted to be heard?

Presiding Inspector: Certainly.

Mr. Del Guercio: It seems that the matters admitted by the Court, and I think even counsel will admit, are not of sufficient importance to be wasting so much time on them. Every time one of them is requested to be read, you make a ruling, thinking out loud, as you said, and then there is about ten or fifteen minutes of argument over the same matter.

Presiding Inspector: We are adding to it now. I am at fault partially, I know. It seemed to me that the part that you introduced here is a very clear statement on the part of the witness as to his understandings and interpretation from his point of view of the Marine Workers' constitution. Now, in the course of that there are certain phrases which he says, which it is claimed are also somewhat similarly used by other organizations. That is the claim.

Now, I think on the other side it may be argued that they are not the same; that these clauses in the Australian organizations, and in the A. F. of L., do not show clearly, at least indicate the approximate aim of what is called the Workers' struggle.

Now, I think an argument can be made either way on that, and so that we may have the whole thing before us I thought best to receive it. [5015]

Mr. Del Guercio: You believe they are sufficiently connected as to——

Presiding Inspector: I think they are somewhat remote, but perhaps they lend some explanation, perhaps they lend some aid to the interpretation which you have put on the matter.

I will take it.

Mrs. King: Reading now from page 3100:

"Q. You gave testimony yesterday about the class struggle, which you have had experience in, and there was read to you by Mr. Shoemaker a preamble from the constitution of the Marine Workers Industrial Union, and you were asked as to whether you approved or disapproved of all or portions of it. Do you recall that testimony?

"A. Yes.

"Q. In your experience is it the usual or an unusual thing for unions of every kind in the A. F. of L., Railway Brotherhood, Independent or otherwise, to express such sentiments in their preamble to their constitution?

"A. I think it is the usual thing. Practically every union in Australia, for example, in their preamble points out——

"Mr. Shoemaker: (Interrupting) In Australia?

"The Witness: Yes. All the unions in Australia are generally industrial unions and in the preambles of practically [5016] every one of their constitutions they mention somewhere that the ultimate aim of the workers is a change of society to a socialistic form. I don't think any of them that I can recall specifically say how it will be done, but they lay down the general aims.

"I think most A. F. of L. unions, in their preambles you will find similar things. In the American Federation of Labor constitution itself you will find that the preamble of the constitution deals with the class struggle and says that it must continue until the workers take over, if I recall the wording correctly, something along that line, until the workers get their proper share of the products of their labor.

"Q. I am referring now to the preamble to the constitution of the American Federation of Labor.

"Is this what you mean?

" 'Whereas, the struggle is going on in all the nations of the civilized world between the oppressors and the oppressed of all countries, a struggle between the capitalist and the laborer, which grows in intensity from year to year and will work disastrous results to the toiling millions if they are not combined for mutual protection and benefit.

" 'It, therefore, behooves the representatives of the trade and labor unions of America in convention [5017] assembled, to adopt such measures and disseminate such principles among the mechanics and laborers of our country as will permanently unit them to secure the recognition of rights to which they the justly entitled.

" 'We, therefore, declare ourselves in favor of the formation of a thorough Federation, embracing every trade and labor organization in America, organized under the trade union system.'

"Is that the sort of preamble that you have in mind?

"A. Yes. I think that preamble is common in practically all constitutions.

"Q. And to your mind does that preamble express the existence and recognized existence of what you termed in your discussion yesterday a class struggle?

"A. I think it expresses it better than I did.

"Q. Are there many unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor which have similar provisions in their constitutions?

"A. I don't know if there are many left in the American Federation of Labor. I would say that the majority of the unions that withdrew from there and went with the CIO, in most cases had such preambles, but I am not quite sure if they continue in the constitutions of the ones that are remaining. Generally, you will find that, or some reference to it. No trade unionist denies the existence of the class struggle. [5018]

"Q. Now, recognition of the existence of a class struggle, does that necessarily mean that the attitude of these unions, or of yourself, is generally along this line: That there must be a revolution by force and violence to effect a change in the situation?

"A. Not at all. The difference—in other words, that is one of the basic differences between a company union and a bona fide union. You will notice that the foundation and all the principles of a company union—if you examine a company union's constitution you will find in there it saying such things as"——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) "such as."

Mrs. King: Yes, Excuse me

" . . . such as that the employer and the employee have everything in common; that the employers' interests are the employees' interests, and so on. That is what you find in the preamble of a company union. But when you get a bona fide labor union you can't help but see that the employers' interests and the employees' interests are not the same. Every time the employees get a raise in wages the employers get less profits so it is impossible, it can't be done, and everybody recognizes that.

"Q. Despite that fact, or, I should say, in view of that fact that the interests of the employer and the employees are dissimilar and opposed to each other, as you have explained, [5019] would you say that the intention in these preambles is to express a revolutionary attitude involving the concept of force and violence?

"A. No; definitely not. I have never heard anybody doing it, or construing it that way.

"Q. Did you intend in your discussion yesterday on the subject of the class struggle to give the understanding that you believed that these changes, for which a desire is expressed in this preamble, must be brought about by forcible and destructive means?

"A. No. I don't think I said that anywhere. I think I explained that. It was certainly not my intention."

Presiding Inspector: I think we will stop now at this point until tomorrow morning at ten o'clock.

PROCEEDINGS

Presiding Inspector: In respect to the reading of the long history, I don't want to pass on the effect of that testimony, on a ruling on the testimony, and I will, therefore, let you read it and will reserve whether it has any effect as a question of decision.

Mrs. King: Thank you, your Honor.

I am reading now from the top of page 3075:

(Reading from testimony of previous hearing.)

"Q. I didn't mean only for the paper itself, but the strike; did you get any financial help?

"A. Oh, yes. The strike was supported after it got rolling along pretty well—was supported all over. All the unions came through with very large and frequent contributions. As a matter of fact, when we ended the strike we had more money in the treasury than when we began.

"Q. Now, did various individuals come and help you with the strike?

"A. Oh, dozens of them. I can't recall, but at times like that a lot of people came down and would offer this or that, or volunteer their help, technical and otherwise. I can recall that three people came down and turned over brand-new machines to us; we were a little skeptical, we thought there might be something wrong with them.

"A lot of people came down: Stenographers or bookkeepers and publicity experts, some college people came over and [5022] offered to help and aid, and it was quite an affair. There was a lot of that kind of stuff.

"Q. And did you use all of this help that was offered you?

"A. Not all of it. For the first few days of the strike things were pretty hectic. There wasn't many men there that knew what it was all about, and it was all generally handled through me, until we—the first few days of the strike the great job was to get everybody off the job and to get the thing lined up, get the picket line established, get the committees functioning; so we didn't pay much attention at that time.

"But later on we used a lot of this help, except we was able to select them and tell some we didn't need them, and some that we did, and they done us a tremendous amount of good.

"Q. And most of the people who went on strike at the beginning were members of the International Longshoremen's Association?

"A. All of them.

"Q. Nobody else went out?

"A. Nobody else struck. We were the only ones that struck on May 9; no other union.

"Q. When was the next time anybody went out?

"A. May 10, the Marine Workers Industrial Union. [5023] Following them were the Association of Machinists and Boilermakers.

"Q. When did they go out?

"A. Around May 12, and then—they were the next.

"Q. And then what?

"A. They were the next. The Machinists and Boilermakers were the next organization—they didn't strike; they just quit working on the waterfront and refused to handle any struck work. The employers immediately started to put strike breakers to work, and the unions refused to work anywhere on the waterfront as long as those strike breakers were there; but they worked elsewhere, of course.

"Q. And then did other groups go out?

"A. May 15, the Seamen struck. At that time, of course—around May 12, the employers suspended all coastwise shipping service. In other words, they shut down all coastwise shipping; their strategy being that they could fight the strike better by not having coastwise vessels operating. That, together with our picket lines, and together with the pressure of the M. W. I. U. already on strike, forced the Seamen to call a strike.

"Of course, it has got to be understood that the Seamen at that time, with the so-called union they had, was under the ironclad control of—the iron control of reactionary officials, and when I went over there and tried to argue with those of- [5024] ficials, and say 'Now; this is your opportunity to rebuild your union back to where it was in 1921,' after all,

I was an old member of the Sailors Union—why, they practically threw us out of the office and said we should attend to our knitting.

"Eventually, however, we forced them to call an official strike, and that took place May 15, 1934.

"Q. Was that strike called as a result of your efforts or really because the Coastwise shipping had been called off?

"A. Well, the fact that the Coastwise ships shut down, that forced all seamen ashore from all coastwise ships, and helped; but I think it was mainly the results of my efforts. I am not a bit ashamed of it.

"Q. What was the coastwise shipping? Where did that go from and to?

"A. That was the ships that only run on the Pacific Coast; in other words, distinguished from ships, say, that would run to China, or intercoastal ships running from Baltimore, New York, Philadelphia, which we call intercoastal or deep water ships. The coastwise ships are the ships packing coastwise up and down the Pacific Coast.

"Q. Now, after the Seamen went out on strike on May 15, what was the next group that went out?

"A. Well, there was—the next groups were the licensed officers. The next particular group was the radio operators on board the ships. Following right behind them [5025] were the licensed officers, that is, the captains and the mates and the pilots on the ships, and the engine-room officers, the engineers. They struck somewhere around the middle of June; I think it was June 10.

"Q. Had any demands been made by any groups except the longshoremen?

"A. Not at that time.

"Q. And will you go on to develop the other groups as they went out?

"A. Well, by approaching the middle of June everything on the waterfront—all unions on the waterfront were on strike or in support of it. Two weeks after May 9, the Teamsters, which were a very important group and a key group in the strike voted to refrain from hauling to or from the waterfront. Now, that in effect was not a strike except on the waterfront; they hauled elsewhere in the city.

"The towboats—we managed to get the towboats to refrain from handling any ships worked or manned by strike breakers, and that just about completed the picture. So around the middle of June we had things pretty well sewed up, up and down the Pacific Coast. All groups on all ships on strike, although the ships and the ports were operating with strike breakers, generally speaking, as the strike was being felt and was very effective.

"It was an industrial strike. We had it organized pretty [5026] well by that time, and despite predictions that we were going to be beaten in two days everybody swung around the other way and started to predict it was going to last six months.

"Q. And during this period your demands on the employers continued the same as when the strike broke?

"A. No, we began to drop our demands then. We first of all agreed—Edward F. McGrady, the Assistant Secretary of Labor, was in the scene and attempting to mediate the strike. They were proposing arbitration, and we were refusing to arbitrate, particularly the issue of recognition of the union, and the union hiring hall, which was somewhat the same as a closed shop. We refused, all of us, to arbitrate for that reason.

"However, we did by that time agree to arbitrate hours and wages, but we still held on and refused to arbitrate the question of hiring halls. Then, of course, the other issue cropped up. By that time we had the seamen sufficiently well organized that we had drawn up a set of demands for them, and we came to an agreement before the middle of June that no one union would return to work by itself; we would all go back together, and that no one union would accept an agreement until we all had an agreement. That had been accomplished by around the 8th or 10th of June.

"Q. And what caused the spread of the strike? Up until that time it was purely maritime, marine workers' strike; [5027] isn't that correct?

"A. Well, it was purely a marine workers' strike up until July 15, when we had the general strike.

"Q. How did the strike spread?

"A. As a general strike?

"Q. Yes.

"A. Well, we got nowhere in negotiations. The negotiations for the employers were being handled by the Industrial Association. The Industrial Association was an association pledged to the American plan or open-shop plan, therefore they were determined not to give us any settlement of the strike that would do us any good.

"As a matter of fact, the only settlement they offered us was ones that we knew would completely eliminate every militant union off the waterfront; a settlement to return, for example, and keep the strike breakers on the job at the same time. In other words, settlements that were impossible.

"It was much better to fight and be completely beaten than to accept any of them. So negotiations did not get very far. Eventually they sat down and worked out another line of strategy, and that was to bring a tremendous amount of public opinion to bear. They started the Red scare business, this deportation hearing started then; that is when the first demands, I think, for my deportation came up, at that time.

"And the Industrial Association, after working up a lot [5028] of publicity with the able support of the press at that time, set a day when they were going to open the port. They had the Mayor of the city in full support of them, they had the police department—they were standing by with their orders—and so forth, and I think it was July 3, 1934, the date set to open the port. And what they meant by opening the port was to release the cargo from the docks the ships were working. They had enough strike breakers on the ships and on the docks to work the cargo, but it was piling up in the docks and there was no more room left on the docks, they were full and no more cargo could be put on the docks, and they had to find some way of getting it off the docks because the strike had bottled up.

"So when they talked about opening up the port it meant that they were going to hire strikebreakers for teamsters and remove the stuff from the docks. And on July 3 we sent out an emergency call to all unions in the city to come down and string a mass picket line along the entire waterfront. When that was done the police charged the picket line and removed them, and they run a little bit of freight out of two or three of the docks and they utilized it, of course, to proclaim in very glaring headlines that the port at last was open; mainly all directed, of course, to breaking the morale of the strikers.

"Well, I remember at that time I knew that they had made a foolish move. It was all very well to use strike breakers and a lot of publicity on us, and the old Red scare, [5029] but when they started to put strike breakers in the place of the teamsters' union, which was an old established and conservative union, and started to call the teamsters a bunch of Reds, it just didn't work. So we got then the full and complete cooperation of the teamsters, and that is when we really started to get organized, and that was the beginning of the spread of the strike from July 3 on.

"July 5 was the famous 'Bloody Thursday,' when the police began—they gave us a day off on July 4, while they engaged in a patriotic parade, and then the first attack took place again on July 5 at seven in the morning. I was in the strike committee, a meeting of the strike committee, and they packed two men in there who had been shot. The battle raged all that day, and when I say battle I mean that it was just a deliberate planned attack to shoot the men back to work, and anybody that knows anything about it knows that.

"Out of the 400 men that were shot; the majority of them were shot in the back. The two men that were killed were shot in the back. It was a deliberate planned murder by the police, and we are never going to forget it. Every July 5 we parade on the streets here so that they know we are not forgetting it.

"And that ended that night with the government calling out the National Guard. On July 9 we organized a mass [5030] burial of the two men that had been killed, and from then on began to organize a general strike which took place on July 16. The general strike was brought about and deliberately organized by us as a mass protest against the killing and the murder of the men on the waterfront, and it was successful.

"Q. When you say it was successful, what do you mean by that?

"A. I mean that it stopped the terror, it brought to the attention of the people just what was going on and who was responsible. It broke down the employers' position, where the people began to demand a settlement of the strike, and it brought into play all the forces of the labor movement; and if there hadn't been a settlement made at that time the strike would have spread.

"It also brought into play the forces of the Federal Government, where they realized apparently for the first time that the millions of dollars that they were putting into subsidize shipping lines were being used to purchase bullets and tear gas to shoot us down with. It is a matter of record now that the greatest purchasers of tear gas, shotguns and so forth, in 1934, were the waterfront employers of the Pacific Coast, and it was actually purchased with Federal money that they had gotten from Federal ships' subsidies.

"Q. Now, Mr. Bridges, was there any effort to take over the government at that time, or create a revolutionary [5031] situation, as a result of this general strike?

"A. When we organized for the general strike and put the leaflets out all over the country, some 200,000-odd, the leaflet contained the fact that there would be no attempt to interfere with such things as lights, electricity or gas; there would be no attempt to interfere with the movement of foodstuffs, the operation of creameries or bakeries; but all of those other things were going to be struck, and that is the way it eventually worked out.

"Of course, the city took the opportunity to cry a lot about taking over the country and taking over the city, and all that, and set up an emergency state of affairs, but it wasn't necessary. The guard was on there, there was martial law on the waterfront, there was tanks, light artillery, machine guns, barbed wire entanglements, sand bags and everything. It looked like a battleground, and it certainly looked like they wanted to take over the city, when all the men were asking at that time was a hiring hall of the union; that is all they were asking for at that time. They had forgotten wages, hours, and everything else, and was only asking for the hiring hall.

"And as far as taking over the city was concerned, the records of the general strike and what the program was is still available, and the way it was voted on.

"But of course, something happened at that time: [5032] William Randolph Hearst in London began to send daily cables, and the publishers—the newspaper publishers organized, headed by John Francis Neylan, and deliberately planned to lay a scare up and down the Pacific Coast of bloody revolution and the fact that we were attempting—the revolution was here and that the purpose of the whole thing was to take over the city."

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) Of course, your Honor——

Presiding Inspector: This isn't evidence and don't prove anything. It is only to show the attitude of this man's mind. I think it may be pertinent on that if that attitude is in question in the case, which isn't yet determined. This isn't proof of any fact. [5033]

Mr. Del Guercio: No, but I was questioning that it was even remotely connected with it.

Presiding Inspector: It was a part of the examination of Mr. Bridges in the other hearing. I will take it.

Mrs. King. "General Johnson went on the air and worked up a lynching spirit, and his exact words were that, 'We have to run these people out of town like rats.'

"Rossi and Governor Merriam were on the air calling for the blood . . ."

Presiding Inspector: Of course, it doesn't prove that any such thing happened. It is just as to the attitude of this man's mind.

Go ahead.

Mrs. King: " . . and the lynching of the strikers, and they tried to work up and they did work up such a spirit that it would have been foolish to try and continue the strike any longer. Every one of us seen that; and the general strike was called off.

"At the same time, the vigilantes were in action, with the collaboration of the police—I don't know about the collaboration part, but I notice that as each vigilante group hit headquarters, or radical headquarters, there was no police within half a mile; but five minutes after they left and they had clubbed everybody into unconsciousness, I notice the police [5034] came around and arrested everybody that was lying around unconscious. But they never got one vigilante.

"And later on in those cases, as I recall, the city had to make good. In other words, the various clubs that they had raided, like the Finnish Society in San Francisco, and the Finnish Society in Berkeley, the I. W. W. union hall, and certain other places that they raided under the guise of being Communist headquarters, the cities were eventually forced to pay for the damage done to those places under the guise of calling the people Reds.

"We moved all of our records out of the union hall because we expected to get it any minute, but we were standing by. But the vigilantes didn't come by our hall, and maybe it is a pity they didn't, because we were ready."

I am leaving out the talk between counsel at that point.

"Q. Mr. Bridges, just a question or two about the general strike before we pass on to some other subject matters. Will you state briefly the mechanism by which the general strike in San Francisco was brought about?

"A. We presented a resolution in the San Francisco Labor Counsil.

"Q. To what effect?

"A. Asking that the Council recommend to all unions to take a vote to walk out unless the demands of the strikers on the waterfront were granted as of a certain date.

"The walkout was to take place Monday, July 16, 1934. [5035]

"The resolution was concurred in by the Central Labor Council and the various unions began to vote."

Mr. Del Guercio: If the Court please, I think the record ought to show that these are questions that were asked the Alien here by Mr. Gladstein, his counsel.

Mrs. King: There is no objection to having the record show that.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mrs. King: "Q. You say 'concurred in by the Council.' You mean the delegates to the Council?

"A. The delegates to the Central Labor Council.

"Q. Can you state briefly how the Council was composed?

"A. The Council was composed of delegates elected from each local union in this area affiliated with the Central Labor Council.

"Q. How was the number of delegates from each union determined?

"A. By the number of members in the union; one delegate for the charter, and one delegate for every hundred members, with a maximum number of 10 delegates allowed to the Council.

"Q. So it would be fair to say that the delegates to the San Francisco Central Labor Council formed a properly proportioned representative group, representing all of the unions in San Francisco?

"A. It changed after that. A general strike committee [5036] was elected because the resolution also asked each union to elect five representatives which would form a general strike committee, and that committee was formed.

"It was that committee that actually called the general strike. In other words, although the delegates to the Labor Council and the delegates to the strike committee might have been one and the same, it was not necessarily so. In some cases new people were elected instead of the delegates.

"Q. But when you first presented the resolution to the Central Labor Council calling for a general strike, the delegates present at the meeting voted, is that right?

"A. Yes, that is right. I am trying to think—there might have been some other mechanics. That is right. The resolution was first adopted by the Central Labor Council and sent out to all unions asking them to elect five members to form a general strike committee and to vote on the question of a general strike.

"Q. And when that procedure had been followed then you had a joint strike committee, is that correct?

"A. A general strike committee, composed of five delegates from every union in the San Francisco area.

"Q. Do you recall the total number of members of that general strike committee?

"A. It filled that main auditorium of the Temple. It would be around 400 or 500.

"Q. Were you a member of that? [5037]

"A. I was a member of it; yes.

"Q. Now, how long was the general strike in effect?

"A. Totally in effect for about three days and then, because of the plain I described, the publicity and vigilante movement, it began to more or less break down. The street cars went back to work.

"Q. What were some of the most important arguments used to call the general strike?

"A. The general strike came about as a protest of the police terror, a protest in putting the troops on the waterfront, and we were being threatened with martial law against all unions, not only the unions on strike, but against all unions.

"Q. Was there any intention, expressed or otherwise, to seize the city administration, or overturn the government, or take steps of that kind?

"A. The majority of the unions had no demands. The only demands that any union had were on the waterfront, and the demands on the waterfront at that time were only three:

"1. The removal of the National Guard and all the strike breakers.

"2. An agreement that all the strikers be returned to work without discrimination.

"3. That the seamen be recognized also.

"In other words, when I say 'strike' I mean the longshoremen. The demands were three in number —the re- [5038] moval of the strike breakers and the National Guard, the longshoremen be returned to work and to be granted the right to hire through their own union halls, and recognition of the seamen. Those were the three demands.

Outside of those unions, no other unions—I think that is incorrect—we took the opportunity—when the general strike came around it had a very good organizing effect and in all about 35,000 new members went into trade unions. For the first time the Market Street Railway was organized. They presented demands also. They were officially on strike with demands. So outside of the waterfront they were the only union that had any demands.

"Q. Was there any talk, or any expressed intention of bringing about revolution?

"A. None whatsoever. The demands were simple demands as I have stated. There was plenty of talk. That talk was employer talk in the press and so forth. But as far as the union people were concerned, all they wanted were the things that I said. They had completely forgotten about hours, wages and working conditions. It was a question of getting back on the job.

"Q. How long did the entire strike period last, that is, as far as the longshoremen were concerned?

"A. The general strike ended July 19, I think. The waterfront remained on strike and finally ended in an agreement with the employers to arbitrate all issues in dispute [5039] for all the waterfront unions July 31, and all the waterfront unions returned to work together at 8:00 A. M. July 31.

"Q. What fundamental difference was there between the agreement to arbitrate all those issues and the previous proposal of the employers to arbitrate?

"A. When we went back to work it was agreed that the issues would be arbitrated by a Board selected by President Roosevelt, that all strike breakers would be discharged, that the National Guard would be removed, that there would be no discrimination against any of the men returning to work because of trade union activity.

"Q. And to what crafts was this arbitration to apply?

"A. All of the crafts on strike.

"The difference between that and what we had been offered before—before they had only recognized the longshoremen and they completely refused to recognize the seamen. Of course, that meant disunity. Eventually, the way it worked out, we all returned to work together with an agreement to arbitrate the demands of all unions.

"Q. And that is the way the arbitration was conducted?

"A. The arbitration was conducted that way, and an award was handed down for the longshoremen October 12, 1934; and later on handed down for the other unions."

Now if your Honor please, there is only one more passage which I have asked to read.

Presiding Inspector: That is that very short passage? [5040]

Mrs. King: Yes, on page 5951.

Presiding Inspector: I have read that. You may read that.

Mr. Del Guercio: Over our objection.

Presiding Inspector: Over your objection.

Mrs. King: It is just preceding the passage that was read by the Government on page 5952.

Presiding Inspector: It was about a page. [5041]

Mrs. King: (Reading)

"Q. I want to go now into the matter of your publication of the Waterfront Worker. That is on page 2720.

"I think you testified that the Waterfront Worker had been——"

Presiding Inspector: That doesn't mean anything now, page 2720?

Mrs. King: That is 2720 of the previous transcript.

Presiding Inspector: In this transcript it doesn't mean anything?

Mrs. King: No.

Presiding Inspector: That is just an explanation.

Mrs. King: (Continuing reading):

"I think you testified that the Waterfront Worker had been published prior to that by the M. W. I. U.

"A. Prior to the time we started to publish it?

"Q. That is right.

"A. I think it was, yes.

"Q. I think you said also that you purchased the mimeograph machine of the M. W. I. U., is that correct?

"A. I don't think I said that.

"Q. Just a minute:

"'What press did you use?'

"This is page 2723.

"'A mimeograph machine.

'Did you buy the mimeograph machine? [5042]

'We bought it.

'From the M. W. I. U.?

'No, we put up the money ourselves to buy it. We rented it first; later on we bought it outright.'

"Is that correct?

"A. That is right."

Now, if your Honor please, as you know we have asked to have the entire testimony of Mr. Bridges at the prior hearing annexed to this hearing, or become a part of this hearing. At that time your Honor stated that there were certain meetings referred to in the prior transcript which are of no concern to us at this time. We have, consequently, attempted to separate those meetings and are now asking to incorporate in this hearing all this remaining testimony of Mr. Bridges.

I had a list made up, a copy of which I will now give Mr. Del Guercio, of all that material, and I assume he will want to see what it is before he goes into it any further.

I would ask at this time to incorporate the testimony as indicated on this sheet of paper, which I will give to your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: You will want to look at it, Mr. Del Guercio? You can't object or anything else at present.

Mr. Del Guercio: No. But I want to call the Court's attention here to the unusual offer being made. As I understand it, all we have done here for the past six weeks [5043] is to read portions of the testimony that counsel thought was admissible on the theory that it related to matters concerning which the Government introduced from the previous hearing. Now, they come in with this offer. On what ground is this offer made?

Mrs. King: The ground of this offer is that all of the testimony of Mr. Bridges is relevant on the material that was read by the Government, and on the general principle that you do not take a word, a phrase, a sentence or a paragraph out of the context, but that the whole testimony is relevant. On the other hand, we have excluded such portions as dealt specifically with the testimony of the witnesses for the Government at the last hearing. So that what we are asking to incorporate in the record is the general operation of this man's mind on the situation, his connections, his view of the situation, and, in a sense, his defense, which explained the sentences, or the pages, which the Government previously read.

It was the Government that referred to the last hearing in this case in the first instance. We feel that all of this matter is relevant to the problems which are presented by the quotations which the Government read and, for that reason, we ask to incorporate the whole thing, and we particularly ask that your Honor examine these portions so as to see whether we are entitled to incorporate them.

[5044]

Presiding Inspector: We will postpone any ruling on this until later; say, Monday morning.

Mrs. King: Now, I believe that your Honor planned to make some disposition of the subpoena applications that were made to you yesterday, or do you want to leave this go until Monday?

Presiding Inspector: Let's get that out of the way now.

I have two applications here for requests that the proper officials issue, that is, that I request, in turn, the proper official to issue a subpoena to three persons; Frances Perkins, Gerard D. Reilly and Lemuel B. Schofield, in order that evidence may be given to bear upon the question of whether Mr. Bridges, in respect to this proceeding has been denied the equal protection of the laws guaranteed to him by the Constitution of the United States; the testimony sought being in respect to rulings by the Immigration and Naturalization Service, and sundry actions under those rules and actions in respect in general to the institution of deportation proceedings by reason of membership, or affiliation in the organizations known as the Industrial Workers of the World, Marine Workers Industrial Union, International Labor Defense, Trade Union Unity League.

This is, in substance, the application, isn't it?

Mrs. King: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: The subpoena will show for itself, [5045] the application being made, more fully.

Mrs. King: Yes. The application further states, your Honor, that there are large numbers of aliens in these groups in the United States.

Presiding Inspector: The application itself will show that?

Mrs. King: Yes, sir. [5046]

Presiding Inspector: Well now, Frances Perkins is Secretary of Labor, the head of the Department of Labor of the United States Government.

Mrs. King: Correct.

Presiding Inspector: Who is Gerard D. Reilly?

Mrs. King: He is, and has been for a number of years the Solicitor of the Department of Labor and was the Solicitor of the Department of Labor at the time that the Immigration and Naturalization Service was within the Jurisdiction of the Department of Labor.

Presiding Inspector: And where is he now?

Mrs. King: He is still the Solicitor of the Department of Labor.

Presiding Inspector: And Lemuel B. Schofield has already been sworn as a witness?

Mrs. King: Yes. In connection with his testimony his position in the Immigration Service was set forth.

Presiding Inspector: Well now, I decline to issue this subpoena for the reason that these people are officials of the Federal Government and the testimony which you seek to bring out from them is in relation to the conduct of Departments or employees or officers of the Federal Government, so that you seek to bring them in not as individuals—of course, you seek to bring them in personally, but you seek to examine them in respect to the conduct of their sundry offices. [5047]

That is one reason. I decline to issue the subpoena on that account. I think that is not within the power of this Department.

Secondly, I decline to subpoena them because this is not an issue. This legal proposition is not an issue in the hearing before me as a Presiding Inspector. This is something relating to the conduct of the Department of Justice and I haven't been given any authority to hear anything but a hearing on this warrant in respect to the factual basis of the warrant.

I also decline to issue the subpoena as to Lemuel B. Schofield because he has already been a witness in this proceeding and you already had an opportunity and no new matter has arisen which calls for his return now.

I think that covers my position as to them.

Mrs. King: May I be heard on that, your Honor, just for the record?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I object to any further argument on that ground. This is the first subpoena that has been taken up in open Court.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. But it is the first subpoena that I have denied, the first request that I have denied.

Mrs. King: If your Honor please, with reference to the last ground, even though Major Schofield was here and was sworn as a witness, in other cases, as your Honor knows, where wit-
[5048] nesses have left the Court permission has been granted by your Honor to bring them back again.

Presiding Inspector: There have been special circumstances. But the other two reasons are sufficient in any event.

Mrs. King: And with reference to the other two reasons, I would like to say that we are not in a position without this testimony to prove that.

with reference to the Industrial Workers of the World, there have been no deportations as far as we have been able to discover since 1920, and that the singling out of Mr. Bridges for deportation on this ground we believe to be a denial of equal protection. But we are not in a position to know the regulations, the rules and so on.

Presiding Inspector: This isn't the place to raise that.

Mrs. King: But I just want the record clear on this issue.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, you have got it.

Mrs. King: And with reference to the Marine Workers Industrial Union, the International Labor Defense and the Trade Union Unity League, as your Honor knows, all of those were covered in the opinion of Solicitor Wyzanski under date of January 3, 1934 and the subsequent order of the Commissioner of Immigration, Colonel McCormick.

Presiding Inspector: Those are factual determinations.

Mrs. King: And we feel——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) And they are not [5049] matters of consideration before this Inspector in respect to the matters of the warrant which has been served upon Mr. Bridges.

Mrs. King: We feel that these factual considerations are matters which we are entitled to have in order to show that in the case of the IWW he has been singled out for the first time in 21 years, and in the other case it is a matter of approximately 7 years since anyone has been arrested on the charges which have been leveled against Mr. Bridges in this case. And we feel that we are entitled to show the regulations and the process of the Immigration Service in order to establish the violation of the Fifth Amendment and the denial to Mr. Bridges of equal protection of the law.

Presiding Inspector: The other application relates to the same matter and relates to the same persons, but adds to it the request for a subpoena duces tecum to produce documents in the possession of the United States. This Inspector, a minor official in the Department of Justice—and I am using the language, I think, of Dean Landis—has no power to make such an order. And I add this to the other reasons that I gave in respect to the denial of the application for the other subpoena.

Now, I think that puts the whole thing in this record so that, if I am wrong in this, you will have an opportunity to argue this matter.

Mrs. King: If your Honor please, may I offer the applications in evidence? [5050]

Presiding Inspector: You may have them marked for identification. They are not evidence.

Mr. Del Guercio: We object to the introduction in evidence.

Presiding Inspector: No. I won't receive them in evidence, but I will allow them to be marked for identification.

(The documents referred to were marked Alien's Exhibits Nos. 28 and 29 for identification.)

Mrs. King: I have just one other matter. If your Honor pleases, we have been hearing for the last few days some of the problems that the testimony of Mr. Cannalonga brought into this hearing. I believe that you have in your possession, or perhaps they have gone back to the Government, two letters from the Immigration Service in the Northwest with reference to the attempts of the Service to subpoena Mr. Cannalonga.

The Defense feels that those letters are properly a part of the record in this case in view of what has transpired, and we should like to have, if possible, those letters introduced in evidence.

Presiding Inspector: Let's let them stand until the close of your case because Cannalonga may be produced. I don't know.

Mrs. King: Thank you, your Honor. That is quite satisfactory.

Presiding Inspector: Bring it up at the close of the case. [5051]

Now, Mrs. King, produce your next witness.

Mrs. King: I am afraid that I am not in a position to produce any witnesses today because the Defense office has been somewhat disorganized but made rather happy by the fact that the next generation of lawyers for Harry Bridges has been born. Mr. Grossman became a father last night.

Perhaps in my enthusiasm as a woman and one who is very much interested in the birth of Miss Grossman, I may have said something inappropriate at that moment. But I request on behalf of the Defense an adjournment of this hearing until Monday so that we can reorganize ourselves on the new basis and go forward to the conclusion of the hearing without any further delay.

Presiding Inspector: I understand from what you have said that Mr. Grossman has been particularly working on the examination of the witness or witnesses whom you intend to produce?

Mrs. King: That is correct, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: And that it is on that account that you can't go ahead and do justice to your case as you see it without his presence?

Mrs. King: That is correct.

Mr. Del Guercio: I don't believe, however,—we have no objection, of course, to that—but to take that as an opportunity to refer to Harry Bridges I think was entirely [5052] out of place, bad taste.

Presiding Inspector: I think it was in lighter vein.

Mrs. King: I withdrew it instantly, Mr. Del Guercio, and I am extremely sorry I said it.

Presiding Inspector: We will recess until Monday morning at ten o'clock.

Before we go. I want to say something about Friday. I hope that you are going to be able to finish your side of the case next week and, of course, if you do finish by Thursday night perhaps it would be better not to sit on Friday. But if you do not finish by Thursday night I think we had better continue on Friday even though it is Memorial Day.

Is that agreeable?

Mr. Del Guercio: Perfectly agreeable.

Presiding Inspector: If they do finish on Thursday you would rather prefer to have it go over until Monday?

Mr. Del Guercio: Either way will be satisfactory to us.

Presiding Inspector: Monday morning at ten o'clock.

(Whereupon at 10:50 o'clock A. M. an adjournment was taken until Monday, May 26, 1941, at 10:00 A. M.) [5053]

Court Room 276,
Federal Building,
San Francisco, California,
May 26, 1941.

Met, pursuant to adjournment, at 10:00 A. M. [5054]

PROCEEDINGS

Presiding Inspector: For my own convenience today I am going to change the hours slightly, and we will sit from ten o'clock until twelve o'clock, recess until two o'clock and sit from two o'clock to half past four, so we will have just as much time for the hearing, with a longer recess at noon.

Call your next witness.

Mr. Grossman: Will you take the stand, Mr. Meyer?

Presiding Inspector: Raise your right hand.

LEE A. MEYER

called as a witness on behalf of the Alien, having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Will you state your full name, Mr. Meyer?

A. Lee A. Meyer—M-e-y-e-r.

Q. What is your position?

A. State Administrative Officer of the Works Progress Administration of Oregon.

Q. Are you here in response to a subpoena, Mr. Meyer? A. Yes.

Q. Which was served, was it, on Mr. Griffith, the State Administrator of the WPA?

A. A subpoena was served on him, but later another one was served on me. [5055]

Q. I see. Have you brought with you the records or documents that were called for in this subpoena?

A. We weren't able to produce all it called for because they were not all our documents but I have produced all of the documents bearing upon the case and person whom you mentioned in the subpoena.

Q. Will you state what you, in your position in the WPA, have to do with the documents that you have brought? Do you supervise or control those documents? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Del Guercio: Have the witness speak a little louder, please.

Presiding Inspector: Speak louder, please.

(Testimony of Lee A. Meyer.)

The Witness: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Are you familiar with the way in which the various records that you have brought with you have been kept? A. Yes, sir.

Q. May I see them, please, the documents you have brought in response to the subpoena?

A. (Producing documents) There are two sets of these documents; one is a set which is kept by the Employment Division, and the other is a set which is kept by the Division of Finance, who have to do with the paying for the work. They are so marked. [5056]

Mr. Grossman: Just one moment, your Honor.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Mr. Meyer, will you examine those documents and tell me what they show with respect to when Mr. Wilmot became a non-relief WPA person as distinguished from a relief WPA person?

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, if your Honor please, I will object to this. Apparently there is nothing—nothing has been shown here that is contradictory to Mr. Wilmot's testimony given by him on the stand. I don't believe that we should air a person's relief record.

Presiding Inspector: I think he was asked about it, wasn't he?

Mr. Del Guercio: He was asked.

(Testimony of Lee A. Meyer.)

Mr. Grossman: He was asked. This question doesn't go into the details of his relief record.

Presiding Inspector: I will allow this, just when the change was made. He spoke of the change that had been made.

Mr. Del Guercio: I would like to see it too, if your Honor please.

Presiding Inspector: You would like to see the testimony?

Mr. Del Guercio: No, the records.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, you may see them, of course.

Mr. Grossman: I suggest if the witness could answer the question first and clarify that, there is no objection to Mr. Del Guercio seeing them. [5057]

Presiding Inspector: I think if Mr. Del Guercio insists upon it he has that right.

Mr. Grossman: Yes, that is right.

(The records referred to were passed to Mr. Del Guercio.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, if your Honor please, we renew our objection.

Presiding Inspector: I will allow it. This is to fix a date.

Mr. Grossman: That is correct.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Do you remember the question, Mr. Meyer? The question was——

(Testimony of Lee A. Meyer.)

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) We will have the question read.

Mr. Grossman: I can do it more simply by restating it, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Very well.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. The question was when the status of Mr. Wilmot was changed from relief to non-relief on WPA. A. August the first, 1938. [5058]

Q. Will you state what the records show as to the reason for the removal of Mr. Wilmot from WPA in 1940?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I will object to that as not in evidence, not in issue.

Presiding Inspector: Read the question.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Mr. Grossman: This specific question was testified to by Mr. Wilmot.

Presiding Inspector: I can't recall it, you know. It was some time ago.

Mr. Grossman: I know definitely it was.

Presiding Inspector: I will take your recollection of that.

Mr. Grossman: I am positive.

Presiding Inspector: I will allow it. Of course, the record is really the best evidence, but no one is insisting on that.

A. The record indicates that he was dismissed from the WPA as of September 4, 1940; the reason given, "Drunkenness during project working hours."

(Testimony of Lee A. Meyer.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Do the records show anything else as the reason for his removal from the WPA?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to all inquiries along this line. [5059]

Presiding Inspector: I don't know what pertinence it has. You are contradicting him on a collateral point, aren't you?

Mr. Grossman: In the first place, I should think this question of relevancy was settled by our being permitted to go into the question on examination. I should think that——

Presiding Inspector: I think not. I think you are bound by his answer.

Mr. Grossman: As to the relevancy of the subject matter.

Presiding Inspector: Has a collateral relevancy; yes. Of course, you could inquire about his habits, if they were reprehensive habits.

Mr. Grossman: Secondly, it is a question of whether it is impeachment, because he did state—it is difficult to state whether it is or isn't impeachment—because he did state that the records showed drunkenness.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think it is worth arguing about. It is in the record and we will let it stand, but I wouldn't have allowed it if I had understood what the matter was, because I think you are bound by his answers in that respect.

(Testimony of Lee A. Meyer.)

It hasn't anything to do with this case. It was in 1940 that this happened. This isn't a conviction of a crime, or anything else.

I will let it stand, but don't go any further.

Mr. Del Guercio: I move to strike the witness' answer. [5060]

Presiding Inspector: I will let it stay in. I will allow it to stand. You objected to it. I don't think it is worth talking about, Mr. Del Guercio.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Do the records show whether Mr. Wilmot remained continuously as a non-relief person on the WPA after the eighth month of 1938?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to this question also on the ground that it isn't relevant or material.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Grossman: I have no more questions at this time, but I have not been permitted to fully examine the records yet. I would like to have a five minute recess so I may. The witness felt, and I believe he was right, that I should not be permitted to examine the records before he testified; so I was unable to do so before we convened. Five minutes will be ample, though, unless Mr. Del Guercio wants an equal time to examine them.

Presiding Inspector: I think Mr. Del Guercio examined them.

Mr. Del Guercio: I have examined them cursorily.

(Testimony of Lee A. Meyer.)

Presiding Inspector: Do you want to examine them further?

Mr. Del Guercio: Not at this time.

Presiding Inspector: We will take a five minute recess.

(Whereupon a short recess was taken.)

[5061]

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Mr. Meyer, what do the records show as to whether Mr. Wilmot was a certified or relief employee for the WPA up to the eighth month of 1938?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to the question.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

Mr. Del Guercio: Nothing contradictory has been shown.

Presiding Inspector: What is that?

Mr. Del Guercio: Nothing contra- ory has been shown so far or indicated.

Presiding Inspector: Well, if it isn't contradictory you can't be aggrieved by it. I can't remember these dates, you know. I will take this.

Mr. Del Guercio: He was never asked the dates, if your Honor please, on Mr. Wilmot's examination direct or cross.

Presiding Inspector: Well, it won't make any difference. I will take it.

Mr. Grossman: Yes.

The Witness: At this time I have forgotten the question.

(Testimony of Lee A. Meyer.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. What do the records show as to whether or not Mr. Wilmot was continuously in the relief status up to the eighth month of 1938?

A. The records indicate—show that he was on as a relief worker during the entire time except for a period from [5062] June the 9th, 1936 until July the 7th, 1936, during which time he was in private employment.

Q. And for all other periods the records show, except for the period when he was non-relief, that he was relief? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And can you tell me from the records the entire period during which Mr. Wilmot was receiving benefits or receiving money from the WPA?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that.

Presiding Inspector: Haven't you got that?

Mr. Grossman: I want to be sure the record is clear, your Honor. That is the only reason.

A. With the exception——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Now, I don't understand the question.

Mr. Grossman: I want the entire period.

Presiding Inspector: You mean as a relief?

Mr. Grossman: In any way. We have the period when he was non-relief. I want the entire period now.

Presiding Inspector: Including non-relief?

Mr. Grossman: Both; yes, sir.

(Testimony of Lee A. Meyer.)

Presiding Inspector: I think that is very confusing. Why don't you have the period of relief and then you can add them up?

Mr. Grossman: All right.

By Mr. Grossman: [5063]

Q. Will you give the period or periods when Mr. Wilmot was a so-called relief employee of the WPA?

A. Continuously from March 10, 1936 until August the first—wait a minute—August the first, 1938, with the exception of the period from June the 9th, 1936 to July the 7th, 1936, during which time he was in private employment. [5064]

Presiding Inspector: I think you have got everything. You may cross examine.

Mr. Grossman: I have something more that I want to go into, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Oh.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. During 1937, and up to the eighth month of 1938, what were the rules and regulations of the WPA on the question of whether a person having relief status was permitted to have outside income and still receive the same payments from the WPA?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that as being improper and immaterial. The Court can take judicial notice of what the rules are.

Presiding Inspector: I think so. I do not think you should prove it by word of mouth. There must be some written or printed rules.

(Testimony of Lee A. Meyer.)

Mr. Grossman: I thought I had properly qualified this witness, your Honor, but I think I can properly qualify him as a man who has to do with the rules in that district and, therefore, prepared to state them. It may be that he can state that he would prefer to have them presented in written form; but I think——

Presiding Inspector: I should think he would for the sake of accuracy.

Mr. Grossman: I would like to have his answer. He deals [5065] with them daily.

Presiding Inspector: You can answer whether you can state that or not.

Mr. Del Guercio: We wouldn't mind if the whole statutes, all of the law, went in; not what this witness here says.

Presiding Inspector: This is merely a question as to his knowledge; not as to what the statutes state.

Do you know about that—"Yes" or "No"?

The Witness: It cannot be stated "Yes" or "No" because the regulations have changed almost with every appropriation for the Works Progress Administration. The regulations change somewhat. I can state in general what has been the situation covering all of the period, but to give it at any particular date I would have to refer to our manual of rules and regulations.

Mr. Del Guercio: We renew our objection.

Presiding Inspector: There is no question now.

(Testimony of Lee A. Meyer.)

Mr. Del Guercio: The witness said he couldn't give it specifically, but only generally.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Can you state whether, during 1937 and up to the eighth month of 1938, a relief employee on the WPA was permitted to have outside income without reporting it to the WPA?

A. No, sir.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that. [5066]

Presiding Inspector: Strike out the answer. I think we should have the regulations.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Are the regulations in such form that they could be produced in written form for this court——

A. (Interposing): Yes.

Q. (Continuing) in answer to the last question?

A. Yes.

Q. Would you be willing to, after you left the stand, send down to the Court such written regulations or rules of the WPA as covered this subject during the year 1938 and the year 1938 up to the eighth month?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, your Honor. I think the Court will take judicial notice of the Federal Statues.

Mr. Grossman: Assuming that you can, you still must have them brought to your attention. It would be difficult for us to find it in the WPA apparatus, even if you do take judicial notice of it.

Presiding Inspector: This is a question as to whether he would be willing to send them down.

(Testimony of Lee A. Meyer.)

Mr. Grossman: Able and willing.

Presiding Inspector: Can you answer that, whether you could?

The Witness: Yes, I think so. [5067]

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Will you state whether the records you have with you show that any report of outside income was made by Mr. Wilmot to the WPA during the year 1937 and during the year 1938 up to the eighth month?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, your Honor. Nothing here has been indicated as to whether these are the complete records of Mr. Wilmot, and I object.

Presiding Inspector: He asked him about that.

Mr. Grossman: He said they are the complete records of the WPA. He indicated there were others, but not in the custody and control of the WPA.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

The Witness: The question?

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Will you state whether the records you have with you show any report by or on behalf of Mr. Wilmot of outside earnings to the WPA during——

Presiding Inspector: I think you should ask him preliminarily whether these records include such matter in general.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Do the records that you have brought down here—rather, do the type of records that you have brought include, if there is any, every report made to the WPA of outside earnings while a person is on WPA? [5068] A. Yes, sir.

(Testimony of Lee A. Meyer.)

Q. Do the records you have brought with you include any report made by or on behalf of Robert Wilmot of his, or his family's outside income during the year 1937, or the first seven months of 1938?

A. No, sir. [5069]

Q. Will you state, using the records, if they will aid you, whether Robert Wilmot or any person on his behalf made any report to the WPA of outside earnings during the year 1937 or the first seven months of 1938?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Haven't you already covered it?

Mr. Grossman: No. I asked him whether the records contained it. I am now asking him to state, using the records if they will help him, whether a report was so made.

Presiding Inspector: Why, how would he know anything more than the records?

Mr. Grossman: He would be able to do this: He would be able to do this reasoning from the procedure in the WPA and the records.

Presiding Inspector: There is no use reasoning from that unless we know what the procedure is.

Mr. Grossman: You mean, unless I should ask certain preliminary questions?

(Testimony of Lee A. Meyer.)

Presiding Inspector: It seems to me you have covered it all.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. What is the procedure in the WPA in Portland, Oregon, with respect to the receiving of and the filing in the official WPA records of reports made by or on behalf of relief employees of the WPA as to their outside earnings? [5070]

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that as being immaterial, if your Honor please, and even if the witness here gave a negative answer to the previous question it wouldn't contradict anything.

Presiding Inspector: Well, that may be. I am taking Mr. Grossman's recollection on that because I don't think it is worth the time looking it up in the record. I can't see the difference between this and the question that was asked him a little while ago, but I don't object to repeating it if you want a repetition.

Mr. Grossman: I want the record to be very certain, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Very well. Go ahead. Do you understand the question?

The Witness: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead.

A. At the present time a social service worker employed by the WPA must interview every WPA worker not less than once every twelve months asking them questions concerning the amount of outside income and the amount of their personal expenditures and budget and so on, and that is entered on a record.

(Testimony of Lee A. Meyer.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, if your Honor please, I move that the witness' entire answer be stricken. He has given what is the practice or the procedure at the present time.

Mr. Grossman: I am going to ask him whether it is [5071] the same. I think it is preliminary.

Presiding Inspector: If you will do that.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Was the practice and procedure the same during the year of 1937 and the first seven months of 1938?

A. It goes back to the question I said I couldn't answer definitely a while ago. I am not sure just when the procedure changed. It changed several times.

Q. What was the procedure just before the present one with respect to this question?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, if your Honor please. "Just before the present" is not fixed.

Mr. Grossman: It may be that even the previous procedure would be substantially the same.

Presiding Inspector: But we don't know whether the previous procedure would cover this time.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Can you state approximately when would be the beginning of the previous procedure?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, that is immaterial.

(Testimony of Lee A. Meyer.)

Mr. Grossman: Before the present.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it as preliminary, if you can say. A. I couldn't say.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Can you state whether it was before 1938?

[5072]

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, the witness has just testified that he doesn't know.

Mr. Grossman: He still might know whether it was before 1938.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. I will allow that.

A. You mean the present——

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. (Interposing). No, the one before the present.

A. I couldn't say.

Q. Can you state whether the present procedure began before 1938?

A. I could state that it did not.

Q. Can you state whether the present procedure began before 1939?

A. I couldn't risk that.

Q. Can you give us any idea as to the date on which the procedure before the present one began?

Mr. Del Guercio: I think that has already been exhausted, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: You have asked that. He said he couldn't.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Would you state whether there is any substantial difference between the procedure which obtained in 1937 and the first seven months of 1938 and the procedure which obtains today? [5073]

(Testimony of Lee A. Meyer.)

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, that is the same question in a different form. The witness has testified that he doesn't know what the procedure was at that time. He certainly wouldn't know whether it was substantially the same.

Mr. Grossman: He might very well know that since 1935 the procedure has been substantially the same, or since 1936.

Presiding Inspector: We will have to go into the question of what he means by "substantially."

Mr. Grossman: Well, if I can get a "Yes" answer to this I think I can get that very easily. If I get a "No" answer, there is no need to do that.

Presiding Inspeceor: All right.

A. Will you restate the question.

By Mr. Gossman:

Q. Can you state whether the procedure on this question is substantially the same as it was in 1937 and the first seven months of 1938 or any part of that period? A. It was not.

Q. Can you state whether in 1937 and the first seven months of 1938 the rules and regulations of the WPA required a report at least once a year to the WPA or one of its representatives of outside earnings?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, if your Honor please.

(Testimony of Lee A. Meyer.)

Presiding Inspector: That calls for the regulations, doesn't it? We are going to have those.

[5074]

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Would the regulations answer the question that I have just asked? A. Yes, sir.

Presiding Inspector: You see, his recollection is very naturally not enough to cover this. This is a matter of detail changing probably every few months. I say, "likely". I don't know whether it does.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. I asked you, Mr. Meyer, whether you would be willing to send down the rules and regulations. I want to be very specific as to how we will do it.

Presiding Inspector: He said he would.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Will you send them to Judge Sears, care of this Court room, and can you state to me approximately how long it will take you to be able to send them down?

A. I presume I could go to our Regional Office this afternoon, if I am not on the set and at that time, and perhaps get them from there and perhaps have them made up today, depending upon how much I am tied up here.

Q. The last thing I want to make clear is that I am interested in the rules and regulations covering the report of outside earnings during 1937 and the first seven months of 1938. [5075]

(Testimony of Lee A. Meyer.)

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I will object to that. I object to the offer. I object to the request unless it can be shown that these regulations were enforced in regards to Mr. Wilmot.

Mr. Gladstein: What is the objection?

Mr. Grossman: I didn't hear the last part of it.

Presiding Inspector: He says that he will object to this unless it can be shown that these were applicable to Mr. Wilmot.

Mr. Gladstein: Were what, your Honor?

Presiding Inspector: Unless these were applicable to Mr. Wilmot.

Mr. Grossman: I will ask another question to remove that objection, if there is any basis for it.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Looking at the records concerning Mr. Wilmot will you state that these regulations that you are going to send down would cover the case of Mr. Wilmot?

A. The regulations that I am to send down are to cover the entire period of the WPA, are they?

Q. Would they cover Mr. Wilmot as well as others on WPA?

A. Yes sir; to the time that he was non-certified.

Mr. Grossman: That is correct. No more questions.

Presiding Inspector: Cross examine.

Cross Examination [5076]

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. What is your position with the WPA, Mr. Meyer? A. State Administrative Officer.

(Testimony of Lee A. Meyer.)

Q. How long have you held that position?

A. I have held that position since July 22, 1940.

Q. Were you connected with the project prior to that time?

A. I was connected with the Adminsitration, yes.

Q. In what capacity?

A. As State Director of Education and Recreation.

Q. And what were your duties then? For how long a period did you hold that office?

A. I held that office from April 15, 1936 until July 22, 1940.

Q. While you had that office were you the custodian of these records?

A. I beg your pardon?

Q. Were you the custodian of the WPA records?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you have anything to do with their preparation?

A. Only those that affected my particular part of the work.

Q. Well, would Mr. Wilmot's——

A. (Interposing): No, sir.

Q. (Continuing): Relief or non-relief record affect [5077] your duties? A. No, sir.

Q. In any way? A. No, sir.

Q. What did you do prior to 1936? Were you connected with the WPA also?

A. I beg your pardon?

Q. Were you connected with the WPA prior to 1936? A. No, sir.

(Testimony of Lee A. Meyer.)

Q. Do you know a Kenneth Fitzgerald?

A. I have heard the name. I don't know the gentleman.

Q. Was he ever connected with the WPA in Portland?

A. It is my recollection that I have heard that he was.

Q. In what capacity?

A. I don't know for sure.

Q. Did he ever have access to the records that you produced here, do you know?

A. No, sir. No, sir.

Q. Well, do you know that of your own knowledge?

A. No, sir. I beg your pardon. I want to qualify my answer. He shouldn't have had. There is no reason why he should have had that I know of.

Q. Who was the employee that made up these records? [5078]

A. These records were made up by a number of employees.

Q. Can you give me the names of them?

A. No, because they have changed employees in both the finance and the employment divisions quite often. I wouldn't know them all. [5079]

Q. Did you check the truth of everything that is on these records at any time?

A. No, sir; I just produced the records.

Q. The persons that made up these records are also relief workers? A. No, sir.

Q. What were they?

(Testimony of Lee A. Meyer.)

A. That prepared these records?

Q. Yes.

A. The persons who prepared these records were Administrative employees.

Q. Were they relief or non-relief?

A. Non-relief.

Q. What is the difference between a non-relief worker, WPA worker, and a relief worker?

A. The difference is that a relief worker is one who has been referred by the Welfare, State Welfare Commission, to the Works Progress Administration, as being in sufficient need, and having a job on the WPA, who is assigned as such and receives what is known as a security wage.

Q. And do you accept the findings and recommendations of the State Relief——

A. (Interposing): The Works Progress Administration may reject that if they believe it not to be true.

Q. Do they conduct an independent investigation in every [5080] case?

A. They merely hold an interview with the person who has been referred.

Q. Can you answer the question I asked you "Yes" or "No"?

Presiding Inspector: I think that is a fair answer; that is an answer.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Do you know if the State Relief submitted their findings and recommendations in the case of Mr. Wilmot?

(Testimony of Lee A. Meyer.)

A. I beg your parden, I didn't—I didn't get the first of it.

Presiding Inspector: Read the question.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. I believe there is a document here from the Relief Commission stating that Wilmot's family was a relief case.

Q. Do you know if any investigation was made by the WPA administration?

A. No, sir, I do not.

Q. Would the records show if there had been one?

A. I haven't looked to see whether it does or not.

Q. Will you look and see?

A. (Referring to date): I do not find any.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is all. [5081]

Mr. Grossman: That is all.

Presiding Inspector: You are excused.

(Witness excused.)

Presiding Inspector: Next witness.

Raise your right hand.

JOSEPH CURRAN

called as a witness on behalf of the Alien, having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:

Presiding Inspector: Give your name and address to the reporter.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

The witness: Joseph Curran.

My address is 101 Cooper Street, New York City.

Direct Examination

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What is your occupation, please?

A. I am President of the National Maritime Union of America, affiliated with the CIO.

Mr. Del Guercio: I didn't hear that. Will the witness speak a little louder?

A. I am President of the National Maritime Union.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. You say it is affiliated with the Congress of Industrial Organizations?

A. Yes, with the CIO.

Q. And what, in general, is the jurisdication of that union? [5082]

A. The jurisdication of that union is the unlicensed personnel aboard merchant vessels, American vessels.

Q. And what is the approximate membership of the organization, Mr. Curran?

A. Approximately 55,000.

Q. How long have you been President of that Union? A. Since 1938.

Q. Do you hold any other office in the CIO besides the Presidency of the Union?

A. I am National Vice President of the CIO.

Q. How many Vice Presidents are there of the CIO? A. Six.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. Do you hold any special office with respect to Maritime work in the CIO?

A. I am Chairman of the National CIO Maritime Committee.

Q. Mr. Curran, do you know a man named William C. McCuistion? A. Yes.

Q. How long have you known him?

A. I have known him since the spring of 1936.

Q. Have you known him as a member of the National Maritime Union?

A. Yes. He was a member of the National Maritime Union.

Q. Do you know what the reputation of Mr. McCuistion is [3083] for truth and honesty among the men with whom McCuistion has worked and associated?

Presiding Inspector: Truth and veracity.

Mr. Gladstein: Truth and veracity; yes.

A. His reputation——

Presiding Inspector: First, do you know it?

A. I do.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Will you state whether that reputation for truth and veracity is good or bad?

A. Very bad.

Q. Will you state whether you would believe Mr. McCuistion under oath? A. I would not.

Q. Mr. Curran, I want to call your attention to the year 1936, and particularly the fall of that year, and I want to refer to a strike which was taking place on the east coast of seamen. Were your involved in that strike? A. I was.

Q. Did you hold any special position in connection with the conduct of that strike?

A. I was the Chairman of the Joint Strike Committee.

Q. And where were the headquarters of the Joint Strike Committee?

A. At 164 Eleventh Avenue, New York City.

Q. What personnel or classifications of work were [5084] represented by the people who composed the Joint Strike Committee?

A. The sailors, firemen, oilers, marine cooks and stewards, engineers, and a portion of the deck officers and radio operators.

Q. Do you recall the date, the approximate date, when you became the Chairman of that Strike Committee?

A. I believe it was on the 2nd or 3rd of November, at a mass meeting where the Strike Committee was elected.

Q. In the year 1936? A. Yes.

Q. Was there also a Committee known as the Seamen's Defense Committee?

A. There was. It was resolved at that meeting which elected a Strike Committee for the purpose of conducting the strike.

Q. What was the Defense Committee?

A. The Defense Committee was a Committee established after the Spring strike which took place in March of 1936 and ended in May of 1936. When the men returned to the ships they elected, before they returned to the ships, a Committee of nine, whose job it was to stay ashore and to carry on the fight for Democracy within the union that we were then members of.

Q. What union was that?

A. ISU, an A.F. of L. union.

Q. What is the full name of the ISU? [5085]

A. International Seamen's Union of America.

Q. Can you state who the nine persons were who were on the Defense Committee?

A. As nearly as I can recollect the nine persons elected on the Seamen's Defense Committee were myself, as Chairman; Ralph Emerson, as Secretary; Albert Rothbart, Harry Alexander—I am not so clear on the others.

Q. Now, how long did that Defense Committee function?

A. It functioned from May until November the 2nd, when a mass meeting was called for the purpose of electing a Strike Committee, and it was dissolved at that time. Its purpose was only to work ashore after the men had returned in the Spring strike. Its usefulness was no longer necessary and it was dissolved at that mass meeting.

Mr. Del Guercio: I move that all of the witness' answer be stricken and that he be instructed to just answer the question asked and not volunteer.

Presiding Inspector: We haven't been very strict about that in this hearing, and if the answer is substantially responsible, even though it wanders somewhat from the direct question, we have allowed it and I will proceed in that way, so I won't strike it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, Mr. Curran, when the Strike Committee was formed on November 2, 1936 what, in general, was the purpose of the [5086] strike of the seamen on the east coast?

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that. The reason for the strike on the east coast is not an issue here.

Presiding Inspector: I think this must be preliminary. In and of itself, of course, I would say it is immaterial, but it is coming to something and I will let it stand for that reason—I will let the question be answered.

The Witness: What is the question?

Mr. Gladstein: Read the question, please.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. The purpose of the strike in itself was to support the West Coast Maritime Unions that were going out on strike at that time.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Would it be correct to define the strike of the east Coast seamen as a sympathetic strike in support of the West Coast Maritime Unions?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to the question as being suggestive and leading. The witness has already answered the question and has given the reason for the east coast strike.

Presiding Inspector: I think it is the same as what he just asked, but characterizes it in a popular way. I will take it.

A. The strike was definitely a sympathetic strike at its [5087] beginning.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, in general who was laying down the policy for the conduct of the strike on the east coast —was that the Strike Committee?

A. The Joint Strike Committee on the east coast was laying down the policy for the carrying on of the strike and was working very closely with the Joint Strike Committee on the Pacific Coast.

Q. Were matters of policy for certain, or any of the aspects of the east coast strike, ever laid down by the west coast?

A. Not exactly laid down; no. Suggestions were made by both strike Committees back and forth, and were acted upon mostly in concert together.

Q. Now, during that strike were you at all times the Chairman of the Strike Committee?

A. I was.

Q. Did you have occasion in that capacity to communicate with Harry Bridges? A. I did.

Q. Can you state in a general way what the occasion was for your being in contact with Bridges?

A. One of the purposes that I had been in contact with him was that before the strike I was on the Pacific Coast for a [5088] few days and we had made arrangements at a policy meeting, composed of members of all the unions, that a joint program would be carried on, and that we would work very closely together, and in the policy that was suggested there was one that we would hold mass meetings on both coasts in all ports for the purpose of clarifying the issues to the public and keeping the members clarified, and arrangements were being made to hold meetings on the east coast. One of the purposes of contact with Bridges was to inform him of the possibilities of those meetings and ask if the arrangements on the Pacific Coast would permit his attending some mass meetings on the east coast.

[5089]

Q. Now, with specific reference to a meeting that was held at Madison Square Garden on December 16, 1936, was a general program for such a meeting and similar meetings on the East Coast adopted prior to December, 1936?

A. Oh, yes. It was adopted, as near as I can recollect, in the latter part of October and in the early part of November.

Q. Of 1936? A. Of 1936, yes.

Q. Now, with specific reference to that particular meeting will you state whether you ever requested Bridges directly or through someone else to come to the East and attend as a speaker at that meeting? A. I did.

Q. Now, do you know when specifically you made such a request for the first time?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. As near as I can recollect it was about the middle of November.

Q. And by what method was this request conveyed to Bridges?

A. At one time, the first time, I believe I called on the phone to San Pedro where the East Coast men were on strike and where there was an East Coast Strike Committee, an East Coast Strike Committee functioning with the West Coast men, because we had some East Coast ships there on strike. And I [5090] asked that the—at that time the Chairman of that strike committee to communicate with Harry Bridges and to ask him what his schedule was and then to inform him that we had arrangements made for several mass meetings, particularly a great one in New York, and asked if it were possible for him to attend it. That was the first time.

Q. Who was the person in San Pedro with whom you spoke? A. Peter Innes.

Q. What was his then position?

A. As near as I can recollect it was Chairman of the East Coast Seamen's Strike Committee, in San Pedro.

Q. How long had he held that position?

A. I believe from about November the second or third.

Q. What was his position before that?

A. His position before that was as a member of the Union who had left New York, sailed aboard

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

one of the President boats; upon arriving in San Francisco he communicated with the East——

Mr. Myron (Interposing): Is this his position before that?

Mr. Gladstein: As I understand it, he is explaining his position prior to the time that he became Chairman of the San Pedro Strike Committee.

Mr. Del Guercio: Then I think the witness should be instructed to confine his answer to the particular thing and not [5091] give a story.

Presiding Inspector: I think he is doing very well in that respect.

Go ahead.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Will you continue, Mr. Curran?

A. He communicated with the East Coast and said that there were possibilities of getting advertising for our paper, and asked us——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): Now I think you are wandering a little from the position.

The Witness: Well, that brings to me the position right now.

Presiding Inspector: Go right along.

A. (Continuing): We sent him credentials to get advertising as a representative of our paper, the Pilot. That was his position up to the time that he was elected Chairman of the Strike Committee.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did he prior to the time that he became the Chairman of the Strike Committee in San Pedro ever have credentials signed by you as a representative of the East Coast Seamen's Defense Committee?

A. No, only of the Pilot; to get advertising for the [5092] Pilot.

Q. Now, I want come back now to the time that you spoke to Mr. Innes regarding Mr. Bridges for the purpose of having Mr. Bridges attend mass meetings in the East. Did you also communicate directly with Mr. Bridges in any form on that same subject matter? A. I did.

Q. And in that way did you do so?

A. I'm not too clear, but I believe I spoke to him by phone once and I believe I spoke to him by teletype at another time.

Q. And in what way did you do so? between the two of you?

A. I sent a telegram, yes.

Q. Now, Mr. Curran, at any time did you get from Harry Bridges or from anyone purporting to speak for him a flat refusal to come to the East Coast and attend the Madison Square Garden meeting? A. No.

Q. What was the problem, if any, that existed with respect to Bridges going to the East to attend this Madison Square Garden meeting?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to the form of the question.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. Why don't you ask what com- [5093] munication he did receive in that respect.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Mr. Gladstein: All right, I will withdraw it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What communications did you receive from Bridges in that respect as to Bridges coming out and speaking at that mass meeting?

A. The communications I received were along the line of trying to fit into the arrangements of mass meetings on the Pacific Coast, the time element, to also attend meetings on the East Coast. It was a question of arrangements.

Q. It was never a question of refusal, is that correct? A. No, no.

Q. Now, did Mr. Bridges eventually come East and address that meeting? A. He did.

Q. Do you remember how he came East?

A. He came by plane, United Air Lines.

Q. Did you meet him?

A. I met him at the airport, yes.

Q. Who were the people, to the best of your recollection, who met Mr. Bridges on that occasion?

A. Myself, and a driver of the car, Cunningham, and a driver of a coupe, Marciano. That was all.

Q. Was Mr. Innes there?

A. I can't recollect him being there, but I believe he [5094] was. I believe he was, yes.

Q. What happened after you met Mr. Bridges, you and the others?

A. We met Mr. Bridges and Mr. Meriweather, who was there with him.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. Do you know who Mr. Meriweather was?

A. Mr. Meriweather is an official of the MEBA on the Pacific Coast.

Q. What does the "MEBA" stand for?

A. Marine Engineers Beneficial Association. After we met them there were some photographers there that took pictures of them leaving the plane. They got in a Ford Sedan. We instructed the man with the Ford Coupe to take it back to the Union hall as we didn't need it, and we took them to the Victoria Hotel, where they registered.

Q. Now, at the time, or after the time that Bridges and Meriweather registered at the hotel did you and/or any of the others go up to Mr. Bridges' or Mr. Meriweather's room?

A. Yes. I and I believe—I am not too sure—, that Cunningham went up to the room with him and stayed a few minutes and talked about the meetings that were arranged in Boston and Philadelphia and Baltimore, and then left him to get some rest.

Q. Now, at that time, Mr. Curran, was any meeting held [5095] in the room of Mr. Bridges or in the room of Mr. Meriweather at which Brdiges, Roy Hudson, Tom Raye, Al Lannon, you and Peter Innes were present? A. No.

Q. Was Roy Hudson present at that time?

A. No.

Q. Was Tom Raye present? A. No.

Presiding Inspector: At what time?

Mr. Gladstein: In the room.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Presiding Inspector: Well, he says there was no such meeting. You can ask him, if you want to, if there was any meeting with any of those people there.

Mr. Gladstein: I beg your pardon.

Presiding Inspector: Was there a meeting with any of them? Of course, you have only really, strictly included all, a meeting with all of them.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. I will ask you this: Was there a meeting in the room with Bridges and Meriweather between any of the people that I have mentioned?

Presiding Inspector: Except other than you and Mr. Bridges.

A. Well, there was that one meeting of a few minutes after we took them up to the room, which I have already pointed [5096] out. That was the only meeting. Attending that meeting were Cunningham, myself and Meriweather and Bridges. That was the only meeting.

Q. From the time that you got to the hotel with Bridges and Meriweather until the time that you left, Mr. Curran, did you see Roy Hudson?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you see Tom Rave? A. No.

Q. Al Lannon? A. No.

Q. Or Mervyn Rathborne?

A. No, I did not.

Q. At the time that you left Mr. Bridges' room,

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Mr. Curran, can you state whether anybody was in that room outside of Bridges and Meriweather?

A. I can state that when I left the room there was no one else there but those two.

Q. Now, before you actually left Mr. Bridges' room had you settled upon the itinerary of Mr. Bridges with respect to the various speeches he was to make and the manner in which he was to get to those places? A. Yes, we did.

Q. What was that discussion?

A. What was discussed?

Q. Yes. What was the discussion on that subject? [5097]

A. The discussion was—the main thing was, we had a limited amount of time between meetings and we were trying to figure the fastest way to get to those meetings so as to get them all in in the limited amount of time that we had. The meeting in Boston took place at night and we arranged to fly to Boston and have the Ford Sedan which brought us over from the airport be driven to Boston to bring us back from Boston after that meeting.

Q. Was there also an arrangement made for Bridges to speak elsewhere than Boston?

A. Yes. At Philadelphia the following day, and then at New York on the 16th and then from that meeting to Baltimore.

Q. Now, had this general idea of having Bridges speak not only in New York but in these other cities that you mentioned been communicated to you prior to Bridges ever coming out to the East Coast?

A. We discussed it in the Strike Committee, if that's what you mean. It had been a daily discussion of how to arrange mass meetings in order to clarify the issues to the public.

Q. Well, do you recall whether you received by telegram or other method prior to the 14th of December word from the West Coast that Bridges was coming out and that arrangements should be made for mass meetings to be held or arranged for in [5098] cities in addition to New York.

A. Oh, yes. We received communications from Mervyn Rathborne, I believe, at that time.

Q. And then you say there were discussions in the East Coast Strike Committee on this point?

A. Every day.

Q. Were the preliminary arrangements for Bridges to speak in Boston, Baltimore and Philadelphia made before Bridges ever came to New York on the 14th of December? A. Yes.

Presiding Inspector: You don't mean with Bridges?

Mr. Gladstein: No.

Presiding Inspector: Preliminary arrangements.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, all right. I will ask the witness.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What were those arrangements, Mr. Curran?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Presiding Inspector: With whom was it?

Mr. Gladstein: All right.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. With whom?

A. Well, the arrangements were, first, with the Strike Committee where it was agreed upon that he should come, that we should request him coming. Then we took up the question of actually getting him there with the West Coast [5099] Strike Committee and with Mr. Bridges himself. And those arrangements were concluded before he came East.

Q. All right. But then after the arrangements were concluded that Mr. Bridges was to come East how did you go about arranging for the mass meetings to be held in Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore?

A. We had the Local Strike Committee in Boston make the arrangements for renting the hall and for getting out the proper leaflets and publicity on that meeting. We had the same thing done in the City of Baltimore and in Philadelphia. Those Local Strike Committees carried that on. And in New York we set up a Committee headed by Jack Lawrenson, who was the Secretary, to go out and see what the possibilities were of borrowing money in order to rent Madison Square Garden.

Q. Did you go to Boston with Mr. Bridges?

A. I did.

Q. By plane? A. Yes.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. Was that the first speech that he made?

A. It was.

Q. And where was it held?

A. It was held in an opera house on the—I'm not too sure, but I believe it is Tremont Street. I believe it's Tremont Street in Boston.

Q. Did you speak at that meeting? [5100]

A. I did.

Q. After the meeting was over do you know where Bridges went?

A. Yes. We went and got in a Ford Sedan. I recall it very clearly. It was bitter cold and one of the windows were broken in the sedan and we very nearly froze getting back to New York.

Q. What did you do after you returned to New York?

A. I don't know exactly what Mr. Bridges did when he got back to New York. I left him at the hotel to thaw out and I went on down to the room I had downtown to thaw out, too.

Q. Where did you then go with Bridges the next time that you saw him?

A. The next time Bridges went down to Philadelphia the following day.

Q. Did you accompany him?

A. No, I did not.

Q. You know that he was to speak there, is that correct?

A. Yes, at the meeting in Philadelphia.

Q. Did you see him on his return?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. I saw him when he got back just a short time before the meeting in the Garden.

Q. That would be on the night of the 16th?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you present at the meeting at the Garden? [5101]

A. I was, and spoke there.

Q. You spoke there? A. Yes.

Q. Now, do you remember Bridges speaking there? A. I do.

Q. After the meeting was over—after the mass meeting was over do you recall what took place with respect to Bridges? A. I do.

Q. What took place?

A. After the meeting was over it was quite late. I believe it was around 12:30. The meeting had stretched. In Madison Square Garden there is a regular press room just abaft the platform and we went in the press room where the press wanted to meet with Bridges. In the meantime he was grabbed ahold of by a red headed fellow from Rhode Island by the name of Maynard who recognized him as an old shipmate and insisted that he talk to him.

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I move that the witness be told to go to the——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): Yes. I don't think we need to have these immaterial details.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, he is telling what took place.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Presiding Inspector: I know. Well, he talked with a man named Maynard. And then what?

[5102]

The Witness: Then we talked to the press.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Who was in the press room when that was taking place?

A. Well, I should say about five or six or seven newspaper men and a couple of photographers.

Q. Who else?

A. Myself. I believe Innes was there. I believe that was all. I think we closed the door then in order to keep the red headed guy out.

Q. And Bridges?

A. And Bridges out? He was in.

Q. No. I say, Bridges was in the room.

A. Yes.

Q. Now, after the press conference what did Bridges do, if you know?

A. He came out the door and that red headed guy grabbed him and away they went.

Presiding Inspector: A second time?

The Witness: He got him and away they went.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, Mr. Curran, at any time that evening was there a meeting in this ante-room or press room at which, or anywhere in the Madison Square Garden, Innes, you, Bridges, McCuistion and a man named David Leeds, Tom Raye, Al Lannon and [5103] possibly Roy Hudson were present?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. No.

Q. State whether Roy Hudson was on the platform or in any part of the Garden as far as you know that evening.

A. As far as I know he wasn't on the platform, and I believe there were twenty thousand people in the Garden of all denominations and all faiths. I don't know whether he was in the Garden or not. If he had a ticket he could go in, I believe.

Q. What about Raye? Was he on the platform or in an ante-room with you or in the press room or any other kind of a room with you and Bridges that evening? A. No.

Q. What about Al Lannon? A. No.

Q. What about David Leeds?

A. I don't even know him. I wouldn't know him if I saw him.

Q. To your knowledge was Roy Hudson in Bridges' presence, in the presence of Harry Bridges at any time, as far as you know, from the time that Bridges came to New York on the 14th until the time that he left?

Presiding Inspector: That is a little doubtful. What do you mean by that? [5104]

Mr. Gladstein: Well, I mean immediate presence.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. Did he ever see him with Mr. Bridges?

Mr. Gladstein: That is right.

A. No, I did not.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. At any time on the evening of December 16th, Mr. Curran, were you present when William McCuistion, a man named David Leeds and Harry Bridges had some discussion about Bridges receiving reimbursement for his expenses in coming to the East? A. No, I was not. [5105]

Q. Will you state whether, in your presence, Bridges asked for or received any reimbursement for the expenses incurred in his coming to the east?

A. No; we were paying him as we went.

Q. Will you state whether, in your presence, Bridges received from a man named David Leeds, either $400 or $500 for which he signed and gave a receipt?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. Or any sum of money?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. How long have you known Peter Innes?

A. Since the spring of 1936.

Q. Have you known him since that time as a member of the National Maritime Union?

A. Up to a certain point.

Q. What point?

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, if your Honor please, I will object to any question along this line here. Up to what point? The witness has testified that he knew Innes from the spring of 1936, up to a certain point, and now counsel desires to bring out, and is asking the witness what that point is.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Mr. Gladstein: Right. What is wrong with that?

Presiding Inspector: I suppose if you know a person, and it is counsel's idea, you always known him, of course, in a certain sense, and in a certain sense that is true. What you [5106] mean is, did he have any communications with him, any transactions with him after a certain point, isn't that it?

Mr. Gladstein: Or association. The response of the witness indicates that he intended to say that he has known Innes, or associated with him, up to a certain date or point of time.

Presiding Inspector: I am going to allow what you want, but I am going to try to straighten out the question, or did try to, along the line that the objection indicated.

Mr. Gladstein: All right, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Of course, you are entitled to show when they ceased to have transactions with one another.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. When did your association with Innes, whatever it may have been prior to that time, end, Mr. Curran?

A. Either in the winter of 1938 or in the spring of 1939.

Q. What enables you to fix that date?

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, your Honor, I will object to that as being immaterial as to what occurred.

Presiding Inspector: I think I will take it. This is a broad investigation and I will take it, very briefly.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Will you answer the question?

A. In the spring of 1939, I am fairly sure it was, at that time Peter Innes was ordered suspended from the union. He was [5107] occupying the position of buying——

Presiding Inspector: We don't care anything about that, except that he was suspended.

A. (Continuing): He was suspended in the spring of 1939.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, are you acquainted with the reputation that Peter Innes has for truth and veracity among the men with whom Innes has worked and associated with in and about the various branches of the NMU? A. I am.

Q. Is that reputation for truth and veracity good or bad? A. Very bad.

Q. Would you believe him under oath?

A. I would not.

Mr. Gladstein: I am checking my notes, your Honor.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Curran, are you acquainted with the manner in which the Madison Square Garden was rented for the occasion of the mass meeting on December 16th?

A. Yes. The Joint Strike Committee instructed the Secretary of the Committee to take a couple of members of the Committee and go out and try to raise the money by borrowing it with the understanding that it would be repaid if and when we were able to raise the money.

Q. Do you know what the efforts of those members of the [5108] Strike Committee were to obtain money?

A. Oh, yes; very definitely.

Mr. Del Guercio: Your Honor, I will object to that unless it is to show who arranged to rent Madison Square Garden. As to any unsuccessful attempt made by the Strike Committee, I don't think that is in issue in this case and should not be gone into.

Mr. Gladstein: I am not so sure about that. I think the witness is entitled to describe the efforts that the Strike Committee made, or its members made, to obtain that Garden.

Presiding Inspector: I don't see that it is very material.

Mr. Gladstein: I will tell you what the materiality is that is in my mind. The Government has introduced in evidence a lease made out to a man named David Leeds, who was acting as agent for the east coast strikers Committee. The Government has also introduced other leases, or contracts, made out to David Leeds in which Leeds was acting for the Communist Party. Now, the Government seeks to have you draw an inference, therefore, that the East Coast Strike Committee was under the domination of the Communist Party, and that the Madison Square Garden meeting was arranged by the Communist Party, and that Harry Bridges spoke there under the auspices of the Communist Party.

We are seeking to show you that none of those contentions are true and in order to do that we must show you what the East [5109] Coast Strike Committee actually did by way of efforts to obtain the Garden and the money for it.

I think we are entitled to do that.

Mr. Del Guercio: The record speaks for itself, your Honor. Certainly this witness will not attempt, or counsel will not attempt to contradict what the record shows as to the rental of Madison Square Garden, by this witness.

Mr. Gladstein: The records don't say anything about the efforts of the Strike Committee to obtain the Garden, or what was done. That was a lease, as I understand it.

Mr. Del Guercio: They can produce the lease.

Presiding Inspector: This seems remote. Finally they got Mr. Leeds to sign this lease, or Mr. Leeds did sign it. Whether they got him to or not is another question.

Mr. Gladstein: I think we should be entitled to put in the facts, your Honor, because you see it is, as I say——

Presiding Inspector: Does he know anything about this?

Mr. Gladstein: I think I asked him if he knew what efforts were made to obtain the Garden and he said "Yes." My next question, if I haven't asked the question I intended to, was to have him state of his own knowledge what the efforts were to obtain the Garden or money for the Garden meeting that night.

Presiding Inspector: You didn't make any of these attempts yourself?

The Witness: Yes, I did. [5110]

Presiding Inspector: You did?

The Witness: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: I will allow what he made, himself, first.

A. (Continuing): Well, we made the rounds in New York to the other trade unions and other people, the Republican Party on the West Side, and the Democratic Party there, and others, in an attempt to raise money to rent the hall, but we were unsuccessful. In the case of some we were even kicked out on the basis of the fact that we were classified as outlaw strikers.

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, in view of what the witness has testified to I move to strike it out. Apparently he is——

Presiding Inspector: I will strike out the statement that they were thrown out on the ground that they were outlaw strikers. I don't think that is material—merely that they were denied their application for money. That is all that is material.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. You may continue.

A. Then the Secretary of the Strike Committee, Jack Lawrenson, and some other members of the

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Committee working with him, said that they had got possibilities of raising the money to rent the Garden on the basis that we would return the money.

[5111]

Q. Did they say from whom?

A. They did not.

Q. Go ahead.

A. And on that basis we were satisfied and went ahead with arrangements for the Garden.

Q. Did they mention whether it was from any private person or organization, whether it was from several people or organizations?

A. No, they did not.

Q. Now, at that meeting you say you spoke, is that right? A. Yes.

Q. What was in a general way—I don't want you to go into detail—what was in general the condition of the east coast strike with respect to finances during that period?

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, if your Honor please, I will object to that. While we would like to go into the east coast strike matter and show——

Presiding Inspector: I will let him show it.

Mr. Del Guercio (Continuing):—it was dominated by the Communist Party, we cannot make that as a basis for this hearing here. We are only trying Harry Bridges now as to whether he is a member of the Communist Party.

Presiding Inspector: That is the basis for their having to go out and get the money, trying to get subscriptions for that purpose.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Mr. Gladstein: That is right. [5112]

Presiding Inspector: I will take it. I believe he has already said they were hard up. He, as Chairman of the Strike Committee, said he didn't know from what source the money came. I will take it.

What was your financial condition?

The Witness: It was terrible.

Presiding Inspector: You were hard up?

The Witness: We took up collections in the street, got money in any way we could, aside from stealing it—we didn't steal any—and the men were sleeping in——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): Just a minute. I don't know as anybody accused him yet of stealing money.

Presiding Inspector: That is just a joke.

The Witness: I didn't say anybody accused me of stealing money. I said "aside from stealing."

We raised money through collections, through speakers at meetings, and through shaking cans on the street, and various other means. We very rarely had enough to provide sleeping quarters for all the strikers. Some had to sleep on the floor in other places. None questioned the source of the collected money, and we took the money as long as it was spendable from anybody that gave it to us because it bought food and it provided places to sleep for a large group of striking seamen.

Mr. Del Guercio: I move that the witness' answer be stricken, if your Honor please.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Presiding Inspector: I think I will let it stand.

[5113]

Mr. Del Guercio: That is a vivid picture, but it has nothing to do with this hearing.

Mr. Gladstein: Is that part of the objection?

Presiding Inspector: This may have some basis, you know, some connection with that payment which the testimony shows, or attempts to show.

Mr. Del Guercio: We are not trying to paint a picture. We could paint it, probably paint it in drab colors. This witness here has painted it in vivid colors. We are not interested in that strike.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think it makes much difference.

Mr. Gladstein: It would be very unusual. Mr. Del Guercio usually paints everybody in red colors.

Mr. Del Guercio: I think we could paint this in red too.

Presiding Inspector: I am color blind. Go ahead.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. In your Strike Committee did you ever have occasion, prior to this Madison Square Garden meeting, to have any discussion with respect to whether or not a contribution or a donation from the Communist Party should be accepted?

A. Well, the minutes of the meetings at which we took up collections to support the strikers will show in several instances—one in particular, I believe, where a man rose to the [5114] floor and said,

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

"I have $200 here from the Communist Party," and he had a roll of bills.

I asked the membership, "Should we accept it?"

And I almost got shot, because they were hungry. They said, "Certainly we should accept it."

Mr. Del Guercio: "Almost got shot"—that is kind of hard to believe.

The Witness: It is a figure of speech. They didn't have any guns.

Presiding Inspector: They said they would accept it, the contribution of $200 from the Communist Party.

Mr. Del Guercio: You didn't get shot, I suppose?

The Witness: No, I didn't get shot.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Was the money accepted because the membership needed it and ordered you to take it?

Mr. Myron: I object to that.

Presiding Inspector: It was accepted. He pictured their plight.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, Mr. Curran, do you know whether, after Mr. Bridges returned west, after the Madison Square Garden meeting, whether the West Coast sent a donation or donations to the East Coast strikers?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that if your Honor please, as being immaterial and irrelevant. [5115]

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Presiding Inspector: Is that material?

Mr. Gladstein: This bears on the question of the so-called argument—you remember that Mr. Innes and Mr. McCuistion talked about Bridges demanding $500 and I wish to show——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing): That wasn't an argument; that was testimony.

Presiding Inspector: All right; go ahead.

Mr. Gladstein: I wish to show, in addition to the testimony that Mr. Curran has given, that no such incident occurred, and Mr. Bridges will testify on the same subject. I wish to show that, rather than having the east coast Strike Committee pay Mr. Bridges' expenses, the thing was the other way around; that the west coast contributed, donated to the east coast, because of the east coast's perilous condition.

Presiding Inspector: That was afterwards, wasn't it? They sent the money afterwards?

Mr. Gladstein: Even so, your Honor, the source of that money that was paid to Mr. Bridges may be of great importance. Counsel evidently thinks it is. But it was paid to the east coast by the west coast.

Presiding Inspector: I don't see that it is material.

Mr. Gladstein: It isn't that a repayment was made, but that the west coast actually contributed funds to the east coast, rather than—— [5116]

Presiding Inspector: This is a sympathetic strike, was a sympathetic strike on the part of the east coast.

Mr. Gladstein: Right. It would not be unusual for the west coast to help supply funds to the east coast. That is true.

Presiding Inspector: I think that would be natural.

Mr. Gladstein: But it is rather against the natural thing for an incident to have occurred along the lines as described by some of the Government witnesses; that is——

Presiding Inspector: From your side of the case; yes. I suppose Mr. Del Guercio would argue it was highly the natural thing.

Mr. Gladstein: Of course he would.

Mr. Del Guercio: What the union did on the west coast and what the union was doing there has no bearing on what Bridges did himself. We are not——

Presiding Inspector: I think it isn't material. I wouldn't go into that.

Mr. Gladstein: I recall some testimony by Mr. McCuistion that he argued against giving Bridges this money because he, McCuistion, would have, or did have, I forget which he said, have a hard time explaining to the hungry men the following day why they didn't get some money out of the meeting and Bridges was getting this money; and I remember that Mr. McCuistion said that the Communist Party made $400 or $500 out of this thing. That is what he said. [5117]

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Presiding Inspector: Yes, I think there was some such testimony.

Mr. Gladstein: I want to show the facts were quite different; that Mr. ——

Presiding Inspector: This isn't the Communist Party here.

Mr. Gladstein: I understand, but I want to show that the facts are that Mr. Bridges was influential—of course, we can have Mr. Bridges' testimony direct on it, but as long as Mr. Curran is on the stand and is in a position to testify to his own knowledge, I want to show that Mr. Bridges, when he got back to the west coast, saw to it that money was contributed to the east coast, and, that from that you are entitled to draw inferences as to whether it is credible such an incident could have taken place as the kind described by Mr. McCuistion and, I think, also by Mr. Innes.

Mr. Del Guercio: If the Court please——

Presiding Inspector: Who was it that Mr. McCuistion said gave this money?

Mr. Gladstein: David Leeds, as I recall.

Presiding Inspector: He is not one of the Strike Committee. Aren't we getting into trouble here?

Mr. Del Guercio: It seems David Leeds is the person to call. He is still alive on the east coast in New York.

Presiding Inspector: I don't see that this has any materiality. [5118]

Mr. Gladstein: This money which was collected at the meeting was collected for the benefit of the strikers.

Presiding Inspector: That doesn't appear one way or the other.

Mr. Gladstein: I think that has been testified to.

Presiding Inspector: In fact, it appears the other way, according to the testimony given by the Government.

Mr. Gladstein: I will ask the witness——

Presiding Inspector: Very well.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. I think you said a collection was taken up at the Madison Square Garden meeting on December 16, 1936? A. That is right.

Q. Now, for whom, or whose benefit was that collection taken up?

Presiding Inspector: Who received it?

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Who received it?

A. Madison Square Garden received it. We didn't take up enough to clear the meeting.

Q. But for whose benefit did you intend to make a collection?

A. For the striking seamen.

Q. Was any of it to go to the Communist Party?

A. Not that I know of. [5119]

Q. Was any of it to go to Bridges?

A. Not that I know of.

Presiding Inspector: Did you know that the Garden had been paid in full?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

The Witness: We knew it after the collection was taken up because it had to be paid back and that matter cleared up.

Presiding Inspector: Who was it paid back to?

The Witness: I understand it was paid to the Garden.

Presiding Inspector: But the Garden had already been paid.

The Witness: As I understand it, the Garden was guaranteed; that was my understanding of it, that it was guaranteed.

Presiding Inspector: You don't know about this personally?

The Witness: No, I don't.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, Mr. Curran, do you know what the official position is of the Congress of Industrial Organizations with respect to the present Bridges deportation case?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that.

Presiding Inspector: How is that material?

Mr. Grossman: May I state this, because it was in my argument that this question first came up: I don't recall which witness it was, but I definitely made the argument that the anti-labor and, in particular, the anti-CIO bias of a witness was material to this case, because by reason of the action of the CIO the Harry Bridges deportation case, and the [5120] deportation of Harry Bridges is identified in the mind of the public with the CIO and the labor movement. Therefor, if it is so identified, and a witness has a bias against the CIO, that bias we may reasonably conclude, at least, will be transferred also to Harry Bridges. Now, we haven't proved that yet. I made that as an argument to justify going into the anti-CIO or anti-labor bias on the part of witnesses.

I don't recall quite what the ruling was, but my recollection is that your Honor permitted us to go into that.

What we were relying on at that time was merely my argument that such was the fact.

We intend now to go into this and prove that such was the fact; that is, to prove that not only the CIO has taken a position in support of this case, but the position has been such, and given such publicity that, in the mind of the public generally, this case, or this deportation, is associated with a CIO and, therefore, a prejudice or bias on the part of the witness against the CIO or labor unions generally, you may reasonably conclude—you don't have to but you may reasonably conclude—would be transferred to a prejudice or bias against Harry Bridges, or in favor of his deportation. [5121]

Mr. Del Guercio: Well now, if the Court please——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): Well, I think that is pretty remote, Mr. Grossman. Pretty remote.

Mr. Grossman: Your Honor, I don't see how it could be remote. If we assume that a witness has a bias against the CIO, if we assume that this case is so tied up in the minds of the public because of the action of the CIO with the CIO, I don't think it is remote that a man would transfer in his mind a bias against the CIO to Harry Bridges. I don't mean "transfer" it, but apply it to Harry Bridges. I don't think that is at all remote. I think that is the way the human mind works. I think it is perfectly reasonable.

Now, I don't say that you will reach that conclusion or that you will draw that conclusion. All I say is that it is reasonable that you should, and we have the right to introduce evidence so that if you find a witness biased against the CIO you have a chance to conclude that that is also a bias in favor of Harry Bridges' deportation.

Presiding Inspector: Do you think that you can show that the Socialist Party has passed resolutions—I don't suggest anything has occurred—in favor of the work of the Bridges Defense Committee, or would you say that you can show that if it were the Presbyterian Church——

Mr. Grossman (Interposing): It depends on the extent.

Presiding Inspector (Continuing):—and then all the [5122] people who didn't belong to the Presbyterian Church would have a bias against Harry Bridges on that account?

Mr. Grossman: I say that this goes farther.

Presiding Inspector: I don't see it.

Mr. Grossman: We intend to show, your Honor, that the position of the CIO has been such that at least the average man in the street, or at least the average trade unionist, or at least the average witness who has testified in this case, who is interested in this subject would reach the conclusion that the CIO and Harry Bridges and his deportation are integrally tied up, which is more than a mere support of it. I wouldn't say that action by the Socialist Party would be relevant, but if we can show, as we intend to do by this witness, that it is so tied up by reason of what was done and said by the CIO, then I say that that is relevant.

Mr. Del Guercio: If the Court please, if counsel is concerned with the public, I think we could remove—we have tried to throughout all this hearing—by giving a statement to the press that the Court made. We are not trying the CIO.

Presiding Inspector: No.

Mr. Del Guercio: We are not interested in the CIO in this hearing. We are trying one man, and that is Harry Bridges.

Presiding Inspector: You are not even trying him.

Mr. Del Guercio: We are trying to try him.

[5123]

Presiding Inspector: I mean to say, it isn't a trial.

Mr. Del Guercio: No. It isn't a trial. It is a hearing to establish certain facts.

Presiding Inspector: It is a civil hearing.

Mr. Del Guercio: And we are doing that. The Government hasn't at any time brought in the name "CIO" for the sake of the CIO. We are not concerned with it. We are not concerned with the American Federation of Labor. Harry Bridges isn't the CIO. We are not trying Harry Bridges as a CIO member. We are trying—I say, I use the word "trying"—this is a fact-finding body. We are trying to determine if Harry Bridges is not a member of the CIO but a member of the Communist Party, an admitted member of the IWW, an affiliate of the Marine Workers Industrial Union, and nothing else. We haven't at any time tried any trade union, CIO or anyone else. We haven't brought that name in.

Mr. Gladstein: If your Honor please, I think counsel's memory is not long enough to recall the first witness on the stand, who was not cross examined by us and, therefore, everything that he said must have been in response to direct questions put to him by Mr. Del Guercio. And one of the things that Mr. Gitlow said was that the CIO is a culmination of a deep-dyed plot—those are not his words—laid in the Kremlin in Moscow to develop industrial unionism in the United States. That is testimony in this case which was solicited by Mr. [5124] Del Guercio and which was given by his own witness, namely, that the CIO is a resulted plan and the culmination of plans of the Communists in Moscow, Russia.

Now, if that isn't an attack on the CIO, then I doubt whether Mr. Del Guercio understands what the five million members of the CIO are like. Of course, they would resent that kind of testimony and do, and I think it is testimony which was intentionally put in as part of an attack on the CIO.

Now, I am entitled to that opinion.

Mr. Del Guercio: I don't want to grant counsel's——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): Wait!.

Mr. Gladstein: Even though Mr. Del Guercio may disagree with me. There are other witnesses in this case who have attacked the CIO, your Honor, either directly or indirectly. You will recall the testimony of Mr. Schnering. He made an attack. I don't recall the exact words or even too much of the substance, but he made an attack on the CIO. He said that the CIO was so Communist dominated that they wouldn't even let him work in his state since he had left the Communist Party. And I think there is testimony by Mr. Laurence which is directly against the CIO. And what about Mr. Kelley. Mr. Kelley made a pretty good attack of his own on the CIO, and when we attempted to show by cross examination that he had attempted to get some unfair advantages of an em- [5125] ployer, you recall that he made an attack on the CIO.

Now, I don't have it at hand at this moment, but there have been three, four, five or six witnesses that the Government has produced who have attacked the CIO.

Presiding Inspector: I think Mr. Kelley introduced some gratuitously at the end of his testimony.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, he did. And that isn't all. I think Mr. Chase also. Oh, yes. Mr. Chase said that the whole International Furniture Workers and maybe some others—I am not sure about this—were all Communist controlled and Communist dominated, and that he, Mr. Chase, has now devoted his life to making up for the period when he erred so by being a member not only of the Communist Party but of the group which was pro-CIO and for industrial unions.

Presiding Inspector: What do you want to show here?

Mr. Gladstein: We want to show what the CIO position officially is on the Bridges case.

Mr. Del Guercio: That would certainly be remote, irrelevant and immaterial. The CIO isn't trying Harry Bridges. What their stand is on the Harry Bridges deportation case is unimportant. We might call other groups.

Presiding Inspector: Let me get the point directly. You want to show they are indifferent to the Bridges case?

Mr. Gladstein: On the contrary, we want to show that they are very much concerned about the present attempt to [5126] deport Harry Bridges; that they feel that it reflects a general anti-labor movement in the United States and that it is a symbol ——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): We can't go into that. That would be criticising——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): The Government.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Presiding Inspector (Continuing): ——the Government of the United States and the Congress of the United States.

Mr. Gladstein: It is pertinent, it is material on the proposition that since witnesses for the Government have attacked the CIO, this bias of theirs against the CIO is one which, as Mr. Grossman has pointed out, is the kind that can be applied against Harry Bridges.

Presiding Inspector: And then you want to have the other side draw the implication that all the people who are in any way connected with CIO are biased in favor of Mr. Bridges?

Mr. Gladstein: If the Government wants to claim that, that's perfectly all right.

Presiding Inspector: I am just asking you. Doesn't that very statement show the remoteness of this sort of thing?

Mr. Gladstein: I don't think so, your Honor. I don't think it is remote in any sense of the term.

Presiding Inspector: It seems to me very remote on the first blush. [5127]

Mr. Gladstein: I don't see it, your Honor. Of course, if the Government will stipulate that the membership and leadership of the CIO are biased in favor of Harry Bridges in this case; if that's what they would claim, if that's the inference that they would draw, and that they are biased in favor of Harry Bridges and are supporting him in an effort to defeat the attempt to deport him, we will take the situation, if that is the inference that they want to draw, instead of offering the proof.

Presiding Inspector: No. I think they would immediately draw the inference that all your witnesses were absolutely biased against the Government's case.

Mr. Gladstein: Let them argue that inference. We couldn't stop them from arguing that inference anyway.

Presiding Inspector: No.

Mr. Del Guercio: We are not concerned, your Honor. Our position has been that what the position of the CIO is—we are not trying the CIO. There hasn't been any attack on the CIO.

Presiding Inspector: Was this testimony offered before Dean Landis?

Mr. Gladstein: No. There wasn't any occasion for it.

Mr. Grossman: Your Honor, may I say this? There wasn't occasion because the question of the relevancy of anti-labor [5128] bias was never raised. It has been raised in this case. The question of whether——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): Raised by whom?

Mr. Grossman: I would like to state this. We recognize that in an ordinary Court or any hearing you can consider and you may conclude that the witnesses that have testified for Harry Bridges because of their membership in a union are biased in his favor. That doesn't mean that you disbelieve them. As a matter of fact, the fact that we establish a bias——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): It is a pretty weak bias, I think.

Mr. Grossman: Well, all right. But the point is, it is a bias.

Presiding Inspector: Everyone who is called on one side or the other is presumed to be biased to some extent. That's the reason you don't allow leading questions favorable to the side, in favor of the side on which they are called. That is an elementary proposition of law.

Mr. Grossman: But, your Honor, you will still admit that regardless of how much weight you are going to give a bias that nevertheless that bias is relevant, and we do admit that any CIO sentiment that our witnesses have, pro-CIO sentiment, could be considered by you as some evidence of their bias in favor of Harry Bridges, obviously, because that is the reverse of what we are trying to establish. But as [5129] Mr. Gladstein pointed out, we couldn't even argue against your taking that into account and giving it some weight.

Presiding Inspector: Now, you merely want to show that the CIO has adopted resolutions.

Mr. Grossman: Has taken a public position.

Presiding Inspector: And made contributions in favor of the Bridges Defense?

Mr. Grossman: What generally they have done, yes.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Presiding Inspector: I will take it to that very limited extent.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, if your Honor please,——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): Yes, over your objection.

Mr. Del Guercio (Continuing): ——I object strenuously to this also because we are injecting another issue in this case.

Presiding Inspector: I think it cuts both ways, Mr. Del Guercio.

Mr. Del Guercio: Even though it were favorable to the Government, your Honor, I object to it, because I don't think this is the proper hearing to go into what the CIO—resolutions that they may have adopted or what they adopted. We are trying an individual here not because of his membership in the CIO.

Presiding Inspector: I think this is very remote, but I [5130] will take it that far, as to whether they passed resolutions officially and whether they made contributions.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Will you answer that question, Mr. Curran?

Presiding Inspector: I think it cuts both ways.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. As to the official position of the CIO on the deportation case.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to the question.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. I will take it.

A. The official position of the National CIO on the present second trial of Harry Bridges is to the effect that it is a flank attack on the labor movement and they have voted in all of the Internationals of CIO and in the National CIO to give it full support.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. To give what full support?

A. The Harry Bridges Defense, give it full support financially, morally in order to defeat the flank attack on the labor movement.

Q. As an official——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): I didn't hear that. "Financially and morally"?

The Witness: Financially and morally. [5131]

Presiding Inspector: "In order to defeat a flank attack on the labor movement", he says.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Has the CIO set up an official committee, National Committee? A. It has.

Q. To assist in the defense?

A. It has. It consists of Sherman Dalrymple, President of the United Rubber Workers of America, and David McDonald, Executive Secretary of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

Q. And do you know whether President Philip Murray of the CIO has issued an official statement on the case?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to the leading question, if your Honor please.

Mr. Gladstein: I haven't finished it.

Presiding Inspector: I will exclude it.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Do you know whether President Philip Murray has done or said anything by way of or in connection with the Bridges case?

Presiding Inspector: I will exclude it.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that.

Presiding Inspector: He has given the official position. [5132] Whether the President has supported the official decision or not is entirely immaterial. We have got the official position.

Mr. Gladstein: I will just ask this question.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. The National Committee, consisting of Mr. Dalrymple, Mr. McDonald, do you know how that Committee came into existence?

A. It came into existence——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): I will object to that, if your Honor please.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. I will take it. That is how it was appointed?

Mr. Gladstein: That is right, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: How it was appointed and whether it was appointed pursuant to a vote of the organization?

Mr. Gladstein: Whichever way it came into existence.

Presiding Inspector: What is that?

Mr. Gladstein: Whichever way it came into existence.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Presiding Inspector: Whatever way it came about.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. How did the Committee come into existence?

A. It was appointed at a meeting of the Vice-Presidents and Executive Officers of the CIO. Philip Murray made the appointment with the approval of the Executive Officers of CIO and issued a statement over his signature. [5133]

Presiding Inspector: We don't care about the statement.

Mr. Gladstein: I don't know whether the record——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): We have got the official attitude.

Mr. Gladstein: I don't know whether the record shows this, your Honor, but I think it should.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. That is, what is the official position of Mr. Philip Murray of the CIO.

Presiding Inspector: That has been shown.

A. The official position of Mr. Philip Murray, President of the CIO, is that this—— [5134]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. (Interposing) What is his position in the CIO?

A. He is President of the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

Mr. Gladstein: That is all I want. Thank you.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Cross Examination

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Is the Congress of Industrial Organizations interested in knowing whether or not Harry Bridges is a member of the Communist Party?

A. I suppose it probably is.

Q. And if it were found by a fact finding body that he was a member of the Communist Party, and still is, what would the attitude of the CIO be toward Harry Bridges?

A. You are asking me a hypothetical question that I can't answer.

Q. That is a hypothetical question, and you refuse to answer?

A. I don't refuse to answer. I am not in a position to say what the Congress would do. It is composed of five million members.

Q. Do you know of your own knowledge whether Harry Bridges is a member of the Communist Party? A. I do not.

Q. Do you know if this Committee that you have spoken [5135] about, of the CIO, knows whether Harry Bridges is a member of the Communist Party?

A. I do not.

Q. Has it investigated to determine whether Harry Bridges is a member of the Communist Party? A. It has not.

Q. Is it interested—I will ask you again—in knowing whether Harry Bridges is a member of the Communist Party?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Mr. Gladstein: That has been asked and answered.

A. I am not in a position to say.

Presiding Inspector: He said that before and he keeps saying it.

Mr. Del Guercio: Do you want to take the noon recess?

Presiding Inspector: Yes; until two o'clock.

(Whereupon, at 12:00 o'clock noon a recess was taken until 2:00 o'clock p.m. of the same day.) [5136]

After Recess—2:00 o'clock p.m.

Presiding Inspector: You may proceed, Mr. Del Guercio.

JOSEPH CURRAN

called as a witness on behalf of the Alien, having been previously duly sworn, testified further as follows:

Cross Examination (Resumed)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. I believe you testified that you were one of the five or six Vice Presidents of the National Maritime Union, is that correct?

A. No, I did not.

Q. What was your testimony?

A. My testimony was that I was one of the National Vice-Presidents of the CIO.

Q. And there are how many Vice Presidents?

A. Six.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. And you say that there are about approximately 55,000 members?

A. In the National Maritime Union.

Q. Has the question of the deportation proceedings against Harry Bridges been submitted to every one of those 55,000 members?

A. It has been submitted to the membership of the National Maritime Union. [5137]

Q. Merely submitted to the officers of that Union, is that correct? A. That is not true.

Q. How long have you been a member—when did you first join any union?

A. I was a member of the Sailors Union of the Pacific in 1926.

Q. And for how long a period?

A. Approximately three months.

Q. Then what happened?

A. My membership lapsed, based on the fact at that time it was a crime to be a member of a union you were blacklisted on any ship, and the patrolman never came aboard to collect your dues——

Q. (Interposing): Did I ask you about that?

A. No, you didn't.

Mr. Gladstein: I think it is responsive.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. You are volunteering that?

Presiding Inspector: I think that is remote. Wait until he asks the next question.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Where did you join the Sailors Union of the Pacific? A. San Pedro, California. [5138]

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. And what local was that?

A. It was the San Pedro branch. Harry Olsen was agent.

Q. Now, when did you next join a union?

A. I next joined a union aboard ship arriving in New York in about nineteen thirty—the early part of 1935. I am not too clear on that.

Q. You mean you weren't a member of any union from 1927 to 1935? A. That's correct.

Q. What were you doing during that period?

A. Going to sea.

Q. As what? A. As a sailor.

Q. Continuously? A. Yes.

Q. And in 1935 what union did you join?

A. In the early part of 1935 I joined the MWIU in New York.

Q. And what is the MWIU?

A. The Marine Workers Industrial Union.

Q. And affiliated with what?

A. I don't know.

Q. You joined the Marine——

A. (Interposing): I was a member for about a month.

Q. You what?

A. I was a member for about a month. [5139]

Q. Just a month?

A. Uh huh (affirmative).

Q. Paid member? A. A paid member.

Q. And who solicited, if anyone, your membership in the Marine Workers Industrial Union?

A. I don't recollect his name. A delegate came aboard and was soliciting members and I joined aboard ship. I can't recollect his name.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. On what ship were you at that time?

A. That was on the Exmoore, the American Export Lines.

Q. And were you given a membership book?

A. I was.

Q. What became of that membership book?

A. I believe I lost it when a trunk was stolen from my house in 1938 along with other personal belongings.

Q. And you have had that membership book then from 1935 to 1938, is that right?

A. I didn't carry it that long. It was in a trunk.

Q. Well, you had it in your possession from 1935 to 1938? A. In my trunk, yes.

Q. Did you read it?

A. I read parts of it, yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: May I have these exhibits here? I won't hold it up any longer. We will go into something else and come back to that. [5140]

Presiding Inspector: Very well.

Mr. Del Guercio: Will you give me the answer to the last question, please?

(The question and answer referred to were read by the reporter as above recorded.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you find out from reading this membership book in the Marine Workers Industrial Union as to what organization the Marine Workers Industrial Union was affiliated with?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. No, I did not. I thought it was the Marine Workers Industrial Union, a union of seamen.

Q. And you didn't find out then, is that it?

A. No. I can't recollect what it was affiliated with.

Q. Why did you drop out of the Marine Workers Industrial Union, if you did drop out?

A. No, I didn't drop out. The NRA dropped the union out.

Q. The NRA dropped the union out?

A. That's correct.

Q. How do you know that the Marine Workers Industrial Union was a union?

A. I know that 14,000 members, all seamen, were in it, and I know that it was a union because it fought to better some of the rotten conditions that existed. I thought it was pretty good.

Q. Did you attend any meetings of the Marine Workers [5141] Industrial Union?

A. I didn't get the opportunity. I came in——

Q. (Interposing): How do you know that there were 14,000 members of the Marine Workers Industrial Union?

A. That's correct. I couldn't be too positive, but I ran into a great many of them on that ship, and they were listed and admitted during the hearings in Washington that there were 14,000 members.

Presiding Inspector: Well, you are giving your own testimony now.

The Witness: That is correct.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Then you don't know, do you?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. I am not positive, no. I am not positive, no, that there were 14,000 members.

Q. I mean, you never did inquire as to how many?

A. I inquired of many people, yes.

Q. Of whom, for instance?

A. I inquired of——

Q. (Interposing): Of Roy Hudson?

A. Are you answering the question?

Q. Did you inquire of Roy Hudson?

A. I did not.

Q. Now, whom did you inquire of?

A. I inquired of several members of the crew on the Exmoore. [5142]

Q. And their names?

A. Who had been previous members of the—one man's name was Joiner, an A.B., and another A.B.'s name was Hayes Jones.

Q. Hayes Jones. And what did Jones tell you as to how many members there were in the Marine Workers Industrial Union?

A. He told me that there were 14,000 members.

Q. At that time? A. That time.

Q. And how many did Joiner say were in the Marine Workers Industrial Union?

A. He said about 14,000.

Q. Did you inquire of anyone else?

A. I don't recollect the names of all the seamen that were on that ship, but during discussions in the fo'c's'le collectively about eight men in there talked about the number of men in the MWIU, because I know we made a point of the fact that it was growing pretty rapidly.

Q. Did Joiner occupy any official position in the Marine Workers Industrial Union?

A. No, he did not.

Q. Did Jones—I believe you said the name was?

A. Hayes Jones, no, he was an A.B. there, a member of the union, as far as I know.

Q. How long had they been members of the Marine Workers Industrial Union?

A. I couldn't say. They had been members for some time. [5143] That is all I know. Hayes Jones was the one that—Hayes Jones and Joiner both discussed the union with me, and on the basis of the discussions we had I thought it was a good union to join, and I joined it.

Q. And you say it was the NRA that knocked it out? A. Correct.

Q. How did the NRA knock the Marine Industrial Workers Union out?

A. In this manner: During that period they had decided to have certain unions represent certain bodies of men——

Q. (Interposing): Who do you mean by "they"?

A. A committee composed of a couple of Admirals and—I can't think—one man's name was, I don't know whether his name was Harrison——

Q. (Interposing): How did they knock out the Marine Workers Industrial Union?

A. The ISU at that time had about 800 members and it was rapidly sinking into oblivion. Their officers appeared before this Committee and made a plea that the International Seamen's Unoin be the union to be recognized for the purpose of handling the Seamen's proposition. The MWIU, as I understand it, objected on the basis of representing a great many more seamen.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. Were you there?

A. I was not there. I read very carefully many documents [5144] regarding that hearing.

Q. You read documents? A. I did; yes.

Q. Where did you get these documents?

A. Well, the Marine labor papers carried stories about it, various marine labor papers, and there were mimeographed bulletins on the progress of the hearing. It was of a great deal of interest to the seamen at that time.

Q. You are not testifying of your own knowledge, but you are testifying to what you say you read?

A. I am testifying of my own knowledge; yes. I am not trying to testify to someting I don't know; I wouldn't do that.

Q. What?

A. I wouldn't testify to something I don't know.

Q. All right. Go ahead.

A. We followed it very closely because the ISU——

Q. (Interposing): Who do you mean, "We followed it very closely?"

A. The Seamen. I was an A.B. on a ship. Your knowledge of a ship must tell you there is a crew on it.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. You said "We followed"—were you at that time following it with anybody in particular?

A. With the seamen on the ship, about 40 of them, I would say, 40 in a crew.

Q. You were on a ship during this time? [5145]

A. That is correct; yes.

Q. And you were getting daily bulletins of what was going on?

A. While the ship was in port these things came aboard.

Q. What ship were you on at that time?

A. At that time I was on the Excelsior, I believe.

Q. And between what ports was that plying?

A. Well, we went from New York, to Philadelphia, to Baltimore, to Norfolk, back to Philadelphia and New York.

Q. Coastwise all the time?

A. Yes; that is correct.

Q. Go on.

A. The Committee in Washington decided that the ISU would be the union to represent the Seamen. As a result the operators agreed with this Committee to cooperate and see that every Seaman on the ship joined the ISU. No Seaman could stay on a ship unless he took out an ISU book. If you didn't take out an ISU book you were discharged from the ship. So we had to take out an ISU book. The MWIU just disappeared, based on that.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. You didn't tell us just how the NRA knocked out the Marine Workers Industrial Union?

A. That is the way they knocked it out, by collaborating with the shipowners and the fakers in the ISU.

Q. The Marine Workers Industrial Union, so far as you know, [5146] was not dissolved because of any action taken by its own officials, is that what you are trying to testify to? A. Yes.

Mr. Gladstein: The question is ambiguous.

Presiding Inspector: That is all right. He is entitled to ask that.

Mr. Del Guercio: Was there an objection?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes; do you mind?

Presiding Inspector: We are having a lot of hearsay gleaned from reports of newspapers, and all that sort of thing, and Mr. Del Guercio, I think, is entitled to examine the witness on this.

Mr. Gladstein: I would like to hear the question read because I think it is ambiguous.

Presiding Inspector: Read the question.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Mr. Gladstein: I think the form of the question is objectionable, but I haven't any objection to the question being answered.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, as a matter of fact, you knew, and you know now, that the Marine Workers Industrial Union was affiliated with the Trade Union Unity League?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. I did not.

Q. You never found that out? [5147]

A. I have heard that it was so affiliated since; yes.

Q. Didn't you read about that in any of these documents that you testified you read?

A. No, I did not.

Q. And, as a matter of fact, you knew then, and you know now, that the Trade Union Unity League in turn was formed, created, controlled and dominated by the Red International of Labor Unions?

Mr. Gladstein: I object to that. It is a compound question.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think it is a question. The form you put it in is a statement.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Didn't you know then that the Trade Union Unity League was—you need not smile, Mr. Curran.

A. I can't help it, because you are laughing at me.

Q. No, I am not laughing at you. I feel sorry for you. A. All right.

Mr. Gladstein: I move that be stricken from the record.

Presiding Inspector: We will strike that comment out.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. You knew at that time, did you not, that the Trade Union Unity League was controlled and dominated by the Red International of Labor Unions? A. I did not.

Q. Do you know it now?

A. I have heard so. [5148]

Q. Where did you hear it?

Mr. Gladstein: I object to that as immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: I think it is immaterial, but it may lead to something. We haven't been very strict on this. I will take it.

A. I have heard it around the Dies Commitee, I have heard it around here, I have heard it on the waterfront, I have heard it from shipowners and I have heard it from various places. [5149]

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Do you believe it?

Mr. Gladstein: I object to that as immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: Immaterial.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Who was the head of the Local of the Marine Workers Industrial Union in which you belonged?

A. At that time?

Q. At that time, yes.

A. As I understood it, Roy Hudson was the Secretary.

Q. Did you meet Roy Hudson at that time?

A. No, I didn't meet him at that time.

Q. Had you known Roy Hudson prior to the time you joined the Marine Workers Industrial Union? A. No, I never heard of him.

Q. Did you have any conversations with Roy

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Hudson about the time you joined the Marine Workers Industrial Union?

A. No, I joined aboard ship.

Q. And were you on board the ship all the time that you remained a member of the Marine Workers Industrial Union?

A. No. I was ashore. I went ashore, much like other seamen do.

Q. Now, can you give me the exact date you joined the Marine Workers Industrial Union?

[5150]

A. No, I can't.

Q. The month? A. No, I can't.

Q. The year?

A. I say it was early in 1935.

Q. Early in 1935?

A. I am almost sure of that.

Q. Well, you say you were on a ship. Can you fix the date by the ship that you were on?

Mr. Gladstein: He has already answered as to the ship that he was on.

A. I think that becomes a little more clear to me. I don't think it was 1935. I think, on the contrary, it was early in 1934.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. 1934? A. I think so. I think so.

Q. Now, are you sure about that?

A. No, I am not. I think so.

Q. You say now that it was either in the early part of '34 or the early part of 1935?

A. That is correct.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Presiding Inspector: His best recollection is that it was in 1934 now.

The Witness: That is my best recollection.

By Mr. Del Guercio: [5151]

Q. Well, were you working on the ship in 1934?

A. Sure! I worked on ships all year round '34.

Q. And are you sure about only remaining in the Marine Workers Industrial Union for only a month?

A. Well, I'm sure of that because I only paid a month's dues, and when, well, a few months later we made a two months' and fifteen-days' trip, I think, on the Excelsior and when I returned there just wasn't any more MWIU. You had to get into the ISU. So based on the fact that I only paid a month's dues I feel that that was all I was a member.

Q. You say that you were on the ship Excelsior after you joined? A. Yes.

Q. So far as you know, you were a member of the Marine Workers Industrial Union for two and one-half months?

A. Well, put it that way if you like.

Q. Is that your testimony?

A. I am basing it on the dues payment. I am not basing it on the amount of time that I was aboard that ship.

Q. Can you pay dues on the ship?

A. No. When I got back I couldn't pay any dues in it. The book was no good. I had to join the ISU to make another trip.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. Now, do you know when the 1934 Pacific Coast strike occurred? [5152]

A. Yes, I have some recollection of it. About May.

Q. When was that? About May?

A. Yes.

Q. With reference to the 1934 strike, May, when did you join the Marine Workers Industrial Union?

A. I don't know. I think it was about five or six months before then. About four months, I think. Right about in——

Q. (Interposing): Before the strike?

A. Oh, yes. It was before the strike.

Q. Huh?

A. It was about three—at least three months before that strike. You see, I am not clear on these dates about joining the MWIU.

Q. No, I realize that, that you wouldn't be very clear. Where were you during the 1934 strike?

A. Well, do you want me to answer shortly or do you want me to describe the trip?

Q. Whichever way——

A. (Interposing): I left New York, as near as I can recollect, on the first of May. We went twenty-three days to Capetown, Africa and spent seventeen days in Capetown. We then went to Derby, Elizabethtown, East London and then we returned over the same route arriving in New York June the 15th. I then took a position with the Grace Line shore gang [5153] in New York City where I worked until August 22nd and then shipped aboard the Grace Line Santa Clara and stayed on her until December the 22nd of the same year, and coming off of there——

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) You have gone away beyond.

The Witness: He didn't ask me the exact length.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Were you on the West Coast ashore?

A. Not unless I was——

Q. (Interposing): ——at any time during the 1934 Pacific Coast strike?

A. Not unless I was a dual personality.

Q. Not unless you were what?

A. I was in Africa. I couldn't be unless I was a dual personality.

Q. Do you have a dual personality?

Mr. Gladstein: I object to that.

A. No. The records in the Commissioner's office will verify the fact that I was on that African voyage.

Q. Was that on the SS Exmoore?

A. No. It was on the City of New York, American-South-African Line. If I was on the West Coast I would have been on the picket line.

Q. Then you didn't become a member of the Marine [5154] Workers Industrial Union while you were on the SS Exmoore, is that correct?

A. Yes, I did. Oh, yes.

Q. Was that before or after the 1934 strike?

A. That was before.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. Were you on the Exmoore after the 1934 strike?

A. No. After the '34 strike I was on the Santa Clara, August 22, 1934.

Q. You never shipped out on the Exmoore after the 1934 strike?

A. No. I believe I was on the Exmoore in January of 1934. I am not too clear on that.

Q. Now, did you join the Sailor's Union of the Pacific after you dropped out of the Marine Workers Industrial Union?

A. No. I joined the ISU. I joined the ISU.

Q. What is the ISU?

A. I was in New York.

Q. What is the ISU?

A. The International Seamen's Union of America.

Presiding Inspector: This Exmoore didn't take any of those Mediterranean route trips at that time, did it?

The Witness: Oh, yes, it did. It went through the Mediterranean.

Presiding Inspector: I thought you said it went up and down the coast. [5155]

The Witness: Well, you see, the method pursued is to load up on the Coast here first. That part of the trip we don't count. That is getting cargo for the trip across. You go to Baltimore, Philadelphia, probably Norfolk. This is known as a coastwise trip to load cargo for the voyage.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

across. The actual voyage is constituted as going across.

Presiding Inspector: You go to some place in Palestine?

The Witness: No, we did not.

Presiding Inspector: They did at times.

The Witness: Well, they have different sections. The American Export Line has three distinct sections.

Presiding Inspector: Where did the Exmoore go when you were on it? Trieste?

The Witness: No, she didn't go to Trieste. She went to Genoa, she went to Naples, she went to Malay, she went to Constantinople and she went to the Black Sea to Constanza and Odessa, Russia, and returned.

Presiding Inspector: How long were you on it?

The Witness: Two months and fifteen days for the voyage across. Now, counting the voyage on the Coast, that usually takes two weeks. So that would make it about three months on the ship.

Presiding Inspector: Three months.

Mr. Del Guercio: Are you through? Do you have any further questions? [5156]

Presiding Inspector: Yes, I have finished.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. As a matter of fact, you know that the Marine Workers Industrial Union was not dissolved until 1935?

A. I am not aware that it was officially dissolved at all—officially. I don't know about that.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. Would you have been notified if it was?

A. I don't know. It's pretty hard to notify all the men on the seven seas.

Q. Well now, your testimony is that you dropped out from the Marine Workers Industrial Union because the NRA dropped it out or knocked it out?

A. I didn't say I dropped out. I didn't say I dropped out.

Q. Oh, you continued as a member even after that? A. No, I didn't say that.

Q. Well, what did you say?

A. I said when I returned to New York on the Exmoore I was forced to take an ISU book.

Q. And did that automatically drop you out of the Marine Workers Industrial Union.

A. I imagine it would.

Q. Well, do you know?

A. Technically I'm not sure, but legally I think [5157] it does, I think——

Q. (Interposing): Let's explore your technical reasons first. What do you mean "technically" you are not sure?

Mr. Gladstein: Just a moment! I move that that be stricken.

Presiding Inspector: I will let it stand. He is giving the reason for asking the question.

A. I am not aware, you see, what the by-laws were as to dues payments.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. By-laws of what?

A. In the MWIU. If the by-laws stated that if you don't pay your dues for three months then you are out, then I was out.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. Did the by-laws provide that you would be notified?

A. I say I am not enough aware of the by-laws of the MWIU to know that.

Q. All right. Now, that is technically. Legally what?

A. Well, I supose legally you couldn't say I was in that union when I was in the ISU, and a paid-up member in the ISU.

Q. Was there anything in the ISU that would forbid you from belonging to the Marine Workers Industrial Union? [5158] A. Yes,

Q. What, may I ask you?

A. There was a clause in the by-laws that said any member belonging to a dual and hostile union would be tried, and so forth.

Q. Was the Marine Workers Industrial Union hostile? A. I don't know.

Q. To the ISU?

A. I don't know whether it was or not. But I assume, on the basis of the fact that the ISU appeared in Washington wanting to be recognized as the only Seamen's Union against the MWIU, there must have been some hostility between the two.

Q. When did you join the ISU?

A. I'm not too clear on that. I think it was in May of 1935. I am not too sure of that.

Q. Well, so the action of the ISU would have nothing to do with your being dropped out of the Marine Workers Industrial Union, would it?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. Well, in trade union circles, sir, if I may——

Q. (Interposing): You may.

A. (Continuing): ——when you leave one union and take a book in another, it's considered ethical to be a member of the one——

Q. (Interposing): Now, you dropped out, you say,——

A. (Continuing): ——and not both at the same time. [5159]

Q. You dropped out of the Marine Workers Industrial Union in 1934?

A. I didn't say I dropped out.

Q. Or you discontinued paying your dues?

A. I didn't say I discontinued paying my dues.

Q. What did you say?

A. Because of the situation occurring in Washington, when a ship returned to New York in order to stay no that ship, or, as a matter of fact, on any other ship on the East Coast I had to take an ISU book out.

Q. When did this occur in Washington, in what year?

A. I am pretty sure it occurred in 1934 during the NRA days.

Q. After the Pacific Coast 1934 strike?

A. No. I would say it occurred—yes, I would say it occurred after the strike. I am pretty sure it occurred after the strike. I am not too clear on it.

Q. Now, you say you were the Chairman of the

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Joint Strike Committee in this strike in New York or on the East Coast in 1936? A. I was, yes.

Q. And how did you become Chairman of the Strike Committee?

A. On the day that the strike was called a mass meeting was held in New York in a place known as the Manhattan Plaza. It was attended by, I believe, around 1500 to 2000 [5160] seamen. And at that meeting—this is the first day—a Strike Committee was elected for the unlicensed personnel.

Q. Were you on that Committee?

A. I was elected as Chairman of that Strike Committee.

Q. Who proposed your name?

A. A member on the floor rose to his feet.

Q. Do you know his name?

A. No. We don't usually put the names down. The minutes show that a member rises to the floor, makes a motion, it is seconded and then put to a vote, and it is either carried, voted down or tabled or some such thing. That has been the custom and still is the custom in the rank and file.

Q. You were voted on this Strike Committee; then what happened?

A. I was elected as the Chairman. Then we proceeded to establish the——

Q. (Interposing): You were elected as Chairman by whom? A. By that 2000 members.

Q. By the Committee? A. No.

Q. By the membership?

A. No, by that membership at that meeting.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

There was no Committee there to elect anybody. The Committee first had to be elected by the membership. [5161]

Q. And is that the only Strike Committee that existed throughout the strike?

A. No, that was the Strike Committee for New York. There were meetings held up and down the coast.

Q. Was that the Joint Strike Committee?

A. No, no. That was the Strike Committee of the unlicensed personnel. The Joint Strike Committee was brought together on the basis of the radio operators having a Strike Committee, the Masters, Mates & Pilots had a Strike Committee, the Marine Engineers had a Strike Committee, and on the basis of operating more closely together it was decided to establish a Joint Strike Committee with representatives of all these groups sitting in on the one Committee and it was then classified as the "Joint Strike Committee". [5162]

Q. How did you become Chairman?

A. That group, that group meeting elected me as Chairman of the Joint Strike Committee. I was already Chairman of the Unlicensed Personnel Strike Committee.

Q. How many persons were on the Joint Strike Committee?

A. I would say there were about 15.

Q. About 15? A. About 15; yes.

Q. And you say Peter Innes was one of them?

A. Peter Innes was one of what?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. Members of the Joint Strike Committee.

A. I did not say that.

Q. Of what Committee was he a member?

A. He was not there.

Q. Peter Innes?

A. He was on the Pacific Coast at that time.

Q. What Union did Peter Innes belong to at that time?

A. He belonged to the east coast rank and file seamen, ISU, naturally.

Q. Were they on strike also?

A. Well, you see when I speak of the ISU, we also were a part of the ISU.

Q. Did they have a strike committee?

A. The officials of the ISU were never on strike.

Q. Did they have a strike committee, the union to which [5163] Peter Innes belonged?

A. The union?

Q. Yes. A. Officially?

Q. Officially or otherwise?

A. Officially, the union officials were very busy running around with the shipowners getting scabs.

Q. Did I ask you that?

A. No. You asked me did they have a strike committee and I said "No."

Presiding Inspector: You shouldn't do that. Just answer the questions.

A. No, they didn't.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Well, what kind of a committee then was Peter Innes on?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. Peter Innes—you see these things——

Q. (Interposing): Without going into "these things".

A. He was on a strike committee.

Q. He was on a strike committee? A. Yes.

Q. Was he elected to that committee?

A. He was elected.

Q. Did you have anything to do with that election? A. No.

Q. But you knew he was on it? [5164]

A. Yes.

Q. Who sent him to the west coast?

A. No one sent him to the west coast.

Q. Who paid for his expenses to come out here?

A. He shipped out.

Q. Was he given any instructions by anyone before he came out? A. No.

Q. Did you give him any instructions?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you tell him who to contact on the Pacific Coast? A. No.

Q. Did you give him a list of names?

A. I did not.

Q. You were pretty friendly with Peter Innes about that time? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were a friend of his? A. Correct.

Q. He was a friend of yours?

A. I assume he was.

Q. Was his reputation for truth and veracity good at the time you knew him?

A. No; it wasn't too good.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. It wasn't good even then?

A. No. [5165]

Q. You communicated with him?

A. I did so on occasions.

Q. Do you know how many times you communicated with him?

A. No, I am not clear; I guess about 50 times. It is pretty hard to give the number exact.

Q. And did Peter Innes communicate at any time with you as Chairman of the Joint Strike Committee? A. Oh, yes.

Q. Well, was it on matters regarding the east coast strike?

A. Well, no; it wasn't on matters affecting the east coast strike.

Q. On what matters did he communicate with you as Chairman of the Joint Strike Committee?

A. He communicated on matters affecting the group that was on strike in San Pedro, and on relative matters between the coasts on questions of policy and so forth.

Q. He was a member—I want to get this straight—of the ISU, the same as you were?

A. That is right.

Q. Were you an official of the ISU at that time?

A. No.

Q. Was Peter Innes? A. No.

Q. Do you know how long Peter Innes remained on the west coast at that time?

A. I am not too clear on how long he remained there. He [5166] returned home once about December 10th, coming by train; and then he finally returned to the east coast, I believe, in February, —in February of 1937.

Q. On December 10th, you say——

A. (Interposing): He came home once and went back.

Q. Did you see him on December 10, 1936?

A. No. He left San Pedro on the 10th.

Q. When did he arrive in New York?

A. I think he arrived about the 13th or 14th.

Q. He left by boat from San Pedro?

A. By train.

Q. By train. And did he appear before this Joint Strike Committee? A. Yes.

Q. Does this Joint Strike Committee have any minutes?

A. It may have had, but the records were stolen.

Q. And did Mr. Innes report anything to this Joint Strike Committee regarding Harry Bridges' appearance as a speaker on the East Coast?

A. Well, I am not too sure, whether he did or not, because Harry Bridges arrived practically on the same day Innes did.

Q. About December 14th?

A. About December 14th.

Q. You say they arrived at the same time?

[5167]

A. About the same time; yes, sir.

Q. Would you say that you saw Innes before you saw Bridges?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. I am not too sure. I went to the airport, I know, and I am not too sure which one I saw first.

Q. Now, who notified you that Bridges was coming out to the east coast?

A. Mervyn Rathborne, who was Secretary of District Council No. 2 of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific at that time.

Q. Did Harry Bridges advise you?

A. Well, he advised me by teletype that the way was clear, that meetings were such that he believed he could get in a few meetings on the east coast.

Q. Harry Bridges himself did that?

A. Yes; he notified me in that way, that arrangements looked like he could make it.

Q. When was that?

A. I believe that was around the 2nd, somewhere between the 29th of November; and about the 2nd of December.

Q. Do you have a copy of that teletype?

A. No, I haven't got it.

Q. What became of it?

A. Well, I imagine the same thing that became of the minutes, my book in the other union, and other things—those records were stolen. [5168]

Q. But you are sure—I think I heard you—you are sure that Harry Bridges signed the teletype?

A. Well, those teletypes don't have signatures on them, but it said "Bridges" on the bottom.

Q. You are sure——

A. (Interposing): We were talking about other things too.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. You are sure it said "Bridges"?

A. Yes.

Q. To whom was it addressed?

A. It was addressed to me in New York.

Q. To you, and not to the Joint Strike Committee?

A. Well, it was addressed to the Joint Strike Committee and then it asked at the top, "Is Curran there?" That is the way it was addressed.

Q. Did you have a teletype there at the headquarters of the Joint Strike Committee?

A. Yes.

Q. Where were the headquarters of the Joint Strike Committee at that time?

A. 164 Eleventh Avenue.

Q. What was the name of that hall?

A. That hall there had no name to it at all; it was just a three-story building. Upstairs was the ILA, Longshoremen's Union, and downstairs were a couple of restaurants, one restau- [5169] rant and a tailor shop. The building itself had no name.

Q. Did the Joint Strike Committee occupy this entire building?

A. It occupied the second floor; that is, the first floor from the street.

Q. Where was the ILA with reference to them?

A. On the top floor.

Q. And the teletype machine was where?

A. It was on our floor.

Q. In whose name were those offices rented?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. The offices there were rented in the name of the radio operators.

Q. Were you connected with the radio operators?

A. No. We couldn't get a hall, you see, so the radio operators, who were an officially recognized union, guaranteed the hall for us.

Q. I believe you said that you had some kind of a communication from Mervyn Rathborne?

A. Yes; I am pretty sure I did.

Q. When was that?

A. I think it was shortly after that, somewhere around December 4, 5, or 6, telling me—you see, I had addressed a communication to Rathborne some time before that, the latter part of November.

Q. The latter part of November. I want to get this in [5170] sequence. The latter part of November you addressed a communication to Mervyn Rathborne? A. Yes.

Q. As what?

A. As the Secretary of the District Council No. 2 of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific.

Q. And you were communicating with him in what capacity? A. Well, he was——

Q. (Interposing:) In what capacity were you communicating with Mervyn Rathborne at that time? A. In my capacity?

Q. Yes.

A. As Chairman of the Joint Strike Committee in New York.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. Now, what did you say in that communication to Mervyn Rathborne?

A. I told him that it looked like it was going to be possible for us to get halls in Boston, in Baltimore, in Philadelphia, and it looked like we would be able to get the Garden, and for him to see that arrangements were made up and down the west coast to make it possible for Harry to come to the east coast on those specified dates. I think that was the substance of it.

Q. That was the substance of it. Mervyn Rathborne would have that teletype, wouldn't he?

A. I don't know.

Q. What? [5171]

A. I couldn't say. It is possible he has.

Q. It wasn't stolen?

A. I couldn't say. I don't know. I am not connected with the District Council.

Q. Why didn't you communicate with Bridges instead of Mervyn Rathborne?

A. Because all our communications for some months previous to that went through District Council No. 2, of which Mr. Rathborne was Secretary. Bridges was on the move up and down the coast all the time and we never could catch him. In order to get some action on the communications we used to send them to Mervyn Rathborne.

Q. Was Bridges on the District Council at that time?

A. I don't know. I know he was in the ILWU, or the ILA at that time, I guess it was, before it went CIO; and he was very busy going up and down the coast. I think he was a member of the District Council No. 2, or a delegate to it. I think he was President of it. I am pretty sure he was President of District Council No. 2.

Q. You are sure now that he was President?

A. Yes.

Q. At the time you sent this communication to Mervyn Rathborne?

A. That is right.

Q. Did you ever communicate directly with Bridges as [5172] President of the District Council? A. Many times.

Q. I mean in regard to his appearing on the east coast? A. Yes.

Q. By teletype?

A. Well, I sent him a telegram.

Q. When did you send Bridges a telegram regarding his appearance on the east coast?

A. I don't—about the first week in December.

Q. That was after your communication to Mervyn Rathborne?

A. Yes; about the first ten days in December, one of those days.

Q. December 1936? A. Yes.

Q. And what did you say in that telegram?

A. Oh, I asked him to let us know if he could come to a meeting in the Garden.

Q. You asked Harry Bridges if he could do what?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. I asked him to let us know whether he could come to a meeting in Madison Square Garden.

Q. Now, do you know if Harry Bridges has that telegram?

A. I don't know.

Q. Has that been stolen?

A. I don't know. I wouldn't be in a position to say.

Q. Did you get a reply to that telegram from Mr. Bridges?

A. I don't believe I did. [5173]

Q. Well, will you refresh your recollection a little bit?

A. That is what I am trying to do.

Q. Now can you state, "Yes" or "No", whether you received a reply to the telegram to Mr. Bridges?

A. No, I don't believe I did.

Q. You said you met Harry Bridges at the airport in New York? A. Yes.

Q. On December 14th, was that?

A. December 14th.

Q. And who was with you?

A. With me, there was a seaman by the name of Cunningham, who was driving a Ford sedan that I had there; and a coupe we had over there also was driven by the name named Marciano——M-a-r-c-i-a-n-o—and I am not too clear on whether Innes was with us or not. I am not too clear on that.

Q. What would clear it up?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. Well, you see, a great many things have happened since then. It is almost impossible to have a clear-cut memory on such an incident as that.

Q. Well, Mr. Curran, we don't want you to—you seemed to recall the other incidents and I thought you might recall whether or not Peter Innes was there?

A. I believe he was there. [5174]

Q. Whose car was he in?

A. He was in the Ford Sedan with Cunningham and myself.

Q. In the same car with you? A. Yes.

Q. Why would Peter Innes be there?

A. Well, we had a habit of everybody piling in the cars all the time.

Q. There were only three persons in this car?

A. Yes.

Q. Just Peter Innes, yourself, and the driver. Why would Peter Innes be with you?

A. Mainly because he was on the Pacific Coast all the time.

Q. He wasn't on the Pacific Coast at that time. He was on the Atlantic Coast.

A. I say, the reason he probably was there was because he was on the Pacific Coast during all the period before.

Q. Did you ask him to come with you?

A. I believe I did. I may have asked him to come along.

Q. Was there any other member of that Joint Strike Committee there?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. Neither one of these were members of the Joint Strike Committee.

Q. Was there any member of the Joint Strike Committee there? [5175]

A. Yes.

Q. Who? A. Myself.

Q. Any others? A. No.

Q. You said the driver of your car was who?

A. A man by the name of Cunningham, an able bodied seaman.

Q. Was he a member of the Strike Committee?

A. No. He was a rank and filer who was on the picket line and knew how to drive a car.

Q. Who got him to go along? A. I did.

Q. Was he sort of a bodyguard?

A. No.

Q. Who was in the second car?

A. A man by the name of Marciano.

Q. What was he doing there?

A. We brought him over there for fear the first car would break down. It was an awful "lizzie" and it had broken windows, and the tires weren't any too good.

Q. So you had two cars and you arranged for both cars?

A. Yes. The other was a brand new Ford coupe, a pretty good car.

Q. Was there anybody else, any other cars there? A. No. [5176]

Q. No other cars at the airport?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. There were plenty of cars at the airport; plenty of them, all kinds of cars.

Q. Who was driving the third car?

A. There was no third car.

Q. You only had two? A. That is correct.

Q. Was it possible that there were more cars there and that perhaps you didn't know about them?

A. There were hundreds of cars at the airport.

Q. I mean coming there to see Bridges get off?

A. I wouldn't know about that. There were two cars that we brought over.

Q. Was Roy Hudson there in one of the other cars?

A. There was no other car with us.

Q. Was there any directly behind you?

A. There were hundreds of them around there, parked in a parking lot.

Q. Where did you leave from?

A. From New York.

Q. What part of New York?

A. From between 22nd and 23rd Streets on 11th Avenue, the location of the hall.

Q. How many cars started from there?

A. Two cars, the Ford coupe and the Ford sedan.

Q. Innes was with you? [5177]

A. Innes was in the sedan with me.

Q. Where did you sit in the car there?

A. On the front seat next to the driver.

Q. Where was Innes?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. Probably in the back.

Q. How was Innes' reputation for truth and veracity at that time? A. Terrible.

Q. And you invited him along to go with you to meet your friend, Harry Bridges?

A. We did; I believe I did.

Q. He wasn't on the Joint Strike Committee?

A. No. He was Chairman of that Strike Committee in San Pedro that I told you about before.

Q. Now, Harry Bridges got off the airplane and into what car did he get?

A. He got into the Ford sedan.

Q. The one you were in?

A. The one with the broken windows.

Q. The one you were in? A. Yes.

Q. Did anyone else get into the car?

A. I did, and Mr. Meriweather got in.

Q. Did Innes get in the car too?

A. Yes, he got in the car. He muscled his way in everything. [5178]

Q. You say he muscled his way in. You just got through testifying you invited him to go along with you?

A. Yes; but I want to be clear what I mean by that. We had a Ford coupe with only one man in it, and we had a Ford sedan with four big men in it. And a fifth man in the Ford sedan would make it kind of crowded. I am pretty sure we asked Innes to ride in the coupe, but he muscled in the sedan.

Q. Is Innes a big man?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. No; a little bitty fellow.

Q. He muscled his way in the car?

A. Yes. I don't mean that he forced his way in.

Q. No, I know——

Mr. Gladstein: (Interposing) Let the witness answer. I object to any interruption.

Presiding Inspector: I think he answered.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Who drove the car from the airport to the hotel? A. Cunningham.

Q. And you went directly to the——

A. (Interposing) Victoria Hotel.

Q. And you saw—did you all get out of the car and go into the hotel?

A. All except Cunningham, who had to park the car.

Q. And Innes got out too?

A. Yes. [5179]

Q. He went into the hotel with you?

A. Yes.

Q. And did Bridges register?

A. I am not too clear on how they registered. Mr. Meriweather was with him; whether they took a double room, I don't know, or whether they registered each by himself, or one registered for both —I am not too sure.

Q. You were with them?

A. I was in the lobby. I didn't walk right up to the desk with them and I didn't peer over their shoulders.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. Peter Innes was there? A. Yes.

Q. He went into the lobby also?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Now, did you then immediately go to Bridges' room?

A. Just as soon as the formalities were cleared away of registering, and the bell hop got the baggage, we proceeded up to their room.

Q. Who proceeded, how many?

A. Innes, myself, and Cunningham came in the door then, having parked the car, and he came up, Mr. Meriweather and Mr. Bridges.

Q. You cleared up in your mind now that Innes was there all the time haven't you?

A. No. I say I am fairly sure he was there; fairly sure. [5180]

Q. How long did you remain in that room?

A. I should say about half an hour to three-quarters of an hour; they were pretty tired.

Q. Where did Marciano go?

A. Mariano drove the coupe back to the union hall because we had no use for it.

Q. Did you see him drive it to the union hall?

A. I instructed him to.

Q. Where did you tell him that?

A. At the airport.

Q. You remained in the hotel room about half an hour?

A. Roughly about half an hour.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. Was Innes there all the time?

A. I should say he was. [5181]

Q. Did anybody come into the room at any time during that half hour?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. Well did Roy Hudson come into the room?

A. No.

Q. You know Roy Hudson? A. Yes.

Q. You know him if you see him?

A. Yes. He looks like Lord Halifax.

Q. What?

A. He looks like Lord Halifax. Very much so.

Q. Is that why they call him "The Bishop"?

A. Yes, I guess so,

Presiding Inspector: Call him the what?

Mr. Del Guercio: "The Bishop."

The Witness: Yes. They call him "horseface" and everything, from what I have seen.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. You knew him as "The Bishop" too, don't you? A. No.

A. Was Al Lannon there?

A. No.

Q. Did he come in at any time?

A. No.

Q. Who did you leave with, if you did leave? [5182] I suppose you did leave.

A. I must have left. Peter Innes and Cunningham.

Q. Cunningham was in the room too?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. Sir?

Q. Was Cunningham in the room too?

A. Yes.

Q. He was just a driver.

A. He was a member of the Union, too; a man on strike. We didn't differentiate between a chauffeur and an official of the Strike Committee. We were all rank and file.

Q. I didn't mean that differentiation. I meant between a big shot and a little fellow.

A. That is your answer to it.

Q. Yes.

A. Not my answer.

Q. Did he participate in any of the conversation? A. He did.

Q. And what was the conversation about?

A. The conversation was about arranging details to see that Bridges got to Boston on time for the meeting there and down to Philadelphia the following day and give him the itinerary as we had got the halls hired in Boston.

Q. Had anybody authorized you to make those arrangements?

A. Yes. The Strike Committee did. [5183]

Q. Now, would they be in the minutes of the Strike Committee?

A. The minutes of the Strike Committee meetings will show all that.

Q. That you were authorized as a Committee of one to make arrangements with Bridges.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. The arrangements had been made before that.

Q. By whom?

A. The arrangements had been made by the Joint Strike Committee to obtain the halls in Boston and Philadelphia and Baltimore, and the Garden in New York.

Q. Well, had that been communicated to Bridges?

A. Yes. The only thing that had——

Q. (Interposing): In what manner had that been communicated to Bridges?

Mr. Gladstein: Just a moment! The witness started to say something in addition.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, well, he gave a full answer to it. He gave a full answer. He may have wanted to add something. I don't see that he could have added very much.

Mr. Gladstein: Do you want to add something to that?

The Witness: Yes, I did. I can't think of how the question ran now.

Presiding Inspector: Read the question.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as follows. [5184]

"Q. Well, had that bee. communicated to Bridges?

"A. Yes, the only thing that had——")

Mr. Gladstein: Then Mr. Del Guercio interrupted.

Presiding Inspector: That is the pending question.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

The Reporter: No, your Honor. It was the prior question.

Presiding Inspector: Was that the prior question?

The Reporter: Yes, your Honor.

A. (Continuing): The only thing that hadn't been communicated to him—the thing that hadn't been communicated to him was the time for the meetings because we were trying to get the Garden, for example, for the 14th and the Garden was taken for the 14th, and we had to get it for the 16th and the Armory in Baltimore—we were still discussing that one until about the 12th. We hadn't got that one for sure. And the Boston meeting, the Strike Committee in Boston was still dickering about the hall up there. So those details were not communicated to him because we didn't have them. So we communicated them to him at the hotel when he arrived there.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. And you were delegated to give those details to Harry Bridges?

A. As the Chairman of the Strike Committee I felt it was my duty to inform him of the arrangements made by the [5185] Strike Committee in New York.

Q. Well now, did you have—

A. (Interposing): That's my duty.

Q. As chairman of the Strike Committee did you have anything to do with making those arrangements for Bridges' itinerary?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. Very much. I participated in the itinerary, yes, in communicating with Boston, Baltimore and Philadelphia informing the Strike Committees there as to how it was proceeding.

Q. Well now, how did you communicate to Harry Bridges that those plans and arrangements had been made, that is, that he was to speak at Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore and New York?

A. Pardon me. When he arrived—pardon, me, you weren't finished?

Q. Yes.

A. When he arrived in New York and got off the plane and got up to the hotel, that's when I communicated the times to him. But——

Q. (Interposing): I mean, the arrangements excepting as to time?

A. Oh, that was done in communications to Mervyn Rathborne and to Bridges himself before then, that we had arrangements in these various ports for meetings. [5186]

Q. Now, you done that, you say? You did that by teletype?

A. I didn't finish the answer to that question.

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead and finish it. Go ahead and finish it. Do you want it read?

The Witness: No, I can remember it.

I said we had communicated with him that we had arrangements made for these meetings in the various ports and we asked him in the communications whether they fit in with the mass meetings that he was holding on the Pacific Coast. So he had that detail long before, that we had these places available.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. How long before, would you say?

A. Oh, I would say ten days before, anyway.

Q. At least? At least ten days?

A. I would say that.

Q. And did you communicate that to Harry Bridges and Mervyn Rathborne yourself?

A. Communicate what?

Q. The arrangements?

A. I communicated them either to Rathborne or Bridges——

Q. (Interposing): By——

A. (Continuing):——not the time, but just these arrangements.

Q. I understand. Not as to time but as to the meeting [5187] places?

A. Yes.

Q. By what method of communication?

A. I am not too sure. I think it was both by letter, teletype and I might have sent a telegram too.

Q. Would you say that you didn't advise him by telegram?

A. That I didn't.

Q. Yes.

A. No, I wouldn't say that. I might have.

Q. Did you advise him by letter?

A. What was that?

Q. Would you say that you didn't advise either

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Mervyn Rathborne or Bridges by letter that arrangements had been already made?

A. I wouldn't say that neither.

Q. So your testimony is that at the time that Harry Bridges arrived there in New York he knew that he was to speak at Baltimore, Philadelphia, Boston and New York; is that right?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, you had charge of making all of the arrangements for the renting of the hall at New York, didn't you, as Chairman of this Strike Committee?

A. No. The Secretary of the Strike Committee does the work there. [5188]

Q. Well, don't you do any work? What was the Secretary's name?

A. I have worked all my life.

Q. You are not working now, are you?

A. No. You are working now.

Q. What's the Secretary's name?

A. The Secretary's name was Jack Lawrenson.

Q. Jack what?

A. Lawrenson.

Q. Now, did he do all of the work in connection with renting the Madison Square Garden?

A. Yes. He together with—I think that he had a couple of the members of the Strike Committee going the rounds with him, trying to raise the funds with which to rent the Garden.

Q. And did you as Chairman of the Strike Committee participate in any of those arrangements?

A. No. I was the Chairman of the Strike Committee, and when they returned after a day's mission searching for the money to rent the Garden, they would report whether it was good or bad news to me. That was the extent to which I participated.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. They would submit reports to you?

A. Oh, yes. And I would report to the general Strike Committee when it met as to whether they had any luck or not. [5189]

Q. You were required to do that?

A. No. We did it as a matter of practice. We held meetings every day.

Q. And when did they tell you that the Madison Square Garden had been rented?

A. I'm not too clear on the exact day, but I would say it was around the 12th.

Q. On December 12th. That is before Bridges' arrival? A. Yes.

Q. The Madison Square Garden had been rented for December 16th?

A. No. He didn't say "had been rented."

Q. Yes.

A. He said "It looks like we will be able to get the Garden." At that time we thought we could get it for the 14th, see, and then we found out that we couldn't get it for the 14th. It was taken.

Q. From who did you find out that you couldn't get it for the 14th?

A. From Lawrenson, the Secretary.

Q. Did he tell you from whom he found out?

A. Yes. He found out from the Garden.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. He himself had made these arrangements with Garden?

A. No, no. He found out from the Garden that you [5190] couldn't get it for the 14th.

Q. Who was making the arrangements to get the Garden, Madison Square Garden?

A. Lawrenson.

Q. And two others on the Strike Committee, is that correct?

A. Not permanently. I say that Jack Lawrenson would take a couple from the Strike Committee to make the rounds with him. We didn't set it.

Q. Had he been directed to do that?

A. What?

Q. Had he been directed to do that?

A. That's right.

Q. By whom?

A. By the Strike Committee.

Q. Well, from the Strike Committee. All at one time or from you as Chairman?

A. No, the Strike Committee votes on a question and then after they vote on a question it becomes the duty of the Chairman to impart the substance of that motion to whoever is instructed to carry it out.

Q. And did you impart it to Lawrenson?

A. I did that, yes.

Q. What did you tell Lawrenson?

A. I told Lawrenson to "go out and see if you can get the Garden." [5191]

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. You had in mind then getting the Garden?

A. No. I said the Garden would be the best place to hold the big meeting. "Go out and see if you can get it."

Q. Did you give him any other instructions?

A. Oh, yes. I told him to——

Q. (Interposing) Tell me all the instructions you gave Lawrenson with respect to the renting of the Madison Square Garden or trying to rent it.

A. I told Lawrenson that it costs a great deal of money to get the Garden, and, if it were possible to raise the money, the Garden would be the likely place to hold a big mass meeting. That was the extent of the instructions given to Lawrenson. I discussed no mechanical questions with him.

Q. No what kind of questions?

A. No mechanical questions how to go about raising the money.

Q. And was a Committee appointed to carry out your instructions?

A. No. The Secretary of the Strike Committee was instructed that it was the desire of the Strike Committee to obtain the Madison Square Garden and to go ahead and try to get it.

Q. Can anybody but Lawrenson act for the Strike Committee in renting the Madison Square Garden?

A. Yes, they could. But it was the natural practice [5192] for the Secretary of the Committee, who was the working Secretary, the Acting Secretary, to do that type of work, you see.

Q. Oh, was he Acting Secretary?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. I say, "the Acting Secretary." I mean by that that he was the man who worked as a Secretary, and the Secretary naturally does that type of work.

Q. And he did that type of work under your direction as Chairman?

A. Under the direction of the Strike Committee.

Q. And under your personal direction?

A. As the Chairman of the Strike Committee.

Q. As the Chairman of the Strike Committee?

A. Yes.

Q. Did he tell you when the hall was rented or arrangements had been completed for renting the Madison Square Garden? A. Yes.

Q. When did he tell you?

A. That was about the 12th.

Q. Prior to Bridges' arrival? A. Yes.

Q. Arrangements had been completed for renting the Madison Square Barden? A. Yes.

Q. Did he tell you how he got the money to rent the [5193] Madison Square Garden?

A. No, he did not. He said that the Garden, as such, was going to be O. K. We could get it.

Q. And did you have any money at that time in the treasury to hire the Madison Square Garden?

A. We not only didn't have no treasury, but we had half of the strikers out on the streets shaking cans to get enough money to go to bed and eat on.

Q. But you were willing, however, to hire the Madison Square Garden?

A. If we could raise the money, yes. We felt that we could really clarify the issues to the public and possibly collect a sum of money for the strikers.

Q. Did Lawrenson tell you how much it would cost to rent the Madison Square Garden?

A. I believe he said $3,500.

Q. And you say that the striking seamen were starving to death at that time?

A. Yes, I said that.

Q. Do you know how much food $3,500 could have bought?

Mr. Gladstein: I object to that as immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think that is material.

Don't answer that. I have ruled that out.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, did Lawrenson say where the money came from that was used to rent the Madison Square Garden? [5194]

A. At that time?

Q. Yes.

A. You mean at that time? No, he did not and we didn't ask him.

Q. Wasn't the Strike Committee interested in knowing where that much money came from?

A. No, we were not. We wanted the Madison Square Garden.

Q. For Harry Bridges to speak in?

A. Not necessarily for Harry Bridges, no. No. 1: To clarify the issues to the public because we were being pressed from all sides at that time. And No. 2: To collect a sum of money to help the strike.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

And No. 3: To let them hear Harry Bridges, who was one of the leaders of the strike on the Pacific Coast, yes.

Q. Did Lawrenson show you or did you ever see the lease for the renting of the Madison Square Garden on that occasion?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Do you know what arrangements had been completed or when the lease had been signed with the officials of the Madison Square Garden?

A. No, I don't know that. All I know is that Lawrenson reported to us that "The Garden is O. K."

Q. Who was to run this rally here at the Madison Square Garden? Under whose auspices was it?

[5195]

A. Under the Strike Committee.

Q. That is, under you?

A. Under the Strike Committee.

Q. And you as Chairman of the Strike Committee had charge?

A. I was a part of it, yes.

Q. Were any amounts set as to admissions, the cost of admissions?

A. I think it was two-bits.

Q. Twenty-five cents? A. I think so.

Q. Were any arrangements made for selling tickets? A. Oh, yes.

Q. Who made those arrangements?

A. The Strike Committee.

Q. And you as Chairman participated?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. Yes.

Q. And who was to collect the funds received from the sale of these tickets?

A. The Secretary would account for them, I believe. That's the way that was arranged.

Q. Had arrangements been made?

A. We had a committee set up.

Q. All right. Now, who was this committee?

A. About a hundred. About a hundred on the committee, [5196] Master of Arms and everything.

Q. Were you on the committee?

A. I was Chairman of the Strike Committee.

Q. This was all under the Strike Committee?

A. I wasn't on that, no; not on that committee.

Q. Were admission tickets printed?

A. No, I believe they got those rolls of tickets, you know, at the box office. No tickets were sold outside. No ordinary tickets. You paid your admission when you went in and you had those rolls of ordinary theatre tickets that they passed out.

Q. Who arranged for the ushers in the meeting?

A. For what?

Q. Who arranged to have ushers?

A. We did; the Strike Committee.

Q. And did you participate in that?

A. As the Strike Committee?

Q. Yes. A. Yes.

Q. And where did you get your ushers from?

A. Right from the picket line.

Q. From the picket line. Were they to be paid anything?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. Were they to be paid anything?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, they were to get what the rest of the strikers [5197] were getting. They were to get their food if we got the money for it. They were getting their bed, if we got the money for it. They had the same as others. They volunteered.

Q. Who was to account for the receipts there at the Madison Square Garden?

A. I imagine the Secretary of the Strike Committee would account for them.

Q. Did you have an Auditing Committee, too, or was he given full responsibility to account for all the money?

A. We didn't have an Auditing Committee then, no.

Q. Did you appoint anyone?

A. I did not.

Q. Well, was he to take charge of all of the collections at the Madison Square Garden for that night?

A. Yes, he was in charge of it.

Q. Did he collect all the money?

A. I don't know about that. I don't know.

Q. Didn't they report to you, Mr. Curran?

A. No.

Q. Weren't you interested in feeding these starving seamen? A. Very much, sir.

Q. Very much? A. Very much.

Q. Well, you say how many were there that attended [5198] this meeting?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. At Madison Square Garden.

Q. Yes.

A. Somewhere in the neighborhood of 17,000.

Q. Do you know how much paid attendance there were?

A. I'm not too clear on how much. I think the meeting grossed—I am not too clear. I think $1,200.

Q. How do you know that?

A. I say, "I think" it was that. I believe I heard that figure.

Q. They grossed that much money.

A. Yes.

Q. That is, over and above what?

A. No, not gross. I mean the ticket sale, the ticket sale.

Q. And who collected that money?

A. Well, we collected that.

Q. Who do you mean by "we"?

A. Well, the Committee set up by the Strike Committee, supervised by the Strike Committee in the person of Jack Lawrenson and others and accounted for it.

Q. And under your direction as Chairman?

A. Under the Strike Committee's direction.

Q. And you as Chairman?

A. And mine as Chairman, yes. [5199]

Q. Who handled the funds?

A. I don't know who handled those funds. I really don't. I mean the actual handling of them. I know that Peter Innes was counting them. I know that McCuistion was counting. I know that Jack Lawrenson was counting.

Q. Oh, did they have anything to do with this money?

A. What do you mean by that?

Q. Collecting the money.

A. Which money do you mean? The money that was collected?

Q. The money collected from the rally there.

A. On the tickets or the collections from the floor?

Q. Either the tickets or the collections from the floor.

A. Well, the collections from the floor, as it was being collected it was dropped and put on a table, and there were four or five busy counting it there. We were a group of rank and file.

Q. And among those were Innes?

A. Innes, McCuistion and Jack Lawrenson.

Q. Jack Lawrenson and yourself?

A. No, I didn't count it. No, not me.

Q. Who appointed Innes and McCuistion?

A. Nobody. You see, if you want me to be clear on that, in those days we had a very loose set-up. We didn't [5200] go in for a high degree of efficiency on anything. A group of rank and filers would jump in and do the work. You didn't have to appoint as they do in the A. F. of L. or other places. They just jumped in and did the work and we trusted each other.

Q. Did you trust Innes? A. Sure.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. Did you trust McCuistion?

A. At that time, yes, Sure!

Q. I thought you said they both had a poor reputation for truth and honesty? A. Yes.

Q. And you wouldn't believe them under oath?

A. That is right,

Q. And you trusted them with funds?

A. In front of 20,000 people, yes.

Q. And there were starving people?

A. They were counting money in the open. You see, this table was on the platform, in order to be clear. The table was on the platform and around it was the entire Garden and on the platform were another hundred.

Q. Was the money received from the sale of tickets at the box office on that table?

A. I don't know. I don't know. [5201]

Q. How much was received from the box office?

A. I don't know. I think it was in the neighborhood of $1,200.

Q. Where did you get that information?

A. I have heard it. I believe I heard it the following day.

Q. Weren't the reports submitted to you?

A. No. We didn't get reports on that. We got a report on it, I believe, on the approximate total and in the total I believe there was a calculation of the tickets and then the collection from the floor.

Q. All right. Do you know how much was collected on the floor?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. I think it was about $2,000 or $2,500. I am not too clear on that neither.

Q. And how much was collected from the sale of the tickets?

A. About $1,200.

Q. Making a total of $4,200?

A. I don't know. I guess so. I can't figure it.

Q. Wasn't a counting made of it?

A. I am not counting that total here right now. You're counting the total.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, no. He is asking you.

By Mr. Del Guercio: [5202]

Q. Wasn't——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Wait! Let us have order.

He is asking you. You can add it up yourself.

The Witness: All right.

Presiding Inspector: You have given the figures. Now, let us have some order in this proceedings.

The Witness: $2,000 and $1,200? That's $3,700, isn't it?

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. You said between $2,500 and $3,000. I took your highest figure.

A. I didn't. I said between $2,000 and $2,500.

Q. For the tickets? For the sale of the tickets at the box office?

A. No, the collection from the floor.

Presiding Inspector: Take the $2,000.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

The Witness: And then about $1,200 from the sale of tickets.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Who had charge of the——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Wait a second! Let us have the full answer.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Was that all the money that was collected? [5203]

A. To my knowledge.

Presiding Inspector: Now, how much does that make all together?

The Witness: Well, I believe that totals up around $3.200.

Presiding Inspector: Now, if it was $2,500?

The Witness: It would be $3,700.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Who had charge of the monies collected or received from the sale of the tickets from the box office?

A. I don't know. I don't know who had charge of the monies collected from the box office. I tell you again, it was a very loose establishment at that time.

Q. Well, was this thing run for a profit, to make money?

A. Of course it was run to get money for the striking seamen.

Q. What did you want the money for?

A. Mainly for the purpose of feeding and sleeping and taking care of striking seamen.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. Of the strikers? A. Yes.

Q. And——

A. (Interposing) We didn't clear the price of the Garden.

Q. How do you know you didn't? [5204]

A. Well, I can figure that out.

Q. Can you figure it out?

A. Yes. The Garden, if it cost $3,500 for the Garden alone, you then—as I understand it there, they also had some extras to pay in the form of special policemen and other things around there to take care of the building. They have to take care of that, too, and that's extra. Then if you take in $3,000 or $3,200 you didn't clear the cost of the Garden.

Q. How do you know you didn't clear $5,000?

A. Well, from the amount that I judge and that I have said I believe was collected there we didn't clear the initial price that was stated the Garden cost: $3,500.

Q. Now had the Garden been paid for prior to the rally?

A. I don't know. I know that it was guaranteed, I believe. I don't believe it was paid for.

Q. And you don't know whether it had been rented or not, or had been paid?

A. I was under the impression that it was guaranteed. In what shape, whether by note or endorsement I don't know. I didn't know at that time.

Q. Who would guarantee it, if somebody had?

A. I wouldn't know who would have guaranteed it. [5205]

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. Didn't Lawrenson tell you?

A. Lawrenson told us that the Garden is available and that is all we asked him. We didn't ask him any more.

Q. And he didn't tell you how much he had to pay for the rental of the Garden?

A. No, I don't believe he did. I think that a few days before that we asked for information about the Garden and found out that it cost about $3,500.

Q. Did you as Chairman of the Strike Committee authorize David Leeds to rent the Madison Square Garden on behalf of the Strike Committee, of which you were Chairman? A. I did not.

Q. Did the Strike Committee as a whole authorize David Leeds to rent the Madison Square Garden for that Strike Committee?

A. They did not. They did not.

Q. Was David Leeds an agent of the Strike Committee at any time?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. You would know, of course, wouldn't you, if he was?

A. I would, I believe. Yes.

Q. I believe your testimony is that you didn't know who David Leeds is?

A. I not only didn't know him but I don't know him to [5206] this day, and wouldn't know him if I saw him here.

Q. So that your testimony is certain on that, that you didn't appoint David Leeds as an agent of the Strike Committee?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. It is certain, as certain as I am sitting here.

Q. And no motion was made or carried in any meeting of this Strike Committee appointing David Leeds as an agent of the Strike Committee for any purpose? A. No, there was not.

Q. You would know of such a motion?

A. I am pretty sure there wasn't.

Q. Now, you say all of the money was on the table here, the money that had been collected from the audience and the money from the sale of the tickets were on the table?

A. I am not sure that the money from the sale of the tickets was on that table. I say that the money, as it was being collected from the floor, was on the table.

Q. And it was counted?

A. It was being counted.

Q. Was the counting completed?

A. I believe there was an announcement at the end of the amount collected.

Q. What was the announcement as to the amount?

A. I am not too clear on it and I couldn't be sure.

Q. Who made the announcement?

A. I believe that McCuistion announced the amount that [5207] was collected.

Q. McCuistion stood up and announced the amount of money that had been collected from the audience? A. Yes.

Q. Who authorized him to do that?

A. Well, he was the man that made the collection speech, you see. In other words, he was the one that spoke for the collection, and it's the usual custom in meetings of that type that the one who does the collecting usually comes back later and makes an announcement of the amount taken in. It's just a——

Q. (Interposing): Who authorized McCuistion to speak on behalf of the collection?

A. Well, we thought he was a pretty good speaker and we just naturally told him to do the talking, that's all.

Q. By "we" you mean yourself and others?

A. Yes; the group; the Strike Committee.

Q. McCuistion was a friend of yours at that time? A. Well, he was, yes.

Q. And what happened to the money after it was counted and the announcement made?

A. I don't know for sure what happened to the money after that, after it was taken off the table. I think——

Q. (Interposing): Weren't you interested?

A. No, in the actual counting of the money. I was too busy. [5208]

Q. Not the actual counting but as to where the money went?

A. No. We trusted most everybody in those days. We found out since we trusted too many, but we trusted most everybody. We were pretty naive, and nine times out of ten nothing was stolen.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. And where did the money go?

A. We didn't have enough——

Q. (Interposing): After the money was counted where did it go and who took it?

Presiding Inspector: He says he doesn't know.

A. I don't know where it went after it was counted. I know this much: That it wasn't enough money collected to pay for the Garden.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. How do you know that?

A. Well, since then I know that on our debts with the Union which we assumed when the National Maritime Union was set up there was a debt listed towards the Madison Square Garden of a few hundred dollars yet. And we have been paying off those debts which the strike committee in the old days had O.K.'d. We have been paying off those debts.

Q. Let me get this straight first. You have been paying debts to the Madison Square Garden?

A. I say, one of the debts that is among the debts [5209] in the National Maritime Union and listed as such, I believe, is an amount of money owed to the Madison Square Garden.

Q. Because of this rally in 1936? A. Yes.

Q. How much was that? In what amount?

A. I don't know.

Q. Has it been paid? A. I don't know.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. Huh?

A. Oh, whether it has been paid or not? We owe quite a few debts and we pay off on them in the regular way.

Q. Did you pay this debt to the Madison Square Garden?

A. I can't be clear on that unless you allow me to tell you how we pay our debts.

Q. No, no. You have already testified that there is a debt outstanding. A. That's right.

Q. Between the Garden and your—what is the organization you belong to at the present time?

A. The National Maritime Union.

Q. You say the National Maritime Union has assumed that debt?

A. We assumed the debts that the Strike Committee previous to the inception of our Union——

[5210]

Q. (Interposing): Incurred?

A. (Continuing): ——had contracted.

Q. And among those debts was that contracted for the use of the Madison Square Garden?

A. That's not my answer. Among those debts was a debt of some dollars to the Madison Square Garden and I saw it there. I believe it said "For Madison Square Garden meeting". I believe that's listed.

Q. In what amount?

A. Now, I say, along with the rest of our debts which we pay off on a regular periodic basis, depending on the manner in which our business is conducted, that one too will be paid on the same basis as the others.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. Let's only go to that one particular debt.

A. You can't do it.

Q. Huh? A. You can't do it.

Q. You can't?

A. All our debts are put together. On the first of each month we make payments on our debts, you see.

Presiding Inspector: Just shows the gross amount of debts?

The Witness: It does, and then it itemizes them.

Presiding Inspector: What was the item for? That is what he is asking you, if you can tell. If you can't tell, [5211] just say so.

The Witness: It is itemized.

Presiding Inspector: Can you tell how much it was?

The Witness: No, I can't.

Presiding Inspector: That is all.

The Witness: No, no.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. But——

Presiding Inspector: That ends it.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. But you are sure that it was a debt incurred by the Strike Committee to the Madison Square Garden for the meeting here on December 16, 1936?

A. No, I am not sure.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. You are not sure?

A. I say that listed among our debts is a debt to the Madison Square Garden for a meeting, and I believe it's that meeting. I believe it's that meeting.

Presiding Inspector: That is his best recollection, he means.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did the National Maritime Union assume any debts owed by the Strike Committee to David Leeds?

A. If they borrowed money from David Leeds, yes. [5212] And it was voted upon to go out and borrow money and David Leeds was the man they borrowed on it, yes, we assumed that debt as a legitimate debt.

Presiding Inspector: That would be under the name of David Leeds?

The Witness: That is correct, sir.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. But did you incur any such debt owing to David Leeds?

A. I believe we owed a debt—I'm not sure whether it is to David Leeds or whether the item reads "Madison Square Garden".

Q. I am only asking you about David Leeds.

A. I am not sure that we owe any money to David Leeds as such.

Q. You testified that you had never heard about Leeds before?

A. Yes, I still say that I have never heard about

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Leeds up to the time Leeds became in the first—I believe the first hearing here under Dean Landis, and this hearing. I have become acquainted with David Leeds, and in the Dies Committee. I have never laid eyes on David Leeds.

Q. But you have had an opportunity since that time to refresh your memory a little bit.

A. On what basis? On what? [5213]

Q. Regarding the debts owing to Madison Square Garden.

A. No. I am not too clear on that Madison Square Garden matter on the question of the debt. I said that before and I say it again.

Q. Now, I believe that you said that you didn't know where the money that was collected finally went to, is that correct?

A. I say that I believe it went to pay for the guarantee of the Garden.

Q. Who took it? Who took the money?

A. The Secretary of the Strike Committee.

Q. Lawrenson? A. Jack Lawrenson.

Q. Did McCuistion turn it over to him?

A. I believe so.

Q. Do you know?

A. I don't know for sure.

Q. What did Lawrenson do with it?

A. I believe Lawrenson turned the money in to clear up the Garden debt.

Q. Right then and there?

A. No, I don't believe right then and there.

Q. Well, when?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. I believe we used some in the strike, I believe. [5214]

Q. Well now, are you sure of that? How much did you use during the strike?

A. Maybe a couple of dollars or so.

Q. A couple of dollars, is that all?

A. Maybe.

Q. Huh? A. I don't know the amount.

Q. Was a report made by Lawrenson?

A. On what?

Q. On what he did with the money?

A. On the amount of money used?

Q. Yes.

A. I believe a report was made on how the money was handled.

Q. You saw that report?

A. I believe I saw the report.

Q. Well, he gave that report to you, didn't he?

A. No. He gave the report to the Strike Committee, of which I was a member.

Q. Of which you were the Chairman?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, he wouldn't hand it to the Strike Committee? He would hand it to you, wouldn't he?

A. As Secretary of the Strike Committee it would be his job to read it to the Strike Committee, if he had a written report; and if he made a verbal report it would be up to him to [5215] make the report to the Strike Committee and not to me alone.

Q. And if a report was made you were present and heard it? A. That's correct.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. If a written report was made of it you would have seen it? A. That is correct.

Q. Did you see a written report?

A. I believe I did hear a verbal report.

Q. Did you see a written report?

A. I don't believe I did.

Mr. Del Guercio: May we have a little recess?

Presiding Inspector: Yes, short recess.

[5216]

Presiding Inspector: Mr. Grossman, did Mr. Meyer send you a copy of this letter that he sent to me?

Mr. Grossman: No, he didn't; at least, I haven't received it.

Presiding Inspector: He refers to three statutes, of which we will take judicial notice, of course, and I think it only covers one month of the period which you are interested in.

Mr. Grossman: I will look it over and discuss it with you.

Presiding Inspector: All right. Then show it to Mr. Del Guercio.

Mr. Grossman: Yes; I will.

(The letter referred to was passed to Mr. Grossman.)

Presiding Inspector: You may proceed, Mr. Del Guercio.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Who had charge of the admissions to this rally in Madison Square Garden?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. Well, you mean who was in the ticket booths?

Q. Yes.

A. I don't know. I think there were striking seamen in the ticket booths.

Q. Was there somebody from the Garden there also?

A. I imagine there were plenty from the Garden; special police around, and supervisors and all; they are always around there. [5217]

Q. Had any instructions been left with them as to admitting anyone free of charge?

A. Yes. The striking seamen were to be let in free.

Q. How were they to be identified?

A. They had a strike card.

Q. Who made those arrangements?

A. Well, we told all and sundry that all the striking seamen were to get in. I don't remember the persons told, but everybody knew that.

Q. Was that discussed and arranged in the strike Committee?

A. Yes, of course. I believe we had some masters at arms stationed at the door, seamen, who were to look over the picket cards as they came in.

Q. How many striking seamen were there at that time?

A. Roughly, I should say about between 6000 and 7000 in New York.

Q. Were they all in Madison Square Garden?

A. No. We maintained some picket lines, and other activities.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. How many would you say attended the rally there?

A. It is pretty hard to say. I imagine about 4000.

Q. You say there were about 20,000, between 17,000 and 20,000 people there that night?

A. I would say nearer 20,000. We would have to say 20,000, when we count the striking seamen in there, there in [5218] the Garden. But we would discount them to get the number of paid admissions.

Q. There were about 20,000 paid admissions?

A. No. There were about 20,000 people in the Garden, from which you would discount the amount of seamen in there without paying, which would run maybe 3000 or 4000, and then you would probably have the paid admissions.

Q. Now, how many people were there on the platform that night?

A. I should say about between 50 and 100; quite a big platform.

Q. Was David Leeds on the platform?

A. I don't know.

Q. Would you say that he wasn't?

A. I don't know. I couldn't say he was or I couldn't say he wasn't, because I don't know the man when I see him.

Q. You knew Roy Hudson? A. Yes.

Q. Would you say he was not on the platform?

A. Yes; I would say he was not on the platform.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. Do you know Al Lannon? A. Yes.

Q. Would you say he wasn't on the speakers' platform? A. He was; yes.

Q. And do you know Tommy Raye?

A. Yes. [5219]

Q. Would you say that he was on the speaker's stand?

A. I don't believe he was on the speakers' stand.

Q. You don't believe—is there some doubt?

A. Well, you see there were a great many people on that platform. He was a member of the,—a striking member,—and there was a great many of them on the platform. I couldn't be sure whether he was there or not.

Q. He may have been there?

A. A great amount of time has passed since then and it is difficult to recollect every detail there.

Q. You wouldn't say that he wasn't on the stand?

A. No; I wouldn't say he wasn't or I wouldn't say that he was.

Q. After the rally was over I believe you testified that Harry Bridges went into the press room, is that right? A. Yes.

Q. And you went with him? A. Yes.

Q. How many went with you and Harry Bridges into the press room?

A. Well, we got off the platform and there was quite a milling around the platform there, and we got down off of there, and on the left hand side of the platform going through the back there is an ante-room there. This red-headed guy, longshoreman from Rhode Island, grabbed hold of Harry and we had all we could do to drag him into that ante-room. [5220]

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. You were with Harry Bridges at the time?

A. Yes.

Q. You recall that incident?

A. I do pretty clearly because we had quite a struggle getting him away from this red-headed guy who hadn't seen him for years.

Q. How many times have you been on the platform of Madison Square Garden?

A. You mean now, or before then?

Q. Before that?

A. I had never been in Madison Square Garden before then. That was the first time I had been in the Garden.

Q. Have you been there since?

A. Oh, yes; many times.

Q. On the platform?

A. Yes. I was there last week on the platform.

Q. Well, now, you say you went to the press room. How many were there with you and Bridges in the press room?

A. There were about six or seven newspaper men.

Q. Eliminating the newspaper men, how many others were there?

A. Well, there was, I believe, there was Bridges,

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

myself, Peter Innes, and, I am not too sure, no, McCuistion wasn't there.

Q. You are sure about that?

A. I am sure he wasn't there now; I am sure of that. [5221]

Q. Who else?

A. I don't recall clearly recollect anybody else.

Q. There might have been others?

A. I don't think there was anybody else.

Q. There might have been some others there?

A. Yes and no.

Q. What was Innes doing there?

A. Oh, every time you looked around he was there.

Q. He muscled in there too?

A. He muscled into everything; he never missed.

Q. How long would you say you remained in the press room?

A. I should say roughly about 15 or 20 minutes.

Q. And the press men were there all that time?

A. Yes; they were asking Bridges questions.

Q. And where did you go from there?

A. From there I went out of the building.

Q. Alone?

A. No. I had a whole group of seamen around me when I went out of the building.

Q. Was Harry Bridges with you? A. No,

Q. Did you leave Bridges in the building?

A. As soon as he got out of the press room this guy from Rhode Island grabbed him around the neck and they went off together.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. Did you see them go out? [5222]

A. I saw them go from the press room, from this ante-room, and I went out on my own and met a group of seamen at the door and we went down to strike headquarters.

Q. Let us get back to this press room. You saw Harry Bridges and this red-headed guy come out of the press room?

A. I say we came out of the door of the press room—and we had kept this guy, by main force, out of the press room—and when he came out the door he was there.

Q. Did you and Bridges come out of the press room together?

A. The whole group pushed out of the press room at the same time.

Q. The press men also? A. Yes.

Q. All pushed out?

A. Well, walked out, we will say. It is a narrow door and they all tried to get out the door at the same time. You can call it "pushing," or "shoving"—but we got out.

Q. You were with Harry Bridges when you were going out and you saw this red-headed guy grab him?

A. He grabbed Harry, hugged Harry, and they went on out the door.

Q. Did you see Harry go out the door?

A. Yes.

Q. Out of what door?

A. You see, Madison Square Garden is on the starboard [5223] side, right side of the building on 48th Street; the left side is on 49th Street. We went out the 49th Street door.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. Who is "we"?

A. Bridges, the red-headed guy right behind him. I came out and met a group of seamen and we went down 9th Avenue, which is that (indicating) way, and Bridges and the red-headed guy went toward 8th Avenue, which was that (indicating) way.

Q. Did anybody else go with Bridges and this red-headed fellow?

A. I didn't pay any attention. When I came out of the door I walked down 9th Avenue with this group of seamen.

Q. Did you see where Bridges went?

A. No, I did not.

Q. That is the last you saw of Harry Bridges, when he and this red-headed guy left there?

A. That night; yes.

Q. Immediately after he went out the door on 49th Street? A. That night.

Q. And you went one way and Harry Bridges went another? A. Yes.

Q. Do you know where Harry Bridges went?

A. No.

Q. He might have gone back into Madison Square Garden?

A. He might have done anything for all I know.

Q. You wouldn't know? A. No. [5224]

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. Did you go back to Madison Square Garden that night?

A. No. I went down to strike headquarters.

Q. Was Lawrenson—you know Lawrenson as a member of the Communist Party, don't you?

A. No.

Q. What?

A. I know him as a member of the National Maritime Union.

Q. You also know him as a member of the Communist Party? A. No, I don't.

Q. Have you ever said you knew him to be a member of the Communist Party?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Or that you knew him to be a member of the Communist Party? A. No, I did not.

Q. You have never at any time admitted you knew him to be a member of the Communist Party?

A. No. I believe I said that in the case of one, that I had heard proclaim himself publicly, being a member of the Communist Party.

Q. Who was that?

A. I believe that was in the case of Al Lannon. I am not too sure about that; I believe in that case I said that.

Q. Is Tommy Raye a member of the Communist Party?

A. I have heard people say he is. I don't know. I didn't question him on his affiliation, political affiliation. [5225]. He is a seaman.

Q. He is what?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. A seaman, and a member of the union.

Q. Did you ever call Al Lannon a Communist, Tommy Raye, a Communist? A. No.

Q. At any time, any place?

A. Not that I know of. I don't make a practice of calling anybody a Communist.

Q. Why? A. I leave that to others.

Q. I believe you referred to a strike in the spring of 1936? A. Yes.

Q. That was called the spring strike?

A. Yes.

Q. And when did that strike terminate?

A. When did it what?

Q. Terminate?

A. It terminated, I believe, on May 4th.

Q. May 4? A. I believe.

Q. 1936? A. Yes.

Q. And do you know if Innes had any connection with that strike? [5226]

A. I believe it was in the middle of that strike, or nearing the end of that strike, that I first saw Innes, that he first appeared on the scene.

Q. And the other strike that took place in 1936, that began when?

A. I believe it began on November 1st.

Q. On November 1st?

A. Midnight of the—has October 31 days—on midnight of the 31st, that was when it actually took place, I believe.

Q. That is the strike in which you were Chairman of the Strike Committee?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. Yes. I was also Chairman of the Strike Committee in the spring strike.

Q. When had it been decided upon to call that strike? A. The last strike?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, there was a meeting at Cooper Union Hall in New York City, sponsored by the officials of the International Seamen's Union of America, and at this meeting——

Q. (Interposing): When was that in respect to the time that the strike was actually started?

A. I believe that meeting was about October, somewhere around the 20th, but I am not sure; somewhere around that date.

Q. And is that the time that the Strike Committee was formed?

A. No. That is the time that the membership decided to [5227] support the west coast.

In order to be clear on that, there was a great deal of sentiment among the seamen to support the west coast unions, but the officials of the ISU would not allow them to express themselves on it. And in order to offset the growing sentiment the ISU officials called this big meeting in New York; and at this meeting they attempted to prevent the rank and file from voting support to the west coast, with the result at that meeting the officials had to walk out of the meeting because the rank and file wouldn't go along with them. They walked out of the meeting and left the meeting. The rank and file at that meeting voted to support the west coast unions on strike without the officials being there. That is the place that it really started.

Q. Was the Strike Committee appointed at that time? A. No, no.

Q. When?

A. After that, I believe a couple of days after that, either one or two days—no—the next day at Manhattan Plaza.

Q. You knew Peter Innes at that time?

A. No—yes, at that strike; yes. I thought you were referring to the spring strike.

Q. What position did he have, if any, at that time?

A. He was on the Pacific Coast then. [5228]

Q. As what?

A. And he was collecting advertisements for the Pilot, our paper, and he muscled in here and there on the west coast.

Q. Was there a Seamen's Defense Committee around that time?

A. Yes. It was dissolved at the mass meeting at the Manhattan Plaza and the Strike Committee then took over.

Q. Who created the Seamen's Defense Fund?

A. The Strike Committee. When it ended on May 4th, or approximately that date, the rank and file seamen had been on an outlaw strike, as it was called by the officials of the ISU, and the strike was terminated then, and they decided in a mass meeting at the same place, Manhattan Plaza, in order to protect themselves, and knowing that the west coast was definitely headed toward a strike, and being afraid that the ISU officials that were then in office would not allow them to take any action in support——

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. (Interposing) Look, I am just asking you when that Manhattan Plaza meeting took place.

A. These things are so close——

Q. (Interposing) What date was that meeting? A. Which meeting?

Q. The one where the Strike Committee was set up?

A. Immediately at the close of the spring strike?

Q. That was when?

A. I should say about May 4th; at the termination of the strike a meeting was called for the purpose of calling off [5229] the strike and that committee was established.

Q. The Seamen's defense Committee continued after that date?

A. Yes. It was set up for that purpose, to continue to protect the interests of the rank and file.

Q. How long a period did it continue?

A. Right up until the second strike. It was dissolved at a mass meeting that created the Strike Committee.

Q. Was Peter Innes on that Seamen's Defense Committee?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. No. He shipped out shortly after the spring strike.

Q. You said something about representing the Pilot, that Innes represented the Pilot.

A. Out on the Pacific Coast. He shipped out of New York and when he arrived on the West Coast he represented the Pilot; yes.

Q. What is the Pilot, will you explain that?

A. The pilot— —

Q. (Interposing) Briefly.

A. It was the official organ of the National Maritime Union at that time.

Q. Official Organ of the Maritime Union?

A. National Maritime Union.

Q. And it has its offices where?

A. In New York.

Q. And who appointed Peter Innes as a representative of the Pilot? [5230]

A. Of the Pilot—when I signed his credentials?

Q. You signed his credentials? A. Yes.

Q. And when was the NMU organized?

A. In May 1937; May 7, 8, or 9—I am not sure about what date that was. I think it was May 8.

Q. Was there a Pilot in May 1936?

A. Yes.

Q. Who ran it?

A. Some rank and file seamen, members of the ISU.

Q. It wasn't the official organ of the NMU?

A. There was no NMU at that time. It was the ISU.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. Was the Pilot the official organ of the ISU?

A. No. The Seamen's Journal was the official organ.

Q. Of what was the Pilot the official organ?

A. The voice of the rank and file in opposition to the fakers of the ISU.

Q. Who were the editors?

A. There were two or three editors, two or three different editors for it.

Q. Were you one of the editors?

A. No, I was not.

Q. Did you have anything to do with the Pilot?

A. At what period of time—let's get that clear?

Q. During 1936?

A. Yes. Then I was one of the editors of the Pilot in [5231] 1936, from May on.

Q. From May on to the time the NMU took over? A. Yes.

Q. When did the NMU take over?

A. It took over in May 1937.

Q. And you say you were one of those who appointed Peter Innes as a representative of the Pilot?

A. No. The Seamen's Defense Committee as such decided that it was all right for him to collect advertising, and to distribute the Pilot, and to make contacts for the Pilot to get it aboard the ships, and I signed his credentials, as Chairman of the Defense Committee, in that respect.

Q. Where did the Seamen's Defense Committee have its headquarters in 1936?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. 164 Eleventh Avenue.

Q. New York? A. Yes.

Q. Were you the Chairman?

A. I was the Chairman.

Q. Who was the Secretary?

A. Ralph Emerson.

Q. Was it Jack Lawrenson or Ralph Lawrenson?

A. Ralph Emerson was the Secretary of the Seamen's Defense Committee.

Q. And did you ever correspond with Innes, as Chairman of the Seamen's Defense Committee? [5232]

A. I believe I did; I believe I did.

Q. Did you ever refer to Peter Innes as the W. C. Representative of the Seamen's Defense Committee? A. No.

Q. In 1936? A. No, I don't believe I did.

Q. Did you ever write him a letter, addressed to Peter Innes, as the West Coast Representative of the Seamen's Defense Committee?

A. I believe I did one or two; yes.

Q. Did you address him as "Dear Brother?"

A. Sure. He was a member of the union.

Q. And did you sign it, "Yours Fraternally, Joseph Curran?"

A. I would sign—you are speaking of what, of communications I sent, or a particular communication?

Q. Communications that you sent?

A. Communications I sent to any members of the union would be signed "Fraternally yours," to a member of any trade union; yes.

Q. Now, do you know where Innes was about October 1936?

A. He might have been in Frisco.

Q. And do you recall now communicating with Peter Innes in October of 1936?

A. I might have.

Q. To go back, Mr. Curran, I believe you testified that [5233] you didn't know Tommy Raye, never knew he was a member of the Communist Party.

A. I think the record there states that.

Presiding Inspector: I think he said so.

A. (Continuing) I think the record shows.

Presiding Inspector: That is my recollection.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you, in any communication to Mr. Innes, say this:

"I am going to see that you get a money sent to you if it is at all possible. I know what you are up against there on the coast and the firemen here now with the exception of Jerry King, are all pie cards."

Q. Did you say that? A. I might have.

Q. Further, did you say to McInnes, in one of your letters——

A. (Interposing) I never wrote a letter to anyone by the name of McInnes.

Q. Innes. A. Oh.

Q. Did you say this:

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

"They have credentials from Hunter and they think they are big shots now. The C. P.'s"——

A. (Interposing) I might have,

Q. (Continuing) ——"have about got the control of the outfit now with Tommy Raye director of operations here in New [5234] York, but things are not bad on the whole."

Did you ever say anything like that in one of your letters to Innes? A. I might have.

Q. What did you mean by this language, "they have credentials from Hunter and they think they are big shots now. The C. P.'s have about got control of the outfit now with Tommy Raye director of operations here in New York, but things are not bad on the whole."

A. I would have to read the letter and study it to see what I meant. I can't just off-hand tell you what I meant. Time has gone along and I would have to see the letter.

Presiding Inspector: He is entitled to see the letter.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. You knew at that time that Tommy Raye was a member of the Communist Party?

A. I did not.

Q. And didn't you in this letter, in the letter, tell Peter Innes that the whole outfit was under the control of Tommy Raye? A. I did not.

Q. Who is the Jerry King that you refer to?

A. He is another one of the ones we trusted.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. What?

A. He is another one of the ones we trusted in those days and who is now in prison. [5235]

Q. Is he also a member of the Communist Party? A. I don't know.

Q. Did you, in about August, 1936, write a letter to your friend, Peter Innes, asking Innes to take up the question of your coming out to the West Coast so that you could stay out here?

A. I am not qualified to answer that unless I see the letter. I wrote many letters in August to many people and I might have written a letter to Innes and I might not; but before I do say I wrote a letter I would like to see the letter.

Q. Did you say at any time, did you write to Innes at any time stating that you wanted to come out here to the west coast because you didn't believe that there was anything on the east coast because the Communist Party had broken up all your chances there?

A. I might have; I don't know; I might have. I would like to see the letter though before saying I did.

Q. Did you ever write another letter to Peter Innes, in about October 1936, wherein you complained to Innes that you were referred to by the World Telegram about a certain voice referring to you as "Joe Curran, adored by the seamen?"

A. I ask you to let me see the letter before I answer. I won't say "Yes" or "No" until I see the letter.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. Were you ever referred to by anyone as being "adored by the seamen?"

A. I don't recollect; I may have been. [5236]

Q. Did you complain of that to McInnes?

A. To Innes, you mean?

Q. Yes.

A. I don't know whether I did or not.

Q. You might have?

A. I would like to see the letter you referred to before I answer. I am not sure until I read the letter, just how it is written. You may be phrasing it in your own language.

Q. You know what the Voice of the Federation is, don't you? A. Yes, I certainly do.

Q. Did they ever refer to you, the Voice of the Federation, as "Joe Curran, adored by the seamen?"

Mr. Gladstein: I object to that as immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: I think it is immaterial.

A. I——

Presiding Inspector: Don't answer.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, Mr. Curran, who paid for Harry Bridges' expenses from New York to Philadelphia—is that the first place he went, to Philadelphia?

A. No. The first place he went was to Boston.

Q. To Boston. Who paid his expenses from New York to Boston? A. We did.

Q. Who do you mean by "we"? [5237]

A. We on the Strike Committee.

Q. Did you?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. I had some money with me; yes.

Q. Did you purchase Bridges' transportation from New York to Boston?

A. No. I don't recollect how that was done. I paid for some food, he paid for some food, and I forget——

Q. (Interposing) Who do you mean by "he," Harry Bridges? A. He, Harry Bridges.

Q. You say you went with Harry Bridges from New York to Boston? A. To Boston; yes.

Q. Did anyone else go along?

A. Peter Innes, but Peter Innes didn't go on the plane. We managed to get away from him that time.

Q. He didn't muscle in? A. No.

Q. How did you travel from New York to Boston? A. We went by plane.

Q. Who purchased Mr. Bridges' transportation?

A. I don't remember. I think that Harry Bridges purchased it himself.

Q. Is it possible that Peter Innes purchased it?

A. He may have been assigned to the task of obtaining the ticket, but I don't believe that Peter Innes provided the [5238] cash to purchase it.

Q. Did you give any money to Peter Innes to buy any transportation?

A. I don't know for sure; I doubt it.

Q. You bought your own?

A. I think I did.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. You didn't buy Harry Bridges' transportation? A. I don't think I did.

Q. Did you see Harry Bridges buy his own transportation? A. I did not.

Q. Now, did you buy a return trip?

A. No.

Q. What? A. A one-way ticket.

Q. How did you return?

A. We returned in the Ford sedan with the broken windows, and we almost froze to death coming home.

Q. But you didn't? A. Not quite.

Q. And you returned with Harry Bridges?

A. Yes.

Presiding Inspector: That is the time they thawed out.

Mr. Del Guercio: I was wondering about that.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. You returned to New York?

A. Yes. [5239]

Q. Where did you go from New York next with Harry Bridges, if you went anywhere?

A. Well, when we got back to New York from Boston I went on home.

Presiding Inspector: He means——

The Witness: Oh, the Philadelphia trip.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. When did Bridges leave New York next after his return from Boston?

A. He next went to Philadelphia.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. Did you go with him?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Now, to go back to Boston, when you and Harry Bridges arrived in Boston, were you met by anyone?

A. Yes. We were met by members of our Strike Committee. I think the Chairman was Thomas. I am not sure about that. I think there was also a longshoreman by the name of Flaherty.

Q. Marty Flaherty?

A. Yes, I think so. I am not too clear on that. I think there were two or three more Boston people, I think a couple of seamen besides the Chairman of the Boston Strike Committee.

Q. Where did you go after you were met by this group?

A. I believe we had dinner at Marty Flaherty's house that night. I believe he fed us. [5240]

Q. How many were at Marty Flaherty's house at that time?

A. Just Flaherty, myself,—I don't believe Peter Innes had gotten there yet at that time. He was driving up in a flivver with Cunningham, so I don't think he had got there yet.

Q. Who else was there?

A. Just Bridges, and Marty Flaherty and his wife.

Q. Was Fitzsimmons there?

A. He might have been there. Now, that I recollect, Fitzsimmons might have been there.

Q. Anyone else?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. He was one of the ones that met us at the plane.

Q. Anyone else? A. I don't believe so.

Q. Was Rose Burlac—B-u-r-l-a-c—there?

A. The only woman that was there was Flaherty's wife.

Q. You are sure that Rose Burlac wasn't there?

A. I am positive.

Q. Do you know who she is?

A. No, I don't know her. I know that the woman you speak of wasn't there, because the only woman that was there was introduced to me as Flaherty's wife.

Q. Did you ever meet Rose Burlac before?

A. No, I can't say that I have.

Q. Did you meet her at any time during this trip? A. I can't say I did. [5241]

Q. Of course, you know that Rose Burlac was the then Secretary of the Communist Party of Rhode Island? A. I don't know.

Q. Huh? A. No, I didn't know.

Q. And you say that she wasn't present at the house, at Flaherty's house, when you and Bridges arrived there? A. No, she was not.

Q. Or at any time during your being there?

A. She might have been in the audience in that meeting. There were a few hundred in the audience.

Q. In Flaherty's house?

A. No, in the meeting. At Flaherty's house there were only—as near as I can recollect there were only Bridges, myself, I believe Fitzsimmons was there, and one woman. I remember she complained about feeding so many men.

Q. Was it Flaherty's wife?

A. Mrs. Flaherty.

Q. How do you know?

A. I was introduced to her. I was introduced to her as Mrs. Flaherty, and I don't ask any other questions.

Q. What?

A. And I don't ask any further questions.

Q. Nobody has asked you if you have asked or not. A. Huh? [5242]

Q. Nobody has asked you if you have.

Presiding Inspector: I know. That isn't the question. Go ahead and ask another question.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, you didn't go with Bridges from New York to Philadelphia, did you?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Do you know who went with Bridges?

A. No, I don't recollect who went with him.

Q. Did you purchase Bridges' transportation from New York to Philadelphia?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you arrange for his transportation to Philadelphia?

A. No. He went down in a Ford Sedan, I believe.

Q. Who drove him down?

A. I don't know.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. Bridges also spoke at Baltimore?

A. Yes. I went with him to Baltimore.

Q. Where did you start from?

A. We started from New York.

Q. And who paid for Bridges' transportation to Baltimore?

A. We each bought our tickets on the train.

Q. Bridges bought his own?

A. As near as I can recollect. I'm not too sure.

Q. Are you sure that Innes didn't buy it?

A. It may be. Innes was all over the place. I am not [5243] sure, but I bought my own at the station. I don't know how Bridges' ticket was bought.

Q. For whom was Innes acting around this time? A. Around that time?

Q. Yes.

A. He might have been acting for the FBI. I don't know.

Q. Are you sure of that?

A. He acted strangely every time we saw him. Every time we saw him he was in on everything.

Q. Were there FBI men there, too?

A. No. I say he "might have been." The LaFollette Committee describes labor spies in that manner.

Q. Was anybody trailing you at that time?

A. Was anybody what?

Q. Have you been trailed?

A. I have been trailed since the day I stepped off the California in 1936. I was trailed, I am sure.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. When Bridges was out there?

A. I was trailed, I am sure.

Q. By whom?

A. Some "G" man, I suspect.

Q. You suspect?

A. They don't come up and tap you on the shoulder and tell who they are. But I am sure that I was trailed.

Q. What were you engaged in? Were you engaging in some crime? [5244]

A. I was engaged in striking for better hours and working conditions.

Q. You hadn't robbed a bank around that time, had you?

Presiding Inspector: What?

Mr. Del Guercio: I am asking him if he had robbed a bank. He said he was being trailed by a "G" man, FBI men.

Presiding Inspector: I wouldn't ask that question.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, if the Court please, he made the statement that he was being watched by FBI men. They have a purpose in watching people.

Presiding Inspector: You know that he hasn't robbed a bank.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, I don't know.

Presiding Inspector: Well, everyone else in the room does.

Mr. Del Guercio: He says he was watched.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

There is a purpose in the FBI watching these men.

The Witness: That's right. I was definitely advised that I was watched by the FBI.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Had you been investigated by the FBI at that time? A. I believe that.

Q. In 1936?

A. No, I don't believe so. Not in open hearing or anything like that. I believe we were investigated, yes.

Presiding Inspector: If the witness really meant that— [5245] I thought that——

The Witness: (Interposing) No. I am quite serious about it, sir.

Presiding Inspector: I didn't realize that. When you said that Innes might be an FBI man, were you serious about that?

The Witness: No, I don't believe Innes would ever be an FBI man. I believe——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) That will do. You weren't serious about that when you said he might be an FBI man?

The Witness: I didn't say he "might be an FBI man".

Presiding Inspector: I beg your pardon. Read it back.

(The portion of the record referred to was read by the reporter as follows:

"Q. For whom was Innes acting around this time?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

"A. Around that time?

"Q. Yes.

"A. He might have been acting for the FBI, I don't know.")

Presiding Inspector: Now, you didn't mean that, did you? That was a joke?

The Witness: Well, I didn't mean he was an FBI man.

Presiding Inspector: That is what I say.

The Witness: But I say, according to the LaFollette hearings and other indications since, he may have been working [5246] for the FBI.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, you also made the statement that you were being watched or followed by FBI men at that time? A. That's correct.

Q. Did you mean that?

A. I meant that I was followed by the FBI from the day I stepped off the California in 1936 on March 18th. From that day forward, to practically this day—they may have taken a day or two off, but I have been pretty well followed, and I imagine there is a pretty full record of my movements since that time.

Q. When did you step off the California?

A. March 18, 1936, in New York City.

Q. March 18.

A. No, just a moment. March 16, 1936.

Q. And from that day on you were being followed by FBI men?

A. That's my opinion.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. Huh? A. That's my opinion.

Q. Well, what is your opinion based on?

A. My opinion is based on the fact that things have come up since that prove that.

Q. Well, did you see any FBI men following you? [5247]

A. You don't see them.

Q. Huh? A. You don't see them.

Q. You don't see them?

A. You can't see them or they wouldn't be there, I imagine. They have to be clever.

Q. Well, have you committed some crime then?

A. I say I believe that it was considered at that time a crime to fight for better conditions on the ships. We are accused of being mutineers and what-not.

Q. Well, had you committed a crime against the United States at that time?

A. Not that I know of, nor have I ever committed——

Q. (Interposing): Were you about to commit a crime against the United States?

A. I didn't get that.

Q. Were you about to commit a crime against the United States? A. No, I never have.

Q. Had you told that you were about or engaged in committing a crime against the United States? A. No. [5248]

Q. And you were being followed by FBI men?

A. I believe so. I believe so very definitely.

Q. You knew that the FB—(Pause). Were you on the West Coast at any time during 1934?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. No.

Q. For any period of time?

A. Over what period of time?

Q. During the year 1934?

A. I was not.

Q. Were you paid off any ship during 1934 at a West Coast port? A. No.

Q. Did you have shore leave on the West Coast during the year 1934?

A. I don't remember. If I was on the Virginia, I believe, either the latter part of '33 or the winter of '33-34 and if I got to the West Coast on that ship, you can bet I got shore leave.

Q. And for how many days?

A. For as long as the ship was in.

Q. And how long was the ship in?

A. I am not too sure. It might have been in four, five, or six days.

Q. Was that in San Francisco?

A. If she came to the West Coast she stopped at San [5249] Diego, San Pedro and San Francisco.

Q. And you got shore leave at all those places?

A. Yes, sir. With that gang that we have got down there, we did.

Q. Were you in San Francisco on about October, 1936, just before the strike that you talked about? A. I believe I was.

Q. And how did you get to the West Coast at that time?

A. I drove out in an old broken down gray Packard.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. You didn't get out here on a ship in any event, did you?

A. No. The records would show that. No. I came overland in an automobile.

Q. And what were you doing in San Francisco at that time?

A. Probably meeting with a lot of trade unionists, discussing the possibilities of a maritime strike and what we on the East Coast could do to help them.

Q. Whom did you have such meetings with?

A. Possibly the leaders of the various unions, maybe Harry Bridges with the longshoremen, firemen, stewards.

Q. Let us confine ourselves to the meetings in which Harry Bridges was present.

A. I don't remember clearly how many meetings there were. I believe one meeting was between Harry Bridges, myself and McGrady of the Labor Department in a hotel. Another meet- [5250] ing was with the General Strike Committee, of which they had a whole coast—or General Negotiating Committee, I mean, of which there were about 25 or 30 members, I guess, from the whole coast. They were negotiating at that time.

Q. Here! Let's get this clear first. When did you arrive in San Francisco in 1936?

A. I'm not too sure of the date. Somewhere around the 24th of October.

Q. October 24?

A. Somewhere around there.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. 1936? A. Yes.

Q. You came to San Francisco? A. Yes.

Q. Anybody with you? A. Yes.

Q. Who?

A. A man by the name of David Ramos.

Q. David Ramos?

A. Ramos; R-a-m-o-s.

Q. Anyone else? A. That's all.

Q. How long did you remain in San Francisco?

A. I think I remained about four days.

Q. Until about October 27th?

A. Or 28th. [5251]

Q. Until about October 27th or 28th?

A. Yes.

Q. You stayed all that time in San Francisco?

A. Yes.

Q. Between October 24th and October 28th?

A. Yes. That's an approximate date, that arrival date, you know. I am not sure.

Q. Did you stop at any hotel? A. Yes.

Q. Where did you stop?

A. The Lincoln Hotel.

Q. And did you register there?

A. Definitely.

Q. Under your own name?

A. Definitely.

Q. Did Ramos register there also?

A. Yes. I believe Ramos stayed there.

Q. Under that name, David Ramos?

A. Yes.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. Did you hold any meetings in your hotel room at the Lincoln Hotel?

A. Sure! I met with the ship's delegates from the Dorothy Luckenbach. I met with some seamen off of the—I forget just what other ships were in, but I had quite a few seamen up off the ships. [5252]

Q. Were you an official of any union at that time?

A. No. I was the Chairman of the Seamen's Defense Committee.

Q. Chairman of the Seamen's Defense Committee. That's of the Seamen's Defense Committee that originated in the spring strike?

A. Yes.

Q. And that strike was over? A. Yes.

Q. You were not chairman of this Joint Strike Committee, the latter strike of 1936?

A. It hadn't been set up yet. There was no strike yet.

Q. And was David Ramos also a member of the Seamen's Defense Committee?

A. No. David Ramos was a rank and file sailor who had sailed with me on the California and who went with me so as to drive the car. I couldn't drive at that time. Ramos—I had just learned how to drive, I mean. Ramos went along to help drive the car and he also went along with me because two men are better in a fight than one man sometimes.

Q. Is that why you have others along with you?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. Dave? That's why I had Dave with me?

Q. Yes?

A. Yes, because sometimes we might run into trouble and we would have to defend ourselves.

Q. You can't take care of yourself? [5253]

A. I might be able to take care of myself.

Q. You need somebody else to go along with you at all times?

A. Not all the time.

Q. Do you have bodyguards here as Vice-Presidents or other officers?

A. No. I haven't had a bodyguard since I came ashore from the California.

Q. Huh?

A. I don't need one now, neither.

Q. Huh?

A. And I don't need one now.

Q. Has anyone said or indicated that you do?

A. No.

Q. Huh? Are you afraid of anything right now? A. No.

Q. How many meetings did you have in this hotel room in which Bridges was present?

A. Well, I will tell you. Oh, Bridges? I don't believe I had any meetings at all.

Q. Bridges never came to visit you in this hotel? A. I don't think so.

Q. Did you know him then?

A. Yes, I knew him. Yes. Very definitely.

Q. Did you attend any meetings in San Francisco any- [5254] where during that period of time with Harry Bridges?

A. Oh, yes, yes, I attended the Negotiating Committee meetings, which was a meeting composed of the Negotiating members of the Union from Portland, Seattle, 'Frisco and 'Pedro. They met here to negotiate with the shipowners. Harry Bridges was a member of that Negotiating Committee.

Q. In what capacity did you go before them?

A. Just as an observer and a guest.

Q. What kind of an observer?

A. From the East Coast.

Q. Huh? Did you have any business there?

A. Now, just a minute! Let's get this clear. Not at the actual negotiations with the shipowners, but at the meetings of the Negotiating Committee.

Q. Yes.

A. After they returned from the shipowners, you see.

Q. You said you might have been there as a guest. A. Yes.

Q. Who invited you?

A. Well, I was on very friendly terms with every member of the Negotiating Committee in every trade union on this coast.

Q. Did Harry Bridges tell you?

A. The whole Negotiating Committee invited me, including Harry Bridges. We were friendly with all unions. [5255]

Q. Were you friendly then with Harry Bridges?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. Yes. Still friendly with him.

Q. Was Mervyn Rathborne there?

A. Yes, Mervyn Rathborne was there.

Q. Are you friendly with Mervyn Rathborne?

A. Yes. Still friendly with him.

Q. How long have you known Mervyn Rathborne?

A. Since that time in 1936.

Q. Did you know him then as a member of the Communist Party? A. No.

Q. Huh? A. No, I did not.

Q. When did you find out that he was a member of the Communist Party?

A. I haven't found out yet.

Q. Huh? A. I haven't found out.

Q. Did you meet Roy Hudson in San Francisco at that time? A. No, I did not.

Q. October, 1936? A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you attend any meetings in which Roy Hudson was present? [5256]

A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you attend any meetings in which you and Harry Bridges, among others, and Roy Hudson were present? A. I did not.

Mr. Del Guercio: Do you wish to recess? I won't be able to finish.

Presiding Inspector: You won't be able to?

Mr. Del Guercio: No.

Presiding Inspector: I had hoped that you could get through with this witness so as to advance the matter. But you can't do the impossible.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Mr. Grossman: Before we adjourn, with respect to that letter that came in from Mr. Meyers, it is quite obvious from the letter that he has not given the full information we request. It may be that he can't.

Presiding Inspector: Perhaps there isn't anything more.

Mr. Grossman: But obviously another letter has to be written to him.

Presiding Inspector: Very well. You may write the letter.

Mr. Grossman: You suggest that I write the letter?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: I haven't seen it.

Presiding Inspector: It merely refers to three statutes. Of course, we will take judicial notice of those statutes; everyone in the Court room.

[5257]

Mr. Del Guercio: I should like to make an inquiry at this time as to whether or not Dr. MacMickle has submitted his diplomas?

Presiding Inspector: He has not.

Mr. Del Guercio: He was requested to do so. May the record show that he hasn't complied with the request?

Presiding Inspector: I don't know about the request, but the record may show that I have received nothing.

We will take a recess until ten o'clock.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

(Whereupon at 4:30 o'clock P. M. an adjournment was taken until Tuesday, May 27, 1941 at 10:00 o'clock A. M.) [5258]

Court Room 276,
Federal Building,
San Francisco, California,
May 27, 1941.

Met, pursuant to adjournment, at 10:00 A. M. [5259]

Proceedings

Presiding Inspector: Now, Mr. Del Guercio, you may proceed.

JOSEPH CURRAN

called as a witness on behalf of the Alien, having been previously duly sworn, testified further as follows:

Cross Examination (Resumed)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. You testified yesterday that you joined the Marine Workers Industrial Union and that you received a membership book, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Is this——

Mr. Gladstein (Interposing): May I see it before you show it to the witness?

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes; no objection.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

(The membership book referred to was passed to Mr. Gladstein.)

Mr. Gladstein: Mr. Del Guercio has handed me a book which cannot be identified as to year.

Presiding Inspector: Let the witness identify it.

Mr. Gladstein: It apparently is—Mr. Del Guercio tells me it is not in evidence. And, as I say, by an examination of it you can tell that you can't identify it as to year. [5260]

Presiding Inspector: Perhaps the witness can; we don't know; perhaps he can't.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. I show you what purports to be a membership book of the Marine Workers Industrial Union, and ask you to look at it and see if it is the same as the one you received when you joined the Marine Workers Industrial Union?

A. (Examining book.) It may be.

Q. You can't state definitely whether or not it is? A. No.

Q. You only had your membership book in the Marine Workers Industrial Union for several years, is that correct?

A. That is not correct.

Q. For how many years did you have it in your possession?

A. I didn't have it in my personal possession more than about a month.

Q. And you didn't have—where was it?

A. That is, on my person.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. Where was the book?

A. It was in a trunk.

Q. It was under your control all the time?

A. Well, it was up to a point.

Q. And you can't say—you want this court to believe that you can't identify this book as being similar to the one you had?

Mr. Gladstein: I object to the form of the question. [5261]

Presiding Inspector: I will allow it.

Mr. Gladstein: Then I want to state the grounds of my objection.

Presiding Inspector: Certainly.

Mr. Gladstein: I object to the question because of the form in which it is placed, it is argumentative and improper. It also asks for something that has been asked and answered, not once, but several times.

Presiding Inspector: I will allow it.

The Witness: Repeat the question.

Mr. Del Guercio: Read the question.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Of course, this isn't a court in the first place, but that is a mere manner of speech.

Mr. Gladstein: It isn't the use of the word "Court" that I object to.

Presiding Inspector: You don't object to that "You still believe"——

Mr. Gladstein: (Interposing): The question asked was "Do you want this Court to believe"——

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Presiding Inspector: Is that what you object to?

Mr. Gladstein: I object to the form of the question.

Presiding Inspector: You object to the form. We have used that manner of speech. That merely means it is still your testi- [5262] mony. With that explanation I will allow it.

Is it still your testimony that you can't identify this book as similar to the one you received?

The Witness: No, I can't identify it as similar to the one I received; I am not sure.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Well, did your book state, the one you received, "Membership Book of the Marine Workers Industrial Union"?

A. I believe it did.

Q. Did it also state, as it states in this book, "Affiliated with the Trade Union Unity League"?

A. It might have.

Q. And did it have the preamble as this book has on page 3? A. It might have.

Q. And was it similar—is it similar to the preamble in this book, reading as follows:—

Mr. Gladstein (Interposing): I will object to that as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: Both sides have done this right straight along.

Mr. Gladstein: Have done what?

Presiding Inspector: Have read an item and asked him whether that is the fact.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Mr. Gladstein: Your Honor didn't permit us to read an [5263] item which involved the preamble to the constitution of the American Federation of Labor.

Presiding Inspector: Which was entirely incompetent.

Mrs. King: Yes, it was read into the record.

Mr. Myron: It was read into the record.

Mr. Gladstein: I am sorry, your Honor.

Mrs. King: It was read into the record when Mr. Gladstein was not in Court.

Mr. Gladstein: I am sorry, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I might have ruled it out, but if I didn't then it is here.

Read the question, please.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. (Continuing): "——"The Marine Workers Industrial Union is organized to unit all workers in the marine industry and lead them in their struggles against the employers for better working and living conditions and for the ultimate freedom from wage slavery. This fight between——"

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): I have heard this before, haven't I? Go ahead.

Mr. Del Guercio: Sir? I don't know whether you have or not.

Mr. Gladstein: Several times. [5264]

Mr. Del Guercio: You are familiar with it?

Mr. Gladstein: I have heard you speak about it.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. (Continuing): "——This fight between the marine workers and the shipowners, bosses, etc., is only one front of the class struggle which rages ceaselessly between the whole working class and the whole class of employers—the capitalists. Victory in this struggle can be won only by the most relentless, militant and revolutionary struggle of the whole working class.

"For this reason, the M. W. I. U. does not limit itself to narrow craft interests in the manner of the A. F. of L. Unions, but considers itself always as an integral division of the forces of the working class. It rejects and condemns the treacherous 'class-collaboration' policy of the A. F. of L. which seeks to delude the workers into believing that it is possible for them to live 'in peace' with the capitalists, and betrays them into surrendering their organizations to the control of their employers.

"While striving constantly for the immediate betterment of all living and working conditions of the marine workers, the M. W. I. U. does not limit itself to immediate economic demands alone, but declares that the liberation of the marine [5265] workers from exploitation is only one part of the revolutionary struggle of the whole working class against the capitalist system.

"The M. W. I. U. urges upon all its members the most active participation in the general struggles of the working class, economic and political, directed toward the goal of the establishment of a revolutionary workers' government."

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Is that the preamble in your book that you had?

Presiding Inspector: Was that the preamble in your book? A. It might have been.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. And was your book signed by R. B. Hudson for the National Committee?

A. It might have been.

Q. You are not sure? A. No.

Mr. Gladstein: I will object to that.

Mr. Del Guercio: I offer this in evidence.

Presiding Inspector: You are objecting to his saying he is not sure?

Mr. Gladstein: No. I object to the question being asked half a dozen times, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, every one has trespassed over that rule.

Mr. Del Guercio: I offer this book in evidence.

[5266]

Mr. Gladstein: I will object to it. No foundation has been laid.

Presiding Inspector: Very well. It may be marked for identification.

(The document referred to was marked Government's Exhibit No. 276 for identification.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. When was the NMU organized?

A. You mean organized or set up?

Q. Created, set up or whatever you call it?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. It was created on May the 7th or 8th, 1937.

Q. Was there a convention about that time?

A. The convention was held in July.

Q. Were you one of the original organizers?

A. Yes.

Q. And where was the convention held?

A. In New York City.

Q. And were delegates appointed or elected or selected to this convention?

A. They were elected from the ships and from meetings ashore.

Q. From the various ships? A. Yes.

Q. And were you elected as a delegate?

A. Yes. [5267]

Q. From what ship? A. From ashore.

Q. You weren't on a ship at that time?

A. We elected delegates from ships and meetings ashore. Our constitution is very clear on that point.

Q. Did it have a constitution?

A. No. I say the constitution now is very clear on it and we worked on that basis.

Q. Who drew up the constitution for the NMU?

A. The constitution was drawn up by the convention.

Q. Was anyone appointed to draw it up?

A. No one was appointed to draw up a constitution.

Q. Who drafted the constitution?

A. No one drafted a constitution.

Q. How did it come into existence?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. The men from the ships and the meetings up and down the coasts sent in suggested parts of constitutions.

Q. And to whom did they send in these suggestions?

A. They sent them in to us in New York

Q. Was there a committee set up for the purpose of drawing up a constitution? A. Yes.

Q. Were you on that committee? A. Yes.

[5268]

Q. And who else was on the committee?

A. Tommy Raye and our attorney, William Standard.

Q. Is he an attorney, too? A. He is.

Q. Is he also a Communist? A. He is not.

Q. And how about Tommy Raye?

A. He's a seaman.

Q. Huh? Well, is he a Communist, too?

A. I don't know.

Q. So you, Standard and Tommy Raye drafted or set up the constitution for the NMU, is that correct? A. That is not true.

Q. Well, did anyone else?

A. The convention set up the constitution.

Presiding Inspector: He means you presented it to the convention.

The Witness: We did not present it to the convention. We compiled the various suggestions that came in and, as is done in any convention, brought them to the convention in an organized manner, placed them——

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing): That is what he is asking you. Didn't you understand that?

The Witness: No, I didn't.

Presiding Inspector: That is what he asked you. [5269]

The Witness: I want to make that clear.

Presiding Inspector: Why, certainly. But that is what he was asking you. Then you did organize it and present it to the convention, brought it before the convention?

The Witness: We brought it before the convention.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. When you say "we" you mean you, Tommy Raye and Standard?

A. Standard didn't attend the convention, no. He helped Tommy Raye and myself compile the material that came in. We brought it to the convention.

Q. Did either you or Tommy Raye put into the constitution any suggestions of your own?

Mr. Gladstein: I object upon the ground that is immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, don't you think we have gone far enough? [5270]

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you ever attend a meeting with Thomas Raye in New Orleans?

A. I attended a convention in New Orleans. Thomas Raye might have been there. He was a seaman.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. Did you attend a meeting there in which Tommy Raye and one or two others were present?

A. I had lunch in a restaurant there with Tommy Raye. That is the only meeting I had with him. I think there were two or three others there.

Q. Who were the others?

A. I am not too clear as to who they were.

Q. Did you have a meeting with Tommy Raye in the Jung Hotel in New Orleans? A. No.

Q. What? A. No.

Q. At any time?

Presiding Inspector: You mean at any time during the convention?

Mr. Del Guercio. Yes. A. No.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Or at any time while you were in New Orleans?

A. Well, Tommy Raye was a seaman attending a convention. [5271] I also was a seaman. So there is no doubt that one seaman spoke to the other, and he might have spoken to me in several places, bars, restaurants—if you mean that—but as far as a meeting is concerned, no.

Q. You testified before the Dies Committee, didn't you? A. I didn't hear that.

Q. Did you testify before the Dies Committee?

A. Yes.

Q. Weren't you asked by the Dies Committee, Mr. Whitley, whether you had a meeting with Thomas Raye in your New Orleans in the Jung Hotel?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. I might have been. I was asked millions of questions.

Presiding Inspector: Just answer the question.

A. (Continuing): I am not qualified to say exactly what I said at the Dies Committee hearing. Much time has passed. Many questions were asked. I would like to see the record before I am asked a question on it. Otherwise, I will have to say I don't know.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. You have said that, I understand.

A. Yes.

Presiding Inspector: When was that?

The Witness: When I testified before the Dies Committee?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

The Witness: I believe it was two years ago; somewhere [5272] between a year and a year and a half ago.

Presiding Inspector: Not this year anyway?

The Witness: No; it was quite some time ago.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Do you know Clarence Applewaite?

A. Yes. He was an official in what was once our Gulf District of our Union.

Q. Now, were you asked this question by Mr. Whitley of the Dies Committee:

"Have you ever had a meeting with Thomas Raye and Clarence Applewaite of the Gulf District Committee in the Jung Hotel in New Orleans?"

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. I might have.

Q. And was not your answer, "Yes"?

A. It might have been.

Q. Then did you have a meeting with Thomas Raye in New Orleans?

A. I might have had a meeting there; I am not sure.

Q. What was the purpose of that meeting?

A. Well, as seamen, I imagine, as Chairman of the Convention, and as a seaman—Applewaite as an an official, and Tommy Raye as a seaman, I believe we had a legal right to meet, and we might have met; I am not sure. But I would say we would meet any time we wanted to.

Q. Was this Tommy Raye a delegate to this convention in [5273] New Orleans?

A. No. There were hundreds of seamen that attended the convention that were not delegates.

Q. How did you go to New Orleans?

A. Oh, well, now—let me see. I believe I was in New Orleans for weeks before the convention took place.

Q. How did you get there—did you get there on a ship or overland? A. No; I flew.

Q. You flew? A. Yes.

Q. Well——

A. (Interposing): By plane, of course; not with wings.

Q. I don't believe that you have——

Presiding Inspector: Ask the next question.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. And how did Tommy Raye get down there?

Mr. Gladstein: I think that is immaterial and I object to it.

Mr. Del Guercio: It is very material. Tommy Raye, the evidence shows here, is a well-known Communist and working for the Communist Party.

Mr. Gladstein: I challenge that statement. The evidence shows no such thing. I still object to the question on the ground that it is immaterial, your Honor; also that it calls [5274] for the opinion and conclusion of the witness on a matter that is——

Presiding Inspector: If he knows he may answer.

A. I don't know.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Do you know if Tommy Raye was working as a seaman before and after that meeting?

A. I don't know.

Q. Do you know how long it had been since Tommy Raye had even seen a ship——

Mr. Gladstein: (Interposing): I object to the question.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. (Continuing): At the time of this meeting in New Orleans?

Mr. Gladstein: The question is so ridiculous that the Court should sustain an objection to it.

Presiding Inspector: If he knows; if he doesn't know he can say so.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Mr. Gladstein: How long it has been since another man saw a ship?

Mr. Del Guercio: He said he was a seaman.

Presiding Inspector: You know what he means, what counsel means.

Mr. Gladstein: I don't know what he means. I know what he said. I think the question is ludicrous and I object to it. [5275]

Mr. Del Guercio: Counsel knows what I mean exactly.

Presiding Inspector: He was a seaman; it is perfectly evident that he means how long since this man was employed as a seaman.

I will take the question, but it is very faintly relevant. I don't know how—it is preliminary, I suppose. I will allow it.

A. I don't know.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. How do you know that Tommy Raye is a seaman?

A. Well, he is a member of the NMU and he produced discharges, passed qualifications to enter the union the same as other seamen.

Q. Do you know of any ship that he has been on, since, say, 1934? A. No, I don't.

Q. Have you ever seen any discharge from any ship in the name of Thomas Raye?

A. No; I don't make a practice of looking at people's discharges. We have a membership committee that does that, and there is regular membership procedure.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. And when I asked you if you knew that Tommy Raye was a Communist, and you said, "No. He is a seaman." upon what did you base your answer that Thomas Raye was a seaman?

Mr. Gladstein: I think that has been asked and answered. [5276]

Presiding Inspector: I think he has answered that; I think he has answered that.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will withdraw the question.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you ever make a tour of the Gulf Ports at the termination of the 1936 strike? A. Yes.

Q. And with whom did you make that tour?

A. I made it with Howard McKenzie.

Q. Anyone else?

A. William C. McCuistion and Joe Cain.

Q. That is the same William C. McCuistion concerning whom you testified yesterday?

A. There is only one McCuistion.

Q. Who invited McCuistion to go along with you on this tour?

A. I am not too clear on how that committee was set up; but I believe we had a meeting in New York after the spring strike and it was decided that a group of us should go to the Gulf and clarify the spring strike to the men in the Gulf. As you know, the strike did not penetrate the Gulf. It was confined mostly around New York and Philadelphia.

Q. Would you say that McCuistion muscled in?

A. I didn't say that.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. And how many ports did you tour with McCuistion? [5277]

A. I think—I didn't tour the ports with McCuistion alone. I toured the ports with about four men, among which was William McCuistion.

Q. And how many ports did you go to with William McCuistion?

A. I would say four or five.

Q. How did you travel?

A. By automobile.

Q. A jaloppy too?

A. It was a jaloppy; yes, sir.

Q. Who drove the car?

A. We took turns driving it.

Q. How long were you with McCuistion at that time?

A. I am not too sure whether he left us on that trip down in the Gulf, or whether he stayed down there, or whether he came back. I am not too sure.

Q. And did that committee submit reports?

A. No. You see—we submitted reports through the medium of the Pilot, which we were putting out, the paper, and so forth.

Q. Who sent in the reports?

A. And through the medium of small meetings we called in New York and members coming off ships. We put out bulletins on it; yes.

Q. Under whose name?

A. Under the Seaman's Defense Committee.

[5278]

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. Did you sign your name to any of the reports submitted to the Pilot?

A. I might have.

Q. Did McCuistion?

A. He might have been on there.

Q. Now, you know that McCuistion went to Spain to fight for the Loyalist Cause?

A. I know he went to Spain.

Q. Did you ever contribute any money to the Loyalist Cause? A. Yes; sure.

Q. Who solicited your contribution?

A. At the meetings.

Q. In meetings of the then NMU?

A. Yes; took up collections on the floor.

Q. While you were present?

A. We bought an ambulance from collections.

Q. You bought an ambulance. At whose suggestion was the ambulance bought?

A. I think a resolution was drafted, and I think I participated in it, and we presented it on the floor of the meeting in New York, and it went up and down the coast.

Q. Who presented it on the floor?

A. I believe I did. I am not too sure; I believe I did.

Q. Did you make a speech? [5279]

A. I usually did; yes. We took up at the same time the Chinese and Spanish situations.

Q. We are talking only about the Spanish Loyalist Cause at the present time. You say you made a speech on behalf of the Loyalist Cause?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran:)

A. I made many speeches.

Q. At whose suggestion did you make these speeches? A. At my own suggestion.

Q. Tommy Raye didn't have any thing to do with it.

A. I didn't need anybody to suggest it.

Q. Did Roy Hudson? A. No one.

Q. Did either Roy Hudson or Tommy Raye propose to do that thing?

A. No one proposed it but myself, as a member and official of the Union. [5280]

Q. You were what at the time?

A. At that time?

Q. Yes.

A. I believe I was general organizer. I'm not too sure.

Q. Did you purchase an ambulance?

A. We certainly did.

Presiding Inspector: He said that.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. And was it sent to Spain?

A. There is a photograph in our official organ and you can have it. It shows me standing by the ambulance that we bought.

Q. Is that why you admit it? A. No.

Mr. Gladstein: I object to that question, your Honor. I think you should caution counsel.

Presiding Inspector: That is one of the few occasions in which you have had a rather frivolous question in lighter vein.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Mr. Gladstein: That question was in frivolous vein?

Presiding Inspector: I think so. Didn't you think so?

Mr. Gladstein: Do you want my answer?

Presiding Inspector: I don't care about it.

By Mr. Del Guercio: [5281]

Q. Did you ever participate in any May Day parades? A. Yes.

Q. Where? A. Where?

Q. Yes. A. New York

Q. Every May Day?

A. No. I think I was in two.

Q. Were you in a May Day parade in New York on May 1, 1938?

Mr. Gladstein: I object to this as absolutely immaterial, unless Mr. Del Guercio claims——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I don't see any point in it.

Mr. Del Guercio: It is common knowledge, your Honor, that May Day is Red Day.

Presiding Inspector: It is not common knowledge to me.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. What is the purpose of May Day celebration, Mr. Curran?

A. As I understand it, in my limited knowledge,——

Q. (Interposing) You have a limited knowledge?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. Yes, like all humans I do—I believe during the——about 50 years ago the American Federation of Labor, the [5282] Knights of Labor and the National Miners Union, I believe, originated the practice of marching on May Day and it was considered labor's day.

Q. Wasn't it under the auspices of the Communist Party in New York?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. Under whose auspices was that particular May Day parade?

A. Under a joint committee known as the May Day Parade Committee, and there were many trade unions in that committee as far as I know.

Q. Was Tommy Raye in that committee?

A. On the committee?

Q. Yes. A. I don't know.

Q. Was Roy Hudson?

A. Which one are you speaking about? Every year had a different committee.

Q. 1938. A. I don't know.

Q. Would you say that they weren't?

A. I don't know. I am not qualified to say. I may have been on the committee myself. I don't know.

Q. Was Dave Ramos?

A. I don't know who was on that committee.

Mr. Gladstein: I object to this line of questioning [5283] as immaterial, your Honor. The next thing we can expect is to find out whether the children in the City of New York were dancing around a May Pole. Such a ridiculous line of examination for Mr. Del Guercio to adopt!

Mr. Del Guercio: Are you through, Mr. Gladstein? Perhaps you could suggest some questions.

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead, Mr. Del Guercio. Ask the next question.

Mr. Del Guercio: I admit that you know the Communist Party better than I do.

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead, Mr. Del Guercio.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you have anything, or were there any collections made in Boston, Philadelphia and Balimore places where Bridges spoke in 1936?

A. Oh, yes. We never missed taking up a collection at a meeting.

Q. Were those collections under your direction?

A. No. They were under whoever was organizing and handling the meeting.

Q. Did you have anything to do with the collections of the money at those meetings? A. No.

Q. Did you pay Bridges' transportation back to the West Coast? [5284]

A. I don't know. I don't think so.

Q. Do you know who did? A. No.

Q. Do you know if Peter Innes did?

A. I don't know.

Q. Do you know if David Leeds did?

A. No.

Q. Do you know if the Communist Party paid Bridges' transportation back to the West Coast?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. No, I don't.

Q. Did you see Harry Bridges just before he left for the West Coast? A. Going home?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes. I saw him about, I guess, three or four hours, something like that, before he left for the Coast.

Q. And was there anyone else present?

A. I don't know just who was present. I think there were about three or four of us there. I think Meriweather was there, I think a couple of Baltimore seamen were there and myself. We were in a car. I don't know whether we took him to the airport or just where we left him. That's not too clear. There are too many things—too many things have taken place in the past few years to be too specific on those things.

Mr. Del Guercio: Do you mind if I consult for a few [5285] minutes?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Have you ever been a member of the American League for Peace and Democracy?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you join it?

A. I joined up there in Madison Square Garden at a meeting.

Q. When? A. I'm not too sure when.

Q. How many years ago?

A. I think it was 1938.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. And how long did you continue a member of that organization?

A. I don't know. I guess I'm still a member of it.

Q. Who solicited your membership?

A. Oh, right there a couple of women there asked me to join right there, and I signed a card on the platform. I think they took a photograph of it. That photograph is a matter of record at the Dies Committee, I think.

Q. And were you ever a member of the League Against War and Fascism?

A. I don't believe so. I don't know. If that's the same thing, I suppose I was, if it's the same one. But if not, [5286] I don't know.

Q. Did you join it twice or just once?

A. No, just that once.

Q. Did you serve on any committees of the American League——

A. (Interposing). No, I didn't.

Q. (Continuing) for Peace and Democracy?

A. I don't think so.

Q. Were you appointed to any committees?

A. I don't believe so.

Q. Does your name appear on any committees of that League? A. I don't know.

Q. Are you also a member of the American Peace Mobilization? A. One of the founders of it.

Q. Who helped you to found it?

A. Oh, a great mass-delegated meeting in Chicago last year.

Q. Were you a delegate?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. Yes. I was Chairman of one of the panels.

Q. How were you selected as a delegate?

A. As the President of the NMU and as our membership——

Q. (Interposing): The membership or just the officials of the NMU? [5287]

A. Well, our membership has been on record in favor of A.P.M.

Q. Well, was there a vote taken? A membership vote taken?

A. No, there was not.

Q. How were you selected as a delegate to the American Peace Mobilization, Mr. Curran?

A. By our National Council.

Q. By the National Council. And who paid for your transportation from New York to Chicago and for your expenses?

A. Our organization paid my expenses to Chicago.

Q. The Union?

A. That's right. It appears in the records of the Union.

Q. And you say——

A. (Interposing): We had 75 other delegates too.

Q. You say you were one of the organizers of the American Peace Mobilization. Did you conceive this American Peace Mobilization?

A. I contributed my small part towards it, yes.

Q. In what way?

A. Well, there were about—I guess, about 50 or 60 of us met in Chicago.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. Before you went to Chicago? [5288]

A. I can't name all of them.

Q. Before you went to Chicago. In New York?

A. Well, the idea was conceived through consultation with Union leaders.

Q. Well now,——

A. (Interposing): Church leaders and others.

Q. Let me have these various meetings or consultations that you had in which the American Peace Mobilization was conceived.

A. I can't give you all of them. I don't know all about that. That's too much. I met with several trade union leaders.

Q. Who are they?

A. Many of them. Too many to mention.

Q. Can you give me the names of some?

A. I can give you a few.

Q. Will you do it? A. Yes.

Q. Where this American Peace Mobilization was discussed.

A. Oh, we had so many meetings on it, it's very difficult to mention all the meetings.

Q. You can't give me the names of a single person? A. I can yes. I told you I can.

Q. Was Tommy Raye one of them? [5289]

A. Tommy Raye, no. He is not a Union leader.

Q. Mink? A. No.

Q. Hudson? A. No.

Q. Had nothing to do with the organizing of the American Peace Mobilization?

A. Not that I know of.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. You conceived it, didn't you? You were one of the organizers? A. That's correct.

Q. Was it a creature of your own mind, this American Peace Mobilization, or did someone suggest it to you?

A. Well, I guess it was partly a creature of my mind and many other trade union leaders' minds and other progressive people throughout the country.

Q. Other what?

A. Other progressive people throughout the country.

Q. Well, how did you come about to conceive this American Peace Mobilization?

A. Well, we believe——

Q. (Interposing): You. I am not talking about anybody else. A. "I" believe—— [5290]

Q. (Interposing): Yes.

A. (Continuing): ——"I" believe that there was a great deal of danger in all the attacks against trade unions, the complete disregard of civil liberties, the constant attacks against minority groups and others, that it was necessary for the trade unions and other organizations to get together.

Q. Well, in what way?

A. In order to defend these things.

Q. Did the American Peace Mobilization have to do with trade union matters?

A. Well, the American Peace Mobilization is as much interested in the defense of Democracy at home as it is any place else, and we believe that we are rapidly losing it here. And this is an evidence of it.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. Is it also in Soviet Russia?

A. What? I wouldn't know about that. I am not qualified to speak on Soviet Russia. I think you will have to ask them.

Q. Have to ask who?

A. The people in Soviet Russia, not me.

Q. Where did you meet to organize this, before going to Chicago?

A. Well, our New York group, for example—our New York group——

Q. (Interposing): All right. Now you have a group [5291] in New York. Let me have the names of some of that group. A. Good!

Q. All right.

A. The President of the Transport Workers Union, Michael Quill; Abraham Flaxner; The American Radio Operators. I can name a lot of them for you.

Q. You just mentioned one name.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, no. He mentioned several.

A. I mentioned three names.

Presiding Inspector: Let the reporter read them.

(The answer referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. All right. Name some more, Mr. Curran.

A. Joe Curran of the NMU.

Q. That's yourself? A. That's right.

Q. Anyone else?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. Reid Robinson of the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, and several more.

Q. Is that all the names you can give?

A. Several more. I can't just think of them offhand.

Q. Well, name them all.

A. I can't. There were too many. [5292]

Q. And how often did this group meet to discuss this American Peace Mobilization?

A. Well, we met on all questions, so I guess we met on that one several times, too.

Q. Where did you meet on the question of organizing the American Peace Mobilization?

A. We might have met in the executive offices of the NMU; we might have met in the executive offices of the Transport Workers Union; we might have met in the offices of any of the unions, and we probably did meet in all of them.

Q. Probably did meet in all of them?

A. That's right.

Q. Did you meet anywhere other than those three places you have mentioned?

A. Not that I know of. We might have met in a big place like Manhattan Center, and I believe we did have a meeting in Manhattan Center.

Q. Did you ever meet in the Communist Party headquarters in New York?

A. I don't know where it is.

Q. You have never been there?

A. No, I haven't.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. Well, did the CIO sponsor the American Peace Mobilization?

A. I don't think it was asked to. [5293]

Q. Did they pass any resolutions concerning the——

A. (Interposing): What part of the CIO?

Q. Any part.

A. Well, I would say that our organization is affiliated with the CIO and it supported it. The Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers are a part of the CIO.

Q. As a union or just officials of the union?

A. As unions. We had 75 delegates from the NMU, from all ports to that meeting.

Q. Was the question presented to the membership?

A. Of course. They elected delegates, 75 of them.

Q. And for the American Peace Mobilization?

A. That's correct.

Q. The question was put up to the membership of the unions?

A. They elected delegates, yes.

Q. And there is a record of that in the minutes?

A. In the minutes of each port up and down the Atlantic Coast, the Gulf and the Great Lakes, the Mississippi and the Ohio.

Q. Those minutes are available to you?

A. They are available in the Union halls. They are hung up there for the membership to read.

Q. That the question of sending delegates to the [5294] American Peace Mobilization——

A. (Interposing): Correct.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. (Continuing): ——in Chicago was put up to a vote of the membership?

A. At membership meetings.

Q. And the membership elected delegates?

A. Yes.

Q. And that will be reflected in the minutes of the various unions with which you are connected?

A. I said—now, just a minute! Don't put words in my mouth. I said in the branches of our union. I am not responsible for every union.

Q. In the branches of your particular union?

A. That's correct.

Q. How many unions do you control?

A. The National Maritime Union, and I don't control it. The membership does.

Q. Now, will you send copies of those minutes to Judge Sears?

A. We'll send copies to anybody that requests them. They are available. But first, before I send copies to anybody, our membership has to pass upon sending them outside of the Union.

Q. I see.

A. Unless they are—— [5295]

Q. (Interposing): Would you mind doing that?

A. You make that request?

Q. Yes.

A. I will take it up with the Executive Board and the membership of our organization. That's all I can do. I imagine they are available down at the Department of Justice or some place, anyway.

Q. Do you know if they are?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. I think they should be. Much of our stuff is down there. The Dies Committee might be able to furnish you with them. They are all around.

Q. You know that of your own knowledge?

A. We don't hide them.

Q. What? A. We don't hide them.

Q. Huh? Do you know as much about that as the matters that you have testified to here?

Mr. Gladstein: I object to that question.

Presiding Inspector: I will exclude it.

The Witness: I say they are available, though.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Where did the——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): His judgment is immaterial.

Mr. Del Guercio: Sir?

Presiding Inspector: His judgment is immaterial.

[5296]

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Where did you have this convention in Chicago.

A. I think they call it the Coliseum.

Q. The Coliseum?

A. Yes. I think that's that——

Q. (Interposing): And how many delegates attended?

A. Oh, I am not too sure. I think there were active delegates, elected delegates—I think there were 7,500.

Q. And was there a Chairman elected or selected?

A. Yes. I think it was Owen Knox.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. Owen Knox? A. I think so.

Q. Was he the permanent Chairman of that convention?

A. I believe he is the Chairman. I'm not sure. I'm not sure of that. I believe he is. It is either Knox of Thompson. I'm not sure which it is.

Q. Was he on any committee?

A. Well, what committee? What do you mean by that? There were several committees.

Q. Were committees appointed by the convention?

A. Yes. There was Resolutions Committee and Continuations Committee, and so forth, elected there; Credentials Committee.

Q. Were you on one of the committees?

A. I believe I was on the Resolutions Committee.

Q. Any other committees? [5297]

A. No. I was Chairman of one of the panels.

Q. What's a panel?

A. Well, a convention of that type in which labor and other groups participate, religious groups and social groups and other groups, usually boil down into panels. One panel will become a labor panel, another will become a religious panel and so forth. That's what "panels" are.

Q. And you were on one of these panels?

A. That's right.

Q. How long did this convention last?

A. I think it lasted three days.

Q. Now, did the American League for Peace and Democracy have a delegation to that convention?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. I don't know.

Q. Did you represent the American League——

A. (Interposing): There were many hundreds of groups there.

Q. Did you represent the American League for Peace and Democracy?

A. No. I represented the National Maritime Union. [5298]

Q. You were a member of the American League for Peace and Democracy at that time, were you not?

A. I believe I was.

Q. Were you an official?

A. I don't think so.

Q. Weren't you a member of the Labor Committee of the American League for Peace and Democracy? A. I might have been.

Q. Well, don't you know.

A. I might have been; I am not sure.

Q. And didn't you—weren't you also Chairman of the Labor Committee at this Convention of the American—Labor Panel?

Presiding Inspector: He said he was.

Mr. Del Guercio: He didn't say "Panel".

Presiding Inspector: What are you talking about?

Mr. Del Guercio: This Labor Panel of the American Mobilization Plan.

Presiding Inspector: He said he was Chairman of that.

Mr. Del Guercio: I didn't hear it.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Presiding Inspector: He may not have called it "Chairman".

The Witness: I did say that.

Presiding Inspector: I so understood you.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Have you ever subscribed to the Daily Worker? [5299] A. No.

Q. Do you know what the Daily Worker is?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know it as the official organ of the Communist Party?

A. Well, I don't know whether it is or not.

Q. Have you ever read the Daily Worker?

A. Yes.

Q. Did that ever appear on the masthead, "Official Organ of the Communist Party?"

A. I believe it is.

Q. Did you ever distribute copies of the Daily Worker anywhere, at any time, any place?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever cause copies of the Daily Worker to be distributed at any time, any place?

A. No.

Q. Bundles of them? A. No.

Mr. Del Guercio: That will be all, your Honor.

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Curran, as a trade union leader is it possible for you to enumerate all of the various committees of one kind or another that have requested your honorary support, or [5300] the use of your name?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. No.

Q. Is it a frequent occurrence for organizations to request the use of a name for functions or in connection with organizations of members, or leaders in the trade union movement? A. Yes.

Mr. Myron: I object to that—as a custom of the organization.

Mr. Gladstein: Speaking from his own knowledge as to whether he gets frequent calls.

Presiding Inspector: That is a very general matter.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Concerning your contributions to the Loyalists in Spain, do I understand that the organization of which you are the President, the National Maritime Union, officially contributed an ambulance to the Loyalists? A. No.

Q. How did it occur?

A. Collections, spontaneous collections were taken up in the ports based on a motion made on the floor. Each local has its autonomy in that respect. These collections were forwarded—and in the Port of New York they were put together and they amounted to enough to buy an ambulance. The motion that was made on the floor of these meetings said to buy [5301] medical supplies and ambulances. That is what it was for.

Q. Now, yesterday you were asked about a period in October 1936 when you were on the west coast, and in that period you stated that you had met with the Negotiating Committee on the west coast, including Bridges, and that you had come to the west coast in an automobile with another man by the name of Ramos. Do you recall that testimony? A. Yes.

Q. Now, do you recall how you returned to New York on that occasion?

A. Well, I stayed here until the last possible minute to see what was going to happen, whether there was going to be a strike or not; and then the Maritime Federation of the Pacific, together with one ship's crew from the east coast, just to get enough money to pay my plane fare, and we left the automobile here. Dave Ramos stayed here on this coast during most of the strike. I went back to New York in order to get there in time enough to advise them of what was taking place out here.

Q. The name Al Lannon was mentioned in some of yesterday's examination. Is he a member of the NMU? A. Yes.

Q. Has he been from its inception?

A. Yes.

Q. Was he a member of any of the strike or defense [5302] Committees that represented the rank and file seamen on the east coast prior to the inception of the NMU?

A. I don't know. I think he was a member of the rank and file Committee; I am not sure.

Q. Calling your attention to the Strike Committee, the East Coast Seamen's Strike Committee in New York, the Committee that conducted the 1936 fall strike, do you recall whether Mr. Lannon was a member of the Committee?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. I think he was a member of the Strike Committee; I am not too sure.

Q. Was Mr. Innes a member of that Committee?

A. No, he wasn't.

Q. What Committee was Mr. Innes a member of?

A. He wasn't a member of any Committee. He was dispatching tickets, I believe.

Q. Where?

A. In New York. No, he wasn't in New York. He was out here on the Coast during that strike.

Q. Well——

A. (Interposing): It is the spring strike I am thinking of when he was dispatching pickets.

Q. Calling your attention to the fall strike of 1936, did Innes hold any position as a member of the New York Strike Committee?

A. No; he was in San Pedro.

Q. What position did he hold in San Pedro?

[5303]

A. He was Chairman of that Strike Committee there, I believe; the East Coast Seamen's Strike Committee.

Q. So in your testimony yesterday with reference to Mr. Innes, I am not sure that the record is clear on this—I think it may be—when you referred to Innes being a member, or Chairman of the Strike Committee in connection with the 1936 Fall strike, was your reference to the San Pedro Committee in that connection? A. Yes.

Q. Now, while Mr. Innes was out here on the West Coast did you experience, as the Chairman of the Seamen's Strike Committee, fall strike, any difficulty with Mr. Innes concerning his carrying out of the policy or program of the West Coast Strike Committee? A. We had——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): If your Honor please, I object to that. There is no testimony here that there was any such.

Presiding Inspector: What is the object of this?

Mr. Gladstein: There is this testimony, if I recall correctly: Mr. Innes testified that he was put on the carpet, and he used words of that kind, and rebuked, or criticised very severely for setting up the East Coast strikers in a separate group apart from——

Presiding Inspector: Wasn't that in your cross examination. [5304]

Mr. Gladstein: I don't know whether it was my cross or not.

Presiding Inspector: If it was your cross examination your are bound by his answers.

Mr. Gladstein: I am pretty sure that he testified on direct, in answer to Mr. Del Guercio's questions, that he, Mr. Innes, got into trouble with the West Coast because he refused to place these East Coast strikers under Communist domination—something of that kind.

Presiding Inspector: Frankly, I can't remember.

Mr. Del Guercio: I don't recall any such testimony brought out in the record.

Mr. Gladstein: However, regardless of this, this question has been touched on as to Mr. Innes during the cross examination of Mr. Del Guercio of the present witness. I think I have a right to get the balance of the facts out.

Presiding Inspector: If anything of the kind, even remotely connected with this, was touched upon by Mr. Del Guercio, of course you have.

Mr. Gladstein: I think it was.

Presiding Inspector: I don't remember anything along this line, but it may be there.

Mr. Del Guercio: I haven't asked anything along this line on the cross examination of this witness.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, Mr. Del Guercio asked about Mr. [5305] Innes being in San Pedro, and what his position was, and as to whether there were communications between the two of them.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Gladstein: Now, I think we are entitled to go into the balance of that.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think so necessarily, unless they relate to the fact of whether he did have communications with him, whether he was in San Pedro. If you want to have him explain those matters you may, of course, have that.

Mr. Gladstein: I think there is another ground on which this is material and that is this: Mr. Curran stated that at one time, not only Mr. Innes, but also Mr. McCuistion, was among those trusted by himself, and others in the NMU, and subsequently the reputation of Mr. Innes and Mr. McQuistion changed in the minds of——

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Presiding Inspector: But you can't give individual facts on that point. You are bound by his general statement as to his general reputation.

Mr. Gladstein: But Mr. Del Guercio brought out, by questions of Mr. Curran, brought out that testimony concerning the truthfulness, the conduct of Mr. Innes, during this period of 1936.

Mr. Del Guercio: That was only volunteered by the witness. My questions weren't directed along that line at all.

Mr. Gladstein: We have some notes, and if I may spend a minute I would like to look that up. [5306]

Mr. Del Guercio: It was along the line of whether or not, because of this witness' dealing with those people, whether they had a good reputation at that time, that period of time; while Mr. McCuistion, for instance, was collecting money in behalf of the Seamen's Clubs, on behalf of this rally in Madison Square Garden.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think you can go into individual acts on the truthfulness, or anything, to support the statement, except those that have been gone into on the contrary by Mr. Del Guercio. Frankly, I can't remember anything that touches on this point. I don't say it isn't there, Mr. Gladstein. I don't recall it.

Mr. Gladstein: This is a matter which is also within the knowledge of Mr. Bridges, and can be covered by his testimony if we have a right to cover it at all. So I won't delay the preceedings simply to look up the testimony on this.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Presiding Inspector: Very well.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, are you familiar with the circumstances under which Mr. McCuistion and Mr. Innes had their connection with the NMU severed?

Mr. Del Guercio: You Honor, I object to that as to why they severed their connection with the NMU.

Presiding Inspector: If he is familiar I will take that, "Yes" or "No".

A. Yes. [5307]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, with reference to Mr. Innes, will you state what the circumstances were which led to the severance of relationship between him and the NMU?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, if your Honor please.

Presiding Inspector: Didn't Mr. Innes himself go into that?

Mr. Del Guercio: It was on cross examination, if at all.

Presiding Inspector: Wasn't that gone into on direct examination?

Mr. Del Guercio: I don't believe so.

Mr. Myron: It was all brought out on cross examination.

Mrs. King: If your Honor please, on this issue, it seems there is a problem going to the anti-labor bias of Mr. Innes. I believe it did come out on his direct examination.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Presiding Inspector: I thought so.

Mrs. King: But in view of your Honor's ruling yesterday with reference to this problem of bias, it seems to me this is not a collateral matter, but a question going to the problem of bias and that we are entitled to get the complete story of what happened.

Presiding Inspector: Let me see the testimony.

Mr. Gladstein: Of Mr. Innes?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Gladstein: On direct I think he was asked whether [5308] or not he had ever been a trade union man, and he said he had been a member of the NMU, and he said something about he no longer was at a certain point.

If your Honor wants to take the morning recess now we can look for it.

Presiding Inspector: No. I am anxious to get this thing straightened out.

(Whereupon a copy of the testimony referred to was handed to the Presiding Inspector.)

Presiding Inspector: It all came out on your cross examination.

Mr. Gladstein: What did?

Presiding Inspector: About this expulsion of Mr. Innes.

Mr. Gladstein: I am sure that Mr. Del Guercio wouldn't have asked this witness to tell about the fact that he was expelled from the union, but I——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) That statement

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

from counsel is uncalled for, if your Honor please. He has no business making it. We haven't produced any anti-labor men in here. This is all a smoke screen that the defense here is putting up. There has not been a single anti-labor witness; no such thing.

Mr. Gladstein: I can name six without thinking.

Presiding Inspector: Just a moment.

Mr. Del Guercio: You can't name a single one.

Presiding Inspector: Just a moment, now.

[5309]

Mr. Del Guercio: Why don't you try the facts?

Presiding Inspector: Now, Mr. Del Guercio, you should address yourself to the Examiner if you want to have anything asked of Mr. Gladstein.

Mr. Myron: This was all on cross examination.

Presiding Inspector: I found it on cross examination.

Mr. Gladstein: While looking for this, has your Honor considered the point that Mrs. King raises, that is, that anything that goes to bias could never be considered collateral?

Presiding Inspector: No. That is true. You can always show bias by other witnesses, but I don't think—I still think that there is no bias here in favor of, or against Mr. Bridges by the fact that a person is a believer in the trade union movement or is not.

Mrs. King: Here you have, if your Honor please, a distinct break between a large CIO union and a member thereof, and——

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Presiding Inspector: How would that affect every member of these unions?

Mrs. King: It would seem to me very clear that as a result of—assuming there was an expulsion, for the purpose of this argument, here is a man who has been attacked by the union for conduct which they have denominated evil, and he has been thrown out of the union as a result of a decision by the union, which is a CIO affiliate. He would naturally [5310] be antagonized against the CIO by such conduct on the part of the union. If it is true that this case is identified in his mind with the CIO, his opposition to his own former union, out of which he has been expelled, that naturally would carry over to the defendant, who is the President of another CIO Union. It seems to me that there is just the same shade of bias involved in this thing as there was in the proposition that you took yesterday when you permitted the witness now on the stand to testify to the attitude of the CIO on the Bridges case. Now, if the one is relevant it seems to me clearly that the other is relevant.

Presiding Inspector: It is a question of remoteness, I suppose.

Mrs. King: But there is the problem of bias involved in the situation, and it seems that the problem should be cleared up, and the situation presented to your Honor, because there may have been a very real antagonism left in Mr. Innes' mind as a result of this incident which we are now trying to bring forth.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

In view of the fact that bias is not a collateral matter, we are consequently not bound by the answer of the witness on the stand, that is, Mr. Innes in this case.

Presiding Inspector: Mr. Innes' statements on the stand are very much along the line of what you want to now produce.

Mrs. King: He said he walked out. [5311]

Presiding Inspector: Oh, no.

Mr. Gladstein: I admit, your Honor, that under cross examination Mr. Innes gave testimony which, from my viewpoint, is favorable to the defense; but I do think that we have a right to go into those things which one couldn't expect to get from a witness under cross examination.

Presiding Inspector: Of course, whether Mr. Innes was expelled or not, you have got it in the record. At least he said he didn't know about it except what he read in the newspapers. But it was evidently in the newspapers.

Mr. Gladstein: Of course, the question of the strength or extent of bias which is established, either expressly or inferentially, to your Honor with respect to the testimony of any witness is also a question. It is one thing to——

Presiding Inspector: But you don't think we can go in and try here the propriety of that decision of the union?

Mr. Gladstein: No.

Presiding Inspector: It might be relevant in the same way.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Mr. Gladstein: If they wish to question it, it is all right with us, the propriety of the decision of the union.

Presiding Inspector: It wouldn't be all right with me because we would be here a year if we tried all these collateral things.

Mrs. King: I believe that this matter has been litigated. [5312] If your Honor wants a decision on that expulsion I think we can produce it.

Presiding Inspector: You mean in the courts?

Mrs. King: Yes; it has been in the courts.

Presiding Inspector: I am not interested in that.

Mrs. King: I do think we are entitled to get from this witness what really happened as far as the union's point of view on the situation is concerned. He is the President of the Union which expelled this witness, Innes.

Presiding Inspector: You want to prove that he was expelled, is that all?

Mr. Gladstein: No. I wanted the circumstances which led to the termination of relationship in order to show to your Honor the character and depth of the bias which we feel you have a right to infer, as to the testimony of Mr. Innes.

I say, it is one thing for a witness to say, "You can consider maybe I am a little bit biased on such and such a thing," and it is quite a different thing to be able to bring out facts to show that that bias is so extreme that it colors, or could reasonably be considered to color every bit of his testimony. There are degrees of bias.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Presiding Inspector: You have got that all in the record. Have you re-read that cross examination that I pointed out to you?

Mr. Gladstein: Of Mr. Innes?

Presiding Inspector: Yes. [5316]

Mr. Gladstein: No, I haven't. You mean the small portion referred to here?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Gladstein: No. I turned it back to counsel.

Presiding Inspector: What more could you have than that? I think you are exaggerating this.

Mrs. King: I think, your Honor, that it would take less time to take this testimony, unless there is some real reason for not taking it, if it is merely a matter of time and expedition.

Presiding Inspector: Very well. I will let you have it. Go ahead.

Mr. Del Guercio: If the Court please——

Presiding Inspector: I will let it in over your objection. If you want to say anything more about it you may, in opposition.

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes, I do. On this question of bias, of course, we are going into things pretty remote——

Presiding Inspector: I think so too.

Mr. Del Guercio: (Continuing) ——unless it could be shown that Innes was unjustly expelled. As I understand the testimony, he was expelled in absentia. Whatever action was taken was taken while he was not present. There was no hearing.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

If they could get through this witness here that Innes was unjustly and arbitrarily expelled, perhaps they may be able to establish prejudice of Innes against the Union. I don't [5314] know whether they have that in mind or not.

We could also show that this witness here himself was expelled from the union in about the same kind of a manner. Now, I suppose we can go into that also.

If we let this kind of testimony in we will have to open the thing wide open.

We have got to call a stop somewhere.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it. Go ahead.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Do you understand the question?

Presiding Inspector: You have to be very careful in what you answer. Listen to the question and answer only the question or else we will get into matters which will unduly prolong the hearing. You understand?

The Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. The question I asked was this: Please state what the circumstances were which led to the termination of connections or relationship between Mr. Innes and the NMU.

Presiding Inspector: Only the things that you personally know of.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to the question.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. The report of the Auditing Committee showed a mishandling of funds on the part of Peter Innes. [5315]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What kind of funds?

A. Funds in relationship to material of the Union in the form of buttons.

Q. That is, Union funds?

A. Yes. In material that was bought for the use of the Union and in buttons and other materials of that type; a shortage of funds and a mishandling of those funds.

Q. Was Mr. Innes involved in a baseball incident, baseball bat incident?

Presiding Inspector: Do you know anything about it?

The Witness: Yes, I do, very much. I was in the center of it.

Mr. Myron: We object to that, if your Honor please, on the further ground—does it have anything to do with the expulsion from the Union?

The Witness: It does.

Mr. Gladstein: If it does, then I am going to ask the question.

Presiding Inspector: All right.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Please state just briefly, Mr. Curran, what were the circumstances.

A. Peter Innes, together with a group, raided the office of the Union hall under the smoke screen of driving [5316] out Communists.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Presiding Inspector: When and where was this?

The Witness: This was in, I believe, 1938.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Where did it occur?

Presiding Inspector: Strike out the "smoke screen of driving out Communists."

The Witness: That's what they stated.

Presiding Inspector: You are not to answer except what you are asked.

The Witness: All right.

Presiding Inspector: Now, he may be able to ask that, but don't volunteer.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Where did it occur, Mr. Curran.

A. 126 Eleventh Avenue.

Q. And that was what?

A. That was the Union hall.

Q. And you were present at the time?

A. I was there, yes.

Q. Did you see whether Mr. Innes and the people with him had baseball bats?

A. I did.

Q. Did they use them?

A. They used them.

Q. In what way? [5317]

A. Well, one woman was knocked downstairs.

Mr. De Guercio: I will object to this line of questions.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Presiding Inspector: Did you see Innes do that?

The Witness: Innes was carrying one of the baseball bats.

Presiding Inspector: Did Mr. Innes knock the woman down the stairs with a baseball bat?

The Witness: I didn't say he did.

Presiding Inspector: Then you had no business in saying anything about it.

Now, you are asked what Mr. Innes did.

Mr. Gladstein: But if Mr. Innes was part of a group that came in with baseball bats, then I think that Mr. Innes is just as responsible as anybody with him in that conspiracy who made the direct blow.

Presiding Inspector: This is going to take us very, very far afield.

Mr. Gladstein: Your Honor knows——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I have ruled this all out unless we find that there were charges served on him.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, I will go to that.

Presiding Inspector: Go right to that.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Was Mr. Innes formally charged in the NMU for the purpose of having him stand trial on those charges? [5318]

Presiding Inspector: "Yes" or "no."

A. Yes.

Presiding Inspector: Was it in writing?

The Witness: It was in writing in accordance with the constitution.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Do you know whether the charge was served on him?

Presiding Inspector: Personally. Do you know?

A. The charge couldn't be served on Peter Innes personally. The constitution——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) Then I move that the answer be stricken.

Presiding Inspector: That is all right. I will take that.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What did the constitution provide?

A. The constitution provides that you notify the one to be tried by registered mail, and if you are unable to reach him in that manner a notice is to be published in the Union halls and in the order of the Union that he is to appear for trial. That was done.

Presiding Inspector: Was that done?

The Witness: The notices were posted in the Union halls and the notice was carried in the official organ of the Union.

Presiding Inspector: Was it served on him by registered mail? [5319]

The Witness: We couldn't reach him with a registered mail. The constitution provides that if you cannot serve it with the registered mail the other method of posting and carrying in the official organ is constitutional. He disappeared.

(Testimony of Joseph C[illegible].)

Mr. Del Guercio: There, if your Honor please, there's another "he disappeared."

Presiding Inspector: Strike it out.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. You mean, it is true that you were unable to locate him.

A. That's true.

Presiding Inspector: What did you try to do, so far as you know yourself?

The Witness: I as President of the Union carried on the work of notifying the branches——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) We are not questioning that, but what did you do? That's it.

The Witness: I sent letters to every port; I notified all the men on as many ships as I could, that if they found hide or hair of Peter Innes to tell him that he was wanted for trial.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, what if any action was taken by the NMU officially on the charges against Mr. Innes?

A. The regular procedure was followed. A trial was held [5320] and he was suspended, and the convention summarily adopted a resolution unanimously upholding the verdict of that trial committee.

Q. And what was the verdict?

A. The verdict of the trial committee was that he be suspended for 99 years.

Q. Now, do you know what the circumstances were that led up to the severance of the connection that had theretofore existed between William McCuiston and the NMU?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, if your Honor please.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it. The same thing that you have done before——

Mr. Gladstein: (Interposing) Yes.

Presiding Inspector: (Continuing) ——so far as charges are concerned.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes.

A. William McCuistion was charged with anti-Union activities in the form of leading what was known as "goon squads," "chain squads," breaking into Union halls and carrying on in a general manner antagonistic to the Union.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Was he tried?

A. He was tried by the National Convention of the Union.

Q. What is the highest body in the Union?

[5321]

A. The convention.

Q. Do you know whether Mr. McCuistion was aware of the charges that were made against him?

A. He was not only aware of it, he was in the convention illegally and the question of legality as to the entry in the convention was being taken up by the Credentials Committee at the time.

Q. And were the charges on file against him at that time? A. Yes.

Q. And can you state, being present at that convention, whether McCuistion was told or was aware while he was at the convention that there were those charges against him?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. He was aware. They were the basis on which the Credentials Committee refused to seat him.

Q. Now, do you know what ultimate action occurred with respect to the charges against McCuistion?

A. The Convention voted to suspend him for 99 years.

Q. Now, you were asked yesterday about some strike committee minutes and other documents and this M. W. I. U. membership book, and you testified that you had a trunk stolen from your home, containing those documents, some time in the year 1938. Do you know by whom that trunk was stolen?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I will object to that. There was no such testimony. This witness tried as [5322] much as possible to get that in without once answering the question, and——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Oh, yes. He said the trunk was stolen.

Mr. Del Guercio: He volunteered that, if your Honor please.

Presiding Inspector: Well, it's in the record. I don't see how——

Mr. Gladstein: (Interposing) I think it will connect it, your Honor. I first want to ask whether he knows. It may well be, and I am informed, that he cannot say who actually stole the trunk. But I have some further questioning on that subject matter which I think is pertinent.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Mr. Del Guercio: If criminal charges were preferred, If your Honor please, it might be a proper question. None that I know of have been. This witness says——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I don't know what difference it would make whether there were criminal charges preferred or not.

Mr. Gladstein: I don't either.

Presiding Inspector: I don't see how it is competent in any way.

You want to show that it wasn't any person that was under his control? Why don't you ask him that?

Mr. Gladstein: No. Here is what I wish to show. Very [5323] frankly, your Honor, I wish to show that the trunk was stolen from Mr. Curran's house in the year 1938 and contained documents which a year or so later turned up before a hearing of the Dies Committee, introduced by Mr. McCuistion and Mr. Innes.

That's what I want to show. Now, Mr. Curran is not in a position to say that, as an eye witness he saw Mr. Innes or Mr. McCuistion steal his trunk, but he does know that there were documents in that trunk after that trunk was stolen, with the passage of about a year, which documents, or some of them, that were in that trunk were introduced before the Dies Committee by Mr. Innes and Mr. McCuistion.

I think we are entitled to put that in evidence, your Honor.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Mr. Del Guercio: We are not trying the Dies Committee here. No document was introduced in this hearing here that belonged to this witness.

Mr. Gladstein: Why, your Honor, during the cross examination yesterday Mr. Del Guercio was looking at photostatic copies in the official Dies Committee Reports of some of these purported letters and documents. For example, the purported communications between Innes and Mr. Curran and other things. And he was asking this morning about a May Day parade. There was a photostatic copy in the Dies Committee records of that showing Joe Curran marching in a May Day parade. All those things were introduced by McCuistion and Innes. I have read that [5324] record and I say that.

Mr. Del Guercio: The letters that I was looking at were the letters that this witness admitted writing to McCuistion.

Presiding Inspector: He didn't admit them and you didn't put the letters in. There is no proof in the case about these letters.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is correct.

Presiding Inspector: He said he "might have" written them, but there is no proof.

You want to prove a criminal act on the part of these people. You can't do that.

Mr. Gladstein: No, that isn't the purpose. Certainly, the proof lends itself to that inference being taken from it, but if you will recall,——

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) That isn't——

Mr. Gladstein: (Continuing) ——Mr. Curran was asked about whether his records would show this and whether his records would show that, and his memory was probed regarding specific events that occurred during 1936 in that approximate time. He said that many of the things that were being asked about were matters of record, that he had those records at one time, that they were in a trunk in his home and it was stolen in 1938. He didn't at the time, as counsel would try [5325] to have you believe, say it was stolen by Innes or stolen by McCuistion or anything of the sort. I think, though, we are entitled to have him show that those very same documents, which to your Honor might seem rather queer, that the witness wouldn't have them or be willing to make them available or something of that sort——we would like to have your Honor know that those same documents were in the hands of the Dies Committee, that they were given to the Dies Committee by the two witnesses who appeared here, Innes and McCuistion. For all I know, they may be in the hands of Mr. Del Guercio. I don't know. At least they were given to the Dies Committee. And the record shows, if it shows anything, that there is certainly no lack of cooperation between men like McCuistion and Innes and a committee like the Dies Committee and its representatives and the representatives of the FBI and the representatives of the Associated Farmers and of the Los Angeles Police Squad.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

There is this——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I think you had better leave all this until you finally present the case for decision. It seems to me it has no point in the discussion of this question of the admissibility of this evidence. Now, you have established that this trunk of this man—and I suppose it will be contradicted—was stolen. That is all you need to establish so far as the absence of the articles is concerned. [5326]

Mr. Gladstein: I think I can perhaps approach it this way and I think legally I am correct in doing so, your Honor. But at any rate, in spite of objections that I anticipate, let me ask this question. I withdraw the last question.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Curran, in the trunk which you testified was stolen from your house in 1938 were there documents which later on turned up before the Dies Committee?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to the question, if your Honor please, as being immaterial. He had a million documents in that trunk that turned up before the Dies Committee—if he did, I am not admitting that there were—we are not concerned with that in this hearing. No such document has been introduced in this hearing. There is no such evidence in this hearing.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Presiding Inspector: Let me hear the question.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Presiding Inspector: I will take that.

"Yes" or "No."

A. Yes, there were.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, did you examine the Dies Committee Reports with specific reference to the testimony of Mr. McCuistion and Mr. Innes? Have you examined those reports? [5327]

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, if your Honor please. We will have to go into the whole, entire testimony of the Dies Committee and introduce the whole thing here in this hearing.

Presiding Inspector: Very well.

Mr. Del Guercio: Do we want to do that?

Presiding Inspector: I don't see whether this man has examined this report or not is of any materiality.

Mr. Gladstein: I think it is preliminary to the next question and qualifies him to answer the next question. I don't see why Mr. Del Guercio should object to having this record show that Mr. Curran read the testimony of Mr. Innes and McCuistion before the Dies Committee.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will tell you why I am objecting to that. Because we are going so far afield here that we are forgetting that we are trying Harry Bridges.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Presiding Inspector: We are not "trying" Harry Bridges. We are investigating a very narrow point in relation to Mr. Bridges.

Mr. Del Guercio: Don't they have some evidence to contravert the evidence that the Government has introduced? This is a fact-finding body. We are looking for facts. What facts? The fact as to whether Bridges is a member of the Communist Party. Not what the Dies Committee did, not whether this witness ever had a trunk or didn't have a trunk and, if he had a trunk, whether [5328] it was stolen or not. I don't know whether he had a trunk.

Mr. Gladstein: So Mr. Del Guercio will understand——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) The witness said he was broke around that time and traveling in jaloppies.

Mr. Gladstein: So Mr. Del Guercio may understand the theory of the Defense, because he has asked this question a number of times, your Honor, ——

Mr. Myron: (Interposing) I don't think it is necessary to give us the theory of the Defense.

Mr. Gladstein: I would like to continue my statement.

Presiding Inspector: Let Mr. Gladstein continue with his statement.

Mr. Gladstein: So Mr. Del Guercio won't ask again why we are not contraverting his testimony, we are establishing, and certainly we contend that we are establishing, that the witnesses that Mr. Del Guercio has relied on have lied, your Honor. That is the purpose of the testimony we have put in. We can argue whether the proof has been established one way or the other, but at least it should be clear to anyone what the theory of the Defense is.

Now, I think it is needless to have this same question asked by Mr. Del Guercio. I think it is the fourth or fifth time that he has asked that.

Mr. Del Guercio: In view of counsel's statement that the Government's witnesses are liars, I would also like to make [5329] the statement that every witness the Defense has brought here are liars.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think that adds much to the investigation.

Mr. Del Guercio: As much as his statement. That is my opinion. And I say it in seriousness, not in jest.

Presiding Inspector: The opinion of either of the representatives of the respective parties are entirely immaterial here, and they don't move me at all unless they are substantiated by the evidence.

Now, I will let the witness answer this very simple question. "Yes" or "No".

Mr. Gladstein: Do you recall the question?

Presiding Inspector: Have you read the testimony of the Dies Committee given by Mr. McCuistion and Innes? A. Yes.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, can you state, based on that examination, whether any of the documents or written records that were in the trunk that were stolen from you in 1938 were introduced before the Dies Committee by Mr. McCuistion and Mr. Innes?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, your Honor.

Mr. Gladstein: As it appears from the record.

Presiding Inspector: Well, don't you think you had better put in the record?

Mr. Gladstein: He would have to answer that first based [5330] upon his examination and then, if it is a question of specific documents, we can go to the record.

Presiding Inspector: Well, I can see that this —I will take it.

Mr. Myron: His testimony is taken from the record. He said that he has read the testimony, and from reading the testimony he will draw certain conclusions and, therefore, the record——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) We are trying to avoid the technicalities as much as we can. I will take it.

Mr. Gladstein: Do you wish to have the question read to you or do you have it in mind?

A. Yes.

Mr. Gladstein: Now, does your Honor wish the documents referred to specifically?

Presiding Inspector: No.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, yesterday, Mr. Curran, you were asked by Mr. Del Guercio whether the CIO was interested in knowing if Harry Bridges was a Communist, whether you knew of the CIO knew whether Mr. Bridges was a Communist. Do you wish to add anything to the answers that you gave on that subject matter?

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, if your Honor please, I object to that as being improper. The witness had every opportunity [5331] to answer that question.

Presiding Inspector: This is redirect. This is redirect. He can ask him to explain anything that he said in answer to your questions, Mr. Del Guercio.

But I think you had better direct his attention to something.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, there were a series of half a dozen questions. None of them is specifically in my mind, but the subject matter was generally as I have indicated in my question.

Presiding Inspector: All right. Go ahead.

The Witness: What was the question, please?

Presiding Inspector: Do you want to add anything to the answers that you gave to Mr. Del Guercio about whether these various people were or were not Communists?

Isn't that it?

Mr. Del Guercio: Do we want a prepared statement or is his testimony now spontaneous?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Presiding Inspector: We want a statement from this man.

A. Well, the only thing I wanted to add to it was that the CIO had very carefully, as far as I know, most of the executive officers, been aware of the fact that the Bridges case was already tried and that the decision of the Dean Landis hearing was that he was not. The CIO was satisfied that he had been tried and acquitted and that he was not a Communist, and [5332] therefore, voted every support to the defense of Bridges, which they believe was and do believe and will continue to believe is an attack against labor and not against Bridges as such.

Mr. Gladstein: That is all.

Recross Examination

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did Mr. Innes appear before your Union and defend himself against the charges made by you and your Union? A. I made no charges.

Q. Who made the charges?

A. The Auditing Committee elected by the membership.

Q. Well, did Innes appear?

A. Innes took a "run-out powder".

Q. What? A. He disappeared, faded.

Q. "Run-out-powder"? A. Yes.

Q. You are the President of a Union?

A. Yes.

Q. And you spoke for this Peace Mobilization

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Plan, one of the delegates to the Peace Mobilization Plan. Now, I will ask the question again: Did Innes appear——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Now, you can answer that "Yes" or "No". [5333]

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. (Continuing) ——Before your Union and defend himself against the charges——

A. (Interposing) No.

Q. (Continuing) ——Preferred against him?

A. No, he did not.

Q. Huh? A. No, he did not.

Q. Did McCuistion appear before your Union and defend himself against the charges preferred against him by your Union?

A. No, he did not.

Q. Have you ever been expelled from a Union?

A. Yes.

Q. From what Union? A. The ISU.

Q. And under what circumstances were you expelled?

A. I and 17 others were expelled for being responsible for the so-called outlaw strike in 1936 and the so-called mutiny on the California and for fighting against the fakers in the ISU, without trial.

Q. Were charges preferred against you?

A. No.

Q. Huh? A. There was no trial. [5334]

Q. How were you expelled?

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

A. I was expelled through the medium of the New York Times.

Q. Through the medium of the New York Times. Did the New York Times run the Union at that time?

A. No. It ran the notice that the officials had put in.

Q. What Union did you belong to at that time?

A. The International Seamen's Union of America, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Q. And you were expelled from that, weren't you? Thrown out?

Presiding Inspector: He said so.

A. I and 17 others; yes, sir.

Presiding Inspector: We don't care about the 17 others.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you have a trial? A. No, sir.

Q. Huh? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever read the testimony in the previous trial against Harry Bridges?

A. No, I read the decision.

Q. Just the decision, not the testimony?

A. And I read parts of the trial, too, that were in [5335] the——

Q. (Interposing) Parts of the trial?

A. Parts of the trial that appeared in the papers. I followed it in the papers; read the decision.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. Did Harry Bridges or Mr. Gladstein here or Mr. Grossman or Mrs. King make available to you a transcript of the testimony that was adduced at the previous hearing?

A. No, they did not.

Q. Did they make it available to the officials of the CIO? A. I don't know.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is all.

Mr. Gladstein: I might mention for the record before I ask the question of Mr. Curran that Mr. Lee Pressman, the General Counsel of the Congress of Industrial Organizations was an attorney of record in the previous hearing in this case.

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. When you and the 17 others were expelled from the ISU, Mr. Curran, how many members were left in the ISU, if you know?

A. When we were expelled, I believe that almost all of the members of the ISU stopped paying dues in the ISU as such. It is pretty hard to say. [5336]

Q. Does the ISU as such exist today?

A. No.

Mr. Gladstein: That is all.

Recross Examination

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Do you want us to believe that it doesn't exist because you were expelled from that Union?

A. Believe what you like. I don't know.

(Testimony of Joseph Curran.)

Q. Is that what you want us to believe?

A. I didn't create that impression, no. I didn't attempt to do that. I merely answered a question.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is all.

Presiding Inspector: What did you mean when you said they stopped paying dues?

The Witness: I meant they were completely dissatisfied, your Honor, with the leadership of that Union and felt that it had been completely dishonest, and, therefore, stopped paying dues. That is what I meant to convey.

Presiding Inspector: You didn't have anything to do particularly with this expulsion?

The Witness: No, not particularly. The whole general situation in the Union was bad.

Presiding Inspector: It crumpled up about that time?

The Witness: Yes.

Mr. Gladstein: That is all, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: That is all.

(Witness excused.) [5337]

Presiding Inspector: We will take a short recess.

(Whereupon a short recess was taken.)

Presiding Inspector: Call the next witness, Mr. Gladstein.

HARRY RENTON BRIDGES

called as a witness in his own behalf, having been previously duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Your name, please?

A. Harry Bridges. The middle name is Renton; R-e-n-t-o-n.

Q. Where were you born, Mr. Bridges?

A. Melbourne, Australia.

Q. Did you go to school in Australia?

A. I did.

Q. What schools did you go to there?

A. Ordinary private schools, grammar schools and later on a Junior College.

Mr. Del Guercio: Will you have the witness speak a little louder, please. I can't hear.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. Speak a little louder.

Mr. Del Guercio: May I make the suggestion here? To get a little closer?

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. How many years did you live in Australia?

[5338]

A. Until—I left around Christmas, 1910; before Christmas.

Q. In what year were you born?

A. 1901, July.

Q. Are your parents at the present time resident in Australia? A. They are.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. What is the occupation of your parents?

A. My father was a realtor.

Q. Is he now? A. He is now.

Q. Did you ever do any work in Australia?

A. Yes.

Q. What kind of work did you do?

A. Shortly after leaving school I worked in the office of a stationery firm for a short while and then I went to sea.

Q. Did you ship back to Australia when you first began to ship?

A. Oh, yes. From Australia and back to various parts.

Q. About how long did you ship from and back to Australia?

A. Oh, for about five years; four or five years.

Q. Did you work in any particular department of the [5339] ships?

A. On deck, an able seaman.

Q. When did you first arrive in the United States; any kind of an arrival? A. 1918.

Q. And were you working in the crew of a ship at that time?

A. I was on a British ship, an Australian ship.

Q. Did you return to Australia after that time?

A. Yes.

Q. When was the next time you arrived in the United States? A. That was the only time.

Q. I assume you mean that was your only temporary—that was your first temporary arrival and your only temporary arrival. But what about the next arrival? A. 1920, April.

Q. Were you a member of a crew then?

A. I was.

Q. Did you continue to remain a member of the crew after you entered the United States?

A. I left that ship.

Q. At what port did you leave the ship?

A. San Francisco.

Q. Did you continue to ship after that? [5340]

A. I did.

Q. For about how long?

A. Until the end of 1922.

Q. Did you ever work for the Geodetic Survey?

A. I did.

Q. During what years?

A. From, I think it was, February or March of 1922 until, I think, September 1922. That was my last trip to sea.

Q. I beg your pardon?

A. That was my last trip to sea.

Q. After that what work did you do?

A. I worked—the first real work ashore that I did was in San Francisco in the fall of 1922. I forget the firm I worked with or what I was doing. It was a paint firm, I think, and then later on—I forget the exact time—I went to work as a longshoreman in San Francisco.

Q. Have you worked as a longshoreman ever since, continuously?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Yes. At least since the latter part of '22 or the early part of 1923.

Q. Have you done any substantial amount of other work except holding a Union office since that time? A. Nothing else.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, I will object to that.

[5341]

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

A. (Continuing) : I have held a Union office since May 1934 and I have not worked as a longshoreman since.

Presiding Inspector: Of course, it was leading. But this is all preliminary.

Mr. Del Guercio: May I have that last question, please?

Do I understand that you haven't worked since you became a Union official?

The Witness: Not as a longshoreman.

Mr. Del Guercio: Will you read the answer?

(The answer referred to was read by the reporter as follows:

"A. (Continuing): I have held a Union office since May, 1934 and I have not worked as a longshoreman since.")

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. When was the first time that you belonged to a Union? A. In Australia.

Q. About when and what Union was it?

A. Around 1915 or so; the Australian Seamen's Union.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. For what period of time were you a member of that Union?

A. That's hard to say. The way the Union functioned there, you withdrew from it, you took a temporary withdrawal card when you sailed in sailing vessels; then your card operated again when you went in steam. [5342]

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that and have the answer stricken out as not responsive.

Mr. Grossman: I think it is quite responsive, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it. Go ahead. I will allow it to stand.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. I take it, then, you never returned to sailing vessels?

A. I was in sailing vessels most of the time except a couple of trips I made in steam.

Q. I mean you never returned to steam vessels. Is that the thing that would discontinue your membership?

A. That's right. The effect of it was that my book was generally held in headquarters or the branch that I was attached to most of the time I went to sea there, and it was there and it is still there.

Q. When was the next Union you belonged to?

A. The Sailor's Union of the Pacific.

Q. When did you join?

A. Immediately when I landed in San Francisco: April, 1920.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. For what period were you a member of that Union?

A. Until around June or July, 1921, or later. As far as the actual affiliation is concerned, I would say it was [5343] later on in the fall; a few months after the end of the 1921 seamen's strike.

Q. Did you hold any Union position in the Seamen's Union in Australia? A. No.

Q. Did you hold any Union position in the Sailor's Union of the Pacific?

A. Not any official position other than maybe a ship's delegate, committee member once in a while, and during the strike I was a picket captain.

Q. During the 1921 strike? A. Yes.

Q. Where were you during that strike?

A. In the City of New Orleans.

Q. When was the next time you joined the Union?

A. I joined the IWW during the strike, 1921.

Q. What Union was it that you joined in the IWW?

A. The Marine Transport Workers, 510.

Q. How long were you a member of that Union?

A. A few months. I can't exactly recall how long, but a few months.

Q. How did your membership in that Union become discontinued or severed?

A. I didn't like some of the tactics and the policies of the Union and did not believe that they would bring about [5344] the things that I had in mind as an individual at that time.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Did you drop out?

A. I dropped out.

Q. When was the next time you belonged to a Union?

A. 1934. That's excluding the Company Union that I don't recognize as a Union. Oh, in 1924 for a short while we revived the Longshoremen's Union affiliated with the American Federation of Labor in San Francisco, but that only lasted a few months.

Q. Was that Union affiliated with the International Longshoremen's Association.

A. That's right.

Q. Was there any American Federation of Labor Union functioning among the longshoremen in San Francisco during the time that you were a longshoreman that you did not belong to?

A. No.

Q. When did you say after this time in 1924 was the next time you belonged to a Union?

A. 1933, June.

Q. What Union did you join at that time?

A. ILA; International Longshoremen's Association.

Q. Mr. Bridges, was there any relationship between the working conditions on the waterfront in 1934 and the development of the 1934 strike? [5345]

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, if your Honor please, as not being material and at issue in this case, conditions at that time.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: Just a moment! Now is that material?

Mr. Grossman: Your Honor, that's a preliminary question.

Presiding Inspector: Very well.

Mr. Grossman: I might as well state what it is preliminary to.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Grossman: It is a preliminary question in order to introduce the question of the conditions that were in existence, the working conditions at the time the strike developed, which goes to explain the various activities of Mr. Bridges, what cooperation there was with the Marine Workers Industrial Union, what connection he had with the Waterfront Worker, why the men joined the Union, why they set up the Albion Hall group; all these things that have been testified to or referred to or in which there are claimed admissions. And this is the objective working conditions at that time.

Presiding Inspector: Very well. I will take it with that understanding.

A. All the issues and demands of the '34 strike grew out of the conditions on the waterfront at that time, and pre- [5346] vious.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. All right. Can you state what were the conditions on the waterfront that eventually resulted in the 1934 strike?

A. There were numerous conditions that were objected to by all the men. The main one——

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) As I understand it, is this within the witness' knowledge or what he has gleaned since or read about?

Mr. Grossman: Within the witness' knowledge.

The Witness: Conditions that I worked under and suffered under for a long time and fought to get rid of, and the reason that the Union was organized and eventually struck and won, definitely within my own knowledge.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Will you proceed to state those conditions, Mr. Bridges?

A. The first and the main condition was the blacklist or the discrimination against everybody that expressed themselves in any way against the conditions.

Q. How did that work out?

A. You just didn't work. If you persisted you just didn't stand much of a chance of making any type of a living in the industry.

Q. What forms of protest against conditions were [5347] sufficient to invoke the blacklist?

Mr. Del Guercio: My objection goes to all this line of inquiry, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. I will take it.

A. A spoken protest, a mere objecton to doing this, that, or the other thing while working; the mere objection to the type of operation being performed; the mere objection to the unsafe conditions under which the work was performed; and objection to the various forms of what we call "chiseling" on your pay and the payroll; all too numerous to mention. I could go on for many, many minutes telling you all about them.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Was this blacklist invoked by all the employers of longshore labor in the Port of San Francisco?

A. No. There were exceptions. The United States Army Transport dock did not belong to the Employers' Association and, therefore, did not indulge in the discrimination to any broad degree. There was certain discrimination. The Australian ships and what we would call the "Australian Dock," was another "haven of refuge", as we used to know them. The Japanese docks was another one. They were the three main ones where, when you were generally blacklisted by all the other companies, you could generally find a job now and again on those docks. [5348].

Q. Was there any condition with relation to hiring, the method of hiring that in any way brought about the 1934 strike?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, if your Honor please. The witness has just gone into that. He has testified as to what the conditions were. Now counsel is suggesting another line.

Mr. Grossman: Any other.

Presiding Inspector: I will allow him to add anything else.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Yes: One of the worst complaints that the men had was the method of hiring. They were required to congregate every morning at six o'clock or seven o'clock on the sidewalks on the waterfront in front of the Ferry Building and then they would be selected by the straw boss or gang foremen who would pick them up in a gang and take them to work. And it placed such amount of power in the hands of a petty foreman that he could exploit the men in many ways and did; collect part of their pay on percentage for giving them a job, require that they purchase liquor at this, that or the other place, and such things as that. So, one of the deep-seated complaints of the men was the method of hiring and the discrimination allowed and all the abuses that went along with it.

Q. Was an expression commonly used to describe this [5349] method of hiring?

A. The "shape-up".

Q. What were the other grievances of any of the men that contributed to the development of the 1934 strike?

A. The "speed-up". The speed-up in the way that the speed that the men were forced to physically work at, eliminating a certain amount of the men from a job and, therefore, requiring a smaller number of men to do the work; the amount of tonnage handled by the men, so much per man per hour; the hazards, the safety, or the hazards that such operations brought about that resulted in numerous injuries and deaths. And, well, I would say that about covers that.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Was there a problem of an alleged—withdraw that. I will put it this way:

Did the men have any grievances based upon their allegation that a company union or some company unions were operating on the waterfront before the 1934 strike?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that as being suggestive and leading.

Mr. Grossman: Of course it is suggestive.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it. It is merely directing his attention.

Mr. Grossman: It is quite obvious that Mr. Bridges knows more about this situation than I do.

[5350]

Mr. Del Guercio: We don't question that.

A. The Company Union was the apparatus through which the employers continued and increased the speed-up, prevented any organized protest or organized opposition to the various complaints, and was also the apparatus by which the petty graft was carried on against the men on the waterfront. [5351]

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. What was the name of the Company Union?

Mr. Del Guercio: I cannot hear counsel.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. What was the name of the Company Union?

A. I am not quite sure of the technical name, but I think it was the San Francisco Longshoremen's Association. It was widely known by the men on the waterfront as the Blue Book.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: Blue Book?

The Witness: Yes. It came about because the union book required to be carried was blue in color.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. You said you were required to carry this blue book. What was the basis for that statement?

A. They had a complete closed shop, and if you didn't have one you didn't work except on the two or three docks that I have mentioned.

Q. Did dues have to be paid into the union to remain a member? A. Yes.

Q. How much were the dues?

A. 75 cents a month and assessments occasionally.

Q. During what period of time did the Blue Book Union function? [5352]

A. All the time I was on the waterfront. It was already operating on the waterfront when I first started to work and it was not put out of existence until October 1933.

Q. What put it out of existence in October 1933, if you know?

A. The International Longshoremen's Association.

Q. Did the Blue Book Union ever do anything at all to improve the working conditions of the longshoremen?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Not a thing to my knowledge.

Q. Can you state what the average earnings of longshoremen were on the San Francisco waterfront before the 1934 strike? A. $15.00——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) I object, if your Honor please, to the question as not being material or adding anything to any issue in this case.

Presiding Inspector: I think I will take it. But wouldn't it be better to give it by the hour?

Mr. Grossman: I don't think that would be a fair test. Mr. Bridges can explain it.

Presiding Inspector: If Mr. Bridges knows how much the average longshoreman worked, I suppose——

Mr. Grossman: (Interposing) We will give it both by the hour—both the total average earnings and what the men earned by the hourly wage. [5353]

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. What were the average hourly wages for longshore work in San Francisco before the strike?

A. 85 cents an hour. But that represented a 10 cent an hour increase that was received on account of the organization of the union. Prior to the union organizing, and receiving this gratuitous increase, which was given to try and block the organization of the union, the wages were 75 cents an hour. But the hourly wages meant nothing. You could not compute earnings on the basis of hourly wages.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that as the witness'——

Presiding Inspector: I think I will take it.

Mr. Grossman: It is in the interest of saving time.

Mr. Del Guercio: We are not saving time by going into all these matters.

Presiding Inspector: This was all gone into in the other case.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Why do you say, Mr. Bridges, that the hourly wage didn't mean anything?

A. You can get $10.00 an hour, but if you don't get an hour's work you don't make anything. It is the work that counts. The work on the waterfront is casual labor. It is a high hourly rate, it is true, because of the casualness of the work. But what you have to supply is first work and then a sufficient amount of money to pay you for that work.

[5354]

The operations, or the method of operating at that time, and the way the men were hired, why you could go two or three weeks, or a month, without work, and then make $50.00 a week, and then spread it out over the whole month, which made the average wage of all the longshoremen at that time between $10 and $15 a week.

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I move to strike out the witness' answer. Let us have an understanding right here as to whether or not this is going to be an opportunity here for the witness here to expound his theories, or whether we are going to confine ourselves to the issues here. We don't mind listening to Mr. Bridges but——.

Presiding Inspector: I know what the issues are. I will take this.

Mr. Grossman: I don't wish there to be any misunderstanding. It is definitely our theory that it is quite appropriate for Mr. Bridges to expound his theories, because I don't have to explain why that is relevant to this case. Mr. Bridges is the one, whether this is a hearing or trial—nevertheless, Mr. Bridges is here in the dock and——

Presiding Inspector: Aren't you in agreement with the ruling that I have just made?

Mr. Grossman: Yes, but I want to make this clear.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think I would argue it.

Mr. Grossman: From now on we expect to go into all Mr. [5355] Bridges' theories.

The Witness: May I say, I am speaking from statistics and figures I have in mind.

Mr. Del Guercio: Is there a question pending?

Presiding Inspector: No yet.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. What union was it that being organized caused the 10 cents an hour wage raise?

A. The International Longshoremen's Association.

Q. And as of what time was that?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Chartered in June, 1933, by the American Federation of Labor and the ILA International.

Presiding Inspector: Could you give us how many men there were working as longshoremen on the waterfront at that time?

The Witness: It changed, your Honor. It used to be a habit at that time that everybody in the city almost, when they were looking for a job for a few days, they naturally seemed to get down to the waterfront. The number of men working changed and it would be anywhere from between 3000 and 5000; even though there might only be, the way this thing was handled, there might only be jobs as of a certain date for as many as 800, 900, or 1500.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Was there a demand during the 1934 strike for a union [5356] hiring hall?

A. That was the main demand; finally the sole remaining demand.

Q. What were the conditions, if any, that caused the men to raise that economic demand?

A. For the purpose of equalizing——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interrupting) I object to the question.

Presiding Inspector: Haven't you been over that?

Mr. Grossman: This is one of the things that led up to it.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it. I think this witness is entitled to give his theories as meeting the entire case of Communist affiliation, or membership activities, made by the Government. I am going to rule with great liberality on allowing him to give his whole story in this hearing.

A. The demands for the strike were four in number. They were dropped one by one as the strike went on, except there was only one demand left, and that was for a union hiring hall.

The purpose of the demand for the union hiring hall was for an equal distribution of the work; in other words, that the work, available work, would be distributed in such a way that all the men engaged in the industry over some period of time, providing they qualified as having worked a major part [5357] of their time in the longshore industry, were entitled to a living. The basis of the hiring hall was to so distribute the available work to meet the needs of the port, that is, to load the ships, and at the same time assure some measure of a living to all the men in the industry.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Were the earnings of longshoremen unequal before the 1934 strike?

Mr. Del Guercio: I can't hear.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Were the earnings of the longshoremen unequal before the 1934 strike? A. They were.

Q. Will you give some examples?

A. The bulk of the men, a group of men, what they called star or preferred men, numbering between 900 and 1300, made good money. They would average between $40.00 and up to $70.00 a week. The other 2500 or 3000 men filled in, got casual jobs here and there, and their average wage could be all the way between $8.00 and $20.00 a week.

Q. Were any attempts made to organize—withdraw that. What attempts were made to organize non-Company unions while you were working as a longshoreman on the waterfront until 1933?

A. One attempt was made in 1924. The union grew to [5358] approximately 500 men. That was also a local of the ILA. Four of the five hundred turned out in the 1924 Labor Day parade and the Company Union agents listed all of them and blacklisted most of them, and that ended that attempt for some time to come.

Later on, for a while, around 1926 or 1927, the IWW made an abortive attempt to organize, but didn't get very far.

They didn't get anywhere, as far as I recall, until in 1928, when there was an attempt to affiliate, and there was actual technical affiliation, to some degree, which did take effect, of the Company Union, or the Blue Book Union, to the American Federation of Labor.

However, the majority of the men on the waterfront were opposed to that, when it was made clear to them, and they voted against it.

Outside of those attempts there were no others. Well, there was the Marine Workers Industrial Union which, in 1932, attempted to organize the waterfront.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

But none of these attempts, outside of what I stated, came to anything. The most successful was the one in 1924 when they grew to a membership of around 500.

Q. You mentioned one example of discrimination against the men parading in 1924. Were there any other examples of discrimination during this period for union membership or union activity?

[5359]

A. Numerous ones. There were frequent occurrences where a man would be blacklisted along the entire waterfront; plenty of them. I can't remember the names of the fellows off-hand, but there were quite a few for different reasons.

Q. Can you state why the ILA was not well organized on the waterfront before 1933?

A. Before 1933?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, they had to overcome the very effective organization and the contracts of the Company Union. The employers were in full control. They had full control of the jobs. If they didn't want you, you didn't work. They operated under this Company Union with this contract, and they were successful and able to head off and smash any proper organization.

Q. During the time that you were a longshoreman, up to 1933, were the seamen well organized, that is, the seamen that sailed in and out of the Port of San Francisco?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. No. The seamen remained practically unorganized after the breaking of the 1921 strike until after the 1934 strike.

Q. Were any of the waterfront workers well organized during that period? A. No.

Q. Will you please describe the beginnings of the [5360] organization into the ILA in 1933?

Mr. Del Guercio: Just a minute. What is the question?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. Organizing the ILA followed the advent of the NRA. However, at that time conditions had reached a low point where everybody was pretty desperate. Everybody had reached a point where they practically had nothing to lose any more and they were willing to take a chance on anything. There had been a lot of agitation on the waterfront, at least, a little agitation, for a couple of years past.

The Communist Party was on the waterfront in 1931 and 1932. That is the earliest I can recall them.

There were some IWW organizers around at that time.

Then there was the Marine Workers Industrial Union.

They were all distributing literature on the waterfront. Occasionally, and more or less regularly, there were speakers of the three groups.

All of this agitation had some effect because they had a fertile field to work in. It educated the men to some degree. Therefore, the ground work had been well prepared when the NRA came along and the men flocked into the ILA practically overnight. The other groups didn't make much headway. Everybody was sympathetic to them. They spoke the language of the waterfront workers in so far as an attack on conditions was concerned. [5361]

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Who spoke the language of the waterfront workers?

A. The various groups, the "Wobblies," that is, the IWW, the Marine Workers Industrial Union, the Communists—they all got a sympathetic ear. Anybody that would come down to the waterfront and attack the Blue Book, they talked everybody's language. They didn't have to agree with them on that. It was the same with the Marine Workers Industrial Union and the same with the IWW. When they spoke against the bad conditions, when they spoke against the shape-up, when they spoke against the graft and the chiseling and the corruption, everybody agreed with them and that they were telling the truth. What they didn't have was a concrete program for the placing of workers on the waterfront. That was all.

Q. What part did you play in the organization of the ILA in 1933?

A. I was one of the people on the waterfront that advocated the men joining the union. I simply played the part, at first, as an ordinary rank and file worker, and then a month or six weeks after the whole matter got rolling I started, to the best of my ability, a movement to see that the union would be publicly established on a democratic basis.

For that reason a few of us organized a committee that we called the Committee of 500, and we distributed a leaflet demanding immediate elections, and an immediate adoption of the constitution, and immediate meetings of the membership [5362] so we could start to discuss union problems. We were having some difficulty along that line. That was around July 1933 when we eventually got the meetings and eventually the constitution was adopted, and we held our first election.

Q. What difficulties were you having?

A. The local A. F. of L., American Federation of Labor, officials at that time were still trying to support the Company Union. They had declared our union not——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) Do I understand the witness is stating what difficulties he was having, or the group that was forming the ILA was having?

Presiding Inspector: I don't know. Let me hear the question.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Presiding Inspector: What do you mean by that, "you"?

Mr. Grossman: Well, Mr. Bridges had already stated that when they set up this Committee of 500 it was because they were having some difficulty.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: You mean the whole group?

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. You used the expression, when you were referring to the Committee of 500, you stated you had been having some difficulty. Please explain that statement.

A. The union was organized and chartered. There was quite a struggle to get the charter. The San Francisco [5363] American Federation of Labor Council protested the granting of the charter. They branded us as a group of up-starts and stated that the proper organization to receive the charter was this Company Union that had maintained peaceful industrial relations to the employers for the past fourteen years.

Paul Scharrenberg, the Secretary of the State Federation, also protested the granting of the charter and demanded that it be removed.

So we, first of all, had a struggle against the regular labor officialdom at that time to even get a charter for this new group of workers. These officials wished to charter the Company Union, and maintained the same apparatus, the same structure, the same officials. All we get out of it was the payment of more dues.

So that was our first job.

However, after we got over the charter fight then the union was just lining up more members. There was no accounting of funds. We didn't know where we stood in that respect. Some of our officials we definitely did not trust. They were incompetent and untrustworthy in our opinion. There were no union meetings. There was no organized union forum in any way.

So our first demands were to immediately call a union meeting to properly initiate the members, to establish some kind of temporary officialdom by means of an election, instead of each person being self-appointed as was the case [5364] at that time.

Eventually union meetings took place. Temporary officials were elected, and certain steps were taken to account for the funds, and so forth.

Then the next difficulty was to have a constitution adopted. We were functioning without a constitution. This left a small group of self-appointed officials, mainly consisting of people that were not even longshoremen, but city politicians, who were telling us what should be done, and saying "Leave everything to us. We will give you this, that and the other thing." Of course, we knew better.

The next move was to have the union officially adopt a constitution and officially have regular elections by secret ballot.

That was eventually accomplished aroun' August.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. After that——

Mr. Del Guercio: Just a moment.

(Whereupon Mr. Del Guercio conferred with the Presiding Inspector.)

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: We will adjourn promptly at half past twelve.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. After this was done was there any general dissatisfaction among the men with the leadership of the union and the [5365] way it was functioning?

A. There was.

Q. Will you explain that, please?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, instead of having an explanation, I think that questions ought to be asked.

Presiding Inspector: Of course, that would be the usual method, but as this is probably going to be a long examination I think we can take it that way. You will have full opportunity to go into this.

Mr. Grossman: It would be the tail wagging the dog.

Mr. Del Guercio: I only have in mind expediting the hearing.

Presiding Inspector: Of course, I may be wrong and you may be right, but I think we will better expedite the hearing by letting him tell his story.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Will you explain that?

A. We had a regular election, elected officials, adopted a constitution, and elected an executive Committee.

Then the next step, of course, was to accomplish something with the union in the way of negotiations for a better agreement. Nothing was being done along that line. The union officials were still telling us that, through their political friends, and through the NRA, we could get everything without having to do very much about it; that for us to keep [5366] on working and they would take care of everything.

There were quite a few of us, possibly from past bitter experience, that didn't believe all this.

Shortly after the elections discrimination began all over again. The Company Union was still functioning. There was no real attempt made to put the Company Union out of existence.

It shortly developed that a meeting, or a hearing, was held of the Company Union by the officials of the NRA at that time, or an appointed committee; the Secretary of the San Francisco Labor Council, a Rabbi—I forget his name—and a Mr. Pettus, I think, who was a member of business. In other words, the Committee was supposed to be composed of one from labor, one from business, and one from the public at large. The Rabbi represented the public at large. Mr. Pettus represented the business groups, and John O'Connell, of the Labor Council, represented the San Francisco Labor Council.

Mr. George Creel, at that time Regional Officer of the NRA, was Chairman.

Their decision was that the Company Union was a bona fide organization with a closed shop contract, and we had to belong to it to work on the waterfront.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Something had to be done about that.

On the basis of that decision the discrimination started all over again. They were told to take off their union buttons or they would be fired. [5367]

This eventually developed into a show-down on the Matson Dock in a strike in October, 1935.

Q. What year was it that strike took place?

A. October 1933. I made a mistake when I said "1935."

As a result of that strike, and the winning of the strike, that particular dock—this was a five day strike, if I remember correctly—we finally eliminated and started a real drive, offensive, against the Company Union, and we eliminated it forever—I hope.

Presiding Inspector: Before that time had you belonged, the men, to both the Company Union and the new union?

The Witness: That was the difficulty we were having. The men were still keeping the Company Union books. They were afraid not to because they had to show that book to get a job. If they showed the other book, or at many docks if there was even a suspicion of a man having the other book, they were discharged.

Mr. Del Guercio: I move his answer be stricken and that he confine himself to answering the questions that are asked.

Presiding Inspector: I think that he went beyond the question, of course.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Grossman: He anticipated the next question; that is all.

Presiding Inspector: I think it is pertinent. I will let [5368] it stand.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Was there any work in any group done outside of the union to develop union activities?

A. Outside of the union?

Q. Yes. A. No.

Q. Was there a group, which has been called the Albion Hall group, functioning about this same time?

A. That started to function—yes, that started to function. The Albion Hall group was really the Committee of 500, and it started to function somewhere around July or August 1933.

Q. Will you please explain how this group came into existence and why?

A. I organized the group, to have proper organization on the floor of the meeting, and put an end to this disruption in the meeting, to throw out of the meeting some of the city politicians that took up our time and did nothing for us, and to see that there was proper organization in that union and proper democratic control. We used to meet as a group in Albion Hall.

We only had two fundamental rules: One, that every member of the group had to be a working longshoreman and a member of the union; second, that all programs adopted by the group had to be submitted to the union floor and adopted by a [5369] majority vote on the union floor.

Q. About how many people participated in the Albion Hall group?

A. Anywhere from between 10 to 30.

Q. Were they the same people week in and week out?

A. Generally, yes; but some dropped out and new ones were added.

Q. Were they all members of the ILA of your local? A. Every one of them.

Q. For what period of time did this group function?

A. As far as I know, up to, at least, up to the 1934 strike. I don't recall that during the strike or after the strike.

Q. When the group was first formed did it function secretly or openly?

A. More or less secretly.

Q. Was its existence mentioned in the meetings of the Union at first?

A. Not at first, no; later on; yes. It came to be pretty well known because certain people dropped out, and disagreed, and we didn't make any particular bones about it. We openly proclaimed that we were going to organize that union and we were going to give the officialdom and their friends some good solid organized opposition from the floor of the meetings, and we did.

Q. Did members of this Albion Hall group at any time [5370] state openly in the meetings of the union that they were members and what the decisions of that Albion Hall group were?

A. Yes.

Presiding Inspector: I think we will stop right here until two o'clock.

(Whereupon, at 12:30 o'clock p.m. a recess was taken until 2:00 o'clock p.m. of the same day.) [5371] called as a witness in his own behalf, having been previously duly sworn, testified further as follows:

Direct Examination (Resumed)

Mr. Grossman: Will you read the last question and answer, please?

(The question and answer referred to were read by the reporter as recorded.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Can you give me one or two examples of the open statements in the ILA meeting of the activities of the Albion Hall group?

A. Some time after the group was functioning, and bringing up certain matters, they were criticized by individuals on the floor who raised the question as to what right they had to meet and come into the union with a program, and they were answered.

Q. How were they answered?

A. Well, they were answered by members of the group that got up and asked them what law there was against it, and if they wanted the minutes read on the floor of the meeting that the group would be only too glad to do it. I can recall [5372] the time that I did that myself.

Q. This Albion Hall group kept minutes, did it?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. It kept minutes; yes.

Q. About how often did it meet?

A. I can't quite recall. I think at first it met every week or two weeks; later on every two or three weeks.

Presiding Inspector: How often did the union itself meet?

The Witness: Every two weeks.

That reminds me—I think when the union was meeting every two weeks we met every two weeks. When the union met at shorter intervals I think we met at shorter intervals.

Presiding Inspector: You about synchronized them?

The Witness: Right. We always arranged for a meeting for the day before the union meeting so we could go into the union with a certain program to aim at.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. How did one become a member of the Albion Hall group?

A. By just stopping him on the waterfront and asking if he would like to attend the meeting, and telling him where it was. [5373]

Q. What qualifications were there for membership and participation in the group?

Mr. Del Guercio: Will you speak a little louder, please?

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. What qualifications were there for membership or participation in the group?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. First, you had to be a member of the Union; second, you had to be a working longshoreman; and, third, you had to believe in the policies of the group.

Q. Could you state those policies briefly?

A. Yes. Policies for, first, democratic organizations, such as the policy we put forward at that time, that elections must be by a vote of the membershiip; all members of the Union Executive Committee must be working longshoremen, exclusive of the elected officials; all Executive Board decisions must be ratified by the general membership; all minutes must be kept in writing; all funds must be regularly accounted for by reports to the Union meetings; all funds must be approved before—or, all bills must be approved before being paid. Such things as that. And, finally, that we had to support a program for various demands on behalf of the workers, such as a cessation of the speed-up, the establishment of a hiring hall, the distribution of the work, the wage-hour demands, and so forth. There was a general program. [5374]

Q. Did the Albion Hall group take any position on a Union question that necessarily involved other ports of the Pacific Coast? A. Yes.

Q. What was that action?

A. There had been a convention. In the latter part of 1933 Code hearings were held at Washington, D. C. That was the time that they were trying to establish Codes for various industries. Code hearings were held in Washington, D. C. and we sent a representative back there—our Union did, Mr. H. P. Melnikow. At the same time the Company Union was represented back there, and as an outcome of these Code hearings a Pacific Coast Conference of our Coast Union was called, that is, representatives supposedly from the various other Locals of our Union up and down the Pacific Coast, was called in Portland and a Union program was arrived at there generally aimed at going along with the Code and the wages and conditions established under the Code and the grievance-settling machinery established under the Code.

It amounted at that time to, instead of doing something about the workers' demands, they were going to be put to arbitration and, in addition, there was something very dangerous that we thought—minority representation was allowed for. Under the NRA minority groups of workers could be recognized for collective bargaining purposes and, therefore, [5375] both the Company Union and our Union could have been recognized by the employers for bargaining purposes, whether they represented the majority or a minority of the workers. And this, in effect,——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) If your Honor please, this is an exposition of something else now and hasn't anything to do with the 1934 strike.

Presiding Inspector: I think it is merely explanatory. I think I will take it.

Mr. Del Guercio: The answer could be a little more shorter.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: Well, that is a suggestion to Mr. Bridges.

The Witness: I can shorten them, your Honor.

Eventually, out of it, this convention was repudiated; another convention was called that had its growth in the Albion Hall group, who proposed it and brought it about.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. How did they bring it about?

A. Passed a resolution in the Local, elected myself and another person to visit the various Locals on the Coast and have the membership in those Locals go on record as demanding a Coast convention with regularly elected delegates to establish a trade union program and to force bargaining with the employers. [5376]

Q. You mean that these things that the Locals subsequently did were first decided upon by the Albion Hall group?

A. They were. In many cases they were.

Q. I meant with reference to this convention, this coastwise convention? A. That's right.

Q. Is it possible for you to state, Mr. Bridges, whether substantially all of the decisions of the Albion Hall group were accepted by the Local Union?

A. Practically all of them. I could look at the minutes and find out. I could check the minutes of the Albion Hall group with the minutes of the Local Union and come to a pretty complete conclusion on that. But, as far as I can recall, practically every action or peace program put forward by that group was approved by the membership in the Union. [5377]

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Were you ever connected with a publication called the Waterfront Worker? A. I was.

Q. Do you know how that publication came into existence?

A. Yes. There were two, two or three parts of it.

Q. Will you state, if you know, how it first came into existence, who was responsible for it?

A. The Marine Workers Industrial Union.

Q. Do you know about when it first came into existence? A. 1933, January.

Q. And what kind of a publication was it? First, was it printed or mimeographed?

A. Mimeographed bulletin. A mimeographed four-page bulletin, I think in its beginning, two or four pages in the beginning; later on six pages; and later on eight pages.

Q. What subjects did it deal with at first while it was put out by the Marine Workers Industrial Union?

A. I can't quite recall. It dealt with the general subject of organization of seamen and longshoremen, their general complaints about conditions, the Company unionism on the waterfront, and also in addition certain political matters—I can't quite recall now.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Did it deal primarily with conditions on the San Francisco waterfront? [5378]

A. Yes; as far as I can remember it did.

Q. Did you have anything to do with its publication at that time?

A. Not when it started.

Q. Can you give us an idea of how long after it started you first had something to do with it?

A. It started in January '33. We took it over in September or October '33.

Q. Whom do you mean by "we"?

A. Well, the Albion Hall group in some respects; and a pretty loose group of people on the waterfront, the way the paper was handled, not by any particular organized group, but everybody in a general way took it over.

Q. Was it first published, when it was published, by the NMU, by working longshoremen?

A. Well, in a way you could call them that. At that time there were certain docks on the waterfront mainly handling coastwise vessels where the crews of those vessels would come in and in between the trips they would work ashore maybe for a few days, a few weeks, and then they would do longshorework. We have a somewhat similar structure at present, but more so in those days. Therefore, these men, for a certain period of time, would be performing longshore work and, really speaking, longshoremen. But next week, or the next couple of weeks, they would be at sea again. They were not permanent resident longshoremen of the port. [5379]

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Do you know whether any of the resident longshoremen worked on the Waterfront Worker before you took it over?

A. I can't quite remember. My impression is if they did, they were very few. I remember that was a subject of discussion on the Waterfront at that time, where we believed, at least I can recall my impression was that very few of them did.

Q. Was the ILA also in existence at the time you took over the Waterfront Worker? A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall whether any change was made in describing those who were putting out the paper after you took it over?

A. Yes. We changed the name of the people putting out the paper to a group of ILA longshoremen.

Q. A group of what?

A. ILA longshoremen. Before the paper used to be put out by the MWIU. I think it carried that name on the masthead, or a group of longshoremen with the cooperation of the MWIU. I noticed one of the earlier issues since I have been in this trial, and I noticed that on the masthead. We took it over after that.

Q. How much of the old publication did you take over. Let me itemize the various things you might have taken over. Did you take over the name?

A. Took over the name. [5380]

Q. Did you take over a mimeograph machine?

Mr. Myron: I think he should be allowed to state what they took over.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Grossman: That is quite the reverse of your objection previously made.

Presiding Inspector: I think it may expedite it.

Mr. Grossman: Mr. Bridges may think of something that I would not.

Mr. Myron: It is leading.

Presiding Inspector: It is leading.

Mr. Del Guercio: It is leading on a question that is very important here.

Mr. Grossman: All right, I will ask it the other way round, to show I have no axes to grind here.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. What did you take over of the Waterfront Worker when you took it over?

A. We took over the paper, the name, the general make-up and the general idea.

Q. Did you take over anything else?

A. Well, I don't know what else it could be.

Presiding Inspector: Mimeograph machine?

The Witness: No, we rented our own.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. The address? [5381]

A. Well, yes, we took over the address for a while.

Q. Did you take over any supply of paper or ink?

A. No. They had none. The paper went out of business. As I recall it, the paper was out of business for three or four months and that is where we got the idea to revive it because it was not being published any more.

Q. Do you remember whether any discussion was had with the MWIU about your beginning to put out the paper?

A. I discussed it myself with Harry Jackson of the MWIU.

Q. Will you give me the substance of any discussion, or discussions, you had with him about it?

A. The paper was being published at that time, and it was not finding a great deal of favor among the various regular longshoremen and——

Mr. Myron (Interposing): The question asked was what was discussed. The answer is not responsive.

Presiding Inspector: No.

A. (Continuing): All right. We discussed the fact that the paper was not a success because, in our opinion, who knew quite a bit about the background of the whole waterfront, it was not being put out by people who knew what the real grievances were of the longshoremen, and what should be done about them. We discussed that and pointed out that if this paper was published by men that really knew what they were talking [5382] about, it would be a very successful organ in more ways than one. We never found much agreement with the MWIU on that and, as we predicted, the paper folded up until we re-started it.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did the contents of the paper change sub-

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

stantially after you took it over? First, let me put it this way:——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): There is a question, if your Honor please, and I think the witness should be permitted to answer that question.

Presiding Inspector: If he can answer.

Mr. Grossman: I will make it smaller.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did it change in subject matter?

A. That would be pretty hard to answer, unless I had a file of the copies and went through them. It changed in so far as, for example, a definite program began to take place. There was definite suggestions in there as to what to do, which was lacking when the paper was put out by the MWIU, who generally put forth a program in generalities.

Mr. Myron: The question is, "Did it change?" The answer is not responsive to the question.

Presiding Inspector: It is explanatory, but I think it answers it.

By Mr. Grossman: [5383]

Q. Continue.

A. I would say that was the basic change.

Q. Did it change with respect to who wrote the articles?

A. Not entirely. There were articles written by the longshoremen on the waterfront in the first paper, I think; but the articles were not actually written and mailed in by the longshoremen. They were given to the people who put the paper out at that time. In other words, the paper operated in a way like a regular newspaper does; that is, a group of men were going up and down the waterfront in the way of reporters and they talked to the men and got any stories they had and they appeared in the paper. [5384]

Q. This was before you took it over?

A. Before we took it over, yes.

Q. And after you took it over how were articles given to the paper?

A. The same way, except mainly we requested that articles be written and sent in and contributions also. But at the same time any little bit of news that, the type of news we wanted at that time, we could dig up ourselves we wrote it down and put it in. The paper was made up of stories given in and written in and printed just as they came in.

Q. Were there a group of longshoremen who more or less regularly did some work in connection with the paper? A. There was.

Q. This is after you took it over? A. Yes.

Q. About how many would you say there were on the average?

A. All the way from about ten to thirty.

Q. If you took various periods in the history of the paper would the composition of this group change? Would there be different people in this group that had to do with putting out the paper?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Yes, I think so. I think some of the fellows would be interested in it for two or three weeks, and then they would drop away from an active part. But they would help out in other ways. And it generally boiled down to the actual getting [5385] out of the paper had to be done by eight or ten people as far as any active work was concerned, seeing that enough articles got in to fill it up and seeing that the mimeographing of it was taken care of and seeing that the peddling of it was taken care of.

Q. By whom was the paper distributed?

A. By seamen; that is, seamen that we hired. I think we gave them 50 cents a day to come down and peddle the paper on the waterfront.

Q. Was that true during the entire existence of the paper after you took it over? A. Yes.

Q. How long did the paper remain in existence?

A. Until some time in 1936.

Q. What was the reason you took the paper over?

A. First of all, it had gone out of business; it was not being published. That didn't cause any great stir in itself except a situation developed on the waterfront at that time where we needed some kind of a medium to rally people. That was the time of the October, 1933 Matson strike. And we needed some, either leaflets or something like that to explain to the men on the waterfront what was happening and in order to explain to other people, and we seized upon the idea to use the Waterfront

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Worker, the reason for it being that they started to recruit strike breakers from the Skid Row on Howard Street amongst the unemployed. The Waterfront Worker of the Marine [5386] Workers Industrial Union had been circulated amongst the unemployed and it had a little more standing up there than it did down amongst us men on the waterfront. So we hit upon the idea of using the name "Waterfront Worker" and we issued a couple of leaflets during that strike headed "Waterfront Worker", mainly for circulation amongst the unemployed, urging them not to strike break. And the rest of it grew from that.

Q. Was the paper put out of existence or did it—well, I will put it this way: Did you take any active steps to put the paper out of existence?

A. When it finally went out of existence, yes.

Q. Why did you do this?

A. No necessity for the paper any longer. We had a democratic union where you didn't have to go to the methods—you didn't have to use those methods to express yourself. You could get up in the union and express yourself and be protected in expressing your opinion. Therefore, to keep an organ like that going was not democratic any more, not necessary.

Q. Was it needed, though, for that reason prior to that time?

A. It certainly was, in our opinion. And I think it eventually proved it.

Q. Was it impossible to express yourself as fully in the Union meeting in 1933 and 1934 as you could in a paper like the Waterfront Worker? [5387]

A. Well, I wouldn't—in 1934, even during the strike and after the strike, yes. It was possible to express yourself in the Union meetings, but it was still not possible to say a lot of other things because the Union wasn't strong enough to protect you. It is one thing talking in a Union meeting and it is one thing standing up for your rights so far as Union conditions were concerned while you were working. The employers had a pretty tough hold down there and, although we were not asking for anything unreasonable or out of the ordinary, why, they refused to recognize the Union, refused to even talk to the Union and to talk Union or to ask for anything was tantamount to being fired immediately.

Q. You mean, then, that even after the 1934 strike the Union was not able to fully protect members of the Union against discrimination by the employers?

Mr. Myron: I object to that, your Honor. He is asking the witness if he means something and he already stated what he knows.

Presiding Inspector: Well, I suppose it is strictly objectionable on that ground.

Mr. Grossman: For the purpose of clarity I think I have a right to say what I think is the interpretation to see if that is correct.

Presiding Inspector: Well, I think that really it doesn't need any interpretation. His answer is clear, isn't it? [5388]

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Grossman: All right.

Presiding Inspector: It is a technical objection.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did the Waterfront Worker after you took it over support itself?

A. Yes. Right from the start it supported itself. Well, not right from the start. We all had to put in a few dollars to get the thing started and it never did—well, towards the end we had a few dollars in the fund, but it was touch and go. But it was always self-supporting. We raised the price from one cent to two cents shortly after we went into business, and eventually became pretty self-supporting; even showed a slight profit.

Q. What was the maximum circulation achieved by the paper?

A. Four or five thousand; not only in the Port of San Francisco. Later on we mailed some to other ports upon request.

Q. Could you estimate what proportion of the longshoremen in the Port of San Francisco were reading this paper at the time of its maximum circulation?

A. All of them and their families.

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that.

Presiding Inspector: Could he show that? Would he know? [5389]

Mr. Grossman: Why, certainly.

Presiding Inspector: How many workers were there on the waterfront?

The Witness: At that time around four thousand.

(Testimony of Harry Renton-Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: No, no; the whole Western Coast.

The Witness: Oh, longshoremen alone about twelve or thirteen thousand.

Presiding Inspector: And what was the circulation of your newspaper?

The Witness: About five thousand.

Presiding Inspector: Was that all over the Coast?

The Witness: That's right. But that means that out of the five thousand there might be five or six hundred mailed out of San Francisco. We wouldn't mail them in big orders.

Presiding Inspector: No.

The Witness: No. The bulk of the papers were sold on the San Francisco Waterfront generally between three and four thousand a week.

Presiding Inspector: If you want to ask it you may.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Can you estimate what proportion of the working longshoremen in San Francisco were readers of this paper at the time of its maximum circulation?

A. The answer is, All of them. Even the ones that didn't like it read it. [5390]

Mr. Myron: I assume he knows that.

The Witness: I am positive of it.

Mr. Grossman: I suggest that the Chronicle, if it can estimate things like that, the Waterfront Worker can.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Are you testifying?

Mr. Gladstein: May I suggest that counsel be required to address objections to the Court instead of back across the table, your Honor?

Presiding Inspector: I don't think that either of you are wholly free from blame in that respect.

Mr. Gladstein: Wouldn't it be a good idea to try to start it sometime?

Presiding Inspector: I have tried to. I think I must have said so 50 times in these weeks. It seems to me very long now.

Mr. Gladstein: What will the ruling of the Court be?

Presiding Inspector: The ruling is that you must address the Examiner. I mean, this particular Examiner.

Mr. Grossman: That is rather a change.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did the Editors of the paper continue to function during its life more or less anonymously?

A. Yes.

Q. During the time that you were putting out the paper did you receive any help in any form from the Marine Workers [5391] Industrial Union?

A. It all depends on how you define "help." Information for the paper or stories for the paper, yes. Other help no. Financial help, no; mechanical help, no.

Q. Do you know how the mailing address for the Waterfront Worker was selected at any time when you had anything to do with it?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Yes. As far as I can recall, we——

Q. (Interposing) Will you state what you remember about that.

A. I didn't personally arrange it. I knew of it. We had Jackson arrange for a mailing address. We didn't want to be connected with it, mainly because of our fear of discrimination on the waterfront. That was the only reason. And the mailing address was arranged for merely to receive mail and contributions that we requested by mail, and they were picked up by one of the seamen that we used to hire and turned over to us.

Q. When your mailing address was 3470 19th Street did any of the editors of the paper ever go to that address to pick up the mail, money or whatever had been sent to it?

A. No. Logically not. The place was watched.

Q. When the mailing address was a certain Post Office box do you know whether any of those connected with the paper—rather, any of the working longshoremen went there to receive the mail or the money or whatever else may have been sent to [5392] the paper?

A. I am sure they didn't. That's the idea of having the mailing address. We knew that the employers on the waterfront were trying to find out who was connected with that paper. They had some very deep suspicions, but nothing concrete, and it was more than any of our jobs were worth or even our physical safety for a long time to be found or definitely shown to be behind the paper.

Mr. Del Guercio: I assume he is still speaking from his own knowledge.

The Witness: Definitely from my own knowledge. Very definitely. We had a Company Union down there and there were a good bunch of sluggers and I got slugged a couple of times by them.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did you know at the time the Waterfront Worker was using the mailing address 3470 - 19th Street what that place is, or in whose name it was rented or owned?

A. I didn't know and didn't care much.

Q. At the time that the Waterfront Worker was using a Post Office Box for its mailing address did you know in whose name or by whom that Post Office box had been obtained?

A. No. I didn't know in whose name. I know that we got somebody that was pretty hard to be discriminated against inasmuch as he was not a working longshoreman. [5393] We generally aimed at getting somebody that didn't have to depend on the waterfront as a working longshoreman for a livelihood, somebody that had some other avenue of escape. That was the only idea we had in mind. We possibly didn't inquire too much into their connections or their record.

Q. Can you tell me how the 1934 strike developed? What was the first Union action that precipitated or caused the strike?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Your Honor, hasn't that been gone over, what brought about the 1934 strike? I thought we went all over that.

Mr. Grossman: All I went up to was the economic and working conditions on the waterfront. I wasn't concerned with the strike itself, the Union, etc., which I am now asking for.

Presiding Inspector: I think this is very remote, but I will take it.

A. As an outcome of the resolution passed in the San Francisco Longshore Local and the delegation that consisted of another person and myself visiting the other ports, a coast convention was called in San Francisco in February, 1934 and that convention adopted the Union demands and set a deadline on which they would take a strike vote if those demands were not granted. The deadline came and passed and a strike vote was taken. The strike was postponed at the request of President Roosevelt and a Mediation Board was established. They reached a compromise agreement that was repudiated by the Coast and [5394] eventually on May the 9th the strike was called as a result of that convention and by the coast officers at that time.

Presiding Inspector: I don't quite understand the terminology. What do you mean by "the coast"?

The Witness: The structure of our Union, your Honor; the Union at that time.

Presiding Inspector: You mean all of the Unions which were in communication with you?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

The Witness: It was all one Union except that it was divided into Locals.

Presiding Inspector: Different locals?

The Witness: Yes, and the jurisdiction broadly——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) That is what you call "the coast"?

The Witness: When I say "the coast" I mean the Pacific Coast between the borders of Mexico and Canada in this particular instance.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Was there not at that time a division of the International Union confined to the Pacific Coast called "The Pacific Coast District"?

A. That is right.

Q. With officers of its own?

A. That's right. An autonomous district.

Q. With a measure of autonomy?

A. That's right. [5395]

Q. Was action to call the strike taken by that district organization?

A. By the district organization through a referendum vote.

Q. Were there by this time locals in various ports on the Pacific Coast?

A. In all of them; practically all of them. That's incorrect. There was no local in Eureka, Crescent City, Fort Bragg.

Q. All the major ports?

A. All the major ports; yes, sir.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: Now, you said back there a compromise was suggested.

The Witness: That's right.

Presiding Inspector: Who were the ones who proposed the compromise?

The Witness: A Mediation Board established under the National Recovery Act at that time having in it, as I said, this business of allowing minority representation and calling for a vote with the exception of one port. The compromise agreement reached granted our demands in San Francisco up to some extent. For all the other ports they ruled that the men would have to start voting to see if the Union really represented them, and that proposal was proposed by the Mediation Board and rejected by the Coast longshoremen at our in- [5396] sistance for a program that, the best way to find out whether we represented the men or not was to stop the ships from running, and also the best way to kill off this minority representation that had the nature of a Company Union in each port was to do the same thing and demand a bona fide contract with proper recognition.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Why did you object at that time to minority representation?

A. Because obviously it would have destroyed our Union. We would have gotten nowhere in negotiations and it was the Company Union set-up all over again except instead of just having it confined to San Francisco it would have been a coast-wise Company Union.

Q. What was the date that the ILA went on strike on a coastwise basis?

A. May 9, 1934.

Q. During that same day did any other union go out on strike? A. No.

Q. What was the next union to go out on strike?

A. Marine Workers Industrial Union.

Q. Did they go out on a coast scale or in every port of the Pacific Coast?

A. May 10, yes. [5397]

Q. And whom did they represent?

A. The majority of the seamen at that time organized into a trade union on the Pacific Coast.

Q. You mean a majority of the seamen that belonged to any union whatsoever?

A. Well, there were——

Q. (Interposing) Or a majority of those who were working as seamen?

A. It represented a number of working seamen in a union. There were two unions. I think the best way to explain it is that there were two unions all right. There was the International Seamen's Union of America and there was the Marine Workers Industrial Union. The International Seamen's Union of America at that time had around four or five hundred members all told. The M. W. I. U. had 2000 generally speaking. Therefore, they represented the majority of organized seamen, those that were in unions at all. [5398]

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Did the International Seamen's Union come out on strike?

A. May 15, under a lot of pressure.

Q. What kind of pressure?

A. First of all, they were locked out of the coastwise ships that suspended operations on May 12. They couldn't stay on the job. They tried to get them to get off. Others on deep water ships they were kept off to some degree by picket lines. In addition, through the propaganda and other things we carried on, many of them came off of their own accord through shame and other reasons; and many of them, of course, to support our strike as workers in the union.

However, the union, the teamsters union all this time were urging them to stay aboard the ships, urging them to have nothing to do with our strike, urging them on as strike breakers.

Eventually, a meeting was called that only consisted of 27 men in San Francisco of the Seamen's Union and that meeting voted the Pacific Coast strike for the Seamen May 15 by a vote of around 15 to 12.

Q. When the Marine Workers Industrial Union went out on strike did most of their men immediately come out on strike?

A. No. The Marine Workers Industrial Union sent a delegation over before our Longshore Strike Committee, and they had a list of ships that they had organized in varying degrees. [5399] They had a couple of ships, I think the number was two, where they had 100 per cent organization on them; and they had half a dozen or so where they had, say 75 or 80 per cent organization, dwindling all the way down to where they had five or ten per cent organization. They showed us the list of ships as to what number they had organized, and the question was should they order all their men off these ships, or should they not. We eventually agreed on a joint program with our Strike Committee, and the delegates from the MWIU that were down there putting all this problem up to us, we agreed that they should call off their crews on all ships where they had a majority of the crew organized, and on those ships where they had less than a majority organized, they should stay aboard for the time being to see if they could make the crew of the ship a majority in the union and as soon as that was done they were to call them off too.

Q. Immediately after your union went on strike did you set up any kind of a strike apparatus?

A. We set it up two months before.

Q. What was that apparatus?

A. A local strike Committee of 75 men, representing two men elected from each dock, and five men to represent the men at large, not regularly working on any particular dock—75 all told. In addition to that the Executive Board of the Union which, I think, consisted of 25 men, making a committee of— [5400] no. I think, all told it was 75 men; around 50 from the docks and the Executive Board of 25.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Did you hold any position on this Strike Committee? A. I was elected Chairman.

Q. At what time? A. March, 1934.

Presiding Inspector: That is of the Strike Committee?

The Witness: Chairman of the Strike Committee; yes.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. For how long did you function as Chairman of the Strike Committee?

A. Until the end of the strike.

Q. Did the Strike Committee of your local union cooperate in any way with the Marine Workers Industrial Union? A. It did.

Q. In what ways did it cooperate?

A. Helped them establish the picket lines—in other words, the establishment of picket lines was a joint matter; to some degree we collaborated in helping them feed their striking men; they were supplied with picket cards, or not picket cards, but they were allowed to use their picket cards to eat in the soup kitchen that we established, and they worked in some cases under the direction of our Picket Captain, or our Picketing Committee; and we collaborated on the use of squad cars, and such things as that. For a while they had a [5401] regular delegation, and they were not seated, they were seated as observers on our local Strike Committee, a delegation from the MWIU.

Q. What are squad cars?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Squad cars were just patrol cars used to patrol the waterfront with pickets in them, to watch for the movement of ships and one thing and another; generally what you might call patrols as distinguished from the stationary pickets that picketed outside of each dock.

Presiding Inspector: How many pickets did you have at one time?

The Witness: It depended. We had 20,000 one day.

Presiding Inspector: I mean on the waterfront serving as pickets.

The Witness: It grew. At the very start we possibly had turned out 1000 for the first couple of days.

Presiding Inspector: That is for the whole waterfront?

The Wtiness: Yes. That number grew and grew as the seamen came ashore and other workers walked out in our support, that number grew until it reached on one occasion 20,000.

Presiding Inspector: Quite a show of force?

The Witness: Quite a show of men on strike.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, no. They weren't wandering all around the city. They were right there all together, weren't they? [5402]

The Witness: They were pickets, quite a large number.

Presiding Inspector: You know what is meant by "quite a show of force."

The Witness: You might term it that, but that wasn't our idea.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. What did the Marine Workers Industrial Union do to cooperate with your local?

A. Picketed with our men, contributed in so far as they were able to the various funds, such as the funds that supported the soup kitchen, exchanged information with us; in other words, if they had information of a ship coming in, going to the dock, and the possibilities of the crew striking—things like that—collaborating in the operation of—we had three picket boats. We had one speed launch and two other launches. They cooperated in the operation of those launches. And certain things like that.

Presiding Inspector: How long is the waterfront here?

The Witness: Oh, the waterfront here is about five miles, at least, on this side; and then it is much longer over on the other side, that is, the east bay side. It extends up the river. We were patrolling the whole area, you might call it, the San Francisco Bay area really. It goes up the river, the Sacramento River, as far as Stockton, Crockett, Vallejo; and down the peninsula as far as Redwood City. This was the [5403] broad area covered. That might be an area of at least 50 square miles or more.

Presiding Inspector: You concentrated, though, principally on the five or ten miles, along in there?

The Witness: We concentrated mainly on the five or ten miles on this side, and the five or ten miles on the other side of the bay.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: I am not familiar with the locale.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. When the Marine Workers Industrial Union called their men out on strike did they have any demands of their own, that is, for the seamen?

A. No, the seamen had no demands of any description until much later.

Q. Would you state that the sole reason for the Marine Workers Industrial Union calling out its members on strike at the beginning was in sympathy, in support of the longshoremen and their demands?

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to the question as putting words in the mouth of the witness.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

Mr. Del Guercio: Not that the witness would fall for it, but——

Mr. Grossman (Interposing): On a question like this I can't force Mr. Bridges to say something he hasn't said many times before. [5404]

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

Mr. Del Guercio: I would like——

Presiding Inspector: I have said twice that I will take it.

A. Yes.

Presiding Inspector: Over your objection.

A. (Continuing): Yes. It is a matter of record, as a matter of fact. A delegation at our 1934 February convention, a delegation from the Marine Workers Industrial Union, came to the convention and pledged full support to our securing a contract, and their strike was in the beginning purely a sympathetic strike.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. What was the next union, after the MWIU, which came out on strike?

A. The Machinists Union.

Q. When did they come out on strike?

A. Around May 12.

Q. What was the next?

A. The Boilermakers, the same day. When I say, "strike," I mean they refused to work on the waterfront any struck work, refused to perform any repair work on the waterfront behind picket lines. They worked elsewhere in the city.

Q. When was the next union?

A. The seamen, May 15.

Q. When did the other seafaring unions come out on strike? [5405]

A. The Teamsters May 23—May 20 or 23, around there.

Following then, about ten days, or around the beginning of June 1st, or June 5th, I think it was, the licensed groups struck, that is the licensed deck and engine room officers.

Just prior to that time the licensed radio officers struck, that is, just prior to the licensed deck and engine room officers.

Q. Do you know whether the experience in San Francisco was typical of the coast with reference to when the Marine Workers Industrial Union called out their men and when the International Seamen's Union called out theirs?

A. The same up and down the coast.

Q. Do you know whether there was the same co-operation between the longshoremen and the MWIU in other of the major ports of the Pacific Coast as in San Francisco?

Mr. Myron: Is that material, your Honor?

Presiding Inspector: I don't think it is very material.

Mr. Myron: Unless it is to show he had something to do with the Marine Workers Industrial Union in other ports.

Mr. Grossman: I will explain it if there is any question about it.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it. I will take all of this testimony. I think it is rather remote.

Mr. Grossman: May I say it is with reference to explaining the clear significance of it. The Government has definitely stated, in their opening statement, that one of the theories upon which they would seek to deport Mr. Bridges is the theory [5406] that he was affiliated with the Marine Workers Industrial Union. Then they went farther. They gave what they claim should now be accepted as a definition of affiliation, as against the one now legally accepted by certain courts, which is very broad, as your Honor will recall, which would undoubtedly include the definition they are claiming, would be merely support, which would undoubtedly include, according to their theory, the acts which Mr. Bridges is now detailing.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

In other words, we want to show this: That in so far as Mr. Bridges was helping the Marine Workers Industrial Union, cooperating with them, or accepting their cooperation, it was, in the first place, acting not just as an individual, but acting as a representative of a union, and he was engaging in a legitimate union and strike activity, going so far, as a matter of fact, as I think the story will show, going so far—I mean their cooperation being so important—that it would be quite a reasonable conclusion that had there not been that cooperation at the beginning between the Marine Workers Industrial Union, a union, and the longshoremen, that the 1934 strike might not have succeeded.

Therefore, I intend to show that the cooperation, such as there was, between Mr. Bridges, as a representative of his own union, and the Marine Workers Industrial Union, was a part of the strike, not only in San Francisco, but on the entire Pacific Coast, and an integral part of the strike apparatus, [5407] the means by which the seamen, or the unlicensed seamen, entered and began to participate in the strike, at least at the very beginning.

That is the significance of it.

I do not think that is at all remote.

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to counsel arguing and expounding his theory of the case when he is about to ask these questions of the witness. It won't be necessary at all for the witness to testify.

Presiding Inspector: I think I will take it. I will take the full blame, if anyone is at fault. I wanted to understand exactly the basis of it. Without in any way saying that I do or do not accept this argument, I will take the proof.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Grossman: Will you read the question, Mr. Reporter?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as follows:

"Q. Do you know whether there was the same cooperation between the longshoremen and the MWIU in other of the major ports of the Pacific Coast as in San Francisco?")

A. Substantially, yes; there might have been more in some cases and less in others.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Do you know whether this is true: That in every major port of the Pacific Coast the Marine Workers Industrial Union had a larger membership at the beginning of the strike [5408] than the International Seamen's Union?

A. Absolutely; yes.

Q. You stated, Mr. Bridges, that your Strike Committee, in your local, was set up two months before the strike began. Was there any cooperation between that Strike Committee and the Marine Workers Industrial Union before the strike began?

A. No. The Strike Committee was disbanded. The strike was originally set for March 7th. It was postponed at the request of the President and referred to this Mediation Board. After the strike was postponed the Strike Committee was temporarily disbanded and was not again established until the actual strike broke out. Prior to the strike there was no actual cooperation, although we were urging, as a general theme, that to win any strike and to strengthen our bargaining efforts, we had to get closer to the seamen because this was the first longshore strike that has ever been won, really speaking; every other strike has been lost because the seamen were disregarded, except in this case.

Q. To what extent did the Marine Workers Industrial Union participate in any joint Strike Committees that were set up in San Francisco?

A. None; there was no other union, that is, of the same degree of strength as we. We were the only union that was contemplating striking, the only union at all organized, so really there was no other union to speak of to cooperate with to any degree.

[5409]

Q. Now, after the strike started wasn't there a joint Strike Committee, or several joint Committees of some kind?

A. Not until some time after the strike, except in the cases I have told you, the Machinists and the Boilermakers Union, which were unions of more or less long standing. All the other unions, the Maritime unions, had practically no membership until the strike had been on a couple of weeks and some of the men came ashore off the ships and they got some members.

Presiding Inspector: You did say something about some people being allowed to attend your Strike Committee meetings?

The Witness: That was after the strike started. In other words, we had unions, you had the skeleton structure of unions, but no membership; and the largest membership in any seamen's union at that time was the Marine Workers Industrial Union. It is true that when the licensed group struck they said they had 1000 men that went out, but it is true that they were lucky to have had 100.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Was there any change in the relative membership of the Marine Workers Industrial Union and the International Seamen's Union as the strike went on? A. Yes.

Q. What happened?

A. The Marine Industrial Workers Union rapidly grew in [5410] membership. The Seamen's Union, what there was of it, the membership almost completely left them.

Q. Was there any other change in the respective membership of these two unions?

A. Later on, toward, after the strike was about two-thirds through, because of certain things, most of the membership left the Marine Workers Industrial Union and went into the Seamen's Union.

Q That was when?

A. I would say it was around the end of June, the beginning of July, of the strike—the strike started May 9th and ended July 31.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. What positions did you hold, what union positions during the 1934 strike?

A. A member of the Executive Committee of the Local, and Chairman of the Strike Committee. That is all.

Q. Were you on any other committees—were you on any sub-committees of the Strike Committee?

A. No. I was ex-officio member, or ex-officio Chairman, you might say, of all committees. I was ex-officio member of all committees. Later I was Chairman of the Joint Marine Strike Committee, later on in the strike.

Q. Can you estimate about when that Joint Marine Strike Committee was set up?

A. June 17, 1934.

Q. And who were included on that Joint Marine Strike [5411] Committee?

A. Fifty men; five from every union on strike.

Q. Was the Marine Workers Industrial Union participating in that Joint Marine Strike Committee?

A. Only in the beginning, the first couple of days. We established the Joint Strike Committee after an attempt was made to settle the strike. We called upon each union on strike to send a delegation of five men to form a Joint Marine Strike Committee. The Marine Workers Industrial Union responded, like other unions. A dispute came up over them being seated on the Strike Committee. It got into such a wrangle that eventually the Marine Workers Industrial Union, their delegation, got up and said "Sooner than have this go on in the middle of a strike, we are withdrawing, and we will continue all our support, we will continue to carry on the way we have been carrying on, we will trust you people to do the right thing and to give us a square deal."

So they were only seated for two days, or two meetings.

Our particular union was instructed by the membership to support their seating on the strike Committee. We were overruled by a majority vote on that Joint Marine Strike Committee.

Q. At any other time during the strike did you hold any position on a union, whether your own union or any other union committee?

A. Not that I can recall. [5412]

Q. Did you hold any position during the general strike on any union committee?

A. I was a member of the general Strike Executive Committee, as well as being a member of the General Strike Committee.

Q. You were a delegate to the San Francisco Central Labor Council during the strike?

A. Yes.

Q. Could you give us a picture of your typical day's activity during the 1934 strike?

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, your Honor, that is a little far-fetched,—daily activities.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think it makes any —I understand what you have in mind.

Mr. Grossman: I am referring to the testimony of Mr. Laurence.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Grossman: I think, your Honor——

Presiding Insepctor: His custom, if it was a custom, wouldn't make any difference.

Mr. Grossman: I want to know when the Committees met, and that sort of thing.

Presiding Inspector: Haven't we had that already?

Mr. Grossman: No.

Presiding Inspector: You can show when the Committees met.

By Mr. Grossman: [5413]

Q. Could you state what was your regular routine with reference to when the various committees that you attended, or the various meetings that you attended, were convened?

Presiding Insector: We don't care so much about his routine. We can take that up later, if necessary. Let us find out when the committees met.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. When did the committees meet that you were participating in?

A. That depends on which one you want.

Q. Take them one by one.

A. The committees that generally met first, at eight o'clock in the morning——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): Which committee?

A. (Continuing): The Picketing Committee met regularly every morning at eight o'clock mainly for the purpose of assigning pickets, and working out the day's work on the picket lines, keeping track of all pickets to see that they were on the job, and so forth.

Following that we would have meetings of the other committees—Publicity, Defense—depending upon what activities were on for the day.

A regular daily meeting always was had by the Relief Committee, which was one of the more important committees.

Presiding Inspector: What time of day did that Committee meet? [5414]

The Witness: I can't recall. I know all those meetings generally occurred in the morning because regularly every afternoon the strike Committee as a whole met. Therefore, we set aside, because of the nature of the activities of those committees, first, and because that was the only time we had available, second, and these committees began to meet at eight o'clock in the morning.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. How long did the meetings of the Strike Committee generally last?

A. All the way from one hour to three hours.

Q. Did you have any regular meeting to report to the membership?

A. Yes; very frequent ones.

Q. Would they be every day, every week, or what?

A. We had daily meetings; every day around ten o'clock, or maybe earlier, meetings following the

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Picketing Committee. Now, I recall we would have the Picketing Committee meet at eight o'clock in the morning, and as soon as the plans for the day were worked out, by that time all the pickets had congregated outside the union hall in a vacant lot across the street, and we would go out and get up on a stand and announce the day's plan of the Picketing Committee, to those who had just arrived, to all of those that were standing there, and they then dispersed to the various jobs and various places, after they had [5415] a general report of what had been arrived at, the status of negotiations, and certain other things.

[5416]

Q. Did you participate in the meetings of the Picketing Committee?

A. I participated in the meetings of all committees.

Q. Did you make a report every day to this meeting of the membership that was in the vacant lot across from the Union hall? A. Every day.

Q. Were there any other meetings now that were held every day during the strike?

A. Meetings of the—you mean meetings of the committees?

Q. Any meetings that were held daily. Were there any others?

Presiding Inspector: Committees or sub-committees.

A. Well, we had meetings of the sub-committee, the Local Strike Committee, and the Joint Marine Strike Committee daily. That was after the Joint

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Marine Strike Committee was formed, and then these membership—brief membership meetings lasting about half an hour every day for reports.

Presiding Inspector: Defense?

The Witness: It depends. Certain committees like Publicity, Defense, Sick Committees and things like that, they didn't meet daily so much depending on the amount of activity. Sometimes they might have to meet three or four times a day depending upon the activities of the people. Sometimes they may slip a day or two. [5417]

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Were there regular meetings of the Local Union?

A. There were regular meetings of the Local Union generally once or twice a week. Once a week as a rule.

Q. Were they in the evening or day time?

A. In the evening.

Q. Which day of the week, if there was a regular day?

A. It depends. We didn't have regular meetings at that time. We operated on the basis that we called meetings when it was necessary; that is, so we wouldn't be bound to any one particular day. Therefore, we might have two or three meetings a week. We might go all the next week with one meeting.

Q. Would you change your schedule any when the Joint Strike Committee began to function?

A. Not that I particularly recall.

Q. Did the Joint Strike Committee meet daily?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Yes.

Q. Did your Local Strike Committee meet every day? A. Every day.

Q. How often did the General Strike Committee meet?

A. Only for the period of the general strike every day, four days or about five days.

Q. Did it meet before the general strike?

A. Yes. I think one day before the general strike. At that time we were generally resolved—we were in a Committee of the whole, and then later on they elected out of the [5418] Committee of the Whole—they elected a Chairman, Vice-Chairman, Secretary and Assistant Secretary and an Executive Committee to act as General Executive Strike Committee. Otherwise what you might call it, the entire General Strike Committee was a Committee of the Whole consisting of five delegates from every Union in San Francisco.

Q. What was the smaller committee within the General Strike Committee?

A. The General Executive Strike Committee.

Q. How large was that?

A. I forget. I think it had—I think it had 15 or 20 members on it.

Q. You wouldn't be able to name most of those?

A. I think I would.

Q. Would you try?

A. Edward Vandeleur was Chairman; C. W. Diehl was Vice-Chairman; George Kidwell was Secretary; Jack Shelley was Assistant Secretary;

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

John O'Connell was on there; Milton Maxwell of the Butchers was on there; I was on there; and the International Official of the Machinists Union, who is dead now, was on there. I can't recall his name. Charles Derry—Derry—I don't know what his first name is—of the Labor Journal was on there. A Mr. Desepte, if my recollection is correct, was also a member; that's about all I could recall off-hand. I could very easily check the records and [5419] get the entire committee.

Q. Was there any Governmental Commission or Committee functioning during the strike?

A. Board of Arbitration—a Board of Mediation at that time—it later became a Board of Arbitration—appointed by the President by a special Congressional resolution.

Q. And did you attend any meetings of that Committee during the strike?

A. Numerous ones.

Q. Was there any other Governmental Committee functioning during that strike?

A. Not that I recall. There was Government individuals laying all over the place, but not that I can recall specifically functioning as a committee.

Q. What was the function of this Governmental Committee that you described?

A. They were the regularly constituted Board of Mediation appointed by President Roosevelt as a result of a special resolution in Congress to attempt to mediate the dispute and to urge upon the parties arbitration.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: How large was the committee?

The Witness: A committee of three: Edward F. McGrady, at that time Assistant Secretary of Labor; Archbishop Hanna, who was Chairman; and Mr. O. K. Cushing. [5420]

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Do you remember any other meetings, Union meetings that you attended during the strike?

A. So numerous that I could never remember them all. I attended a dozen a day. I attended as many as four or five at night.

Q. Did you ever have occasion to attend meetings of other Local Unions during the strike?

A. Almost every day and night.

Mr. Del Guercio: May we have a recess?

Mr. Grossman: Yes, we might as well have it now.

Presiding Inspector: We shall take a short recess.

(Whereupon a short recess was taken.)

Presiding Inspector: Now, Mr. Grossman.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Mr. Bridges, would the 1934 strike have been lost if there had been no Marine Workers Industrial Union? A. Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, if your Honor please,——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I think that is too speculative.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Grossman: Your Honor, I would say that for some people that would be speculative, but for one who not only has the trade union experience that Mr. Bridges had at that time but has obtained since, and with his close connection with [5421] the strike, you might not agree with his conclusions, but I am sure it is not his conclusions because he is dealing with a field which he knows as well as the handwriting expert knows his field. And I don't think it is at all speculative to remove one element. I think any expert can remove one element, and I think he is capable of doing it. Now, I am perfectly willing to get detail or proof in explanation of his answer, but I am sure that that is not speculative.

Presiding Inspector: Strike it out for the time being and put in the details.

Mr. Grossman: I will ask him the question.

Presiding Inspector: Very well.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. What difference would it have made in the strength of the unions involved in the strike, Mr. Bridges, if there had been no Marine Workers Industrial Union?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that.

Presiding Inspector: That calls for statistics. I will take it in that sense.

A. The longshore strike would have been lost like all similar strikes were lost in the entire history——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) The first question is, How much would that have weakened your strength on the waterfront?

The Witness: I doubt if I know how you could compute [5422] that. You couldn't put it in terms of members, your Honor.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Let me ask you specific questions. Would there have been in the early part of the strike a smaller number of seamen on strike if there had been no M.W.I.U.?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I will object to that as being purely speculative.

Presiding Inspector: I think that calls for an estimate really of the number of these M.W.I.U. men who were striking.

Mr. Grossman: The members and the supporters. In other words, those that would respond to a call of their strike.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. I think I will take that, as statistical.

Mr. Del Guercio: Without detracting, of course, from Mr. Bridges' experience as a trade union man, from his own testimony here so far he was just a working man during the 1934 strike and he hadn't achieved that prominence at that time yet. Counsel is asking questions regarding that 1934 strike, which his position was just as Chairman of the Strike Committee.

Presiding Inspector: That is the top of the heap, I suppose.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Del Guercio: There were Union officials at that time that were much greater in importance and prominence than Mr. [5423] Bridges.

Presiding Inspector: I think I will take this. I am not recognizing the soundness of the theory. I have told Mr. Grossman that I am taking this without recognizing or denying the soundness of his theory. That is to be considered subsequently. I am taking this proof, though, along the lines of Mr. Grossman's theory, as he suggested it, without passing upon the soundness of his argument.

Mr. Grossman: All right.

Presiding Inspector: You understand that?

Mr. Grossman: Yes, I understand that.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. In the early part of the strike—that will mean, let us say, the month of May—what difference would there have been in the number of seamen out on strike if there had been no M.W.I.U.?

A. There would have been very few seamen on strike. The seamen did not trust the Seamen's Union at that time for very good and substantial reasons. And, in addition, when we struck the Seamen's Union——

Mr. Myron: (Interposing: I think he answered the question, your Honor.

Mr. Grossman: Well, we'll see.

Mr. Myron: I think any further answer would not be responsive.

Presiding Inspector: I think I will take his explanation. [5424] This is corollary.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. (Continuing): The Seamen's Union officially and publicly had received quite an amount of publicity on the matter, ordered and instructed the seamen to stay aboard the ships. Therefore, we were in the position where the longshoremen were striking and the seamen were ordered to stay at work and if there had not been another union in the field to start the move to get the seamen off the ships eventually we would have got a certain number, but not for quite a while, and the number of seamen that would come off the ships under those conditions would have been very few.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Was there any relationship between the existence of the M.W.I.U. and its being on strike and the fact that the ISU ultimately declared a strike?

Mr. Del Guercio: Just a moment, please! I didn't get the question.

Mr. Grossman: Will you read it back, please, Mr. Reporter.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I don't understand the question. Maybe the witness does.

Mr. Grossman: I will ask it again. I think the witness does, but I think Mr. Del Guercio is entitled to understand it.

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes. [5425]

Mr. Gladstein: Make it more simple.

Mr. Del Guercio: If you can.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Counsel was addressing his remarks to me, if your Honor please.

Mr. Grossman: I am perfectly willing to make it more simple, Mr. Del Guercio.

Mr. Gladstein: I was making that suggestion to my co-counsel.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. The thing I am concerned with, Mr. Bridges, is whether the result of the vote of the ISU to go on strike in approximately ten days after the strike began would have been the same had there been no M.W.I.U on strike at that time.

A. Absolutely not.

Q. Can you state whether the ISU would have continued during the month of May not to strike had there been no M.W.I.U.?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, if your Honor please, as calling for purely speculation.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think you can go that far.

Mr. Grossman: I don't think that is more speculative than the other.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Mr. Bridges, I would like to have you state from your experience what is the importance in a strike of having [5426] a union giving leadership to the men who come out on strike or it is desired should come out on strike.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that as being compound.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: Don't you think that is pretty self-evident?

Mr. Grossman: It may be to some people and its true significance may not appear to those people, your Honor. I think we are entitled to have an expert explain how much difference it would make.

Mr. Del Guercio: We are not trying an expert.

Mr. Grossman: I would say this, Your Honor: To me it seems elementary, except the fact that by reason of Mr. Bridges being unwilling to accept the spontaneous striking of these men and preferring rather that they should be led rather than the M.W.I.U, the Government would wish to deport him for that alone, among other things, but they are willing to deport him for that alone.

Presiding Inspector: Not quite that.

Mr. Grossman: Well, the way they define "affiliation" your Honor; the mere fact of helping the M.W.I.U. get members of and support from the seamen constitutes "affiliation" with the M.W.I.U and a ground for deportation under the theory of the Government. Now, since—— [5427]

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) There is a little more added to that.

Mr. Grossman: I beg your pardon?

Presiding Inspector: There is a little more added to that: That they were mutually assisting each other.

Mr. Grossman: Not according to what they suggest. They talk about "support" as being synonymous with "affiliation".

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: The receiving of support and the mutual obligations and duties implied in that, I suppose.

Mr. Grossman: That is not in their definition, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Only implicit in the word "support."

Mr. Grossman: Well, I think so. I think "support"——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I disagree with you. I think that is implicit, but you may be right about it.

Mr. Del Guercio: We don't adopt counsel's definition We will advance our own theory.

Mr. Grossman: Let us assume even that the Government would be accepting the definition of "affiliation" that was accepted in the last hearing. Nevertheless, apparently, their theory is that this cooperation, such as it is of Mr. Bridges, that is, helping the M.W.I.U bring the seamen out on strike, is sufficient to justify his deportation. Now, either the Government thinks that one should be deported for trade union activity simply; I mean, the theory at least of the Prosecution here; or else they assume that Mr. Bridges had a responsibility [5428] to stand idly by and let the men come out spontaneously on strike without having the M.W.I.U. because they had no other union, bring them out on strike. That changes the picture slightly and I think justifies having Mr. Bridges explain how much help there was in the strike so far as the seamen are concerned in having a union there to take them in as members and to give them leadership.

That's why I think we are entitled to go into it.

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, as I——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Just a moment!

Of course, Mr. Grossman, I don't want to suggest this but I suppose the Government would claim that that was justifying association, affiliation, membership even with a subversive body if it had a good purpose, that argument.

Mr. Grossman: What do you mean by "justify"? Do you mean making it non-deportable?

Presiding Inspector: I mean it wouldn't be a violation of the statute if, for a good purpose, to win the strike for a proper organization of loyal Americans a step was taken to accept membership in a subversive organization. You see, it leads to wide fields for consideration. But I am going to take your view so far as the reception of evidence is concerned. You may go on.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. What difference does it make from a trade union standpoint that there is a union in existence to give leader- [5429] ship to and to be a place for membership in for strikers and potential strikers?

A. A difference in winning or losing the strike.

Mr. Myron: I didn't hear that answer.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Could you receive——

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) "The difference between winning and losing a strike."

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Could you explain what difference it makes? Why can't workers who go out on strike spontaneously without a union could be just as effective and strong in a strike?

Presiding Inspector: Don't you think it is perfectly apparent? It is like a class of boys without a teacher.

Mr. Grossman: Then I can't understand one of the elements of the Government's case. As I say, I thought that was self-evident, but apparently not.

Presiding Inspector: I think it is self-evident that leadership is necessary to a joint enterprise. Do you think there is any doubt about it?

Mr. Grossman: The Government went so far as to cite as so-called admissions from the last hearing Mr. Bridges' statements along this line: That he cooperated with the M.W.I.U for trade union purposes in order to have greater strength, in order to win the strike. And they take our time to read those things as what they called "admissions" on the theory [5430] apparently that these are sufficient to tend to establish at least the deportability of Harry Bridges. Now, you remember that.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, yes. I remember it very well.

Mr. Grossman: And those admissions, so-called, all dealt with cooperating for legitimate trade union purposes with the M.W.I.U.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: I know. But there are certain things that you can cooperate in and there are certain things that you can't cooperate with.

Mr. Grossman: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: And if you do cooperate in these improper things it doesn't make any difference what your purpose is.

Mr. Grossman: What's proper, your Honor?

Presiding Inspector: What is that?

Mr. Grossman: What's proper?

Presiding Inspector: I mean to say, if you called in to assist you—I am taking it from the general type of evidence we have had here—to win the strike, the whole force of a subversive organization, you are cooperating with them no matter what your purpose may be.

Mr. Grossman: Well, is that a deportable purpose?

Presiding Inspector: I should think so.

Mr. Grossman: To win a strike? You mean, asking for aid of the Communist Party is sufficient?

[5431]

Presiding Inspector: Yes, I should think so.

Mr. Grossman: To constitute deportability?

Presiding Inspector: I should think so. Supposing they contributed to the persons who win the strike?

Mr. Grossman: I would say this, your Honor——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) The definition is right in the statute on that.

Mr. Myron: May I say this, if your Honor please?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

That there is no question pending and apparently the last question——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I know, but we are discussing the general admissibility of all this evidence. I am going to take it, but I don't think it is conclusive by any means.

Mr. Del Guercio: The Court has expressed our theory correctly, if your Honor please.

Presiding Inspector: I was trying to express the Government's view, not my own.

Mr. Del Guercio: No, the Government's view.

Mr. Gladstein: May I ask a question simply for clarity?

Presiding Inspector: Certainly, Mr. Gladstein.

Mr. Gladstein: Your last remarks give me this impression: That is, your interpretation of the Government's theory, as I understand it, would be, to put it in my own word so I can understand it, along this line; That if Harry Bridges accepted [5432] the assistance as a Union leader engaged in a strike, accepted the assistance of another organization or found it necessary to work with that organization in the conduct of the strike in order to win that strike, and that strike was a legal strike in the sense that it was a strike for those purposes which are recognized by American jurisprudence as perfectly legitimate; that that organization, not necessarily the members of the organization with whom Harry Bridges came into contact, but if that organization is shown to have had an affiliation with another organization known as the Trade Union

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Unity League, and if the Trade Union Unity League is shown to have had another affiliation with some other organization, and in the face of a ruling which theretofore, as I understand it, had been made by the Department of Labor; in the face of all that, is it the Government's contention that Mr. Bridges would be deportable on that ground?

Presiding Inspector: I think it. That is my understanding of the Government's theory.

Mr. Gladstein: Then essentially it boils down to this: That the difference between being deportable or not deportable, as far as an alien is concerned, on this question of M.W.I.U. affiliation; the difference is whether or not a man does those things which he considers necessary and which probably most people would consider perfectly appropriate in order to win the strike, on the one hand, in contrast with sitting idly by [5433] and allowing the strike to be lost.

In other words, if the strike was lost and unsuccessful because you didn't accept the aid of those seamen who were willing to give it, why then, you are a fine loyal American. But if you do something as a Union leader to accept the support of those seamen who are willing to assist the longshoremen in winning that strike and you actually do win your strike, then according to the Government's theory you are deportable.

Presiding Inspector: I think that is part of the Government's contention.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Gladstein: I just wanted the Government's understanding.

Mr. Myron: The statute is plain.

Presiding Inspector: I understand that is part of the Government's contention. I am not passing on the soundness of it or on the soundness of the other side.

Mr. Grossman: All right.

Presiding Inspector: Now, we have had a long discussion. I hope it is elucidating.

Mr. Grossman: I believe the last question, your Honor, was a request from Mr. Bridges to explain further his statement that unions make a difference.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. I think it is self-evident. But if you think you should have it in the record——

Mr. Grossman: (Interposing) In the light of what we have been discussing, I think it is necessary.

[5434]

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead, Mr. Bridges. Tell them what you think about it.

The Witness: They have got to be organized for purposes of unity, solidarity, purposes of morale, purposes of getting things down or feeding them, of having activity toward winning the strike. Otherwise you have just got a mob. You have got a mob that is liable to do anything. They are liable to wreck your whole strike by individual terroristic action. They are liable to confuse the entire situation, and the difference between having workers organized in some sort of an organization, irregardless of name—name doesn't matter, or at the particular time even affiliation doesn't matter. It is purpose and organization that matters, and the difference between having the workers in such an organization which gives them the right to move in an organized manner, gives them organized leadership, gives them an organized program, and not having them in such an organization. On the one hand, you have got a mob that can be many, many hundreds or thousands of times larger and be ineffective, and on the other hand you have got an organized group that can be much smaller and much more effective because they are organized they have a program, they know where they are going, they know how to express themselves and they know how to win.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. What is the——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I don't think there would be any difference of opinion on that. I think it is self- [5435] evident.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, I was reminded, if the Court please, of the Communist Manifesto.

Mr. Grossman: Well, all right. If you want to be reminded by that—— Presiding Inspector: Yes. We all remember the Marx-Engels Manifesto.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. You were making a statement previously, Mr. Bridges, about the fact that this strike had succeeded where other strikes had failed by reason of the seamen participating. I wonder if you would explain exactly what you meant by that.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I object to that line. That is purely speculation as to what might have happened under other circumstances. We don't know. This witness don't know.

Mr. Grossman: I have laid a basis. I am coming back to it. This calls for what has happened in other strikes.

Presiding Inspector: Do you think we need to go into that?

Mr. Grossman: I want to lay the basis for the question that I started, and I don't know whether I have laid it fully or not.

Presiding Inspector: Why don't you ask that question?

Mr. Grossman: All right. [5436]

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. If there had been no M.W.I.U would the 1934 strike have been won or lost?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I object to that. The facts are that there was a Marine Workers Industrial Union.

Presiding Inspector: I will take his opinion for what it is worth.

A. I'm not sure and I wouldn't say that that single factor alone would result in losing the strike. I could be positive that the fact that they did exist resulted in us winning the strike and getting better conditions or a better settlement. But to say that the Marine Workers Industrial Union alone with the longshoremen as a single factor would have lost the strike, I think would be incorrect. There were other factors. A very important factor, even more important than the Marine Workers Industrial Union, was the Teamsters organization. But there is no question that what helped us organize the strike and make it tight and what, therefore, led to the Teamsters' strike and in concert with us and other groups striking in concert with us were the initial moves that began first with the longshoremen and second with the seamen, and enabled us to finally wind up the strike with definite gains and benefits and organization to the men involved.

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, in view of this witness' statement, I think it will answer counsel's question [5437] and will stop all further inquiry along that point. I think the witness has indicated that there were other people on strike and other leaders than himself in that 1934 strike. Apparently he wasn't the only one. I understand that there were some five or six thousand longshoremen on strike at the same time and all had their little part in it, too.

Mr. Gladstein: Then perhaps we had better suggest to Mr. Bridges that he testify so clearly that Mr. Del Guercio should not get the impression that Mr. Bridges claims to have been the only longshoreman on strike.

Presiding Inspector: There is no doubt about it. Go ahead.

You didn't make any motion, did you?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Del Guercio: No.

Presiding Inspector: It was an explanation of your attitude; I mean, of your position, the Government's position. Go ahead, Mr. Grossman.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. How many hours a day did the picketing go on during the strike? A. Twenty-four.

Q. Were there several shifts of pickets?

A. Four, six hours a shift.

Q. And were the shifts equal in size? [5438]

A. Generally speaking, yes, except on occasions when they would be strengthened.

Q. Did you say, Mr. Bridges, that there were one or two Governmental Commissions during this strike, Commissions or Committees?

A. There were two, really. We had the first Mediation Board, Mediation Commission that arrived at a compromise settlement that was rejected. That was prior to the strike. That was arrived at in the process of mediation in an attempt to stop the strike. That was practically unanimously rejected.

Q. By whom?

A. I wasn't any coast official at that time. I wasn't even an official of the Local. It was rejected by the——it was rejected by the coast officials in the main and practically the entire coast membership.

[5439]

Q. Who was on that Commission?

A. Judge Reynolds of Seattle; Dean Grady, at that time Dean of the University of California; and a Doctor of Economics from U.C.L.A. I forget his name. I forget his name. And that Commission functioned up until May 28, 1934 where they came,—brought forth another compromise proposal that was also rejected by the coast membership.

Q. Do you recall what that proposal was that they made during the strike?

A. Yes. It was what we call the May 28th proposal and it provided for a system of hiring through a hiring hall that still left the possibilities, the actual possibilities of discrimination wide open and still left the possibilities of the destruction of the union wide open. And it was rejected. It was rejected by every coast local. Our local was the only one that took a referendum on it. I recall that. The San Francisco Longshore Local, we insisted on a secret ballot for to reject it and to get some idea of the strength of the rank and file. It was rejected by 2400 to 80. All other locals voted it down in a voice vote.

Q. Now, was there another committee, Government committee or commission functioning during the strike?

A. That just about disbanded that commission, and then the other commission, which was the second commission, of Mr. McGrady, Archbishop Hanna and Mr. Cushing was created. [5440]

Q. Did that commission make any proposal to settle the strike?

A. It made a certain proposal from time to time, and they were generally rejected; rejected for two or three basic reasons, as I recall it.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. How was the strike finally settled?

A. By an agreement that the longshoremen return to work without discrimination because of strike activities; that all strike breakers at that time working on the waterfront or on the docks would be discharged; and that all issues in dispute would be submitted to arbitration between the representatives of the employers on a coastwise basis and the representatives of the union on a coastwise basis. In other words, recognition was completely granted to that extent, and another of our demands was no separate port agreements but one coastwise agreement. And, in addition to that, recognition was granted the seamen, and it was agreed that they would also return to work and all their demands be submitted to arbitration. And we all returned to work together on July 31st under those conditions. The only difference between the settlement for the seamen and the longshoremen was that certain groups of the seamen, the deep-water groups, had to take a vote for purposes of representation as against the Marine Workers Industrial Union or no union. In other words, it was a plebescite at that time. [5441]

Q. How long after the end of the general strike was this strike ended?

A. The general strike ended July 20th. The marine strike ended July 31st.

Q. Were negotiations being carried on with the employers for the settling of the strike and, if so, during what period?

(Testimony of Harry Renton, Bridges.)

A. All during the strike period, from prior to May 9th and from May 9th on. [5442]

Q. Did you participate in those negotiations?

A. Not until after this May 28th proposal. I was about to explain it.

The negotiations were being carried on by a committee of the coast, a coast committee. I was not a member of that committee. I had no official position in the local except as a member of the Executive Board and Chairman of the Strike Committee.

When this May 28th proposal, as we called it, was brought back the men were somewhat incensed at what the proposal contained, and insisted that I be elected to sit on the Committee.

From that time on until June 16th I sat in the negotiations.

On June 16th another agreement was executed and signed without our knowledge.

Q. Without whose knowledge?

A. Without the knowledge of the men on strike, in an attempt to break the strike. That was repudiated, and that was the time that the Joint Marine Strike Committee was formed. From then on they negotiated the strike to a settlement.

Q. After the general strike ended were there daily negotiations with the shipowners for the settlement of the strike? A. Yes.

Q. Would there be every day?

A. Yes. [5443]

Q. Were you in on those negotiations?

A. Yes.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. During the general strike were there any negotiations with the employers? A. Yes.

Q. Daily?

A. Yes. There were negotiations held with the employers, with the Mediation Board at that time sitting in with the parties.

Q. From June 16th on did you participate in every negotiation involving the longshoremen with the employers? A. Yes.

Q. Were you out of San Francisco—put it this way: Were you more than 50 miles out of San Francisco during the 1934 strike? A. No.

Q. Are you positive about that?

A. Absolutely positive about it.

Q. What is the basis of your being positive on this matter?

A. I have a very good recollection of every day of that strike. After all, the strike was brought about—there is no question but what the whole thing was somewhat of a wild affair in many respects. The men were pretty desperate. The majority of them, it is safe to say, did not realize the seriousness of that strike, although they worked very effectively [5444] in fighting, prosecuting the strike.

Mr. Myron: Is this responsive to the question?

Mr. Grossman: I think it is.

Presiding Inspector: He is giving the reason why he is so certain.

Mr. Myron: As a basis of his recollection?

Presiding Inspector: I will allow it.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. (Continuing): I distinctly recall that we met every day, practically, including every Sunday. I recall the days we had off. There was so much activity, and so many meetings, and so much to do, and so many events to fix it in my mind, that I couldn't possibly be mistaken.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did you leave San Francisco at all during that strike?

A. I went to Oakland, I went to Crockett, I made one trip to San Jose, and I went as far as Stockton. They were the only trips I made.

Q. Did you ever go farther from San Francisco than Stockton during the 1934 strike?

A. If Stockton is farther than San Jose, which it is——

Q. (Interposing) It is.

A. No. That was the farthest point that I went to.

Q. Were you in Los Angeles at any time during the 1934 strike? [5445]

A. No. I was in Los Angeles in January 1934; and I wasn't down in Los Angeles again until September, 1934.

Q. What is the best date you can give as to the time when you first joined, rather, when you joined the IWW?

Mr. Myron: The best date?

Mr. Grossman: Yes.

A. July 21, 1921.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. How did you happen to join with reference to whether someone asked you to join?

A. The main reason was on account of the attitude of the leaders of the Sailors' Strike at that time. The strike was eventually smashed. The Seamen were on strike by themselves. The attitude of the leaders was to seek no help from the longshoremen, or anybody else. The strike could only end one way, and it did, and we were smashed.

Q. What part did the IWW play in that strike?

A. At that time they had a program of greater solidarity, cooperation between the longshoremen and the seamen, support of the seamen by the longshoremen, more democratic unionism, and a more definite prosecution of the strike toward a settlement.

Q. Did the IWW at that time and place play any part in leading the strike, or attempt to lead the strike, or any part of it? [5446]

A. In attempting to lead it; yes.

Q. How large was the membership of the IWW union to which you belonged at that time?

A. I can't recall that; I don't really know. They had quite a strong movement in the south at that time.

Q. How long did you remain a member of the IWW?

A. I think until the end of '21 or the early part of 1922.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Why did you drop out, if you did drop out, of the IWW?

Presiding Inspector: Hasn't he told that earlier to you?

Mr. Grossman: Only partially.

Presiding Inspector: I think he told that this morning.

Mr. Grossman: I am not sure that it is as clear as it might be.

Presiding Inspector: I thought it was very clear. You may ask, if you wish to, if you think this is something helpful.

A. The organiaztion was syndicalistic and anarchistic. Its method of operation allowed too much for provocative action. Its aims were pretty general, except in a specific situation when there were a certain set of facts at hand, and its aims were pretty general. Although they were the organization at that time that had a wonderful record that impressed me, and they did a tremendous amount of work, as a [5447] staid, permanent organization —at least I thought I knew enough about trade unionism to know it wasn't going to last very long. And I disagreed entirely with the attitude regarding no political action, because I had enough knowledge of trade unionism, even in Australia, to know that no union could keep any gains it made by economic action without some form of political action.

Of course, the IWW was always strongly against any form of political action. They finally got so syndicalistic and anarchistic, as I said, that nobody knew what was heads or tails of the outfit—everybody was a General.

Q. Mr. Bridges, I am going to hand you a book which, for the record, is a "History of Criminal Syndicalism Legislation in the United States," which appears to be a thesis of some kind, perhaps a doctrinal thesis, by Eldridge Foster Dowell, printed in 1939 by the Johns Hopkins Press, and call your specific attention to Chapter 1.

I will ask the question after I have shown it to counsel.

(The books referred to was passed to Mr. Del Guercio.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Are you referring to just the first paragraph?

Mr. Grossman: The entire Chapter.

Mr. Del Guercio: The entire Chapter?

Mr. Grossman: I think, when you hear the reference, you will se there is no need for you to read it all now, but you [5448] have a right to do that, of course.

Mr. Del Guercio: I don't want to read the whole thing unless——

Presiding Inspector: This book is a history of criminal syndicalism——

Mr. Grossman: (Interposing) It is a history of criminal syndicalism legislation, but Chapter 1 deals with the theories, practices and doctrines of the——

Presiding Inspector: Of the IWW.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

You don't need any more than Mr. Bridges himself has given on that, do you?

Mr. Grossman: There is more I want.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. I want to show you this, Mr. Bridges, and ask you whether you have read Chapter 1 of this book?

A. (Examining book): Yes, I have read this.

Q. Will you state whether Chapter 1 of that book correctly states the theories and doctrines, official theories and doctrines, of the IWW as you understoood them at the time you joined the organization?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I object to the question on a number of grounds: First, the book that he has shown the witness—if I may have it for just a moment, Mr. Bridges—is a book entitled "A History of Criminal Syndicalism Legislation in the United States," by Eldridge Foster Dowell, [5449] Ph. D., Instructor in History and Political Science, Hollins College, printed in Baltimore by the Johns Hopkins Press in 1939. It purports to state the theories, practices and doctrines of the IWW. It purports to be what the author of the book thought the doctrines, practices and theories of the IWW were at that time, as he saw them, in 1939.

I haven't read the book. This is the first time I have seen it.

For those reasons I can't understand how this witness could possibly have any——

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Grossman: (Interposing) We don't want to rush this.

Mr. Del Guercio: Let me finish—I can't see what possible bearing even an affirmative answer of this witness would have on the doctrines, practices and theories of the IWW as shown by the literature, by their own literature, that is, the literature of the IWW.

Presiding Inspector: I don't see how we can receive that any more than any other history.

Mr. Grossman: May I say this: As I understand the law of evidence generally, a man may take what he believes to be facts at a certain time, or it is possible also to show him a book, or a document, which purports to state those things, and ask him whether it correctly states, or agrees with his state of mind. [5450]

Presiding Inspector: I never heard of such a rule.

Mr. Grossman: I understand that I can, and it will certainly save time for this reason, your Honor. I don't want this rushed, and I certainly want your Honor, before this is permitted, if there is any question about it, to read it over and see,—

Presiding Inspector: Even in a court in a medical case you can only confront a witness on cross examination by recognized authorities.

Mr. Grossman: Let me finish my statement. This book purports to be an academic and scientific statement, this Chapter, at least, as to the IWW. It purports to be that. I am not vouching for the academic standing of the author. It is one of the few books we have been able to find that purports to do that sort of thing. It purports to state what were the official doctrines and theories of the IWW at certain times. It purports to quote from their official resolutions and the convention decisions, and other things that would be correctly stated.

We are introducing it, not as the author's views, but as the doctrines of that organization. If Mr. Bridges agrees with the author, and to the extent that he does, that those were the doctrines as he understood them, quite obviously what Mr. Bridges thought the IWW believed in—whether it did or not doesn't matter—but what he thought it believed in at the [5451] time he joined it is material to his state of mind, quite obviously.

Mr. Del Guercio: On that statement alone it isn't material.

Mr. Grossman: You can answer my statement when I finish.

I say, what Mr. Bridges believes of the doctrines of the organization is material and what weight you give the evidence is another matter.

I can go through that point by point, and footnote by footnote, and ask Mr. Bridges, "Did you understand this legislation had been passed at this convention?" or "What is its position on sabotage?" which I think is an undue waste of time because I think if he has read it—if counsel has a chance to read it—and he states that the description which it purports to give of the doctrines of the organization in 1920 and 1921, when he joined, correctly represents what he thought it was, I think it is relevant for that purpose.

Presiding Inspector: I don't suppose his belief as to what they represented is material.

Mr. Grossman: Let me give you an example: Let us suppose——

Presiding Inspector: It may be the statute is perfectly clear on that.

Mr. Grossman: Let me state this: Let us suppose, now, that the Government should be able to establish—I don't [5452] agree that they can, and I am not making any statement on that at this time—but let's suppose they should be able to establish that the doctrines of the IWW were such as to make—well put it this way—such as to constitute that phrase which is descriptive in the statute. Let us suppose they should find they believed in sabotage. Let us suppose we could establish that if the IWW held those doctrines, believed in sabotage, it was not known by 98 per cent of their membership, and not known by Mr. Bridges. Are you stating the statute should be interpreted in such a way to deport a man for belonging to an organization which has a theory which he didn't recognize to be true, but, in fact, he recognized the contrary, and which wasn't recognized to be true by 99 per cent of the membership? I would say Congress certainly never intended the statute to be so interpreted.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Now, quite obviously, as will appear from the testimony, Mr. Bridges believed that the IWW, when he belonged to it, had certain views. He didn't believe that the organization believed in sabotage; he didn't believe that it held certain other views that might be considered in violation of this statute. If he held those beliefs, that is, if he felt the organization didn't believe in sabotage, and if he thought the organization didn't believe in these other things, it is certainly relevant and within a reasonable interpretation of the statute.

If it is relevant I think this is the shortest way to prove [5453] it. I much prefer that, and I think your Honor should proceed in taking what purports to be an academic statement of it, and asking Mr. Bridges as to the whole statement, instead of footnote by footnote, and resolution by resolution, whether it agrees with what he understood at the time.

Mr. Del Guercio: If the Court please, in the first place, of course the authenticity of this book hasn't been established. You will recall the difficulties the Government had in getting these documents in, of the IWW, in evidence.

Now, here he is handing the Alien here a book and would want us to believe that it was written by so and so, and that it contains such and such a thing, without offering any proof of its authenticity.

Regardless of all that counsel forgets what the Alien is charged with in regard to the IWW.

The Alien is not charged with belonging to an organization that believes in, advises, advocates and teaches sabotage, or that the Alien belonged to an organization that advised, believed in, and advocated the unlawful destruction of property.

He is charged with—I can't repeat the exact language without consulting the charge lodged—with belonging to an organiaztion that distributed literature advocating and advising the unlawful destruction of property and sabotage.

Now, regardless of what this witness here may have believed the doctrines of the IWW have been at that time, that is immaterial in view of those charges. [5454]

The best answer to counsel is the case of Tisi vs. Tod, the decision having been handed down by the Supreme Court not so long ago.

Mrs. King: Tisi v. Tod?

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes. I don't know what the citation is off-hand.

If I recollect the facts correctly in this case the alien was arrested, having been found distributing Communistic literature. The evidence at the hearing showed that he was unable to read English and, therefore, could not understand the contents of the literature, and did not know the contents of the literature that he was distributing. He was charged, among other charges, if I recall correctly, with distributing Communistic literature and belonging to an organization——

Presiding Inspector: Was this a court case or a deportation case?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Del Guercio: A deportation case.

The Supreme Court held that it did not make any difference whether or not he knew the contents of the literature he was distributing.

I think that case is very apropos here.

Presiding Inspector: I would like to read that case.

Mrs. King: If your Honor please——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) I don't purport to state all of the facts in the case accurately.

[5455]

Presiding Inspector: No.

Mrs. King: In that case I understand the holding of Mr. Justice Brandeis—I believe the case is 263 U. S., but I am not quite sure of the citation—the question was, rather, whether the Immigration Service, then the Secretary of Labor, was correct in its conclusion that the Alien really did know what he was distributing. I mean it wasn't only a question of knowledge, but this Alien testified that he could not read it. It was a question of fact as to whether the Secretary of Labor could hold that he did understand it.

I do not think that the case is at all clear for the proposition that regardless of whether he understood it the statute made his deportation mandatory.

It is interesting, although perhaps not entirely relevant, that after the decision of the United States Supreme Court the Warrant of Arrest against Catona Tisi was cancelled and he, Tisi, is still in the United States. In view of the decision of Mr. Justice Brandeis the Labor Department changed its view and it shows that this is an Administrative proposition and not a Judicial one. We are now in the Administrative phase of the case, such a deportation case. [5456]

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: That is something that you can argue to the Attorney General, if I should advise the Attorney General that Mr. Bridges was a member of this organization these many years ago and that his idea of the organization is just as he stated it. But that wouldn't be for this tribunal here, this advisory tribunal.

Mrs. King: We are trying to get into this record for your determination——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) You are quite right, Mrs. King.

Mrs. King: (Continuing) ——and for the determination of the Attorney General the character of the IWW, and we believe that this is a fair representation. But we also feel that the Alien's own views, Mr. Bridges' own views of the theories of the IWW are relevant. I believe it was in the Thomas Trust case that Secretary Post determined —and I think that case is footnoted to Skeffington v. Katzeff, or perhaps Judge Anderson's opinion in the lower court in the Collyer v. Skeffington case —that automatic membership in an organization did not constitute membership within the meaning of the statute, and it seems to me that what Mr. Bridges thinks of the organization has a bearing.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

There has never been, as far as I know, a decided ruling to the effect that where an alien has no knowledge of the character of the organization that he is nevertheless under the statute [5457] subject to deportation.

Now, we may be wrong on that theory, but we are at least entitled to make a record as to Mr. Bridges' views on the Industrial Workers of the World.

Presiding Inspector: But he has already given them, hasn't he?

Mrs. King: I don't believe so. He has given his views as to why he got out of it, but not of its philosophy while he was in it.

Presiding Inspector: He told why he got in and why he got out.

Mrs. King: Yes. Both of those things he has told, but still hasn't told what the organization in its general principles and theories stood for. And also with reference to Mr. Del Guercio's position, that it may have distributed literature, it is not my understanding of the meaning of the statute that, if an organization has one piece of literature which it distributed at one time, which an alien has knowlege of, that every alien who is ever connected with that organization, past or present, is for that reason deportable.

It seems to me that under our constitutional form of government and our right of free speech and free assembly that that is an incorrect interpretation of the statute. Now, I may be wrong as to that, but

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

I still maintain the right to make a record on this. And I don't feel that the general prin- [5458] ciples of the IWW have been gone into, and I should like to suggest to your Honor that before tomorrow it may be possible for you to look at this and see the difference in the character of the material contained in this chapter with reference to the general principles of organization rather than the material which Mr. Bridges has suggested about the organization, which is purely of a trade union character and which had nothing to do with its general underlying principles, and particularly with its views on the subject of sabotage and the unlawful destruction of property which is involved in the statute that we now have under consideration.

Mr. Gladstein: Could I suggest, your Honor, it is ten minutes——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) May I say that this book here was written in 1939. Bridges was a member of this IWW in 1921. It would be a strange coincidence, strange indeed, if this man here, Mr. Hopkins, or whoever wrote this book, would in 1939 expound the same theories about the IWW that Mr. Bridges had when he first landed in this country.

Presiding Inspector: Well, let me see this book.

Mr. Gladstein: May I suggest, since it is ten after four, that your Honor take this book overnight and look at the first chapter, with the understanding that we are not offering this book as proof of what the IWW actually stood for, because we don't know whether this man who wrote it claims to be an authority [5459] on the IWW as a member of it or anything of that sort. But at least for the purpose of framing this question which was asked, whether that discussion reflects in any way—now, it may not or it may only in part—reflects in any way the opinions and beliefs of the organization at the time. It is simply a suggestion that you examinine it before you rule on it.

Since it is past the adjournment hour anyway and no harm could result from your taking under consideration until tomorrow morning the passing on this question——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Oh, I will read the first chapter.

Mr. Goodwin: Your Honor——

Presiding Inspector: Just a minute.

Mr. Goodwin: I was going to suggest this, your Honor, if I may. If they want to ask him what his beliefs were or what his ideas were at that time, that's one thing. We think that is entirely immaterial. But to have him look at the book and say, Did that represent—a book, of course, which he had never seen—Does that represent what your ideas were at that time? I think that that is too far-fetched.

If they want to examine him in regard to what his ideas of what the IWW actually were, I think that those questions should be subject to the objection that that is entirely immaterial. But, in any event, this sort of a question, whether that particular book represented what he thought, is entirely, [5460] it seems to me, illogical and improper and inadmissible.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: You don't want me to read these footnotes? Only the text?

Mr. Grossman: I think you will find in some of the footnotes, which you will easily see, more specific references to the resolutions and decisions of the IWW than the text. But I am sure, running through the text, you will find which of the footnotes are relevant.

Presiding Inspector: There are a great many factual matters. They certainly wouldn't be competent.

Mr. Grossman: That is right. You won't find much relevant in this book.

Mr. Del Guercio: While you are reading, you might also read the pamphlets that the Government has offered.

Mr. Grossman: We have no objection to that.

Presiding Inspector: I know something about them.

All right. We will take a recess until tomorrow morning at ten o'clock.

(Whereupon, at 4:10 o'clock p.m. an adjournment was taken until Wednesday, May 28, 1941, at 10:00 o'clock a.m.) [5461]

Court Room 276,
Federal Building,
San Francisco, California

Met, pursuant to adjournment, at 10:00 A. M.

[5462]

PROCEEDINGS

Presiding Inspector: This is off the record.

(Remarks outside the record.)

Presiding Inspector: Now, you may proceed, Mr. Grossman.

HARRY RENTON BRIDGES

called as a witness in his own behalf, having been previously duly sworn, testified further as follows:

Mr. Grossman: Your Honor, I would like to offer in evidence the letter of Mr. Meyer, giving certain information on the statutes covering the WPA, which was in response to a request made when he testified here. It is a letter dated May 26, 1941, addressed to you.

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to it being accepted in evidence on the ground that there is a regulation of the statutes.

Presiding Inspector: It doesn't add anything to the statute.

Mr. Grossman: I will offer it for identification, if there is any question, as that will do the job.

Presiding Inspector: It may be marked for identification.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

(The letter referred to was marked for identification as Alien's Exhibit No. 30.)

Mr. Grossman: Your Honor, I wonder if you have made up your mind in any way on the question that arose just before we adjourned with reference to this Chapter in the book that [5463] I asked Mr. Bridges about?

Presiding Inspector: Yes, I have. What was the question?

Mr. Grossman: The question was, in substance: Does Chapter 1 of this book, purporting to show the official position of the IWW at the time you joined the IWW, correctly state what you believed at that time was the official poistion of the IWW?

Presiding Inspector: I will exclude it. I will exclude the question under the objection of Mr. Del Guercio.

Mr. Goodwin: There is something you said about that——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) He has already ruled.

Presiding Inspector: The witness may himself tell—in fact, I find nothing in the book of any significance.

Direct Examination (Resumed)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Mr. Bridges, do you now believe in sabotage?

A. No.

Q. Do you now believe in the unlawful damage, injury, or destruction of property? A. No.

Q. Have you ever believed in sabotage?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you ever believed in the unlawful damage, injury or destruction of property?

A. No. [5464]

Mr. Goodwin: Suppose that it has——

Mr. Myron: (Interposing) Just a minute.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Mr. Bridges, at the time you joined the IWW did you believe that it was the policy of the IWW to favor sabotage?

A. I didn't; I knew it wasn't. [5465]

Q. At the time you joined the IWW did you believe it was the policy of the IWW to favor unlawful damage, injury or destruction of property?

A. No.

Q. Mr. Bridges, a Mr. Diner testified in this hearing. You were present, were you not, during the entire testimony. A. I was.

Q. Among other things Mr. Diner stated in his testimony that he had met you for the first time at your Union office. Will you state whether that is true or not true according to your best recollection.

A. I have no recollection of such meeting.

Q. Do you state that no such meeting did take place?

A. A lot of people come to my Union office, or did at that time. I heard his testimony. I have no recollection.

Q. Mr. Diner also stated that he had once met you at your home. Is that statement true or not true?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. He has never been in my home. I am positive of that.

Q. Mr. Diner stated that after meeting you at your home he met you again at your Union office. Can you state whether that statement is true or not true?

A. It's possible. I have——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Shouldn't he give his own testimony on this rather than——

[5466]

Mr. Grossman: (Interposing) I think I have a right to negative as well, your Honor, so that there is no question about the negation of the testimony of the Government. I don't want it to be said that perhaps his testimony doesn't completely cover——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) It is not as effective as though he gave his own testimony.

Mr. Grossman: I intend to go into that, but I want to negative it also.

Presiding Inspector: We can't go into it twice. If you negative it that is all there is to it. Go ahead. I mean, you can't go into it on account of the delay that it would take, not because it wouldn't be material.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did you attend a Communist Convention in Fresno in December of 1934? A. No.

Q. Did you attend a Communist Convention in Fresno at any time? A. No.

Q. Have you attended a Communist Convention anywhere at any time? A. No.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Did you attend any convention on or around Christmas time of 1934 in Fresno? [5467]

Mr. Del Guercio: That has been asked and answered., I object to it.

Presiding Inspector: May I have the question, please?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Presiding Inspector: I will take it again. This is specific. I say, this is a specific question.

Mr. Grossman: This is different.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did you attend any convention in Fresno around Christmas time in 1934?

A. I was never in Fresno in my life until late in '35.

Q. Will you state what your relationship with Mr. Diner has been, if any?

A. So slight I can't even recall it. I knew him when he came into the Court room, but that's all.

Q. Do you remember any conversation that you have ever had with Mr. Diner?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, if your Honor please, unless it is something at issue in the case. "Any conversation."

Presiding Inspector: Well, I will take it as bearing on [5468] the general question.

A. I remember a dispute once that that Union was in and I remember a delegation coming down to see us to seek help. I have a recollection that Diner might have been in the delegation, but I am not positive. I mean, coming down to my Union office, on the waterfront seeking help from our Union on the waterfront.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: Can you remember when that was?

The Witness: I'm trying to. I think that it's—it would be, I think it was following the 1934 strike. During the——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) What is your best recollection?

The Witness: Well, the reason I can recall what the incident was, was during the intense period of organization after the strike and this particular Union or this particular delegation that somehow I connect Diner up with, was seeking help on some Union dispute, and it would be about that time.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. In December of 1934 did you hold any Union position?

A. I was President of the Local Union.

Q. Did you hold any other Union position at that time?

A. No. Committeeman—I might have been a member of a delegated body or member of a committee, but any salaried official position, that was the only position. [5469]

Q. Were you in New York in the winter of 1934-35—to be more specific, let us say between October 1 and April 30, October 1, 1934 and April 30, 1935?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. No. The first time I was in New York since 1921 was July, 1935?

Q. At any time have you been in the building which Mr. Thompson stated he was elevator operator in?

A. Never, never in my life.

Q. How did you happen to go to New York in July of 1935?

A. To attend an International Convention of the International Longshoremen's Association. [5470]

Q. Mr. Bridges, have you at any time, before appearing here, made any examination of your activities during this period of October '34 to April 1935, which tend to show where you were during the various days included in that period?

A. I have.

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to the form of the question. I think the witness should be asked the question, rather than what examination he made.

Presiding Inspector: I will take that.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. What examination has been made, Mr Bridges?

A. I have examined various records, official records, minutes, correspondence, and so forth, dealing with all my activities over that period of time.

Mr. Del Guercio: I move that the answer be stricken, if your Honor please. If the witness is testifying regarding any records he should produce the records.

Presiding Inspector: I will let it stand.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Will you state what is the largest—withdraw that. Will you state what is the longest period of time which you are unable to account for in that examination you have made for the period from October 1, 1934 to April 30, 1935?

A. I have official union records to show I wasn't away from San Francisco more than any two days at one time. [5471]

Mr. Del Guercio: I move that the answer be stricken and that the records be produced.

The Witness: I might say, of course, the records I refer to, they are a lot of records, union minutes, correspondence; they are dues receipt books, they are various accounts of trips I have taken that show where I was, and any specific date at that time, any two days all during that time, with the exception maybe of a Sunday, any specific date that is named I can show that I was in San Francisco by the official records.

Mr. Del Guercio: I still move that the answer be stricken.

Presiding Inspector: I think I will let it stand.

Mr. Del Guercio: What?

Presiding Inspector: I will let it stand. We are ruling rather liberally here, you know.

Mr. Del Guercio: The records, from the witness' own mouth, are available.

Presiding Inspector: Your objection stands. You may cross examine on it.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Have you ever gone to New York by plane?

A. I have.

Q. When was the first time?

A. July 1935.

Q. You are sure of that?

A. Positive of it. [5472]

Q. How many times in your life have you been in 121 Haight Street, San Francisco, or, rather, a building which has that number?

A. To the best of my recollection, two.

Q. Will you describe those two occasions?

A. Two occasions in 1934; one, the first time, in connection with an investigation into the aid offered by the International Labor Defense; and later on, around the end of May, or it might have been in the beginning of July, during one of the riots on the waterfront, as they called them at that time, when a lot of people were shot and beaten.

Only those two occasions. I have no recollection ——As a matter of fact, I am certain that I was not there any other time.

Q. Do you know whether 121 Haight Street was the headquarters of the Communist Party on those two occasions?

A. I don't think it was.

Q. Have you any recollection of ever being at the home of Dawn Lovelace? A. Yes.

Q. Will you describe the circumstances surrounding your going to her home?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. I went there with a couple of other members of our union to have her do some typing.

Q. Was Hugh Adams one of those? [5473]

A. Hughie Adams was the man that took me.

Q. Did you know Dawn Lovelace before that?

A. Never met her; never met her since until she appeared here.

Q. Whose suggestion was it that you go to her house? A. Adams'.

Q. How did he happen to suggest—did you ask him for something, or for suggestions as to someone?

A. I don't remember. I needed some work done at that time. I needed to have some typing done. It was at night. I think I was leaving early in the morning and I wanted to leave the material behind, or something like that.

Q. Can you fix the date of that?

A. The date she fixed would be about correct; the week of August 12th to the 16th, because we were holding a District Executive Board meeting, as they called it, in Portland at that time, shortly after I had been to Washington, D. C.

Q. Do you know whether Richard Lovelace was there that evening?

A. I don't remember really.

Q. Do you know Richard Lovelace?

A. No; I can't place him at all.

Q. Do you know whether James Murphy was there that evening?

A. I don't recall that. [5474]

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Do you know whether you have ever met James Murphy?

A. I have no recollection of meeting him.

Q. Do you know whether you ever met Richard Lovelace?

A. I have no recollection of ever meeting him. It is possible he was there that night; I don't recall it.

Q. Do you remember whether any telegram was sent by you during the time that you were at Dawn Lovelace's house, or shortly afterwards?

A. I sent a telegram at that time.

Q. When you say "at that time," what time is included?

A. I mean during the time I was in Portland; but whether I sent it that night or not I can't recall. I can check and find the date that that telegram was sent, I believe. But I know the circumstances surrounding the telegram and why it was sent, and who it was sent to.

Q. Will you please explain to whom it was sent, and why it was sent, and what it said?

A. It was sent to the Acting President of the local in San Francisco during my absence, a man by the name of Jack Creary—C-r-e-a-r-y—and it had to do with an issue that we were discussing on the Executive Board; and it was my instructions to the local to participate in a vote. The Executive Board had ruled the other way and instructed the local in a different way under the threat of revocation of their charter. [5475]

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Which Executive Board?

A. The District Executive Board at that time. The issue was concerning a boycott we had on all cargo going to British Columbia due to a strike up there where we had voted by secret ballot not to handle any cargo destined for British Columbia. All the maritime unions, through the organization that embraced the maritime unions, the Maritime Federation, were going to vote, and they were going to vote as a Federation. Our particular union took the position that we should vote separately and apart from the others. I instructed the local to vote with the other unions as a part of the Federation, and the telegram was my instructions to the local President, who was acting as President in my absence. [5476]

Q. When had you first taken the position which was expressed in the telegram?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, your Honor, as immaterial, what was the statement.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it. I think it is an explanation of the transaction.

A. Back in Washington, D. C., before I ever returned to Portland.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Approximately how long before?

A. A week or ten days. And also on the Executive Board meeting, I think it's a matter of record in the official minutes as to my position, where I was recorded as to my position as against the other members of the Executive Board on that matter.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Do you remember any more about going to Dawn Lovelace's house than you have now testified to?

A. No. It was purely incidental and the only purpose was for the purpose I stated.

Q. Did you seek or receive any advice from anyone at Dawn Lovelace's house that evening?

A. I can't see anybody around there that could give me any advice on that subject matter.

Q. Did you seek any?

A. No. I don't seek advice on those matters.

[5477]

Q. Have you ever sought trade union or other types of advice from James Murphy?

A. Never.

Q. Have you ever sought trade union or other types of advice from Dick Lovelace?

A. Never.

Q. Have you ever received trade union or other types of instructions from either of those men?

A. No.

Q. Do you recall Mr. Kelley's testifying here?

A. Yes.

Q. To refresh your recollection he stated in substance that he was present in the hotel room of Dietrich when you were also present and, in substance, you stated according to him something like this to Dietrich: That "someday you'll be glad to belong to a 'Commie' outfit." Do you remember the—withdraw that. Did anything like what Mr. Kelley testified to take place?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. It's entirely possible. If you mean was I ever in Dietrich's room having a drink or more, or more than a drink, it is certainly possible. I can distinctly recall many such occasions.

Q. Now, is it possible that you made any such statement?

A. It's possible that many such statements were made with a little different twist or a little different construc- [5478] tion on them. Dietrich was the type of person—he was well known for it—that was always wise-cracking and kidding about the Communist Party.

Mr. Myron: Is this responsive, your Honor?

Mr. Grossman: Yes, this is responsive.

Presiding Inspector: I think so. Broadly so, not very closely responsive.

Go ahead.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Continue.

Presiding Inspector: It will only take time.

A. It was not unusual. As a matter of fact, it was a regular thing for Dietrich to make statements such as "Well, I think I'll join the Communist Party today." Or, "How about us both going up and joining?" Or he would introduce me to somebody and say "Meet this Communist. He has left his bombs home today." Over a period of time that I was associated with Dietrich many, many such remarks were made like that. The text of the remarks that I heard here, I don't recall that any such remarks and particularly that form.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Will you state whether you made any such remark as is attributed to you by Mr. Kelley seriously, if you made it? [5479]

Mr. Myron: I object to that, your Honor.

Mr. Grossman: He is able to state from his state of mind whether he could have made such remark seriously.

Presiding Inspector: I think I will take it. There is no other way that that can be shown.

A. I don't think I made such a remark in the first place. If I did, it was certainly not seriously.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. At that time did you belong to any Communist outfit? A. No.

Q. Or any Communist organization?

A. No.

Q. Or the Communist Party? A. No.

Q. Do you remember having any contacts with Mr. Kelley or any representative of his on the question of a CIO Union for hotel employees?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you state what you recall on that question?

A. I received at least one visit and one telephone call from Mr. Kelley. I received a letter also, as I recollect it, but I have been unable to find it in our files. I also received a visit from a woman closely connected with Mr. Kelley, who told me that she was working with him on the [5480] question of certain arrangements and understandings he wanted to make.

Q. What happened in the various conversations you had with Mr. Kelley?

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, your Honor, conversations with whom?

The Reporter: Mr. Kelley.

Mr. Grossman: Mr. Kelley.

A. Kelley was running a second-rate hotel. His hotel help was organized in the American Federation of Labor. He was complaining bitterly that he should not be required to pay the same amount of wages or work the help the same amount of hours as the larger first-rate hotels; that it was unfair to him. And he came to me with a proposition, and the woman likewise, that the Hotel Owners Association that he belonged to could exercise such influence to put all the employees in the second and third-rate hotels in the CIO Union if I would grant a charter to such Union, on the condition that the wages and the hours for such employees in second and third-rate hotels would be lower and longer. The proposition was refused.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Who refused it? A. I did.

Q. Definitely?

A. Very definitely, and notified the American Federation [5481] of Labor Union, just as to what he was trying to accomplish up there.

Q. Do you remember where this telephone conversation took place?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. In our International Union Office in Seattle, Washington, Arcade Building.

Q. Do you remember where, if anywhere, you received a letter from him—no, I mean, a visit from him?

A. In that same office.

Q. Mr. Bridges, do you remember the testimony of Mr. Wilmot with respect to an alleged meeting in the Lennox Hotel? In substance, Mr. Wilmot stated that you were present at the beginning of a meeting or just before a meeting began. Were you present at the beginning of a meeting or just before a meeting in the Lennox Hotel, as described by Mr. Wilmot? A. No.

Q. Were you present at any meeting in the Lennox Hotel in the month of April, 1938 at which there was discussed or was to be discussed the question of removing Brost from his position in the CIO in Oregon?

A. No. I wasn't in Portland at that time.

Q. Did you ever ask Robert Wilmot whether he had been a Trotzkyite?

Presiding Inspector: A what?

Mr. Grossman: Trotzkyite. That was the testimony of [5482] Robert Wilmot.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, if your Honor please——

Mr. Grossman: (Interposing) The objection is apparently to Mr. Wilmot's testimony because that is his. I am just negativing it or explaining it or discussing his testimony.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: If you say there was such a question——

Mr. Grossman: (Interposing) Oh, yes, there was. I have taken over the language of Mr. Wilmot's testimony.

Presiding Inspector: All right. You may ask Mr. Bridges about it.

A. I'm not sure. I might have.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Can you explain why you say you "might have"?

A. I think he stated he came from Minneapolis and had been active in the labor movement there, and the last person I had a little experience with that came from the same place and had been active there and was also a newspaperman, why, he was a Trotzkyite and pretty much of a disrupter and wrecker.

Q. What was his name?

A. Barney Maas.

Q. And what was your contact with Barney Maas?

A. He was the editor of the Voice of the Federation until he was removed. [5483]

Q. Why was he removed?

Mr. Myron: Is it material, your Honor?

Mr. Grossman: Certainly it is material. This is a very strange circumstance. The Government apparently thinks it is important—I don't know why or how, but apparently they think it is important—that Mr. Bridges is charged by Mr. Wilmot with asking someone whether he is a Trotzkyite. Now, therefore they object when I show that if Mr. Bridges discussed that with him he doesn't recall it.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: I have allowed it.

Mr. Grossman: The objection has been made. Are we free to go into this, your Honor?

Presiding Inspector: In respect to conversations?

Mr. Grossman: No. With respect to the experience Mr. Bridges had with a man who claimed he was a Trotzkyite. That is what I mean.

Presiding Inspector: To define what Mr. Bridges thought was meant by—what was it? A Trotzkyite?

Mr. Grossman: Thought of Trotzkyites and why.

Presiding Inspector: It is a little remote, but I will take it.

Mr. Grossman: It is no more remote than the Government testimony, your Honor. They brought it in. If it is remote they shouldn't have been permitted to introduce such testimony. [5484]

Presiding Inspector: No. I think the conversation with Mr. Maas is a little—is his name Maas?

Mr. Grossman: Maas.

Presiding Inspector: I think that is a little remote. Does Mr. Maas' name occur in any way?

Mr. Grossman: Yes.

Mr. Myron: He has been asked the question and he has answered the question. Apparently now they are going into some sort of conversation he had with some other individual.

Mr. Grossman: I want to go into what there was about Mr. Maas that caused Mr. Bridges to form what opinion he then had of Trotzkyites. That is all.

Presiding Inspector: This is really to define what Mr. Bridges meant by the word "Trotzkyite."

Mr. Myron: The question was, Did he have such a conversation? And the witness said "he might have."

Mr. Grossman: That is not the question.

Presiding Inspector: The purpose of the question is as I have indicated. To define the word "Trotzkyite" as used by Mr. Bridges.

I will take it.

Mr. Grossman: The question was, Why was he removed as editor of the Voice of the Federation.

Presiding Inspector: Well, I don't think we ought to [5485] go into the capacity of Barney Maas.

Mr. Grossman: Because his removal and the cause of his removal are behind the opinion of Mr. Bridges. I can ask him the preliminary question and I will ask it this way:

Q. Did the removal of Mr. Maas as editor of the Voice of the Federation and the reason for such removal have anything to do with the opinion you held in 1938 on Trotzkyites? A. It did.

Q. Why was Mr. Maas removed?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. He was the editor of our Maritime paper, the Voice of the Federation. He first of all procured the job under forged references and credentials. When I say, "forged" I mean that he presented references showing that he had worked on other newspapers. The check-up revealed that he had never worked there.

After coming in, or after becoming the editor, much of the stuff he printed in the paper was very disruptive, and eventually in the middle of the strike he almost wrecked our strike by erroneous news reports that had a very bad effect on our entire strike before it was half over, such as making reports that the strike was about to end, that settlements had been reached. Not only were there no settlements in sight but some of the Unions hadn't even met with the employers to negotiate a settlement, and it had a very bad effect all the way around. [5486]

It ultimately resulted in us taking action to give him a trial and move to remove him from his post. He resigned before the decision was put into effect. And his history in this connection is well known and he used to announce himself as a follower of Trotzky, although that had nothing to do in this particular instance with his removal. He wasn't removed because he was a Trotzkyite, but removed because of his disruptive and practically strike-breaking activities in this respect. [5487]

Presiding Inspector: I think you have gone pretty far afield. You have now proved he didn't have anything to do with Trotzkyism. I suppose Trotzkyism is a well recognized left wing branch of the Communists.

Mr. Grossman: Under the theory of the Government's position, and of course I have to interpret it myself because they didn't explain it, they think that, make the point that one must be a Communist to oppose Trotzkyites, because some people have a theory that one must be a Communist to oppose Trotzkyites; otherwise there would be no sense in the Government asking the question.

That being their theory I intend to show that Mr. Bridges' opposition was based on the fact that Mr. Maas, who announced himself as a Trotzkyite, took a very disruptive role, played a very disruptive role, as editor of this publication, and was removed because of that; and the attitude of Mr. Bridges toward such people is based on such trade union experience, and not, as the Government would apparently contend, based on the fact that they allege Mr. Bridges is a Communist.

Presiding Inspector: Trotzky is a Communist.

Mr. Gladstein: What?

Presiding Inspector: Trotzky is a Communist.

Mr. Gladstein: I don't think he is any longer.

Presiding Inspector: He isn't now, because he is dead, but his criticism of the Russian Government is that they are not [5488] Communists; that they have given way and become State Socialists.

Trotzky is, or was a Communist. I think we can take judicial notice of that, I suppose.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did you ever tell Wilmot to use the Labor New Dealer, of which he was editor, to get Helmig —H-e-l-m-i-g—and Hartung—H-a-r-t-u-n-g?

Mr. Gladstein: That is H-e-l-m-i-c-k.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Will you answer the question?

A. I believe I did——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): Will you read the question?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. I believe I did, in the sense that I instructed him to use the paper to expose their activities.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. What were their activities you wanted exposed?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I will object to questions along this line.

Mr. Grossman: I call your Honor's attention to the testimony of Wilmot on that question. Mr. Wilmot attempted to create the implication—you will find it in the same sentence where he testified—that Mr. Bridges told him to get Helmick and Hartung because they were waging an anti-Communist campaign there. [5489] If you will find the reference you will see that is true. Though he didn't state it too clearly, he intended to convey the implication that Bridges was out to get these men—that was the implication—because they were attacking the Communist Party.

We intend to show that Mr. Bridges might have said that, because he was interested in exposing their activities, but we wish to show why he was interested in exposing them and why he opposed them, and it wasn't the reason implied by Mr. Wilmot.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

Mr. Del Guercio: It wasn't Mr. Wilmot's implication. It was Mr. Wilmot's testimony.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

A. Their general activities—they were very disruptive, they were breaking the union, they were embarking on all forms of action that could have no successful results, could only result in defeat. They were very definitely placing our particular organization in many positions that were untenable, and the net result of the whole thing was that the movement, the labor movement in that part of the State, that is the Columbia River basin, was falling to pieces because of the activities of the group headed by these two people, Helmick and Hartung, and still is for that matter.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Has any convention of the International Longshoremen's [5490] and Warehousemen's Union condemned the activities of Helmick and Hartung, or the group they led?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, no time and place given.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: I will take it. I suppose it is to show the general picture.

A. Two conventions.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Which conventions and when?

A. The '40 and the '41 Conventions; 1940 and 1941 Conventions.

Q. Of which organization?

A. International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union.

Q. The national organization or the district organization?

A. The international organization.

Q. Did Mr. Helmick and Mr. Hartung carry on any activities that affected the longshoremen in Portland or in any other parts of the coast?

A. Very definitely; at numerous times.

Q. What were these activities that affected the longshoremen?

A. Well, particularly a disruptive form of activity was, for example, in a small logging or lumber camp a hundred miles inland from the waterfront, they would declare a strike. They would not even have sufficient strength to pull a majority of the [5491] workers in that plant out on strike against the plant. They could only pull a minority. Then they would declare the products of that particular plant or mill as unfair. They would remove their picket line 100 miles inland down on the waterfront and demand that we refuse to handle that cargo. It happened on numerous occasions where, on more than one occasion, the entire port was locked out for days because of activity of that kind; and because, in trying to support such things, we would be in violation of our contract and as a result would be locked out; even approaching on one distinct occasion, I can recall, a coastwise lockout.

Q. In April of 1938 what was your position with reference to the continuation of Mr. Brost in his CIO position in Oregon?

A. I was in favor of his continuation.

Q. What was his position?

A. He was a field representative attached to the CIO regional office for the State of Oregon.

Q. How did he obtain that position?

A. I appointed him. The final power was not in my hands. I was given authority to recommend appointments to the national office of the CIO, and generally, without any exception that I can recall, those appointments were approved. I recommended the appointment of Brost and he was approved.

Q. Did you have the authority in April, 1938, to remove John Brost from his position? [5492]

A. I did.

Q. Now, will you state generally whether, in April of 1938, you, as CIO Director for the Pacific Coast, were engaged in a procedure of increasing or decreasing the size of the CIO, the number of the CIO representatives on the Pacific Coast?

A. I was engaged in decreasing them.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Can you give some examples indicating the extent to which such decreasing went on, and the approximate dates?

Mr. Myron: How is that material, your Honor?

Presiding Inspector: Yes; how is it material?

Mr. Grossman: We will show this, your Honor: We will show that not only did Mr. Bridges specifically refuse, when called upon by various union representatives, to remove Mr. Brost—Mr. Wilmot claimed he wanted to get rid of him—but he did this despite the fact that he was operating under orders from the national office of the CIO to cut down his forces, that he cut off valuable forces in other parts of the Pacific Coast and left Mr. Brost there. We are going to show that he was given full authority to cut off anyone he wanted to cut off on the Pacific Coast, and despite that fact he kept Mr. Brost on until later—certainly indicating the contrary of what Mr. Wilmot's testimony was that Mr. Bridges wanted to get rid of Mr. Brost.

Presiding Inspector: The only way, as I understand it, that there is any indication that Mr. Bridges wanted to get rid [5493] of Mr. Brost was through a statement made by a man named Ring.

Mr. Grossman: Either that testimony is relevant or it is not. If it is relevant it is because there is supposed to be some credibility about this hearsay or double hearsay. In other words, if that goes in; if it has any relevancy, it is only because it is supposed to show the attitude of Mr.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Bridges in agreeing to the faction meeting and agreeing to its decision; otherwise, we move it be stricken. If it is relevant we intend to show—if there is any claim of relevance—that it shows the attitude of Mr. Bridges toward a fraction meeting on removing Mr. Brost. If it is relevant for that purpose we intend to show that the state of mind of Mr. Bridges was entirely and completely in conflict with that testimony. In fact, they aren't reconcilable at all.

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, Mr. Ring is available; he is still living and at one time was Mr. Bridges' bodyguard. Certainly he can be brought down here to testify.

Presiding Inspector: I don't believe that is necessary.

I will take this, although I think there are other explanations of it.

Mr. Grossman: I don't think they are reconcilable at all. Our position is they are not.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Would you state generally what were your activities shortly before and during April, 1938, with respect to increasing [5494] or decreasing the number of CIO representatives on the Pacific Coast?

Presiding Inspector: Doesn't that only support, by his own statement, what he has already testified to, that he was in favor of keeping Mr. Brost?

Mr. Grossman: Of course, it supports it.

Presiding Inspector: What difference does it make—all these underlying things? We cannot go into the reason for all these things. He has testified that he could remove Brost—and practically according to the testimony of other witnesses here—he has given his statement that he was opposed to it. As I understand it, he voted against it, or expressed himself that way. That is already in the tesimony. Why do we have to go into his authority with the CIO?

Mr. Grossman: Until your Honor states that he does not believe a word of Mr. Wilmot's testimony, we think we have a right to prove everything which confirms and corroborates the testimony of Mr. Bridges on this point, and we think we have a right to prove it right up to the hilt.

Presiding Inspector: You haven't a right to prove——

Mr. Grossman (Interposing): That corroborates——

Presiding Inspector: That substantially corrobrates it, but you don't get any corroboration in this way because it is already admitted he had the power to remove Mr. Brost.

Mr. Grossman: But it has not been admitted that he kept [5495] Mr. Brost on at the expense of other valuable organizers, and at the expense of the policy of the CIO to cut down as much as possible.

Presiding Inspector: What difference does that make?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Grossman: If we can get a stipulation now that Mr. Bridges was not of the state of mind that he wanted to remove Mr. Brost, if we can get that stipulation, I will stop here and now. But the Government has presented a case which relies in part on the theory that Mr. Bridges wanted to get rid of Mr. Brost; that Mr. Bridges said, in substance, "I approve this fraction meeting and I want the fraction meeting to decide in favor of getting rid of Mr. Brost, and I will do that." That is the substance of their testimony, their claim.

Presiding Inspector: He denies all that.

Mr. Grossman: He is entitled to do more than deny it—unless your Honor is satisfied—he is entitled to show it is impossible and inconsistent with his activities publicly known.

Presiding Inspector: We cannot go into all his activities to show that. If I exclude this it is simply on the remoteness. It seems to me that you have got everything that you can have. But if you insist on it, if you insist on it, I will take it.

Mr. Grossman: We do.

By Mr. Grossman: [5496]

Q. Will you state——

Presiding Inspector: You then claim that you haven't sufficiently supported this witness by his statement?

Mr. Grossman: I will say we haven't proved it up to the hilt, which we now want to do. I will state that, though I think we have proof.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead.

Mr. Grossman: Have you the last question? I will rephrase the question.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Mr. Bridges, what was being done in the month of April, 1936, and the previous few months, with respect to increasing or decreasing the number of CIO representatives under your control on the Pacific Coast?

Presiding Inspector: Now, I think you ought to prove that in some other way than by the oath of this witness. Did he receive communications to that effect?

Mr. Grossman: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: Then let's have those.

(Whereupon Mr. Grossman searched his files.)

Presiding Inspector: I don't mean it is necessary for you to produce the document, but instead of giving his opinion, state what he received.

Mr. Grossman: I beg your pardon. Though I have letters, I will do it the shorter way. [5497]

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Mr. Bridges, what instructions, if any, did you receive from the national office of the CIO early in 1938, or before that time, with respect to increasing or decreasing the CIO representatives on the Pacific Coast?

A. Early in the fall of 1937 I received almost weekly written instructions from the national CIO office to reduce the forces down to the absolute minimum along the entire Pacific Coast, in all the territory that I was at that time in charge of—all the Western States.

Q. Can you estimate how many CIO representatives there were under your control at the time you first received instructions from the CIO to cut down. A. Around 45.

Q. Can you estimate the number of CIO representatives there were under your control in the middle of April of 1938? A. About eight.

Q. Will you state how many CIO representatives there were under your control at the time Mr. Brost was laid off?

A. I couldn't be too sure; I would have to check the records. I think around five. I am narrowing that down to CIO representatives. There were other people on the payroll. But when you say "representatives" that designates a particular office.

Q. That is correct. Well, when you stated "45," were [5498] you referring to CIO representatives?

A. Yes; yes.

Q. In other words, you were using the same term to describe the individuals when you testified to 45, to 8, and to 5?

A. Yes. A CIO representative in effect is an organizer.

Q. Do you remember a meeting in the Roosevelt Hotel approximately April 20, 1938, in your room, or anyone's room at which were present you,

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Pilcher, Harry Pilcher, Harry Jackson and Wilmot? A. April 20?

Q. Approximately that.

A. I don't remember a meeting, but it is entirely possible I was in the hotel at that time.

Q. Do you remember a meeting with any of those individuals in the Roosevelt Hotel at about that time? A. No.

Q. Did you ever, in a meeting where Wilmot was present, state in substance, or in words, "We Communists must stick together"?

A. No.

Q. Have you ever made that statement to anyone, anywhere, at any time? A. No. [5499]

Q. Do your remember ever having a discussion with Mr. Wilmot with respect to whether or not official press releases or statements from the Communist Party, should be printed in the Labor New Dealer?

A. I can't specifically remember any such.

Q. Will you state what was your position in approximately April of 1936 with respect to whether or not the Labor New Dealer should print official press releases or statements of the Communist Party?

A. That would depend. I have no specific recollection of any instances at that time. [5500]

Q. You mean that would depend upon the——

Mr. Myron (Interposing): He has answered the question. Is this the meaning of counsel?

Presiding Inspector: Yes. I think he has answered the question. If he wants to explain, he may.

The Witness: As I understand, the question was my position in regard to printing official Communist releases. I still say it might depend. For example if—there was a lot of trouble up there at that time, a lot of action and tieups. I believe that if the Communist Party happened to send in a statement saying that they would do everything they could to support the particular dispute at that time in behalf of the Union position, my position would be that I wouldn't have any great objection to seeing that carried in the Union paper. That would be my position even now, maybe.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Have you ever taken the position that under no circumstances should any official press release or statement of the Communist Party be printed in a trade union paper?

A. No, I haven't; not generally speaking, no.

Q. Did you ever order Wilmot to run statements of the Communist Party in the Labor New Dealer?

A. Not that I recall.

Q. Did you ever state to Wilmot in substance at approximately the time that the Strecker decision came down from the Supreme Court "Now is our chance. The Communist [5501] Party is coming into the open around here"? A. No.

Mr. Myron: What was the answer?

The Reporter: "No".

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did you ever have a discussion with Wilmot with respect to his being appointed in the place of Brost as CIO representative?

A. Not at all.

Q. Did you ever consider the question of Wilmot taking the place of Brost as CIO representative in Oregon? A. In no way.

Q. Do you remember any conversation that you ever had with Wilmot outside of those you may have testified to?

A. I told him we had no use for him at one time unless he would quit drinking.

Q. When was that?

A. I told him if he didn't get around and get the paper out and make it some kind of a paper that could be used, we had no use for him. We had no money to waste on him in the CIO.

Q. How did this conversation take place?

A. I don't remember when it was, but I recall such a conversation on at least one occasion during one of my trips to Portland where it was getting pretty widely known that he was irresponsible, he was drinking, the paper wasn't getting [5502] out on time, it was a hit-and-miss affair. We were short of funds and I distinctly recall telling him that.

Q. Was there any occasion when the CIO was asked to put up funds, the National CIO, to subsidize the Labor New Dealer?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Myron: I will object to that, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

A. Yes. Over a wide—over quite a period of time the CIO was asked to subsidize that paper and other activities in Oregon.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did you ever discuss that question with Wilmot?

A. No. That's possible. I might have. I don't recall. I discussed it with a lot of people in Oregon and I always supported the subsidization and made frequent recommendations to the National office of the CIO.

Q. In April of 1938 was Joe Ring in Oregon?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know how he happened to go there?

A. I sent him there.

Q. Why did you send him there?

A. He was a CIO field representative and Oregon was crying for help. They needed help in the way of increased forces, they needed help in the way of technical help to get out publicity because Wilmot was laying down on the job, the [5503] reports I got. And it wound up with me dispatching our publicity man from San Francisco and our San Francisco organizer Ring to help out in Portland. And Ring and O'Neil were both up there—Jim O'Neil.

Q. O'Neil was your publicity man that you sent up there?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. At that time, yes. I sent them up there to help out; took them from San Francisco.

Q. From whom did the request come for the sending to Oregon of aid?

A. The local CIO Council in Portland and the CIO Regional Director, Mr. E. B. O'Grady.

Q. For how long was Ring in Portland?

A. I can't quite recall. A few weeks; maybe a month or two; a couple of months, I think.

Q. How long was O'Neil in Portland?

A. A short period of time, I believe.

Q. Was O'Neil sent there to do publicity work exclusively?

A. Yes. That's what his job was.

Q. Did you ever attend any kind of a meeting at the Gowman Hotel on or about March or May of 1937? A. In May, yes.

Q. What were you doing in Seattle in May of 1937?

A. Our convention was being held at that time.

Q. When did this meeting take place with relation to [5504] the convention?

A. During the convention.

Q. Will you state how you happened to go to that meeting?

A. I can't specifically recall. Dietrich and I went over. I think we were accompanied by Meehan. Dietrich and Matt Meehan and I went to the meeting at that time.

Q. Where was the meeting held in the Gowman Hotel?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. It was in a dining room.

Q. A private or public dining room? I mean is it the kind of dining room where people come in from the street and eat?

A. No, I don't think it was. I think you might call it more of a private dining room. If I remember correctly there was—I recall some dishes and things on the table. I know we were drinking. There were some drinks there; beer and other drinks.

Q. Whom do you remember to be present at that meeting?

A. It is pretty hard to remember, but I do remember Rapport.

Q. You have named Dietrich, and you stated that you think Meehan was there. Can you name anyone else that was there or whom you believe was there?

A. I think Robertson—J. R. Robertson, the International Vice-President of the Union. I think Goldbatt [5505] was there.

Q. Were Meehan, Dietrich, Robertson and Goldblatt delegates to your convention?

A. Yes. They were all delegates, I think. They were definitely.

Q. Do you remember whether there was a Chairman at this meeting?

A. I don't remember. My impression is that there wasn't.

Q. Were most of the people there when you arrived? A. Oh, yes.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Did you leave before the end?

A. I did.

Q. Withdraw that. Did you leave before most of the people left? A. As I recall I did.

Q. With whom did you come to the meeting?

A. Dietrich and Meehan, I believe.

Q. With whom did you leave?

A. I think I left with Dietrich.

Q. What do you remember about that meeting?

A. Not a great deal. I remember a pretty hot argument, but that's about all.

Q. Between whom was the hot argument?

A. Mainly between Dietrich and I and Rapport.

Q. Who was on which side? [5506]

A. Well, Dietrich and I generally used to get lined up together.

Q. I mean, were you lined up together at that time? A. Yes.

Q. And who was on the other side of the argument?

A. I don't remember the individuals, but I distinctly remember Rapport.

Q. Was this Rapport Morris Rapport?

A. Morris Rapport who was at that time the Secretary or the head of the Communist Party in the State of Washington.

Q. Had you met Rapport before then?

A. Yes. I met him during the convention. That's the first time I had met him. I mean, not this particular time, but I met him before that meeting in the convention.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Do you remember what this hot argument was about?

A. No. But I think—I have no definite recollection. I have a faint recollection that it was on the question of CIO and the activities of some unions in Seattle in regard to CIO affiliation or something like that.

Q. Was there anything formal about this meeting? A. No, not that I can recall.

Q. Do you remember anyone saying "Mr. Chairman" or "Comrade Chairman" or "Miss Chairman"? Or any designation for a Chairman?

A. I don't. I am sure they didn't.

Q. Do you remember any motions being made?

[5507]

A. Not while I was there. As a matter of fact, now the recollection comes back to me. Everybody was talking at one time. I know the argument waxed pretty hot and Dietrich was the kind of person that was pretty loud talking and an energetic person and I wasn't missing any opportunities. I don't think there was any formality about the meeting whatsoever.

Q. Do you recall how long you were there?

A. No.

Q. Do you know how the meeting came into being? A. No.

Q. Do you know how Rapport happened to be there?

A. I do not. I have tried to recollect, but it's pretty hard and it was more or less incidental. So I just can't remember.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Do you recall anyone else being present that you now know or knew then was a Communist, except Rapport?

A. No, I don't. There was a lot of people there. I just can't recall. There were only two or three that stand out in my mind.

Q. Mr. Cannalonga stated that a Mr. Bristol was there. A. Who?

Q. Bristol, B-r-i-s-t-o-l. Do you know whether he was or not?

A. I don't think I know him. [5508]

Q. You don't know Mr. Bristol?

A. Not as far as I know.

Q. I believe his name is supposed to be Al Bristol and I believe also he is supposed to be an official of the Communist Party.

A. I don't know him.

Q. Do you know whether Harry Jackson was there?

A. I'm pretty sure he wasn't. I have no recollection at all of him being there.

Q. Was there any conclusion to the argument which you were involved in? In other words, did you reach an agreement with—did those who were arguing reach any agreement?

A. Not that I can remember of. If there had been some decision reached I might have remembered it, but I don't recall any agreement or decision being reached on anything now.

Q. How hot was this argument?

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, if your Honor please, that is a familiar term.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: I suppose that is a figure of speech.

Mr. Grossman: Yes. It has different meanings.

Presiding Inspector: He has given it pretty definitely. He told about their being noisy and so forth.

Mr. Del Guercio: I would suggest a substitution of the word "Red".

Mr. Grossman: Mr. Cannalonga has stated——

[5509]

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I suppose you will have your opportunity to argue the case at the end.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Mr. Cannalonga has stated that you were at a fraction meeting somewhere around the 1936 strike period with him in San Francisco, at which were present Schneidermann, Stack, Telford, Schmidt, Saunders, Brown and Pyle. Did you ever attend such a meeting? A. No.

Q. Did you ever attend a Communist Party fraction meeting with Cannalonga? A. No.

Q. Did you ever attend any kind of a Communist meeting with Cannalonga? A. No.

Q. Did you ever attend any kind of a Communist meeting with anyone, anywhere, any place?

A. No.

Mr. Grossman: May we have our morning intermission now, your Honor?

Presiding Inspector: Yes. A short recess.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

(Whereupon a short recess was taken.)

Presiding Inspector: We will proceed. Mr. Grossman.

By Mr. Grossman: [5510]

Q. Mr. Bridges, do you remember the testimony of Mr. Rushmore who stated that he had interviewed you in New York City? A. Yes.

Q. What were you doing in New York City at that time?

A. I was attending the International Convention of the International Longshoremen's Association.

Q. Did you speak at any meeting at the Madison Square Garden on that occasion?

A. No. I spoke at a meeting, but not at that place.

Q. Did you speak at any mass meeting on that occasion?

A. Yes. I think I spoke at a meeting at the Manhattan Opera House.

Q. What was the subject of the meeting?

A. Unemployed Insurance; Trade Union Unemployment Insurance, I believe.

Q. What did you speak on at that meeting?

A. I think I was asked to give a review of the happenings on the West Coast, the '34 strike and subsequent happenings.

Q. Is that what you spoke on?

A. As far as I can recall, yes. And I also spoke, of course, in support of the move for Unemployment Insurance, and I think another subject was at that meeting, Trade Union Democracy. [5511]

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. When was the first time you met James O'Neil?

Mr. Del Guercio: Who?

Mr. Grossman: James O'Neil.

A. 1937.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Do you remember where you met him the first time? A. In my office.

Q. Did you meet James O'Neil at someone's home on New Year's Day? A. No.

Q. Were you ever introduced to James O'Neil as "Comrade Bridges"? A. No.

Q. Did you ever recommend to James O'Neil that he transfer from the Guild Fraction to the Waterfront Section of the Communist Party?

A. No.

Presiding Inspector: What is the point of all this?

Mr. Grossman: Well, I am just negativing the alleged statement which Mr. O'Neil has denied. If your Honor feels it irrelevant——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) No, I don't say so. But I just want to get the point.

Mr. Grossman: That is the point. Do you consider it relevant? [5512]

Presiding Inspector: If you treat it as original proof, yes.

Mr. Grossman: Well, I don't know. I don't think it is. If it is, I want to deny the record, that is all, so your Honor might as well rule. I don't think it is proof. I just want it not to be said that we have failed to deny——

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I am not going to make a ruling on that at this time. It is a proposition I would like to have briefed.

Mr. Grossman: Well, I will ask him the questions, your Honor, but in asking the questions I am not admitting at all that it is original testimony.

Presiding Inspector: That is what I had in mind.

Mr. Grossman: I don't want it to appear that we haven't denied the statements.

Presiding Inspector: Very well.

Mr. Grossman: However, even if there is no evidence of it——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I asked you with that very thought in mind. Of course, an argument can be made that what he says, whatever he did say there, was the truth and there is evidence that he did make these statements in dictation to Mrs. Segerstrom.

Mr. Grossman: Then I will continue to ask the questions with the understanding that by so doing I am not admitting [5513] that there is any evidence in the record or in the hearing on these questions.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. I think you ought to have that explanation on the record.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, if your Honor please, what understanding is that? We say that there is such a statement. That statement has been proved beyond any doubt at all, that O'Neil made that statement.

Presiding Inspector: Then, of course, it is competent under your theory to permit Mr. Grossman to make this proof.

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: That is the only way he can protect himself, I suppose.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did you ever tell James O'Neil that he had not been attending Communist Party meetings?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever have a meeting in the Balboa Building with Schneidermann, Cayton, Goldblatt and O'Neil? A. No, not that I recall.

Mr. Del Guercio: What is the answer?

The Witness: Not that I recall having met with Schneidermann in the Balboa Building.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did you ever have a meeting with Schneidermann, Cayton, Goldblatt and O'Neil in the Balboa Building at which [5514] you discussed the Communist Party position on the CIO press and on the Sailor's Union of the Pacific?

Presiding Inspector: Will you take a short recess? I have a message.

(Whereupon a short recess was taken.)

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did you ever tell James O'Neil that you had participated in Communist fraction meetings?

A. No.

Q. Are you a member of the Communist Party?

A. No.

Q. Have you ever been? A. No.

Q. Are you affiliated with the Communist Party? A. No.

Q. Have you ever been? A. No.

Q. What trade union positions do you hold at the present time?

A. President of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union; California Director for the CIO. That would be about all the main ones. I have various other minor positions.

Q. Do you hold any national position with the CIO?

A. Member of the Committee on Unemployment, member of [5515] the Pan-American Committee, or Latin-American Committee.

Q. Are you a member of the National Executive Board of the CIO?

A. Member of the National Executive Board of the CIO.

Q. What positions have you held in the past in the Maritime Federation?

A. For two years I believe I was President of the San Francisco Federation Council, District Council No. 2. That is the only real position.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Have you ever been on the Executive Board of the Maritime Federation?

A. I was on the first Executive Board for a short while.

Q. What position have you held in your Local Union?

A. Executive Board member in 1934 and then President from 1934 to 1936.

Q. And after 1936 what positions did you hold, if any, in the ILA?

A. I was elected District President in 1936.

Q. District President of the ILA?

A. Of the ILA; that is, Pacific Coast District.

Q. And when did you become President of the ILWU? A. July, 1937.

Q. Was that the time that the ILA Pacific Coast District changed its affiliation to the CIO? [5516]

A. That is right.

Q. Have you been District President since that time? A. Yes.

Q. Were you ever an international representative of the ILA? A. I was.

Q. When?

A. For a short while; July, 1936 to December, 1936.

Q. Were you ever a member of the State Executive Council of the A. F. of L.?

A. State of California, yes.

Q. What position would that be? Vice-President of the Federation of Labor?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. State Vice-President.

Q. For what period did you hold that position?

A. I didn't serve a full term. It was in 1936. I was removed.

Q. Why were you removed?

A. Supporting CIO.

Q. Have you ever taken the position, Mr. Bridges, that it is impossible for the workers and employers to sit down to the table, bargain collectively in an amicable fashion and have it result in benefits for the workers?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to the question. It is irrelevant and immaterial. [5517]

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

A. No.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it. It concerns his attitude.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. What is your position on the value of collective bargaining, negotiating with employers and arbitration to the members of Unions?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, your Honor, on the same ground.

Presiding Inspector: Isn't that a pretty large question?

Mr. Grossman: I understand. But there is no sense starting at it in a small way. We will ultimately get into it in a large way. I may have misunderstood you, your Honor, but I understood you to say that when we were attempting——

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Oh, I allowed that.

Mr. Grossman: I thought I understood you to say that Mr. Bridges could state more on his general views than such witnesses as Mr. Kagel and Dean Morse.

Presiding Inspector: I don't know, but you asked them so many question.

Mr. Grossman: No, I didn't get into this. I didn't get into Mr. Bridges' general views on collective bargaining. I don't think I did. But, anyhow, I want to now. [5518]

Presiding Inspector: Are these controversial matters, really, any longer?

Mr. Grossman: Well, I don't like to duplicate the argument we have had before, but I think——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) It would be shorter probably to take it. I will take it.

Mr. Grossman: I think so.

Presiding Inspector: It seems to me of slight importance.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Will you state your position on the value of collective bargaining, negotiations with employers and arbitration at certain times to the members of unions?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I want to object to that on another ground. We are getting into an argument here on the theory of the value of such matters not at issue even remotely in this proceedings.

Presiding Inspector: Well, I suppose if they have no value I wouldn't favor them. That would be the next question under those circumstances. I think I will take it. It is pretty general.

A. Collective bargaining is the fundamental issue underlying any organization of workers, of course. That is the primary purpose for which the workers are organized, following the organization of the workers in a group. Next [5519] comes collective bargaining in an attempt to secure an agreement, the agreement naturally embracing the rate of wages, the number of hours, seniority, vacations, the question of methods of hiring, working conditions and all the things that go into a collective bargaining agreement.

Of course, collective bargaining is brought about through methods of both negotiation, mediation and arbitration. I think they all run to the same term and you can't mention one without going into the other. Therefore, when you organize a union and then you engage in collective bargaining, to try and engage in collective bargaining without negotiations is silly and, likewise, without mediation or arbitration. It's equally ridiculous.

So the whole thing goes together and we have always supported such fundamental matters, and still do.

We can see how—we can't see how any headway

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

can be made unless you do in so far as the trade union is concerned.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. What is your position as to generally when and where strikes should be engaged in?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, if your Honor please, as being immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: Does this have anything to do with the issue we are trying? [5520]

Mr. Grossman: I believe it is the positive side of the negative testimony we have been giving through our expert witnesses and expect to give through Mr. Bridges. In other words, instead of merely asking him whether he has ever believed this sort of thing that I just read him a statement of, I think I am entitled to show positively what he believes.

Presiding Inspector: If you think it is material I will take it.

Mr. Grossman: Yes.

A. We only resort to strikes as a last resort, after we have exhausted the resources of negotiation, mediation and in many cases arbitration. There is this point, however. There are some matters that cannot be arbitrated. That is, no Arbitrator when he is asked to decide on certain issues it is impossible for him to make a decision that is workable. Such decisions or such issues can better be settled or can only be settled by negotiation.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

To give an example of what I mean, it is impossible for an Arbitrator to arbitrate recognition of a Union. You get it or you don't. No recognition; therefore, no Union. It is impossible for an Arbitrator to arbitrate many things, especially if those things go to the very foundation of the Union without which the Union can't live. And it has generally been our proposition that certain matters of that type we have refused to arbitrate them, because we knew that arbitration [5521] would be fruitless. We have always taken other positions on arbitration: That we would not re-arbitrate matters that had already been arbitrated. In other words, arbitration is not for the purpose of keeping on arbitrating a particular question after an issue has once been decided for the simple reason that one side is pushing for arbitration knowing that they have got nothing to lose and they might gain something.

So under those circumstances, such as I have described, at times we have refused arbitration. But on any general question that doesn't go to the very life of the Union we have always favored both mediation and arbitration and used it. In most cases we have used it entirely on those matters, providing that recognition of the Union, the protection against discrimination for union activities or union membership and such things as that is already secured or guaranteed through negotiation.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Can you give some specific examples in the experience of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union of your position on arbitration?

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, if your Honor please, I will object to that. We are going from the general to the specific.

Presiding Inspector: He has given his fundamental view. Shouldn't you leave that for cross examination?

Mr. Grossman: Well, I could leave it if I am guaranteed [5522] that they go into it, but if they are not going to I prefer to do it on direct, your Honor, because I think the specific example is much more clear-cut. Where there may not be conviction from a general statement there would certainly be, I think, from a specific example which was only explicable in the light of the theory which we claim Mr. Bridges has. In other words, I think the general is never as convincing as the specific example, for obvious reasons. I don't think this will be very lengthy.

Presiding Inspector: Very well. You may answer.

A. That would be difficult. We have engaged in some 200-odd arbitrations in the last six or seven years, both the ILA and the ILWU. To pick out any specific case, why, it is simple. But generally arbitration comes either in two or three ways: To prevent a dispute by both parties agreeing that they will submit the issues in dispute to arbitration; to settle part of a dispute where agreement has been reached on certain things and the rest are referred to arbitration; to end a dispute after a dispute is already under way by referring the matters to arbitration for settlement, and to clarify certain issues after an agreement has been reached and the agreement provides that there will be no stoppage of work and all disputes be settled by arbitration. So we have used all methods and generally do. It is not very well known, of course. There are very many conflicting opinions on arbitra- [5523] tion and the word is loosely thrown around sometimes. But as a rule we have used it in most of our minor and major disputes in some form or other. [5524]

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Can you state generally approximately how many cases are submitted to arbitration each year by the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union for longshoremen, rather, under the longshore agreements?

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that.

Presiding Inspector: I don't thing it is material if they make an agreement. I suppose there is a general arbitration agreement, isn't there?

Mr. Grossman: I think the experience, nevertheless, of collective bargaining agreements there often—that is, since they are rather loose and have no real compulsion, as Dean Wayne Morse testified, sometimes you have an arbitration provision in an agreement, which is not carried out in good faith by one or the other parties—in other words, to sabotage the use of the arbitration procedure, and actually refuse it in some cases. You will find many agreements which perhaps have an arbitration clause, and because of sabotage or refusal by one side or the other, it isn't used.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: You already have the proof, testimony of Dean Morse on that.

Mr. Grossman: Correct. I will withdraw it for that reason.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Do you remember, Mr. Bridges, a particular negotia- [5525] tion between the Newspaper Guild and the publishers into which you entered briefly where the issue was one of whether a strike would take place for the Guild shop, or closed shop, or preferential hiring? A. I do.

Q. Will you state briefly the circumstances surrounding your being brought into that picture?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, if your Honor please, as not being in issue here.

Presiding Inspector: Isn't this pretty remote?

Mr. Grossman: This is a specific example of Mr. Bridges adopting a policy——

Presiding Inspector: Taking part in that arbitration.

Mr. Grossman: No. This is a specific example of his participating in a policy which is completely inconsistent with the descriptions given by those government witnesses I quoted before, and to state generally what its significance is, will be, I will say this: This example, when given, will show that Mr. Bridges was called in, in an advisory capacity by the union involved, this newspaper Guild, and he went to the extent of opposing a good many of their Negotiating Committee who decided to strike on this sole issue, and suggested to them the possibility of achieving it without a strike, and indicated a definite desire to use all methods short of a strike, even at the expense of disagreement with the Negotiating Committee [5526] involved.

Presiding Inspector: Wasn't this case sketched generally by Mr. Kagel?

Mr. Grossman: No. We weren't permitted to go into examples. I started to go into this and you cut me short. So we have given no specific examples through the other witnesses.

Presiding Inspector: All right. This will be short?

Mr. Grossman: Yes.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Will you state, generally and briefly, what brought you into the picture?

A. Negotiations were under way at that time for a contract between the union and the newspaper publishers for the City of San Francisco and Oakland. The Union, in some degree, and the Committee negotiating the contract believed that the only way to get the desired provisions in the contract was by a strike. In effect, they had relinquished that demand and there was a demand for a union ship in the previous year's negotiations.

The only part that I played was in the capacity as a CIO official I met with the Committee, and after reviewing the circumstances and the possibilities of the strike on that issue alone, I advised against it.

An agreement was signed and negotiated, negotiated and [5527] signed, without any strike taking place.

Q. What was the attitude of the Committee before you began to participate in it, or at the time you began to participate with them?

Mr. Del Guercio: I think the Committee would be the best——

Presiding Inspector: Having allowed it so far, I will allow the rest.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. What was the Committee's attitude at the time you entered into the picture with respect to whether a strike should be carried on solely on this issue of the union shop?

A. It favored a strike; mistakenly so, I thought.

Q. As a result of your participation—withdraw that. After you expressed your views on that matter was a decision finally made by this Negotiating Committee that they would not strike for a union shop?

A. That is correct. Although I would not say solely as a result of my being there and so advising.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. I didn't ask that. After you participated they made that decision, did they? A. Yes.

Q. Did you state what methods they could use to obtain that union shop, if any?

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to any further inquiry along [5528] this line.

Presiding Inspector: How did they achieve it?

Mr. Grossman: His suggestion to them, if any, as to how, in lieu of a strike, they should take action to obtain a union shop.

Presiding Inspector: You are forcing this pretty far. I will take it.

A. We discussed it. I really can't say the program we outlined now; I can't remember it.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Do you remember a threatened strike of the Marine Cooks and Stewards in 1940?

Presiding Inspector: I think you have gone far on this. This is the third strike. Is this a strike of his union?

Mr. Grossman: A union.

Presiding Inspector: His union?

Mr. Grossman: No. A strike in which he played a very important part, and it is very significant evidence along this line.

Presiding Inspector: I thing it is immaterial. We have one example.

Mr. Grossman: This is a different example.

Presiding Inspector: I know. Are we going to have fifty examples?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Grossman: If they are of different things.

[5529]

Let me state what this is, and I will state it briefly because it will save time.

Presiding Inspector: You need not do that. If you think this is important you may have it.

Mr. Grossman: I will cut down on the examples, but this is slightly a different example

Presiding Inspector: I think these are all immaterial.

Mr. Grossman: I think it is important.

Mr. Del Guercio: We object to it on that ground.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Do you remember a threatened strike involving the Marine Cooks and Stewards in 1940?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the issue of that threatened strike?

Mr. Del Guercio: We object to that, if your Honor please. We cannot try the issues of these strikes.

Presiding Inspector: No.

Mr. Grossman: There is no dispute about the issues.

Mr. Del Guercio: There is a dispute about everything that was said going in.

Mr. Grossman: I think you will agree in this case with what Mr. Hillman said.

Presiding Inspector: You shouldn't have things like that on the record.

Mr. Grossman: Mr. Del Guercio isn't going to take the [5530] position that his position was Communistic, I am sure of that.

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead.

A. The issues, I think, were a six-hour day for the men on board ships in the culinary department; a certain number of men, called the Manning Scale, a certain number of men required on ships of certain tonnage; and proper protection of seniority rights.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Had the union taken a strike vote when you came into the picture? A. They had.

Q. And how close to the strike deadline was it at the time you came into the picture?

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to that, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

A. Two hours.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. How did you happen to come into the picture?

A. I was appointed to act on behalf of the Advisory Commission on National Defense.

Q. Who appointed you?

A. Mr. Sidney Hillman.

Q. How did he appoint you?

A. He just appointed me. You mean by——

Q. (Interposing): How were you notified?

[5531]

A. He telephoned me and wired me.

Q. What did he tell you to do, if anything?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to any conversation had with Mr. Hillman by this witness.

Mr. Grossman: I want to know what position he was supposed to play, what Mr. Hillman asked him to do.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: I will take that, but not as any definite instructions as to an attitude which he should take.

Mr. Grossman: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: Unless the Government wants that.

A. I had no instructions. He told me he had notified both parties and, if agreeable to me, he would ask me to act on behalf of the Commission in this case to see if we could arrange a settlement prior to the strike deadline.

By Mr. Grossman:

Q. Did you then begin to participate in the negotiations between the union and the employer?

A. I met with both groups and worked out a compromise.

Q. Was an agreement reached without a strike?

A. At a quarter of a minute to midnight, which was the strike deadline, we reached an agreement.

Presiding Inspector: When was that?

The Witness: The end of 1940, I think, or—no—in the fall of 1940.

Mr. Grossman: One moment, your Honor. [5532]

Your Honor, Mr. Gladstein is going to take over the examination now.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, if your Honor please, we object to changing counsel in the middle of the examination.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: I will allow it. Go ahead. We have been very liberal about this. In fact, there isn't any rule here, you know.

Mr. Gladstein: I don't think there is a——

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Bridges, do you remember the witness, William C. McCuistion? A. Yes.

Q. He testified in substance that he first met you in the early part of 1935, somewhere around April or May, just prior to a convention of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific. And in his testimony he mentioned meeting you on the street and being introduced to you near the wate front by a man named Frederick Reed. Did any such occurrence ever happen? A. No.

Q. He testified that that same evening, or in the evening, by prearrangement with you, he met you at the Communist headquarters. Did anything like that ever happen? A. No. [5533]

Q. Did you ever discuss with him the question of his expulsion from the Communist Party?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever ask him at or about that period, or at any time, to stay on the Pacific Coast and assist you in forming a bloc against Harry Lundeberg?

A. No.

Q. Now, at that time, the time that Mr. McCuistion is referring to, the early part of 1935, prior to the Maritime Federation Convention of that year,

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

what, in general, was your relationship to Harry Lundeberg? A. Friendly and——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): I object to that, unless it is intended to bring Harry Lundeberg in here.

Mr. Gladstein: It is intended to show Mr. McCuistion was a liar.

Mr. Del Guercio: Mr. McCuistion was not a liar.

Presiding Inspector: Well, I don't suppose the statement of either——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing): And they can't show he is a liar.

Presiding Inspector: Well——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): They know it.

Presiding Inspector: Let me hear the question.

Mr. Gladstein: Read the question. [5534]

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Presiding Inspector: Do you mean the character of it, or what business he had with him?

Mr. Gladstein: The general character of the relationship.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

A. We were working very closely together——

Presiding Inspector: No. He wants to know whether or not you were friends or otherwise.

A. (Continuing): Very friendly. We were in full support of him.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. And at the convention which followed, this period of time, the convention which took place in 1935,—what month was it, by the way?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. April 15, 1935.

Q. At that convention, Mr. Bridges, what was your open position as to support or non-support of Harry Lundeberg for an office or an official position in the Maritime Federation?

A. Full support. We nominated him, placed him on our votes, gave him our vote, and elected him.

Q. Now, Mr. McCuistion testified that he left the Pacific Coast around June of 1935. Was your position, up to [5535] and through June of 1935, was your relationship with Harry Lundeberg the same as you have just described? A. It was.

Q. When, for the first time, did your relationship with Lundeberg take a different direction?

A. Not until 1936.

Q. Did you ever receive any communications from Lundeberg in 1935? A. I did.

(Whereupon Mr. Gladstein passed a communication to Mr. Del Guercio.)

Mr. Gladstein: Is there a possibility of seeing the date in June, 1935, when Mr. McCuistion said, and the record shows, that he departed from San Francisco?

Presiding Inspector: Ask Mr. Gaiser.

Mr. Gladstein: There is a photostatic copy of some——

The Witness (Interposing): June 6th.

Mr. Gladstein: Do you recall it as June 6th?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, Mr. McCuistion testified that in these conversations prior to his sailing from San Francisco in the early part of June, 1935, you, in a conversation, asked McCuistion to stay on the West Coast and help you form a bloc to fight Lundeberg. Did any such conversation ever occur?

A. No. [5536]

Q. I show you a letter, which I have already shown to counsel, under date of June 22, 1935, a date subsequent to the time that McCuistion left the Pacific Coast, and purporting to be signed by Harry Lundeberg, and I will ask you whether you received that and recognize that as a letter from Harry Lundeberg?

A. (Examining letter) I do.

Mr. Gladstein: I offer that in evidence, your Honor, because it shows a relationship between Bridges and Lundeberg which was one of friendship and closely——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) Is that an argument in support of the offer?

Mr. Gladstein: I am addressing myself to the Court.

Mr. Del Guercio: I haven't made my objection.

Presiding Inspector: Let us hear the objection.

Mr. Gladstein: May I finish my statement in support of my offer?

Presiding Inspector: No.

Mr. Del Guercio: It contains extraneous matters,

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

nothing that would contradict anything that was introduced in this hearing.

Mr. Gladstein: In answer to that it is my contention, your Honor, that that letter, and the testimony of Mr. Bridges, directly contradicts and throws the lie in the face of the witness, McCuistion. [5537]

Mr. Del Guercio: I question that, if your Honor please, and I question the authenticity of the letter. I suggest that Mr. Lundeberg be called.

Mr. Gladstein: You can call him.

Mr. Del Guercio: You won't dare.

Mr. Gladstein: I said you can call him.

Mr. Del Guercio: And immaterial also.

Mr. Gladstein: You can call him.

(The letter offered was passed to the Presiding Inspector.)

Presiding Inspector: I don't see how this proves the attitude of Mr. Bridges.

Mr. Gladstein: The attitude of Mr. Bridges and the attitude of Mr. Lundeberg are integral parts of each other as of that time and——

Presiding Inspector: It may or may not be.

Mr. Gladstein: I don't quite understand.

Presiding Inspector: I mean to say that may show what Mr. Lundeberg thought of the friendship of Mr. Bridges, but that might not necessarily be so.

Mr. Gladstein: But if you will read this letter——

Presiding Inspector: I read it.

Mr. Gladstein (Continuing): ——you will see——

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Insepctor: I saw a lot of extraneous matter in the letter. [5538]

Mr. Gladstein: I renew my offer, and I wish the record to show that the reason for this offer, though it comes from Mr. Lundeberg to Mr. Bridges, and reflects a friendly attitude on the part of Lundeberg toward Bridges, it also refers in its contents to a previous request made by Bridges of Mr. Lundeberg and——

Presiding Inspector: We can't take that as original evidence of anything of that kind, as to whether there is some other matter concerned. This witness can testify about that.

Mr. Gladstein: He has testified, but I have documentary evidence to support his testimony. Is it your position that we are not permitted to put in the documentary evidence that will support that testimony?

Mr. Myron: Mr. Lundeberg is available.

Presiding Inspector: Produce your documentary evidence.

Mr. Gladstein: I consider this proper and I offer it in evidence.

Presiding Inspector: Let's have the other documentary evidence first.

Mr. Gladstein: What other documentary evidence.

Presiding Inspector: That this supports, you say.

Mr. Gladstein: Every letter Mr. Bridges has written is not in his possesion.

Presiding Inspector: I thought you said you had it. [5539]

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Gladstein: I said this letter refers to a previous request, as you will see there, a request made by Mr. Bridges.

Presiding Inspector: I didn't notice it. The tone of the letter, I thought that was what you were offering it for.

Mr. Gladstein: Also for the tone.

(The letter referred to was passed back to the Presiding Inspector.)

Presiding Inspector: I can't read this (indicating).

Mr. Gladstein: What part, your Honor?

(Whereupon the Presiding Inspector and Mr. Gladstein conferred over the document.)

Presiding Inspector: I will receive it.

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, we question——.

Presiding Inspector: I will receive it.

Mr. Del Guercio (Continuing): We question the authenticity of that document.

Presiding Inspector: I will receive it. He said he received it in the mail.

(The letter referred to was received in evidence and marked Alien's Exhibit No. 31.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. When was the first time you ever in your life met William C. McCuistion?

A. December 1936 at the Madison Square Garden.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Did you meet him at all prior to the actual Garden [5540] meeting?

A. I believe I did at that time in New York. I mean that that was the first time I met him when I was in New York to attend that meeting.

Q. What was the extent of the relationship, or of any conversations that you had with Mr. McCuistion on that occasion?

A. Very brief; so brief I can't even recall it.

Q. Can you state whether you ever discussed with him the question of his membership in or expulsion from the Communist Party?

A. I never have.

Q. Have you ever seen him since the time of the Madison Square Garden meeting to the time that he came into court, to your knowledge? A. No.

Q. Now, Mr. McCuistion testified, and Mr. Innes testified, that you had flatly refused to come to the east to address the Madison Square Garden meeting——

Presiding Inspector: Don't you think it would be better to ask the questions, without telling the witness first

Mr. Gladstein: I am directing his attention to something.

Presiding Inspector: I know. I think you are doing it in a questionable way; that is all.

Mr. Gladstein: I will withdraw the question if you think [5541] it is improper.

Presiding Inspector: You can suggest the subject matter, whether John Jones or Richard Roe testified to something, but not to suggest to the witness to enable him to testify. You have got a very competent witness here.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. I will refer you, Mr. Bridges, to the Madison Square Garden meeting in December 1936. What was the situation on the Pacific Coast as of that time with respect to the strike?

A. We had the strike won on the West Coast.

Q. When did that strike begin?

A. October 28, 1936.

Q. What unions were involved in this strike?

A. The unions that were actually participating in the strike were all the unions affiliated with the Maritime Federation, some twelve or fourteen all told, or more; and, of course, practically directly involved in the strike to some extent was the Teamsters' Union.

Q. What was the situation on the East Coast with respect to the strike on the West Coast?

A. The East Coast was on a sympathetic strike, the East Coast Seamen, and as the strike appeared to be nearing a point where a settlement could be reached it was necessary to determine what was going to happen, and what was going to be the program in so far as the East Coast Seamen were concerned.

[5542]

Q. Now, had you had any discussions with any representatives of the East Coast Seamen prior to the time that the Madison Square Garden meeting was held? A. Yes.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. With whom, and what kind of discussions?

A. Well, with both Innes, Peter Innes and Joe Curran. Curran was out here prior to the strike taking place, although we didn't discuss the strike then, we discussed the general strategy in connection with securing an agreement, the possibility of a strike. We were endeavoring to postpone the strike then, and we did. Then later on, between the West and the East Coast, by telephone, telegram, letter and teletype.

Q. You just mentioned that you were endeavoring to postpone the strike. Had there been a prior strike deadline?

A. Yes. The strike—the strike—when our agreement terminated September 30 of that year, and the employers had notified us that unless there was a new agreement that they would close down on September 30th, so we were engaged in attempting ot postpone the closing down date. They were all prepared, there were political implications, and one thing and another, and eventually we succeeded in having the shutdown date postponed for two or three periods of 15 days, or one period of 30 days, and one period of 15 or 18 days.

Q. Were any of these postponements requested by any [5543] representatives of the United States Government? A. Yes.

Q. By whom?

A. Well, Daniel Tobin, and at that time he was the Labor Chairman for the Democratic Party; John

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

L. Lewis was very much concerned, and Edward F. McGrady.

Q. Who was he?

A. The Assistant Secretary of Labor.

Mr. Myron: Is that responsive, these officials of the United States Government?

Presiding Inspector: I don't suppose so.

Mr. Myron: I don't think that is what the question called for.

Mr. Gladstein: I consider it responsive. If you can't understand it——

Presiding Officer: I don't think it is responsive, but——

The Witness (Interposing): The request was transmitted to me through John L. Lewis saying the President had requested we postpone our strike.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What was done after you received that?

Presiding Inspector: It isn't harmful that I can see.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What was done, Mr. Bridges?

A. We done everything we could to postpone the strike. [5544]

Q. That was an election year, was it not?

A. That is right. We were urged to see that no strike broke out until after the election date. We held it down until October 28th.

Q. That is when the strike began?

A. October 28th. The elections, I think, were on November 2.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Now, at about that time did I understand you to say that you had discussions with Mr. Curran?

A. Prior to that time.

Q. And what, in general, was the nature of the discussions with reference to what should be done on the East Coast in the event a strike occurred on the West Coast?

A. To support us and to use every effort they could to have the longshoremen also support us; that is, the East Coast longshoremen also support us.

[5545]

Q. Now, after the strike broke out on the West Coast was any policy adopted on the West Coast with respect to the sending of delegations of speakers from the West Coast to the East Coast to address strikers there? A. Yes.

Presiding Inspector: In respect to that Dietrich letter, don't you think that you ought to show that this witness knew his handwriting?

Mr. Gladstein: You mean the Lundeberg letter?

Presiding Inspector: The Lundeberg letter.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes. I will ask him that question.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Are you able to recognize the handwriting of Mr. Lundeberg?

A. I am. I received that letter when I was in the hospital at that time and I received quite a few communications from him, including, I think, three bouquets of flowers. I am well acquainted with the handwriting.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: Is that in his handwriting?

The Witness: It is.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, I don't believe that it has been established yet that he knows the handwriting of Harry Lundeberg.

Presiding Inspector: He has had communications from him. [5546]

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, three of them. Were they all the same?

Presiding Inspector: You may examine when the time comes.

The Witness. I have had numerous communications from him.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object on this ground: That Lundeberg is available here.

Presiding Inspector: That doesn't make any difference. If the witness knows of his handwriting you can introduce the document. We are not so strict about that, having seen him write, as we used to be. I mean, even in Courts of Justice.

Mr. Del Guercio: Any particular part of this letter here you have reference to?

Mr. Gladstein: Well, yes.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. By whom was such a policy adopted, Mr. Bridges?

A. First by the Longshoremen's Coast Executive Committee, then submitted and recommended to the Joint Coast Policy Committee and adopted there.

Q. Was any official publication of such a policy or program ever made?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. You mean in the——

Q. (Interposing): Was any release of this program ever made?

A. Yes. All locals were notified. [5547]

Q. Locals of what?

A. Of the District Union of the ILA at that time, and the East Coast was also notified. We sent copies to the various East Coast groups we were working with; that is, the Seamen's groups in the East Coast, the Seamen's Defense Committee and others.

Q. That would include, that is, the groups to which copies of this announcement of the official policy of the West Coast in connection with the activities of the East Coast and the sending of delegations from the West to the East, were sent to various groups including the group of which Mr. Curran is a leader? A. That is correct.

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, the questions are so long that counsel propounded that I can't follow them and I doubt very much if they are questions here.

Presiding Inspector: Perhaps you had better have the reporter read them if you don't understand them. Sometimes I don't.

Mr. Gladstein: Did you understand the question?

Mr. Del Guercio: Will you read the question?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Your Honor, I will object to that as not being a question. It's an answer. [5548]

Presiding Inspector: Well, he said it was correct,

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

so that I don't believe we need go over it again. I will let it stand.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, Mr. Bridges, I show you what purports to be on the official letterhead of the International Longshoremen's Association, affiliated then with the American Federation of Labor, under date of November 19, 1936 a mimeographed letter consisting of three and a half pages and purporting to be signed by yourself. Will you identify it, please?

A. This is a letter sent out by the Longshoremen's Negotiating Committee or Strike Committee at that time outlining to all locals our entire and detailed method of proceeding to prosecute the strike, our entire strike policy.

Q. Does this policy as expressed in this letter include the program outlined on and by the West Coast for the activities on the East Coast?

A. Yes.

Q. With specific reference to the question of West Coast delegations being sent back to address meetings of the East Coast, will you please point to the portion.

A. That's the last point in the program, the last page.

Mr. Gladstein: I call your Honor's attention to the top of page four of this document.

(The document referred to was passed to the Presiding [5549] Inspector.)

Presiding Inspector: Just this?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Gladstein: I am going to offer the entire letter in evidence as showing the policy outlined in connection with the conduct of the strike, showing the chronological series of steps which were recommended and adopted to be taken, one of which is the question of sending delegations to the East Coast.

I offer this letter in evidence, your Honor.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, if your Honor please, before we make any objection I want to know whether that reference made by counsel is the only one upon which he is introducing this letter in support of his contention that that was the policy of the West Coast at that time, to send people to the East Coast.

Mr. Gladstein: I don't quite understand the question. Do you mean, Mr. Del Guercio, you want to know if I have further proof to offer on the subject?

Mr. Del Guercio: No. If there is anything further in that letter other than that one paragraph that you showed me in support of your statement that the policy was to send speakers to the East Coast.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, I think this is the point. The letter sets forth a rather comprehenstive program for the prosecution of the strike and the integration of the efforts being made on the two coasts. One of those recommendations [5550] which is adopted and made a part of the program, is an idea of sending delegations at suitable times back to Eastern and Gulf ports. That is only one of them. I think to tear that out of its context and leaving it standing alone, without showing what the balance is to which it refers, would perhaps distort that part of it. Therefore, I think the entire program as set forth in this letter should be admitted in evidence. I doubt whether counsel will claim that this letter incorrectly states what the program was by the Union.

Mr. Del Guercio: My point is that there is nothing in the letter that you pointed me out that states that it was the policy to send delegates to speak on the East Coast. All there is there, the portion that you referred to me, was "Delegations were to be sent to Eastern and Gulf Coasts to prevail on longshoremen for economic action".

Mr. Gladstein: I will have the witness explain what that means, if there is any uncertainty in the mind of the Court.

Presiding Inspector: I think I will take the letter.

(The letter referred to was received in evidence and marked Alien's Exhibit No. 32.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I think counsel should refrain from making a remark of that kind. He has the witness on the stand and to put the words in his mouth on matters of that kind is unfair, I think.

Mr. Gladstein: What did I say that was unfair?

[5551]

Do you know, your Honor

Mr. Del Guercio: Have the witness explain.

Presiding Inspector: I think he complains of your having said that you would have the witness cover this.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Gladstein: If there is any uncertainty in your mind.

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead. I can hardly rule on that.

Mr. Del Guercio: Sir?

Presiding Inspector: That calls for some conduct of this case by Mr. Gladstein; I can hardly rule on that.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Part of this program which was adopted and officially announced on November 19, 1936 was, as follows:

"That suitable time be allowed for publicity campaign and if same is not successful in bringing required Governmental pressure on Employers, in order they negotiate and agree to Union demands, that the West Coast ILA send delegations to Eastern and Gulf Coasts to prevail on longshoremen there for economic action". I was quoting from page four of Alien's Exhibit 32 in evidence. Now, will you explain——

Mr. Myron: (Interposing): Do I understand that this document has been introduced in evidence?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Myron: This document has been introduced in evidence?

Presiding Inspector: Yes. I said I would receive it. [5552]

Mr. Myron: I don't see any necessity in quoting from it.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: Well, we have done that all the way through, both sides. There isn't any need. But that has been the practice in this hearing from the very start. We have had great numbers of Communist documents introduced and read from, and it perhaps will enable the Presiding Inspector to analyze this case in his own mind without reading every one of the documents from beginning to end.

Mr. Myron: I understand it was part of a question that was being asked. That is my objection.

Mr. Gladstein: I never finished because Mr. Myron interposed his objection. I was about to ask a question, yes. I didn't get to that before we heard from Mr. Myron.

Presiding Inspector: Well, go ahead.

Mr. Myron: That was my objection, your Honor, as I understood.

Presiding Inspector: I didn't understand that. I thought the objection was reading.

Mr. Del Guercio: Because of the preliminaries, the preliminary is so long that we don't know where the question begins and ends.

Presiding Inspector: I know we have that all the time in this hearing. It seems to be the practice adopted by both sides.

Go ahead. I think it is not very good practice.

[5553]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, Mr. Bridges, with reference to the part of the program set forth in the last exhibit, Alien's Exhibit 32, as to sending speakers to the East to prevail on longshoremen to cooperate, will you explain what that had reference to, what the situation was that that referred to?

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, if your Honor please, I object to that. The document, of course, speaks for itself.

Presiding Inspector: Yes. I think the document does.

Mr. Gladstein: I am not asking for an interpretation of the document, but the situation to which the document refers.

Mr. Del Guercio: Counsel has asked the witness, quoting one paragraph from that document——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing): That is all we are interested in, I suppose, except for its setting.

Mr. Gladstein: We can have the witness explain the whole situation on both Coasts within his knowledge, if that is the objection.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think that is necessary.

Mr. Gladstein: I don't quite get the point of the objection.

Presiding Inspector: I will let the witness answer what the general condition was in respect to which these de- [5554] legates were to be sent.

Mr. Gladstein: That is right, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I think the word is "delegates" rather than "speakers".

Mr. Gladstein: "Delegates" yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: "Delegations".

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: "Delegations" rather than "speakers."

A. To answer the question you would have to briefly outline the entire strategy, the type of strike and all the rest of it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Well, I am asking you to do that.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, if your Honor please. In other words, the witness admits that he can't answer the question without going into a number of other matters that have not been asked.

Mr. Gladstein: Now, if your Honor please,——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing): If counsel wants it I will allow him to have it. Go ahead.

A. Because of the nature of the strike, the strike was a coastwise strike, no attempt was made to operate the ships or use strike breakers. It was the type of a strike that was going to be a kind of sit-out campaign. As a matter of fact, just shortly before we drew up this program it was announced by the ship owning employers that they would keep the ships [5555] tied up for two years to beat us. So it was a kind of a deadlock, no activity or anything, and there was two schools of thought in how to prosecute the strike. One was by militant action to spread the strike, to involve other industries as against the policy that is outlined in that program there, a program of wide publicity to bring the issues of the strike forward, to build up the morale of the men and keep them solid because there was very little activity going on. Picket lines were not of any great use and we well knew that the strike would be won or lost in Washington because of which way the Government might move in the case.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well now, if the Court please, so far I haven't heard a word about this whole piece of sending speakers to the East Coast.

Presiding Inspector: Well, there wasn't any question about that. It was the question of the general conditions——

Mr. Del Guescio: (Interposing): "Policy".

Presiding Inspector: No. The general conditions then prevailing.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is the witness' explanation. He said he couldn't answer the question unless he went into that. The question, as I understand it, is still directed to the policy of sending speakers out to the East Coast.

Presiding Inspector: Read the question, Mr. Reporter.

Mr. Gladstein: Of course, your Honor, we will never get [5556] anywhere if at the end of every sentence Mr. Myron or Mr. Del Guercio pops up to say "I haven't heard the answer" or "Is this responsive?" or, when I am asking a question, when I stop for breath——

Mr. Myron: (Interposing): We won't get very far if we have statements before each question as we have been having.

Presiding Inspector: I think we are losing time, Mr. Gladstein.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Read the question, Mr. Reporter.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as follows:

"Q. Now, Mr. Bridges, with reference to the part of the program set forth in the last exhibit, Alien's Exhibit 32, as to sending speakers to the East to prevail on longshoremen to cooperate, will you explain what that had reference to, what the situation was that that referred to?")

Presiding Inspector: "Situation was that that referred to", that is the part that I heard particularly.

The Witness: That's right. And it was a part of the strike strategy. As I say, the strike differed. It wasn't the type of strike that was fought by——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Yes, you have told us about that.

The Witness: And we had to build the whole thing up [5557] to a certain point before it was wise or of any great use to send delegations back to the East Coast. The meetings and the parades and the rallies were all arranged on the Pacific Coast and they took place, and then a delegation was sent back immediately following the big mass meeting in San Francisco here, which was December the 8th and it was a delegation. Randolph Meriweather of the Marine Engineers, a man named Captain Charlotte of the Masters, Mates & Pilots, and myself was the delegation that was on the East Coast at that time. They were taking care of licensed officers' groups. I was taking care of the longshoremen and the seamen.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What was the problem——

A. (Interposing): And that was the ultimate outcome. That was putting into effect the last point on that twelve-point program to win the strike and build it up to a point where we could settle it.

Q. What was the problem with the longshoremen and seamen on the East Coast which it was felt required sending delegates from the West Coast?

A. They were working. We had been promised support by the international officers in the International Union of the ILA who would support us on the West Coast, even to the extent of striking. The International reneged on that support, and then when the seamen supported us, had their strike declared an outlaw strike—— [5558]

Q. (Interposing): Who had their strike declared an outlaw strike?

A. That is the International Seamen's Union, although their strike was called in keeping with the constitution it was declared illegel and found so by the American Federation of Labor convention that at that time—around that time—met in Florida. So as a result of these things, all these things coupled together, we thought it was necessary to send a delegation to the East Coast to not only try to secure support but, incidentally, to survey the situation to bring back a factual report to the West Coast so we would know exactly how to move and how and when to end the strike, if a favorable opportunity appeared.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Were the longshoremen on the East Coast working ships in such a way as to endanger the West Coast strike? A. Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, if your Honor please, I will object to that extraneous matter, and leading and suggestive not to say the least, and immaterial and irrelevant.

Mr. Gladstein: I can state the materiality. The purpose of the question is to show, your Honor, that the situation was such that it was anticipated on November 19th, it was believed because of what had happened between October 28th and November 19th that it might be necessary to send a delegation or delegations from the West Coast to seek the support of the longshoremen on the East Coast, as this letter says, because of the factual situation, which I now want to bring out, namely,——

[5559]

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing): What is the date of that letter?

Mr. Gladstein: November 19, 1936, your Honor. And, as you see, it specifically refers to West Coast ILA sending delegations to Eastern and Gulf Coasts to prevail on longshoremen for economic action. I was going to show that the situation was such on the East Coast at the time this letter was drawn up and sent that the possibility of successful outcome of the West Coast strike was endangered and depended in a major part on the role that the East Coast longshoremen would play.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: This all bears on the probability of the truthfulness of the testimony of——

Mr. Gladstein: (Interposing): McCuistion and Innes.

Presiding Inspector: (Continuing): Curran, McCuistion and Innes?

Mr. Gladstein: That's right, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Pretty remote.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, now, as I recall it, your Honor, McCuistion and Innes in effect said that Bridges refused to go East.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, at this time. [5560]

Mr. Gladstein: What?

Presiding Inspector: At that time when they talked with him.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes. Well, that was in the first part of December.

Presiding Inspector. Well, sending delegations doesn't necessarily include Mr. Bridges.

Mr. Gladstein: This is only the first step in a chain of proof that we intend to introduce, your Honor. This is only one letter, one document among the number that we intend to offer.

Presiding Inspector: The document is in,

Mr. Gladstein: I know.

Presiding Inspector: And you have got the attitude, the description of the condition in. Now, what more do you want?

Mr. Gladstein: I want to show that the situation on the East Coast was such that Mr. Bridges from November 19th on could have had no other attitude as a sincere trade unionist but that he would go back as soon as it was possible for him to do so, to go back and address those men and attempt to get their co-operation, and that it would be inconceivable for a man of Bridges' type to give a flat denial.

Presiding Inspector: I think you had better leave this for the final argument of the case, because this is not an argument on the admissibility of this evidence but on its [5561] effect.

Mr. Gladstein: No.

Presiding Inspector: Or at least I so take it. I may be wrong about it.

Mr. Gladstein: I am now asking you to allow evidence as to what the situation was on the East Coast as referred to in this letter.

Presiding Inspector: I have already allowed it and I thought he had given it.

Mr. Gladstein: No, there is a question pending on that very thing, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I think he has given it and that is all there is to it.

Mr. Gladstein: No, there is an unanswered question on it.

Presiding Inspector: You have had all about this being declared an outlaw strike and the vote and all these things.

Mr. Gladstein: But, your Honor, I just asked another question, which was——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing): It is just the same, isn't it?

Mr. Gladstein: No.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: Then we will let you ask it after lunch.

Mr. Gladstein: All right. [5562]

Presiding Inspector: Two o'clock.

(Whereupon, at 12:35 o'clock P.M. a recess was taken until 2:00 o'clock P.M. of the same day.) [5563]

After Recess—2:00 O'Clock P.M.

Presiding Inspector: You may proceed.

HARRY RENTON BRIDGES

called as a witness in his own behalf, having been previously duly sworn, testified further as follows:

Direct Examination (Resumed)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Bridges, before I go back to the subject matter you were discussing at the noon recess, I wish to ask you a question for clarification of the record. You were asked this morning whether you had been a Vice President of the California State Federation of Labor. I believe you said you were in the year 1936? A. That is right.

Q. Do you recall just what your term of office was?

A. It was supposed to be for a year, but it terminated before the end of the year.

Q. In what year did it terminate?

A. 1937.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. And just briefly what was the circumstances that caused the termination?

A. That might have been—I think it was a little prior to the time we affiliated with the CIO. Our unions were suspended before we affiliated with the CIO and my office automati- [5564] cally ended when my union was suspended from the State Federation of Labor.

Q. Now, at the noon recess you were discussing the situation on the east coast in the fall of 1936 as it related to the west coast strike.

Mr. Del Guercio: I am going to object to the statement of counsel. It isn't occasionally, but it is continuously. Preparatory to every question he makes a statement. I think it is highly objectionable.

Presiding Inspector: But this is to continue from the morning.

Mr. Gladstein: That is right; to direct his attention to a particular subject.

Presiding Inspector: Don't make these statements. Go ahead.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. I wish to ask you——

Presiding Inspector: They are not evidence, though. We haven't any jury here, even though the box is full. Go ahead.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. I wish to ask you now, Mr. Bridges, what the situation was on the East Coast with respect to longshoremen which offered a problem, if any problem was offered, to the conduct and successful conduct of the West Coast Strike? [5565]

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to the question and to its form, and also object on the ground that it is immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: I will allow it.

A. The policy of the strike, or the possibilities of the strike, had been discussed at a national conference of our international union of the longshoremen in New York City in September, 1936. At that time it was agreed that on a national basis the West Coast would be supported by the national union.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Which national union?

A. International Longshoremen's Association. When we actually got to the strike the support was not forthcoming. The International officers refused to give the support that they had promised that in part led us somewhat into the strike. Therefore, later on in the strike, about a month after it started, I think, we set a deadline at a certain date that we would give the national union to give us the support on the East Coast and the Gulf that was promised us.

Q. What kind of support was that?

A. Various kinds of support, financial support, but mainly economic support in the way of refusing to load ships that were running to the Pacific Coast and prolonging our strike. And we set a deadline as to when the loading of those ships should cease by members of our own International Union on the East Coast and in Gulf ports, and if the deadline [5566] passed without action being taken the delegations were to go back east and try to have the men take action in defiance of the International officials because of the agreement that had been properly made in September.

In addition to that, of course, many locals on the East Coast had communicated both to the International and to us their willingness and their desire to refuse to handle this cargo or load these ships, and they said that if they were asked by West Coast delegations of longshoremen to cease work on these ships they would do so.

Q. Is that the situation to which reference is made in the letter of November 19th where it speaks of sending delegations to request cooperation from East Coast longshoremen?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the significance, if any, of East Coast longshoremen working or continuing to work ships bound for the West Coast with respect to the successful conduct of your strike on the West Coast?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that as being immaterial and irrelevant.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

A. The American Pacific Coast was shut down. That is, the entire coast line in all the American ports between the Canadian border and Mexico, and they were keeping it shut down, and at the same time moving certain goods by having ships come [5567] from the East Coast and discharging in ports in Mexico and then running the goods up by rail and having ships come and discharge in British Columbia and running the goods south by rail. In other words, Mexican ports and the West Coast of Mexico, Ensenada, were servicing California; British Columbia ports were servicing the Northwest. And those ships were being loaded and coming to the West Coast in an attempt to break down our strength, and at the same time keep a certain amount of freight moving, and those ships were being loaded and worked by our own union men affiliated with our own union that was on strike on the West Coast; at least, I mean, the same men on the East Coast, members of the same national union, after we had been promised and had a written agreement by the national union that we could get the support and they wouldn't do that.

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I move that the entire answer be stricken upon the ground that it has nothing to do with the issues of this case.

Presiding Inspector: I understand it is the general picture, although I think it is pretty remote. This all bears on the testimony of McQuistion and Innes, I suppose. That is the whole purpose of this, isn't it?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Gladstein: Well, yes.

Presiding Inspector: That is all, if that is its sole purpose. Of course, we are not interested in this strike as [5568] strike.

Mr. Gladstein: No. We are interested only in the position taken by Mr. Bridges at various stages of the strike as those positions reflect an attitude inconsistent with the testimony of any Government witness given.

Presiding Inspector: If it is inconsistent.

Mr. Gladstein: We submit that that is the purpose.

Presiding Inspector: That is your contention.

Mr. Gladstein: That is the purpose of it.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, Mr. Bridges, at about this time in 1936 were you acquainted with Peter J. Innes?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you first meet him?

A. The latter part of September, 1936, I think; it might have been earlier. I met him before the strike took place. I am not sure if I met him before we had the conference in New York, our International conference, but I would say it could have been August or September '36.

Q. Under what circumstances, do you recall?

A. I recall at least one circumstance; that was where he had ordered some crews off of a ship in the Port of San Francisco in defiance and against the orders of our Maritime Council that generally had jurisdiction over such matters, [5569] if it was going to be participated in by all Unions.

Q. Do you recall whether you had any difficulties with Mr. Innes during the 1936 strike in any way with respect to the conduct by Innes of strike groups or committees? A. We did.

Q. When did you have such difficulty and what was its nature?

A. On matters of strike policy, the first part of the strike, we had a question as to how the strike should be conducted in respect to certain ships. For example, as to whether ships, whose home port was an eastern port, or a Gulf port, as to whether those ships would proceed back to their home ports before they were struck, or as to whether they would be struck in the ports where they happened to be at that time, even though not in the home port of the ship.

Our policy was to have the ships struck where they lay except, of course, any ship that was in a foreign port, and she was to be sailed back home to the first American port and struck there.

I believe, if my memory is good on the point, that Innes advocated a program of sailing the ships back to their home ports, which we were opposed to.

Q. What would be the significance of such a policy?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I submit that such a matter is remote and unimportant.

[5570]

Presiding Inspector: I don't see why we should go into that.

Mr. Del Guercio: I thought we were trying to proceed expeditiously.

Presiding Inspector: You have got the facts. Why go any further? We are not trying this strike.

Mr. Gladstein: No, no; of course not. But I wish to state the materiality of this.

I now propose to show, on this issue, and also on another issue which occurred relatively early during the strike, quite a bit before December, before the Madison Square Garden meeting, that Mr. Innes was in rather vigorous opposition to Mr. Bridges——

Presiding Inspector: You have shown that.

Mr. Gladstein: But I wish to show that the significance of those disagreements is so great that your Honor can draw from that fact what we consider appropriate inferences as to whether Mr. Innes could possibly, conceivably have been entrusted with the kind of a telephone conversation which he described in this case.

Mr. Del Guercio: I think that argument——

Presiding Inspector: I——

Mr. Del Guercio (Continuing): ——is so farfetched, your Honor, that—excuse me.

Presiding Inspector: I was going to say that

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

I didn't see how it could lead to any such conclusion. Supposing it [5571] establishes and is absolutely essential to what Mr. Bridges thought was the well being of his union in this strike, what difference would it make beyond the fact that they were in conflict?

Mr. Gladstein: Suppose, your Honor, that the disagreement between Mr. Bridges and Mr. Innes was one which was known to and shared by, say, Mr. Curran, in New York, or other members of the Strike Committee in New York; suppose there had been even correspondence exchanged on that subject. By proving that such disagreements occurred, and the significance of those disagreements, and that there was correspondence between the east and west on that, it would definitely tend to show the position that Mr. Innes occupied, the way in which he was regarded by these same people who he says impressed him with this kind of highly confidential telephone conversation.

Presiding Inspector: You want to pile inference on inference.

Mr. Gladstein: Here is an analogy: As you will recall Mr. McCuistion said, after he had been expelled from the Communist Party, after he had been expelled, he claimed he was regarded in greater and higher confidence than when he was in the Communist Party; and that after he was expelled he was entrusted with the kind of highly confidential matters that he, as a member of the Communist Party, hadn't been entrusted with. I think those are things for the trier of the fact to evaluate. [5572] I think we are entitled to show what position a witness actually occupied in this strike.

Presiding Inspector: You want to draw the inference, from a result of this quarrel in the strike, that Mr. Curran wasn't in a position, or wouldn't naturally communicate with Mr. Innes, and then from that you want to draw the inference that he came up to San Francisco and saw Mr. Bridges on different matters, or something of that kind?

Mr. Gladstein: No. Your Honor hasn't stated the point correctly. You see——

Presiding Inspector: I meant to state it.

Mr. Gladstein: As Mr. Innes and Mr. McCuistion described it—this is my recollection and it is not offered as a substitute for the testimony, but this is my remembrance in summary of what they said: Mr. McCuistion and Mr. Innes in effect said that at a time when neither of them was a member of the Communist Party—in fact, Mr. Innes never claimed to have been a member of the Community Party and never took orders from it, he claimed—and Mr. McCuistion, who had been in the Communist Party, had been expelled from it. At such a time when neither of them was in the Communist Party they would have the Court believe that the Communist Party entrusted them with a highly confidential telephone conversation for the purpose of having Mr. Bridges come back east.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Now, I think that we are entitled to show, apart from [5573] what we consider the inherent credibility of that character of testimony, we are entitled to show the actual position occupied by these men in the strike to additionally reveal to the trier of the fact that no credibility can attach to that kind of testimony; and, therefore, we have a right to show, I believe, that disagreements occurred on various strike issues which were significant disagreements, and the result of which was that correspondence was exchanged between the east and the west raising this whole question of the alleged irresponsibility of Mr. Innes, the allegd untrustworthiness of the man, that he wasn't properly carrying out the policies of the West Coast Strike Committee, and wasn't properly carrying out instructions from the east, all for the purpose of showing that picture from which you have a right to conclude, and we think you should conclude, that this telephone conversation was not a genuine, bona fide telephone conversation.

We have a right to make that contention, and to offer proof in support of that contention. And that, frankly, is our purpose.

Mr. Del Guercio: Counsel has conveniently failed to mention that after Mr. McCuistion was expelled from the Communist Party that, through the Communist Party, Mr. McCuistion enlisted in the Spanish cause, went over there and fought for the Communist Party and was wounded twice; that he carried funds [5574] of the Communist Party,

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

entrusted to him by the Communist Party in New York, funds not only for the recruits that he was in charge of, but funds destined to a Communist Party member in Paris, France, and they say that McCuistion isn't to be believed, that he wasn't closely associated with the Communist Party after he had been expelled. [5575]

Presiding Inspector: Well, that was merely an argument of his general position. I will take the proof.

Mr. Gladstein: I can put it in this form.

Presiding Inspector: No, no. Ask the—have the question——

Mr. Gladstein: I was going to put the question.

Presiding Inspector: You can put it again, of course.

Mr. Del Guercio: I just mentioned that, your Honor, as being the gratitude of the Communist Party as they expressed it.

Presiding Inspector: We are not trying the Communist Party either.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, we are trying the Communist Party here.

Presiding Inspector: No. We are trying Mr. Bridges——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): As a member of the Communist Party.

Presiding Inspector: At least we are hearing about the question of Mr. Bridges as it comes within the condemnation of the deportation law. That is all we are trying really, anyway.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, Mr. Bridges, will you state what significance, if any, there was with specific relationship to the successful outcome of the 1936 strike to this agreement between your [5576] position and the position of Mr. Innes on where ships from other home ports should be struck.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that.

Presiding Inspector: Hasn't he covered that?

Mr. Gladstein: He hasn't stated what the significance was, whether it was important or whether it was a minor and trivial thing.

Presiding Inspector: Isn't that something that we can tell just as well as Mr. Bridges?

Mr. Gladstein: I don't think that anybody reading the record and having just that much would necessarily know that that was an important thing or an unimportant thing.

Presiding Inspector: I should think anyone reading the record would know it. But you may show it.

Mr. Gladstein: If your Honor is satisfied——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): Go ahead. Ask it.

Mr. Gladstein: I did. I did ask it.

Presiding Inspector: Let Mr. Bridges answer.

A. Well, the effect of the issue itself would be, of course, to prolong the strike for the reason that it would take two or three months to even get the strike going or to get it tightened up. On this specific case there were two or three positions. I can't exactly recall where Innes was on the first position, but we finally got it straightned out.

[5577]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Was there any other issue on which there was disagreement between Mr. Innes and yourself or Mr. Curran? A. Yes.

Q. What?

Mr. Del Guercio: We object, of course, to all this line.

Presiding Inspector: Certainly. Certainly.

A. Very early in the strike the issue of removing perishable goods from the ships that were tied up—our policy was to remove them, such as refrigerated goods, fruits and perishable types of cargo that was stored in the refrigerators aboard the ships. And inasmuch as the crews had been withdrawn from the ships there was nobody to operate the refrigerating machinery and those goods would rot away.

Our policy was to—even though the strike was on, to supply men to remove those goods. Innes was in opposition to that.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What was the importance in respect to the possible winning of the strike of whether or not refrigerated goods should be removed from the ships? A. We didn't accomplish——

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): I would object to that as calling for pure speculation.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it. I think it is [5578] pretty speculative.

Mr. Gladstein: I beg your pardon?

Presiding Inspector: I think it is pretty speculative, but I will take it. It is his conclusion on things that never happened, and his policy was this. He stated it, but he may answer, if he wants to venture a conclusion on that.

A. (Continuing): There were two or three reasons. Some of these goods were aboard——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): Read the question. I don't know that I have it in mind.

(Whereupon the question referred to was read by the reporter as follows

"Q. What was the importance in respect to the possible winning of the strike of whether or not refrigerated goods should be removed from the ships?")

Presiding Inspector: What was the importance toward winning the strike?

A. (Continuing): Well, it had a bearing. Some of these such goods were aboard ships that were subsidized by the United States Government and the authorities in Washington were threatening to remove those goods, and eventually, as a matter of fact, the Marshal in Los Angeles Harbor was ordered through some kind of a warrant to remove certain perishable goods. It was a cargo of bananas from one of the ships, and the situation could have been threatening and damaging to our strike. We were sacrificing [5579] public opinion with no good coming out of it. And, after all, the goods and the food was going to waste and was rotting.

The way it finally wound up, the various committees argued so long that by the time they decided on the policy, which was not to remove the goods, the stuff had rotted away and gone bad anyhow.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, is there any other issue on which you and Mr. Innes were in disagreement?

A. Yes. The formation in San Pedro of a group of men that he was working with and leading as a group separate and apart from the other body of strikers. He had his own committee, his own commissary, and soup kitchen and such things as that; his own little set-up.

Q. What was the importance—withdraw that. Were you opposed to Mr. Innes conducting that kind of separate soup kitchen, commissary and other aspects of the strike involving the East Coast men who were in San Pedro?

A. Yes. We believed that the best way to handle the whole thing and that made for greater unity and solidarity was to handle the whole thing as one group of strikers, seamen and longshoremen, East Coast and West Coast men combined, and not as groups, from this, that, or the other part of the nation.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Now, on that subject matter do you recall whether correspondence in the form of teletypes or any other form took place between the East and West with respect to any con- [5580] fusion that was caused by the manner in which Mr. Innes conducted this separate group in San Pedro?

A. We notified the East Coast that unless Innes was ordered to cease the policies or attempt to carry out these certain policies that we would have nothing to do with him and would not work with him in any way.

Mr. Gladstein: While counsel is examining that, I want to say that there will be various teletypes or telegrams introduced or perhaps additional letters. Will the same understanding prevail, that we will have the right to withdraw the originals upon the substitution of photostats made by the Court Reporter?

Presiding Inspector: Why, of course, unless there is some doubt as to their authenticity and they want to examine into that.

Mr. Gladstein: We have no objection to that.

Mr. Del Guercio: We do. We want to reserve that.

Presiding Inspector: You have a right to do that, of course, just as that same privilege was allowed to Mr. Gladstein.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, Mr. Bridges, I show you what appears to be a teletype message under date of November

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

21st and ask you if you can identify it as a teletype actually sent and received on the West Coast with respect to the question of confusion caused by the manner in which Mr. Innes was conducting the [5581] East Coast strikers' group in San Pedro.

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I object to the question, to the form of it and giving it at this time. He is showing here the Alien here a telegram that is complete, apparently, in itself. And so is interpreting it for the witness before he asks a question on it, and I submit that that is out of place.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think it will do any harm, though, Mr. Del Guercio. All the question is is whether he identifies this.

Mr. Gladstein: That is right.

Mr. Del Guercio: Why couldn't——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): Well, I don't know.

Mr. Del Guercio: Why all the preliminary?

Presiding Inspector: That is his way, and we can't——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): I think it is highly objectionable.

Presiding Inspector: Even if we might want to make him over we couldn't do it. He has a right to present his case in his own way.

All you want about this is whether he identifies it.

Mr. Gladstein: I might state that my purpose

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

in having the question phrased so as to make it significant and whole in and of itself is because when you read a record, and I have read many transcripts of trials, if you do not put the facts fully enough in a question the answer "Yes" or "No" [5582] may be meaningless and you may have to search all through the record and find difficulty in connecting up that question or that answer with the subject matter that you are interested in having brought out. And I therefore have learned from experience that it is best to put these things in a question with sufficient detail so that there can't be any argument later on as to what the record means.

Mr. Del Guercio: The question is not the answer.

Presiding Inspector: Do you recognize its having been received?

A. Yes. This is a carbon copy.

Presiding Inspector: You know about it personally?

The Witness: Yes. This is a carbon copy. This is not the original. The original is on white paper as it comes out of the teletype and this is a carbon, and I recognize this as having been received by our Strike Committee.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Do you know here you were at the time this was received?

A. I would have to check that. I have got records to show whether I was in San Francisco. Possibly I was in San Francisco at that time.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Gladstein: I offer this in evidence and call your Honor's attention to a portion of it.

Mr. Del Guercio: Just a minute! I object to that. [5583] No proper foundation has been laid for the introduction of it in evidence.

Presiding Inspector: I haven't seen it.

(The proffered Exhibit was passed to the Presiding Inspector.)

Mr. Del Guercio: It isn't addressed to Mr. Bridges, it isn't signed by Mr. Bridges.

Mr. Gladstein: I can lay a more complete foundation, your Honor, as to where these teletype machines were.

Mr. Del Guercio: I think we should have Mr. Rathborne on the stand to identify it.

Presiding Inspector: Well, I don't see how a teletype from Mr. Rathborne is of any importance here.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, that teletype——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): This was both received and sent on the Pacific Coast, as I understand it.

Mr. Gladstein: That was and makes reference to a communication sent from the East Coast to the West Coast.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Gladstein: I will do this before ask——

Presiding [illegible]ector (Interposing): I don't know what these letters really mean.

Mr. Gladstein: I will ask the witness about that.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Bridges, will you describe what the teletype [5584] set-up was during the 1936 strike with reference to the various cities in which they were located—the machines, that is—and the offices in which they were located and how communication over the teletype machines took place.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that as being four or five questions in one.

Presiding Inspector: I think that is all right. I will allow that. Go ahead.

A. We had a teletype network. San Francisco, Portland, Seattle and San Pedro was connected by teletype, and San Francisco and New York and Los Angeles and New York. The teletypes were in the various Union offices. In San Francisco the teletype was in my office, and when a teletype came in the girl receiving it—the teletypes were not received personally by myself operating the machine or Rathborne or any of the other officials. There were received by a girl operating the machine and she would sign off on our name or whoever received or whoever the message was intended for. Then later, of course, Innes had his own apparatus in Los Angeles or San Pedro where he set up a teletype machine in his separate committee quarters or strike quarters down there, and these messages, of course, passed around the network and were relayed on. If they happened to come through from New York to Los Angeles they would be relayed up to

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

San Francisco. If they happened to come from New York to San Francisco they would be relayed down [5585] to San Pedro, because sometimes New York might call on account of the difference in time and they mightn't find the particular person or somebody of sufficient importance in the office. They might be at a meeting somewhere. Therefore, they would switch the call to San Francisco and we would relay on and at the same time we would understand and know what the messages were as they passed through.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, was the teletype in the San Francisco office used by and in the offices of yourself only or yourself and anybody else?

A. Myself and Rathborne. But the teletype was located in—we had three offices and the teletype was located in the center office and operated by my secretary.

Q. What was your—withdraw that.

Did you hold any position in the District Council at that time? A. President.

Q. That is the District Council of the Maritime Federation?

A. Of San Francisco Bay Area, yes.

Q. And who was the Secretary?

A. Rathborne.

Mr. Gladstein: Now, I think with that basis, your Honor, [5586] that the witness is qualified to identify this as a teletype.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I don't believe by the witness' own statement that he is qualified. He didn't see this come in, he wasn't there when it came in. He can't testify as to where it came from. He says he don't use the teletype machine himself. That is delegated to the secretary, Mr. Rathborne.

Mr. Gladstein: He didn't say that. He said the girl in his office actually operated the machine.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. When you said "the girl in the office"——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) And that thing can be typed off a machine as well as a teletype.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Bridges, when you said "the girl in the office" to whom did you have reference?

A. My secretary.

Q. The stenographer?

A. Not necessarily. When a teletype came through there might have been three of us standing around the machine reading the message as it was typed on the machine. Rathborne, being the Secretary, would generally sign communications, if he was there at all. In other words, when we received this and I was standing there and two or three other people, we wouldn't sign "Bridges, Rathborne and Joe Blow". We would sign one name. [5587] Teletypes cost money and we would sign "Rathborne". That's the way these things came through. It is entirely possible that when this teletype came through I was standing right by the machine with Rathborne watching the message come through.

Q. How many teletype messages would you estimate were sent and received in the San Francisco office for the duration of the strike?

A. Several daily, from all points. That would be West Coast points as well as East Coast points.

Q. Now, after the strike or during the strike what arrangements, if you know, were made to keep files of the various teletypes that had been received or sent in the San Francisco office?

A. They were filed; maybe not very efficiently, but we filed them away in the cellar some way.

Q. This teletype that I have just handed you, did it come from one of the files into which were placed such of the teeltypes as were kept in the 1936 strike?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to the question. We are interested in this particular teletype.

Mr. Gladstein: I said that. I asked him that.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

A. Yes. I procured that myself. I searched the records myself.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, when the teletype was sent, Mr. Bridges, [5588] would you describe, please, the way in which a conversation could be held over the teletype machine.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that as being immaterial and not laying a foundation for the admission of the document.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: I will take that. This is the general teletype operation.

A. Two or three ways. You could dictate a message. If it was a long statement and going a long way, such as New York, the best and efficient and cheapest way was to dictate the statement that you were going to make first and then you could edit it and you could eliminate all the unnecessary words and the girl could type it faster. If it were a shorter or long message you could stand at the teletype while the girl was sending the message and tell her what you wanted sent as she sent it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, did it sometimes occur that—withdraw that.

How would a connection between the San Francisco office and any of the other places to which San Francisco was connected by teletype be made?

A. You would call their call number on the teletype.

Q. After that connection was made was it possible for a two-way conversation to take place; that is to say, for one of the stations to speak in writing or in written form to the other and then receive an answer or further questions [5589] from the other end and carry it back and forth that way?

A. That's right. We used to even hold meetings on the teletype. We would have four or five stations on. We would have San Pedro, Portland, San Francisco, New York maybe, and Seattle all listening in at the same time and all talking backwards and forwards.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Would it—withdraw that.

Now, during the strike were teletypes filed away in the Maritime Federation office that showed conversations that were held between San Francisco and other ports? A. Yes.

Q. Did those teletypes show conversations alternately; that is to say, where the San Francisco office would be speaking in written form and then the other office would speak and then back to San Francisco, and so forth?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that question, if your Honor please.

Presiding Inspector: This is the operation of the teletype.

Mr. Gladstein: That's right.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

A. That's right. That's the way it works. [5590]

Mr. Gladstein: I think there has been sufficient identification of this teletype and I renew my offer, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Are these teletypes signed?

Mr. Gladstein: You mean in handwriting?

Presiding Inspector: In general?

The Witness: No.

Presiding Inspector: Do they bear a signature?

The Witness: In some cases they bear a signature spelled out; and in some cases they bear the initials; and in some cases they bear dates. It was generally our practice that the only signing done was by the written teletype, and unless the date was not typed at the time, the girl penciled or inked the date in.

Presiding Inspector: Is that the signature of the receiver or sender?

The Witness: The signature of both. In other words, when the call, when somebody was calling to San Francisco, for example, they type in, well, this is such and such a number, Portland, calling; and they would ask for who they wanted to speak to, maybe such and such a number in San Francisco; and they would say who was calling, and they would sign their name, spell out their name, or give their initials; and the person receiving the message would do likewise. That is to say, this is so and so speaking, and when they sign off they sign off the same way. [5591]

Presiding Inspector: Let me see it.

(The document referred to was passed to the Presiding Inspector.)

Mr. Gladstein: I might say, your Honor——

Presiding Inspector: I don't understand it, not the words, but I don't understand the process, as to where the name of the sender is on this.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Would you explain that further——

First, let me ask this, your Honor: I realize I can't duplicate for the record what a teletype machine is like, and so on. But if your Honor is not familiar with it——

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: I am entirely unfamiliar with it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Bridges, would you describe the teletype machine itself, and what it looks like, as the thing is being operated, and a message is being sent, say, from San Francisco to Portland; and then how Portland can send its message to San Francisco?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, as long as counsel is suggesting this form of a question I can make a suggestion, too, and I think it will clear this up. It is possible, as I understand it, for a teletype machine to make one of these copies without communicating with anybody. You could practice on the teletype sending messages. [5592]

Presiding Inspector: When I have looked into it I will probably take judicial notice of the operation of the teletype, but at the moment I am entirely in the dark on it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Will you proceed, Mr. Bridges?

A. A teletype is just like a typewriter, except that to the back of it is attached a long roll of paper, this type of paper (indicating), excepting it is in a long roll. As you type a message on the teletype it writes it on this paper, and at the same time transmits it by telegraph to the point you are talking to. Then when you get through sending your message the party on the other end responds and your teletype moves, and the message appears before you, and the keys on the teletype move as if an invisible hand was typing them.

Presiding Inspector: You tear if off?

The Witness: Yes. This is part of a long roll. We still have in our files long rolls of these teletypes, six or eight feet long.

Of course, the message is sent like this message is sent, they have a call number.

The number here, call letters here, are "Marfed". That designates the station in San Pedro that is sending it. It is "Marfed."

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. That stands for what? [5593]

A. Maritime Federation.

Mr. Del Guercio: Of course, if these questions are directed to qualifying the witness as an expert we would like to question him also on the teletype machine.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think this is an expert matter. It is just the use of a familiar instrument, familiar to most people, but I never happened to have had any experience with the teletype.

Mr. Gladstein: Actually, your Honor, it is an attempt to——

Presiding Inspector: I wouldn't explain it.

Go ahead, Mr. Bridges. I will take it. You have given, or said that "Marfed" means San Pedro.

The Witness: "Marfed" meant San Pedro at that time; yes, sir.

Then the individual's name is signed here, "Jordan."

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Jordan, I know, was the Secretary of the Strike Committee at that time.

"Marfed", that is a mistake. "Marfed" was San Francisco and not San Pedro. If I said San Pedro before that is incorrect. "Marfed" was our call, San Francisco. That was because San Francisco was the head office, and where we had our headquarters, and "Marfed" meant Maritime Federation Headquarters. I didn't mean to say San Pedro.

Mr. Del Guercio: I think we are getting away from the [5594] real issue at point here.

Presiding Inspector: They are trying to explain to me how a teletype works.

Mr. Del Guercio: But the teletype hasn't been identified as having been received—purported to have been sent.

Presiding Inspector: He said to the best of his recollection it was received. He didn't say about the date.

Mr. Gladstein: He said that he obtained this from a file in which was kept, not all——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) From a file? Taken from the teletype.

Mr. Gladstein: He said he obtained this document from a file.

Presiding Inspector: I know what he said. I can't understand still who it went to, or where it was sent, or where it came from.

The Witness: As a matter of fact, during the strike there was some inexpert people on the other end sending a lot of these messages and we had a tough time understanding some of them ourselves.

In regard to this particular message I know it was ultimately transmitted by telegraph and the official telegram, or a copy of the telegram appears in the minutes of the Strike Committee around this date. That is the text of that teletype. [5595]

Mr. Del Guercio: It is more confusing than it ever was, if your Honor please.

Mr. Gladstein: This is simply as he recollects it. He has an independent recollection, in addition to the document that he has been talking about, an independent recollection that the subject matter of the document was also the subject matter of the telegram, and that it came in and became a part of the official minutes of the union.

Mr. Myron: So probably it wasn't a teletype message at all.

Presiding Inspector: You can have both, you know.

Mr. Gladstein: I renew my offer.

Presiding Inspector: You offer the document?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: Have it marked for identification and let me ask some questions about it.

Mr. Gladstein: All right.

(The document referred to was marked for identification as Alien's Exhibit No. 33.)

Presiding Inspector: Does the signature on this instrument—I call it an instrument—this paper, which is Alien's Exhibit 38 for identification, that name at the end, does that purport, as you understand the teletype practice, to be the sender or the receiver?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

The Witness: Here? (Indicating). [5596]

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

The Witness: That is the sender.

Presiding Inspector: Where was it received?

The Witness: San Francisco. First of all is the call.

Presiding Inspector: Can you tell where it was sent from?

The Witness: San Pedro—"San Pedro. O.K. End."

Here is the message here (indicating) and that is the end of the message.

Presiding Inspector: It is a message from——

The Witness: (Interposing) Jordan.

Presiding Inspector: From someone in San Pedro named Jordan?

The Witness: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: To the San Francisco office of the Strike Committee, and received by Rathborne?

The Witness: That is right. And these letters that appear here (indicating) are some code letters that we had that I forget the meaning of them. I can recall the meaning of these (indicating) code letters here, but these code letters appearing before and after Jordan's name, I forget the meaning, what they really meant at that time, now.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

But that is the way the message came. It is a message to Rathborne. Rathborne replies and signs off; and then Jordan replies again and signs off.

[5597]

Jordan was the Secretary of the Los Angeles Strike Committee and he is sending the message to the Maritime Federation Headquarters in San Francisco, which was my office at that time.

Presiding Inspector: What was Innes doing at that time? What was his position with this Strike Committee?

The Witness: Innes, he had no position with our Strike Committee. He had his own separate Strike Committee. That is what the complaint was. We complained to the East Coast, and this was in answer to it.

Presiding Inspector: That was a committee of what?

The Witness: Innes' committee?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

The Witness: Merely a committee of men who had walked off East Coast ships, meaning ships whose home port was on the East Coast.

Presiding Inspector: They weren't members of your local lodges?

The Witness: They were members of the East Coast—they belonged on two big ships laying in the port of San Pedro, members of two big passenger ships laying in San Pedro. There were about 300 all told. He took these people and set up separate strike headquarters, and a separate Strike Commissary, teletype system, and all the rest, and that was what the complaint was about. This is a teletype instructing Innes and [5598] notifying us.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Gladstein: I renew the offer.

Presiding Inspector: That is a communication between two people, neither of whom are present, reporting a further communication from a man who has been sworn here as a witness. Now, what point is there in this?

Mr. Gladstein: I will be very happy to tell you.

In the first place, this teletype, as described by the witness, appears by his testimony to have been brought into existence, sent and received, and sent back, and so on, in the manner in which he described it in the usual and ordinary course of the business of operating the teletype in connection with the business of operating a strike on the West Coast in 1936. It deals with a subject matter concerning which this witness has testified and concerning which Mr. Innes testified. And I remind your Honor that Mr. Innes admitted, when he was on the stand, that he was involved in an altercation——

Presiding Inspector: Then why do you need anything more?

Mr. Gladstein: I would like to have the facts because he places his own interpretation on it. I think he said he was almost thrown out of the union—I don't purport to quote him—he said he had quite a disagreement on this very same issue of the way in which he was conducting the San Pedro Hall for the East Coast men. Now, Mr. Innes made this interpretation of it: That he, Mr. Innes, was conducting himself in that way [5599] because he refused to place those east coast men under the domination of the West Coast Unions, which he called Communist-dominated. That is his testimony here today.

We wish to show, not only by the testimony of Mr. Bridges, and by the testimony which Mr. Curran has already given, but by records which came into existence as a part of the ordinary course of the strike——

Presiding Inspector: I don't see that it helps you. Now, you want this as a hearsay statement of what Mr. Curran communicated,——

Mr. Del Guercio: Jordan.

Presiding Inspector: (Continuing) ——to Rathborne.

Mr. Gladstein: Is your Honor raising the objection that this is hearsay?

Presiding Inspector: Well, it is triple hearsay, isn't it?

Mr. Gladstein: I made that objection before when the Government was putting in hearsay, and I think I said it was triple hearsay, and you allowed it.

Mr. Del Guercio: Not on the introduction of documents.

Presiding Inspector: It should at least be given by word of mouth, so you could test at least one witness on it. We haven't Mr. Jordan or we haven't Mr. Rathborne.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Mr. Rathborne is available.

Mr. Gladstein: There are a great many of these documents, [5600] these teletypes, which were received and filed away. And I say they came into existence in a manner in which Mr. Bridges testified.

If your Honor is going to invoke a technical rule to exclude this evidence it seems to me that——

Presiding Inspector: I am not invoking any rule——

Mr. Gladstein: (Continuing) ——it would not be consistent with the liberal rulings you have heretofore made when we objected.

Presiding Inspector: First, I think it is only remotely relevant anyway. It seems to me that such a teletype message has no particular point. You have got the testimony of Mr. Curran.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. I will put it in this form: Mr. Bridges, I want to ask you whether you know if, during the 1936 strike Mr. Curran, in response to protests from the West Coast, notified the West that, having received information that Peter Innes was causing confusion, Mr. Curran, under the circumstances, called on the West Coast Strike Committee to instruct Innes that he, Innes, was to work completely under the jurisdiction of the Joint Strike Committee and not as an individual.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that.

Presiding Inspector: You claim he knew it. He may have read it in the newspaper. [5601]

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Gladstein: It makes no difference if he got the information.

Presiding Inspector: Yes it does. He can't tell his knowledge of a fact of that kind without giving the source. Of course, if this really had any immediate pertinence why we might overlook all these things.

Mr. Gladstein: It has two points of materiality: One is——

Presiding Inspector: You told us about that.

Mr. Gladstein: I have only discussed one.

The other, it is a question of the state of mind of Mr. Bridges with respect to Mr. Innes.

Presiding Inspector: How is that material?

Mr. Gladstein: Because if Mr. Bridges was of the opinion, and had the attitude at that time that Mr. Innes was causing confusion by a disruptive program, was not carrying out a program which had been agreed to by the unions involved, so much so that Mr. Bridges participated in a complaint to the East Coast about Innes, Mr. Bridges would be in a position to state what his attitude was toward Innes.

Presiding Inspector: I have already allowed that.

Mr. Gladstein: But on this specific subject you have not?

Presiding Inspector: It doesn't make any difference what the subject is. His attitude is all we need, isn't it? As far as that is concerned we have already got it in the case. [5602]

Mr. Gladstein: I know, but the basis for a person's attitude, the specific events which substantiate that attitude, which make that attitude understandable and logical, that, to the trier of the fact, is important. Otherwise, all you are allowing us to do is to give the empty shell of a generalization and we are not content with that. We believe we should have the picture, all the facts.

Presiding Inspector: I notice that. You see, this matter strikes me of very little importance, in view of what you have already got. But if you think that anything is added by this you can call Mr. Rathborne, and you can call Mr. Jordan.

Mr. Gladstein: There are teletype messages during this particular strike to which signatures appear of perhaps twenty different people. Is it your Honor's position that we have to call all those twenty people in order to establish something that Mr. Bridges is certainly qualified to discuss?

Presiding Inspector: Of which he has already told at this hearing.

Mr. Gladstein: Which is the point? First, you say——

Presiding Inspector: I don't know what the point is.

Mr. Gladstein: I am asking you what the point of your objection is.

Presiding Inspector: First, that it doesn't come within earshot of proof, legal proof. It is a message on a piece of paper here which undoubtedly, according to the testimony of [5603] Mr. Bridges, and I have no reason to doubt it, is a teletype message received by Mr. Rathborne from Mr. Jordan.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Now, there the whole thing is. We don't know whether Mr. Jordan was correct. He is giving something there that he is quoting. But we don't know what he is quoting it from, how they received it, what was the point of it, or anything else.

Mr. Gladstein: Some of these teletypes, your Honor, we did not have in court on the day that Peter Innes testified; some of the teletypes that we are interested in introducing in evidence came from Innes, or were sent to Innes—at least Innes was involved in a two-way conversation. According to your theory it would then be incumbent on us to secure Mr. Innes, or the other party, or parties, to whom he was talking, because there may have been quite a number, in order to identify those teletypes.

Presiding Inspector: We will come to that question when you produce those messages.

Mr. Gladstein: I am simply following out to its logical conclusion the theory of your objection.

Presiding Inspector: You have several times objected to what you called triple hearsay.

Mr. Gladstein: I don't so consider this. I have objected to what I called triple hearsay when the Government attempted to introduce such evidence, and it is my recollection that the Government was permitted to put it in. I don't just recall——[5604]

Presiding Inspector: I sustained your objection.

Mr. Grossman: No. Your Honor will remember Mr. Honig was testifying and he stated that in Moscow someone said that someone in the United States said that Harry Bridges was a Communist and that was introduced and received against our objection.

There are other examples.

Mr. Chase testified that Mr. Hanoff told him that Bridges was a Communist.

Presiding Inspector: I have admitted hearsay on both sides of the table, repeatedly. But as to this triple hearsay, Mr. Gladstein objected to it on that ground, and my recollection is that I sustained Mr. Gladstein.

Mr. Grossman: We have not won any victory at all on hearsay objections.

Presiding Inspector: I beg your pardon. My recollection is different. You may be right, but I think you have.

Mr. Gladstein: If we have won a victory on objections to Government hearsay testimony it would have to be on fourth hearsay, and not on third.

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, that is very nice of you and——

Presiding Inspector: I think I will answer Mr. Gladstein, if he needs any answer.

Go ahead and ask your next question.

Mr. Gladstein: I had a question pending. May I have it [5605] read?

Presiding Inspector: We will never finish this case if we are going to discuss each instrument that you bring in of this kind.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, your Honor, I would like to accommodate you. We didn't bring this case in the first place. We think it is an outrage that the case was ever brought in the first place.

Presiding Inspector: I am not interested in that.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Gladstein: We want to make our defense.

Presiding Inspector: You know that I didn't bring this case either, and I am not interested in who brought it, and I think there should be no comment of that kind from counsel.

You may have your question read.

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as follows:

"Q. I will put it in this form: Mr. Bridges, I want to ask you whether you know if, during the 1936 strike Mr. Curran, in response to protests from the West Coast, notified the West that, having received information that Peter Innes was causing confusion, Mr. Curran, under the circumstances, called on the West Coast Strike Committee to instruct Innes that he, Innes, was to work completely under the jurisdiction of the Joint Strike Committee and not as an individual?")

Presiding Inspector: Before you answer that question, [5606] did you have any information that you received from Mr. Curran, or did you have any direct telephonic or teletypic communication on the subject?

The Witness: I know all about it, your Honor, and it is my recollection that we didn't only receive it by telephone, by telegram and by teletype, but I was involved in it and it is a matter of official record in the minutes of the Committee at that time.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did you have any personal discussions with Mr. Innes on the subject?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Very definitely I did, right in my office.

Mr. Del Guercio: Your Honor, there hasn't been a ruling on my objection.

Presiding Inspector: I overruled the objection—I overrule the objection.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, do you have in mind the question that I asked you——

A. (Interposing): Yes.

Q. What is the answer to that question?

A. That is correct; he did.

Mr. Gladstein: Will you allow us a recess now?

Presiding Inspector: Yes; certainly.

(Whereupon a short recess was taken.) [5607]

Mr. Gladstein: Are you ready, your Honor?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, Mr. Bridges, did you ever have conversations—personal conversations—with Mr. Innes in which there was disagreement between the two of you over the question of Mr. Innes' operation of the or conduct of the East Coast strikers' problems in San Pedro?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, if your Honor please. If it goes to the bias of the witness, of course, it will also show the bias of this witness equally.

Mr. Gladstein: Then I don't see why the Government should object.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

A. Yes.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What were they?

Presiding Inspector: Now, are you contradicting Innes without giving him an opportunity to explain?

Mr. Gladstein: Giving whom an opportunity to explain?

Presiding Inspector: You are now asking for a conversation with Innes going to his credibility.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: Shouldn't you have asked him about it? [5608]

Mr. Gladstein: No, I don't think we are confined to offering this merely by way of impeachment.

Presiding Inspector: Isn't that the point?

Mr. Gladstein: It may follow that he is impeached, but that isn't necessarily the rule of evidence to which the introduction——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): No, no. I thought that was the sole purpose of it.

Mr. Gladstein: We think that it would have that effect, but we think it is admissible simply as part of the situation as it actually developed and as the witness can describe it to show again the state of mind of Mr. Bridges as of that time with respect to Mr. Innes; that is, Mr. Bridges' attitude and so on, all for the purpose of advising your Honor as to whether it would be conceivable or credible that Mr. Bridges could be involved in this kind of a telephone conversation that was testified to and to which I am coming later.

A. The conversations were notifying him that we would not put up with the actions and the policies that he was——

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): Speak a little louder, please.

A. (Continuing): ——guilty of, and he was notified by me that unless something was done about it, why, he would be excluded from our committee meetings. And he was excluded [5609] from one and it eventually resulted in him being ordered to work under our instructions.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. By whom was he so ordered, if you know?

A. By Joe Curran.

Q. Now, I show you a letter, which I have already shown counsel, under date of November 27, 1936 and ask you to identify it.

Mr. Del Guercio: Before the witness replies, if your Honor please, if it is the same letter that counsel showed me it is a mimeographed copy unsigned.

Mr. Gladstein: It bears a mimeographed signature, I believe, does it not?

The Witness: No.

Presiding Inspector: That seems to be signed. Isn't that signed?

Mr. Del Guercio: Sir?

Presiding Inspector: It seems to be signed.

The Witness: Not this one.

Mr. Del Guercio: It doesn't even have a mimeographed signature.

The Witness: There was a space left for signature. The copies that went out were signed. This copy didn't go out.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Myron: I object to this testimony in regard to the letter. [5610]

Mr. Gladstein: I think the witness has a right to identify the document.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, yes. He has a right to identify the document. I will allow him to identify it.

A. This was one of the official communications that was sent out at that time by the District Executive Board to all our locals reporting on events up to date and outlining future program in certain respects.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, the copy that you have in your hand appears not to have been signed. Can you explain why?

A. Well, because the only copies that were signed were the ones that went out. The ones that went into the files naturally didn't need any signature unless the stencil on which the letter was mimeographed was signed, and in this case it wasn't. We used both methods. Sometimes we signed the stencil, sometimes we leave the space for the signature and we sign every letter to the locals that go out separately. This is one of the latter ways of doing it. And undoubtedly the originals that went out were all signed by me, some twenty or thirty all told.

Q. Where did you obtain this particular document concerning which you have just testified?

A. From the official files of our organization.

Mr. Gladstein: Before I offer it in evidence I call your Honor's attention—— [5611]

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): Has it any purpose except to refresh the witness' recollection?

Mr. Gladstein: Well, he has already testified on the subject matter.

Presiding Inspector: Of course, I don't know what is in there.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes. I simply wanted to make this statement. The letter of November 27th, your Honor, has two references which are pertinent in view of the testimony that Mr. Bridges has given. One appears on page two and has reference to the fact, as stated in the letter, "that Joseph P. Ryan", and I think he has been identified as the then President of the International Longshoremen's Association, "was refusing to recognize the East Coast marine strike and was forcing the ILA men"—that refers to the longshoremen on the East Coast—"to work shifts despite the maritime workers' picket lines".

The other reference in which we are interested, your Honor, appears on page 3 and there it is stated that "The Executive Board", and that is referring to the Executive Board of the Pacific Coast District of the ILA, the group of which Mr. Bridges was President—"The Executive Board is also seriously considering sending a delegation to the East and Gulf Coasts in order to appeal to the longshoremen there to (illegible) e West Coa.. strike and the East Coast maritime [5612]

Presiding Inspector: Why is this any better than his testimony?

Mr. Gladstein: It is not better than his testimony,

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

but it simply is written corroboration of his testimony.

Presiding Inspector: You can't show that he made similar statements at other times. That is elementary. With his statement, I don't think it is material.

Mr. Gladstein: This is the official statement of the International Longshoremen's Association of the Pacific Coast.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think there will be any question about this point, Mr. Gladstein. I think you are laboring the point here, which I don't think will be controverted.

Mr. Gladstein: I think this testimony controverts some evidence introduced by the Government.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think so, that delegations would be sent or that they were planning to send delegations if they needed them to encourage these co-strikers.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, I have in mind, your Honor, the testimony that Mr. Innes gave to this effect: That he said when he came up here in the early part of December—at one point in his testimony he said it was December 3rd or 4th, I believe, and later on he said "within the first week of December or possibly the last part of November". He was a little vague about the date. But, as I say, at one point he [5613] said December 3rd or 4th. When he came up here to talk to Bridges about going back East——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): If you want it, I will take it.

Mr. Gladstein: I want to explain it, your Honor.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: No. I don't think it is material. I don't think it is any better than his testimony, and I don't think it is necessarily controversial. This is, I don't think it is on a controversial subject.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, if you will let me finish——

Presiding Inspector: Surely. I will let you finish.

Mr. Gladstein: Mr. Innes said at that time, December 3rd or 4th, when he asked Mr. Bridges about going back to New York Mr. Bridges, he said, expressed himself this way: "I don't want to go into that mess back there. I'm not going back there". And then, you remember, Mr. Innes testified about a telephone conversation which Mr. Innes said was the cause of Mr. Bridges changing his mind.

Now, I am here trying to show, your Honor, by a series of documents, as well as the testimony, that Mr. Bridges' state of mind was and his acts were and the written evidence shows that at all times his was the policy, from at least November 19th on and even in prior discussions in a general way also, that he or a delegation of longshoremen—and, as it turns out, the only delegation, as we will show, consisted of him and those [5614] who went on this occasion—would go back East to speak to those mass meetings; that at all times that was his position, and, therefore, that this actual history based on these objective facts, this objective evidence, is inconsistent with the testimony of Mr. Innes and Mr. McCuistion to the effect that Mr. Bridges flatly refused to go, "refused to become involved in that mess back there", and so on and so forth. I think that that is the theory on which we offer this evidence.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Myron: Of course; this is all argument based on incorrect statements of the record, and so forth.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it. I don't think it adds anything to the testimony already given. It is a self-serving declaration of this witness. But we are granting you very liberal interpretation of the rules. I will take it.

(The document referred to was received in evidence and marked Alien's Exhibit No. 34.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I wouldn't waste so much time if it wasn't for the fact that I suspect or anticipate that they will offer not only these but probably hundreds of these same things. That's the reason why I am urging these objections. Here, ordinarly, the document itself is inocuous.

Presiding Inspector: It seems to me so.

Mr. Del Guercio: That is the reason I am offering objections, but I don't want to lay the groundwork here for introducing others. [5615]

Presiding Inspector: It is perfectly proper for you to do that.

Mr. Del Guercio: I want to call the Court's attention that the one previously introduced bears the mimeographed signature of Mr. Bridges and also his initials "HRB". I suppose they are his initials. He doesn't testify that they are.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, yes, he does.

Mr. Del Guercio: And this one here bears no signature. Both of these documents have been in the possession of the witness here since, well, I don't know how long. Now, we don't concede the authenticity of these documents. We don't have any way of knowing that they were written at the time he says they were. If they want to support, of course, the witness' oral testimony by matters of this kind, I don't know that we could stop them. But I say it serves no purpose at all as the Court has stated.

Presiding Inspector: I never supposed that supporting statements or statements to the same effect made at other times to other people are admissible unless you have proof that he made contradictory statements, and there is no proof that Mr. Bridges has made contradictory statements that I know of.

Mr. Gladstein: That is how I interpret Mr. Innes' testimony.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, no. They are not contradictory.

Mr. Gladstein: And Mr. McCuistion's testimony. [5616]

Presiding Inspector: I think not.

Mr. Del Guercio: We can't proceed on counsel's interpretation of it.

Presiding Inspector: I will take those. I will take the teletype, too, that you put in. I think that is innocuous.

Mr. Myron: That is a carbon copy of what purports to be a teletype message?

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: Without knowing where the original is.

Presiding Inspector: Yes.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

(The document referred to was received in evidence and marked Alien's Exhibit No. 33.)

The Witness: I think I have the original, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: You have the original?

The Witness: I think so.

Presiding Inspector: Mr. Bridges thinks he has the original.

The Witness: It is on white paper.

Presiding Inspector: The teletype.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, that is another ground for our objection to its admissibility, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, no. I won't insist that you produce the original.

Mr. Del Guercio: Is that going to lay the groundwork [5617] for the introduction of these others?

Presiding Inspector: I suppose so. I think they are innocuous, though.

Mr. Del Guercio: I want the record to show that I seriously object to their introduction.

Presiding Inspector: I know, but I think it is best to do it. Mr. Gladstein thinks, and perhaps he is right about it, that this has materiality. I have got to evaluate this testimony, although my decision is not the ultimate one. Others will do it, too.

Mr. Del Guercio: In our offer of documents you will recall that we were restricted strictly to real documents in the introduction of offers.

Presiding Inspector: I remember very well, Mr. Del Guercio, what has happened. I don't remember every word of the testimony.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, Mr. Bridges,——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): We were required to go through the authenticity of every document almost.

Presiding Inspector: Well, I will take that teletype.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did you receive or did your office receive a telegram from Mr. Joseph Curran that the Madison Square Garden meeting had been arranged for?

[5618]

A. Yes.

Q. In the 1936 strike was any special designation or name used by Mr. Curran in any of the communications that he directed to the West Coast?

A. Yes.

Q. What was that designation?

A. "JACY".

Q. When was that chosen?

A. That was chosen as an aftermath of the spring strike. In the spring strike certain forged communications came through that got us into some pretty hot water. Certain employers' agents were sending communications backwards and forwards. They were sending some supposedly signed by me and we were receiving some supposedly signed by Curran. We found out that they originated with the shipping employers. So from that time on as a result of that we learned our lesson and then we had certain code words that followed our various names, as you will notice running all through these, and unless those code words were on there we disregarded the message and on occasion the code letters were changed.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. How was "JACY" pronounced?

A. Just four letters.

Q. I say, how were the four letters pronounced?

A. I don't know. I never tried to pronounce them. [5619] "J.C.", I guess.

Q. What does "JACY" mean?

A. Joe Curran, New York.

Q. I show you a telegram—

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): Does the reporter get how it was pronounced? I didn't get the answer.

Presiding Inspector: "J.C.", I suppose.

Mr. Gladstein: It quite obviously stands for the initials.

Mr. Del Guercio: "JACY", I understand the telegram is signed.

Mr. Gladstein: The telegram is signed "JACY" which, when pronounced, is "J.C."; and if you divide that into the two syllables you will observe that they represent the initials of the man's name.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, never mind.

Mr. Myron: That is Mr. Gladstein's pronunciation and Mr. Bridges doesn't know how to pronounce it.

Mr. Gladstein: I thought I heard Mr. Bridges testify to that.

Presiding Inspector: Well, it is in the record. Go ahead.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. I show you this telegram under date of December 2, [5620] addressed to you and ask you whether that was received by you or your office?

A. It has got a pencil notation on as to when it was received, I think, and it has got the office stamp on it, that it was received on December 2nd. I wasn't in San Francisco at this time. It was teletyped me up north.

Q. And where did you obtain this particular telegram? A. Out of my files.

Mr. Gladstein: I offer it in evidence, your Honor.

Mr. Del Guercio: Your Honor, I object to it. No proper foundation has been laid for its introduction. The witness has tetified that he did not receive it, that he was elsewhere at the time of its purported arrival in San Francisco. There is a receipt stamp there, but there is a "By" also and a blank after "By" indicating that there is no evidence as to by whom it was received.

Mr. Gladstein: The authenticity, your Honor, of any of these telegrams or other documents can be checked by the FBI, I am quite sure, because as I understand it, the various telegraph companies keep records of the telegrams that are sent. I may be misinformed.

Presiding Inspector: They wouldn't be open to anyone.

Mr. Del Guercio: You are misinformed and you know better.

Mr. Gladstein: No. I was under the impression that they did. [5621]

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: I don't think they keep them as long back as this. I am not sure about that.

Mr. Gladstein: The witness identifies it as a telegram received by his office; he identifies the stamp on it; he says that he obtained it from his files; he says that he has knowledge, personal knowledge of the contents of the telegram by virtue of the fact that it was relayed to him.

Presiding Inspector: I will receive it.

(The document referred to was received in evidence and marked Alien's Exhibit No. 35.)

Mr. Del Guercio: We may want to make a test as to when that receipt was put on.

Mr. Gladstein: You may have it.

Mr. Del Guercio: By us.

Mr. Gladstein: You may have it for any person you like, Mr. Del Guercio. It hasn't been marked yet. Do you mind allowing the Reporter to mark it for the record?

Mr. Del Guercio: The Reporter will call that to my attention.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, well, now. Let's go ahead.

Mr. Gladstein: May I read it?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I would like to call attention to something else. It is written in pencil here, apparently, "12:10 PM Dec 2".

Mr. Gladstein: I suppose by that Mr. Del Guercio means [5622] to imply that the year isn't shown, but if your Honor will see that stamped on the document itself at the very top there is what appears, as I believe on every telegram that comes through the telegraph offices a year and a date number.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it. I will take it.

Mr. Gladstein: And you find this is "Dec 2 1936" or, I should say "1936 Dec 2 PM 12:02".

I will read this in evidence. It is addressed to Harry Bridges, 112 Market Street.

"ABBCF have arranged for super mass meeting maritime situation stop on December 14th wire at once if you—". At that point there is a parenthesis with the figures "02" in the parenthesis and then the end of the parenthesis, and it is signed "JACY".

Presiding Inspector: The next question, Mr. Gladstein.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, your Honor. [5623]

(Whereupon Mr. Gladstein handed Mr. Del Guercio a document.)

Mr. Del Guercio: How many of these are there? I suggest that he might as well introduce them en masse.

Presiding Inspector: I suggested that to Mrs. King.

Mr. Del Guercio: We object to the introduction of every one of them on the same ground: that is, no proper foundation has been laid for them.

Mr. Grossman: The Government is still about 200 exhibits ahead of us, your Honor. I don't think we are being unfair.

Mr. Del Guercio: We laid a proper foundation for the introduction of every document.

Mr. Gladstein: Could I ask for the exhibits that the Government introduced on the IWW, the two or three booklets?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mrs. King: Do you want the numbers?

The Reporter: Yes.

Mrs. King: 252, 253, 257 and 259.

(The exhibits referred to were given to Mr. Gladstein.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. I want to go for a moment to the question of these IWW documents. I show you Government's Exhibit No. 252, "The I.W.W., its History, Structure and Methods," by Vincent St. John. While you were in the IWW did you ever see distributed, or did you yourself distribute, any copy of that document?

[5624]

A. Not that I can remember.

Q. Have you ever had one in your possession to your knowledge? A. No.

Q. Did you know, at any time that you were in the IWW, whether or not that document was distributed by the IWW, or its membership?

A. I don't know.

Q. Did you know then?

A. Not that I can remember.

Presiding Inspector: May I see it?

(Government's Exhibit No. 252 was passed to the Presiding Inspector.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit No. 253 entitled "Sabotage," by Walker C. Smith, and ask you to examine it and state whether, while you were in the IWW, you ever saw it distributed, or whether you yourself ever distributed any copies of that publication?

A. (Examining pamphlet) The first time I ever seen a pamphlet like this was in this hearing.

Q. You have never had one in your possession?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever know, while you were in the IWW, or just before you joined that organization, whether or not this [5625] pamphlet, or one similar to it, on the subject of "Sabotage" was ever distributed by the IWW or any of its members?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 257 entitled "The Revolutionary I. W. W." by Grover H. Perry, and I will ask you whether, while you were in the IWW, you ever saw that pamphlet, or publication, or anything like it, distributed by the IWW, or any of its members?

A. (Examining pamphlet) No; I have never seen this pamphlet before.

Q. Did you, yourself, ever distribute such a pamphlet? A. No.

Q. Have you ever had one in your possession?

A. Not that I remember.

Q. Did you know, when you joined the IWW, or while you were in it, whether or not such a pamphlet was distributed either officially, or by the membership of the IWW? A. I did not.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit No. 259 entitled "I. W. W. Songs," and ask you to state whether, while you were in the IWW, you ever saw copies of that distributed?

A. (Examining pamphlet) I have seen copies of the songbook—I don't know if this is the particular form of the book—but I recall song pamphlets, pamphlets with songs in it, at the time I was a member. Songs that I recognize are in here. [5626] I possessed one at one time.

Q. Can you go through that pamphlet and tell which songs were distributed in pamphlet form by the IWW, or its membership while you were a member?

Mr. Myron: If he knows—as far as he knows.

Presiding Inspector: Of course.

A. (Referring to Government's Exhibit No. 259) I recall very many of these songs, even before I was a member of the IWW. I don't think that there is anything new about the songs by Joe Hill.

I don't think there is anything new about "The Red Flag"—an old Socialist song.

I don't think there is anything new about "The Workers' Marseillaise."

I remember this one about "Scissor Bill."

I think I remember "The Preacher and The Slave," another Joe Hill song.

"Ta-ra-ra-Boom-De-ay"—I remember that one.

I certainly recall "Hold the Fort."

I certainly recall "Solidarity Forever."

"Casey Jones"—I am familiar with.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q Have you sung it? A. I have sung it.

Presiding Inspector: You mean with these words? Not Casey Jones, but Ta-ra-ra-boom-De-ay? [5627]

The Witness: Tunes adapted from those songs.

Presiding Inspector: But not the words, those in the song book?

The Witness: I specifically recall singing some of them at this time. But I remember them at that time, and I remember this particular "Casey Jones" song. It used to be sung at sea. After all, it is not specifically sung ashore.

Presiding Inspector: That is the "Sea" Casey Jones?

The Witness: Well——

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Do you know whether various lyrics have been sung to the same tunes of Casey Jones and the other songs in this pamphlet?

A. Yes. There have been additions to them, and some of them, I can say I have heard some of these songs sung the world over. I have heard some of those songs in many parts of the world.

Q. Have you ever sung any of these songs for the purpose of advocating the overthrow of the United States Government by force and violence, or for the purpose of advocating sabotage, or the unlawful destruction of property?

A. No; and I recall nobody else did. They were solidarity songs, morale songs, pep songs, and many times for amusement, of course.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: Were they sung satirically? [5628]

The Witness: Generally speaking; yes.

Presiding Inspector: In disregard of what they say?

The Witness: I would say yes. My recollection of the people that sung them at those times, they didn't sing them with the idea of carrying out the intent of the songs.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, going back to the last exhibit, the telegram, I show you what purports to be a copy of a teletype message and ask you if you can identify it?

A. (Examining document) Yes. This is a teletype from my office in San Francisco to Portland, a copy of a teletype.

Q. Where were you at the time, if you know?

A. I was in—let me see the date——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) It tells you on the top there.

Presiding Inspector: He is looking for it.

A. (Continuing) On the top it says "Is Bridges still in Portland?"

On December 2, 1936, in the evening at least, I was in Aberdeen, Washington. I know that.

This shows the afternoon, 12:10, P. M. apparently, on December 2. I would still be in Portland, or maybe around there somewhere. I have the records which I can check as to where I was at that time.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Gladstein: [5629]

Q. Where did you obtain the teletype?

A. Out of my files in my San Francisco office. The other end of it is in Portland, I presume, a copy. The original possibly was delivered to me in Portland.

Mr. Gladstein: I offer it, if your Honor please, in evidence.

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to it, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Have you seen it?

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes, I have. No proper foundation has been laid for the copy, or what purports to be a copy of the original. This witness does not know whether he received it or not.

(The document referred to was passed to the Presiding Inspector.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I believe that counsel should be required to lay a proper foundation for the introduction of any document.

Presiding Inspector: Did you ever see that teletype before?

The Witness: Undoubtedly, if the teletype was sent, I would receive a copy of it in due course.

The only difference between, when I said the original, the only difference between this and the original is the color of the paper. The paper is the same texture, the wording is the same, except the other paper is white and this is yellow. In fact, both copies are made together on the [5630] machine. I am pretty sure you could come up here with that same thing on white paper and the only difference between the original and the copy would be the color of the paper.

Presiding Inspector: You remember receiving this?

The Witness: Yes. There are reasons for remembering those things.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

(The teletype message referred to was thereupon received in evidence and marked Alien's Exhibit No. 36.)

Mr. Del Guercio: There was an objection that no proper foundation has been laid.

Presiding Inspector: I think a foundation was laid with the questions I asked.

Mr. Del Guercio: The original is available.

Presiding Inspector: There is no difference between the original and the copy. There is no signature on these.

Mr. Del Guercio: No signature; no.

Presiding Inspector: One is yellow and the other is white. I don't see that it makes any difference.

Mr. Del Guercio: That could have been made today.

Presiding Inspector: So could the original. He said he has an independent recollection of receiving this.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, Mr. Bridges, this telegram refers—I won't put this in the form of a question, but

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

so the [5631] record will show it, your Honor, I point ou that Alien's Exhibit No. 36 in evidence refers to Alien's Exhibit 35, namely, the telegram from Mr, Curran. I call your Honor's attention to this——

Presiding Inspector: Really the same thing?

Mr. Gladstein: Except for one thing, and that I want to call your attention to, and that is in the telegram you will notice the last word is "You". It says "Wire at Once If You" and then there is a parenthetical reference to the figure "02".

In the teletype your Honor will notice that the quoted telegram reads, although there is a misspelled word, "If You Can Attend"—the words "Can Attend" in the teletype.

I point out to your Honor that reference.

We can have a Western Union representative testify on this if necessary, though I don't deem it that important, but it is my belief——

Mr. Myron: (Interposing) We don't want his belief in the record.

Mr. Del Guercio: He is not under oath.

Mr. Myron: It speaks for itself, I believe.

Presiding Inspector: Let it speak for itself.

Mr. Gladstein: All right. Let it speak for itself.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, Mr. Bridges, did you have any problem in going [5632] back to attend the Madison Square Garden meeting? A. Yes.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. What was the nature of that problem?

A. Getting the proper dates arranged, trying to cover enough meetings on schedule time, and having the dates so spaced that we could get around.

Q. What was your schedule on the Pacific Coast in the latter part of November and the early part of December, with reference to the mass meetings or other meetings?

A. Seattle, November 30; Aberdeen, Washington, December 2; Portland the next day; Astoria that night. I was due back in San Francisco December 5 in the afternoon. Then there was a meeting in San Francisco on December 8th. There was a national radio broadcast on December 7th. There were tentative arrangements that we had to cancel in both Portland and Los Angeles for meetings because we couldn't fit the dates in. All the arrangements were made and had to be cancelled.

Presiding Inspector: What dates?

The Witness: We had one meeting arranged in Portland, or Los Angeles—I think it was Los Angeles—for December 17th; and a meeting around the same time, I think, December 15 or 16 in Portland. We just didn't make the dates jibe. We postponed those meetings to a later date.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. By virtue of this schedule, or these mass meetings [5633] that you were covering on the Pacific Coast, how did that affect the ultimate announcement of when you could go back east?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to the question in its form.

Presiding Inspector: Isn't that self-evident? He had these engagements and naturally they would affect any arrangements for going east.

[5634]

Mr. Gladstein: Well, let me put it this way:——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) He couldn't be in two places.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. At any stage—at any time up to—withdraw that.

Did you ultimately tell the East that you were going back there to speak?

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, I will object to that, if your Honor please, unless we get something more specific than "the East".

Presiding Inspector: Of course, he did go back East.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, he did. I wanted to know whether prior to his going back there he communicated with them.

Presiding Inspector: There is no question about it. Before he started he must have told them.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes. I think that is also self-evident.

Presiding Inspector: I think so.

Mr. Gladstein: But nevertheless there is some documentary evidence on it as to the date and so on.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Prior to your going back to the East Coast to address the Madison Square Garden meeting did you communicate with the East or cause a communication to be sent to the East Coast?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to the question unless [5635] something more definite than "the East" is included in the question.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

A. I both telephoned and I wrote.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. To whom?

A. From the Northwest. When I was in the Northwest at that time I telephoned and wrote, both.

Q. To whom?

A. To Curran and to the longshoremen in Boston.

Mr. Del Guercio: Curran and who?

The Witness: Joe Curran and the longshoremen in Boston.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. When you say "the longshoremen in Boston" to whom do you have reference?

A. The ILA Local in Boston that we were communicating with at that time.

Q. Now, before you actually left the West Coast to speak at the Madison Square Garden meeting had any arrangements been made for any meeting other than the one at the Madison Square Garden?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Yes. Specifically the meeting in Boston. The only thing was the question of date. I told them to go ahead and arrange a meeting up there, get all the preliminary arrange- [5636] ments; we would notify them as to definite date afterwards. That was the same situation on the West Coast. We made all preliminary arrangements and it was just a question of setting the exact date. There is a lot of work and preparation in a meeting that takes a few days or maybe weeks and all we were trying to get straightened out was definite dates and have them properly spaced so we could take care of them all. And before I left the West Coast I notified the East Coast to arrange meetings in ports other than New York, and in Boston I had already arranged that from the Northwest before I ever left the Northwest to come back to San Francisco. It was arranged by long-distance phone.

Q. Before leaving for the East, Mr. Bridges, did you cause to be communicated to the East your desire that meetings be arranged in the Ports of New York, Boston, Baltimore and Philadelphia?

A. Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: Any particular portion of this or all of it?

Mr. Gladstein: Oh, the first page shows it, I think. There is a paragraph there, the first paragraph; the first subparagraph.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. I show you a mimeographed letter of three pages under date of December 10th and ask you whether you can identify it.

A. I can. [5637]

Mr. Del Guercio: Hasn't the witness seen that before?

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What is the answer?

A. I can. It was one of our official communications that was sent out at that time.

Mr. Gladstein: I offer this in evidence with particular reference, your Honor, to the first page in which the Pacific Coast District Executive Board of the ILA announces that it has decided on the following plan of action——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) Well, if your Honor please, before counsel reads it let me get in an objection.

Mr. Gladstein: Oh, certainly.

Mr. Del Guercio: I am objecting to the introduction of the document on the same ground as before. It is immaterial and irrelevant. The contents of that letter do not in any wise contradict or affect the evidence already given.

Presiding Inspector: It is a self-serving declaration.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, a little bit different from that.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: It is a confirmatory statement made at another time.

Mr. Gladstein: No. I haven't had him testify on this subject. Here on December 10th is an official announcement, your Honor, by the Pacific Coast District Executive Board which says, in effect, that an ILA delegation is being dispatched to the East Coast to cover the Ports of New York, Boston, Baltimore [5638] and Philadelphia and appeal to the longshoremen there to do this, that and the other thing; in other words, clearly referring to mass meetings in those four cities.

Now, your Honor may recall that Mr. Innes testified that the arrangements or the idea of having mass meetings in Boston, Baltimore and Philadelphia were discussed for the first time and laid down in what he called a "fraction meeting" in the Victoria Hotel after Mr. Bridges arrived in New York. I am here trying to show that the itinerary of covering those ports in mass meetings, those four that actually were covered, was all announced and covered officially by the Union on the West Coast before Mr. Bridges ever got to the East Coast. That is the materiality.

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please,——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) You can prove that by the testimony of Mr. Bridges.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: Let us get Mr. Bridges' testimony and then offer it. Or, if you say you are going to ask him——

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, I was going to ask him. It is a matter of order. Can we mark it for identification?

Presiding Inspector: I will allow it to go in evidence.

Mr. Gladstein: All right.

Presiding Inspector: It is violating the usual rules of Common Law. [5639]

(The document referred to was received in evidence and marked Alien's Exhibit No. 37.)

Mr. Del Guercio: May we have the record show that we don't agree with counsel's interpretation of what the witness testified to?

Presiding Inspector: Oh, yes. You are not bound by that. The trier of the facts has to evaluate all the evidence.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, Mr. Bridges, was the idea of your speaking at mass meetings in cities other than New York on the occasion of your trip back there in December of 1936 originated for the first time in the Victoria Hotel in New York or elsewhere?

A. Elsewhere.

Q. And where was the "elsewhere"?

A. In the Northwest and in San Francisco, because my trip back East was not worth while unless I spoke to the longshoremen of those ports and was not necessary unless I spoke to the longshoremen in those ports, because the trip had a definite reason. There was a deadline laid down as to how long we would give the International to respond to our demands for help, as they had promised us; and before I left all locals were ordered to take up and discuss and vote on the question of East Coast Ports, meaning that if the East Coast longshoremen walked out in support of us we would not settle our West Coast [5640] strike until they were safely protected. And all locals were notified before I left the West Coast to take up and vote on this question and notify me by telegram in New York City, care of Joe Curran. And the letter here refers to that particular thing, and, therefore, it can be seen that unless these meetings were arranged and I definitely went back with them all scheduled out my trip East was worthless.

Mr. Gladstein: Shall we suspend for the day?

Presiding Inspector: No. Go on five minutes longer.

Mr. Gladstein: I beg your pardon?

Presiding Inspector: Go on until a quarter after.

The Witness: I wish to add——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) Now, there is no question pending.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Just a moment! Do you wish to add something to your last answer?

A. I just thought of this much: That I have the sheaf of telegrams that were sent to New York while I was there all concurring in the action of the Executive Board and my going East, and all saying that they would support the East Coast longshoremen if the East Coast longshoremen moved in our support.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. From whom were these telegrams?

Mr. Del Guercio: Just a minute! I want to make a motion to strike the last answer. I move to strike the last answer [5641] as not being responsive to the question and it was not in explanation of anything.

Presiding Inspector: Well, giving it a broad interpretation, I think it was explanatory. Of course, if the objection went to the telegrams would speak for themselves, that would be different.

You don't expect to produce them, do you?

Mr. Gladstein: There a lot of them and I don't know that it is necessary to encumber the record with them, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I will let it stand.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. From whom were these telegrams?

Presiding Inspector: He said from all the Unions on the West Coast.

Mr. Gladstein: Oh, I beg your pardon.

Presiding Inspector: Now, Mr. Bridges, had you planned for all of the meetings at which you spoke? That is, had you told them tentatively to arrange for them?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

The Witness: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: But, of course, you didn't know the dates absolutely?

The Witness: I knew the dates.

Presiding Inspector: In all cases? [5642]

The Witness: The date for the meeting in Boston, I arranged that meeting by a long-distance telephone from some place in the Northwest. The date for Philadelphia was arranged. The date for New York——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Was arranged from the West or from New York?

The Witness: From here, from this end.

The date for New York was arranged, although it was changed; and the date for Baltimore was arranged.

Presiding Inspector: It was all arranged before you left?

The Witness: Before I ever left San Francisco.

Presiding Inspector: Including the dates?

The Witness: Yes. And I wired, I am sure—well, I did wire New York along those lines following up the conversations that I had over the phone.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. When you got to New York, Mr. Bridges—withdraw that.

Who accompanied you to New York?

A. In my immediate company Randolph Meriweather, who was the Business Manager of the (Testimony of Harry Reuton Bridges.)

Marine Engineers' Beneficial Association; also going Captain George Charlot of the Masters, Mates & Pilots Association, Local 90, San Francisco.

[5643]

Q. Were either of those Unions involved in the strike? A. All of them: both of them were.

Q. What was the purpose of their trip East?

A. Because their National Unions were attempting at that time or had indicated they were going to call off the strike of those particular unions on the East Coast.

Q. Now, with whom—withdraw that.

Do you know how—did you call him "Captain" Charlot? A. Captain Charlot; C-h-a-r-l-o-t.

Q. Do you know how he went?

A. I am not sure whether he took a train or went by plane.

Q. You and Mr. Meriweather went together?

A. Both by plane.

Q. When you arrived in New York were you met? A. At the airport, yes.

Q. By whom?

A. I only remember Joe Curran.

Q. Were there others?

A. I think there were.

Q. Where did you go?

A. To the Victoria Hotel.

Q. What happened there?

A. My recollection is that Meriweather registered for the room. I don't recall registering. We took a double room in the hotel and I'm fairly sure that I didn't sign the register. [5644] Meriweather signed for both of us.

Q. Now, in that hotel after your arrival did any meeting take place in which you, Roy Hudson, Tommy Raye, Al Lannon, Joe Curran, Peter Innes, possibly Mervyn Rathborne, were present?

A. No, definitely not. Mervyn Rathborne was in San Francisco. [5645]

Q. Was Mr. Hudson in the room? A. No.

Q. Was Tom Raye in the room? A. No.

Q. Was Mr. Lannon in the room?

A. No.

Q. Was Curran there?

A. No—yes, he was there.

Q. Was Mr. Innes there?

A. I am not sure about Mr. Innes. My recollection is that he was not.

Q. What took place in your room after you arrived, if anything?

A. We discussed things for a few moments. We were pretty tired. The plane got in early, or the middle of the afternoon. Meriweather and I were pretty tired. As I recall it we slept for a little while. I had a meeting scheduled that night, I think—not to Boston, but to Philadelphia, my recollection is.

Q. At any time on that trip——

Presiding Inspector: Do you know those men whose names were mentioned?

The Witness: I know them—I know Al Lannon, and Tommy Raye. I met them for the first time about six months afterwards. I know Hudson. I met Hudson—he was in San Fran- [5646] cisco at that time, during the 1936 strike. I met him for the first time at that time. He was in San Francisco at that time.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. When did you meet Tommy Raye for the first time? A. June, 1937.

Q. Do you remember under what circumstances?

A. Yes.

Q. What were they?

A. He was at that time, the first time I met Raye, he was the Chairman, or Secretary of the New York Maritime Council. I am sure that wasn't formed until the spring of 1937.

Q. And in what connection did you meet him, under what circumstances?

A. I met him in New York Headquarters of the National Maritime Union.

Presiding Inspector: I think we will stop here until tomorrow morning.

(Whereupon, at 4:15 o'clock p. m. an adjournment was taken until Thursday, May 29, 1941, at 10:00 o'clock a. m.) [5647]

[5648]

PROCEEDINGS

Presiding Inspector: You may proceed, Mr. Gladstein.

HARRY RENTON BRIDGES

called as a witness in his own behalf, having been previously duly sworn, testified further as follows:

Direct Examination (Resumed)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Bridges, you remember the witness, Thompson, who testified in this case?

A. Yes.

Q. To your knowledge have you ever seen him before until the time he came in here?

A. No.

Q. During the period from October 1934 to and including the end of April, or the first part of May, 1935, at any time during that period were you in New York City? A. No.

Q. What was the extent of your departure from the west coast, or from San Francisco, during that period?

A. I never left the Pacific Coast states. Yesterday I said, if I recall, and it was slightly in error, that our records showed I hadn't left San

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Francisco. I referred at that time to my records in my office in San Francisco which indicated that I had not left the Pacific Coast States for a period longer than—I hadn't left them—and I can produce records to show—— [5649]

Presiding Inspector: We are taking your recollection.

The Witness: There was a slight error in the testimony yesterday.

Presiding Inspector: You can make a correction.

The Witness: I didn't exactly mean San Francisco; I meant any Pacific Coast, West Coast states.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, Mr. Bridges, at any time have you ever been a member of the Marine Workers Industrial Union? A. At no time.

Q. Have you ever been affiliated with that organization?

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, your Honor, I object to the question unless the witness——

Presiding Inspector: I think that is a question for the Court.

Mr. Gladstein: All right.

Presiding Inspector: He may tell what relation he has had with them, if any.

Mr. Gladstein: He has already testified to that.

Presiding Inspector: Although, if there is anything more he may tell it.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did you ever have any correspondence with William McCuistion? [5650]

A. Not that I can recall. I have written to a lot of people and it is possible that I might have received or written a letter in the course of Union business, but not that I can ever remember.

Q. Did you ever correspond with him on the subject of Communist Party policies or the Communist Party, or the Marine Workers Industrial Union? A. At no time.

Q. Did you ever submit to Mr. McCuistion or to any body else while you were connected with the Waterfront Worker copies of that paper for editing back east? A. At no time.

Q. Was it submitted to anyone back east for auditing—or, editing, I should say?

A. No. It was submitted to no one except the longshoremen involved.

Mr. Del Guercio: Except to who?

The Witness: Except the longshoremen involved, and I wouldn't say "submitted" to them either. Articles went in as they came in without any editing or change whatsoever.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, at my request did you attempt to find the telegram which is referred to in a teletype message that yesterday was admitted in evidence with respect to a problem involving Peter Innes in 1936? [5651] A. Yes.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Did you find such a telegram?

A. I did.

(The telegram referred to was passed to Mr. Del Guercio.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. I show you a telegram under date of November 20, 1936, and ask you if that is the telegram to which you have just referred? A. It is.

Mr. Gladstein: I offer it in evidence.

Mr. Del Guercio: We object to its admission in evidence, if your Honor please; not material to any of the issues in this case. It doesn't explain or contradict anything.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it over your objection.

Mr. Del Guercio: And no proper foundation laid for it. The telegram, if the Court will note, is addressed to the Joint Strike Committee...

Presiding Inspector: He was Chairman at that time.

Mr. Del Guercio: We don't know.

Presiding Inspector: He has sworn to it.

Mr. Del Guercio: It is addressed to the Joint Strike Committee.

The Witness: I was Chairman the day that telegram was received and read into the record, and I have the minutes.

Mr. Del Guercio: Was there a question on it?

[3652]

Presiding Inspector: Yes. That was implied

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

from my remarks. I understand that he had already sworn to it. I will let it stand.

(The document referred to was received in evidence and marked Alien's Exhibit No. 38.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Bridges, have you made a search of the minutes of the San Francisco Bay Area District Council No. 2 acting as the San Francisco Joint Marine Strike Committee during the 1936 Strike to determine whether the telegram which has just been received in evidence, Alien's 38, appears as part of the official minutes of any meeting of that group? A. I have.

Presiding Inspector: This doesn't add anything, does it?

Mr. Gladstein: It does not, except that it appears officially because—the only point I had was that if there is any question as to the authenticity of the telegram the minutes of that date, November 21, 1936, record the receipt of a telegram from J. Curran setting forth verbatim the text of the telegram that has just been received in evidence.

Presiding Inspector: Very well.

Mr. Gladstein: Perhaps at this time it is immaterial, and if cross examination does not raise any further question——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): I should think so, Mr. Gladstein. [5653]

Mr. Gladstein: All right.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, do you know when Peter Innes for the first time received any kind of credentials authorizing him to represent the East Coast seamen to or on the West Coast Strike Committee?

A. During the strike of 1936, after it broke out.

Q. Do you know what the form of those credentials was?

A. He received them by telegram. We refused to seat him, or recognize him, on the Strike Committee, because of the trouble we had, unless we had further credentials—on account of the trouble we had. Therefore, we demanded credentials before he would be recognized and seated on the Committee. He was wired credentials from back East. He had no credentials.

(Mr. Gladstein passed a telegram to Mr. Del Guercio.)

Mr. Del Guercio: If the Court please, I have been shown by counsel a telegram addressed to Peter Innes by Joe Curran. That telegram, I don't believe, was produced at the time Peter Innes was on the stand, although apparently available.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think it was, but I don't know as that is material.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. You just testified that Mr. Innes received telegraphic authorization to represent the East Coast strikers at the time, or immediately after the West Coast strike went into effect, is that correct? A. That is right. [5654]

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Do you know whether—withdraw that. Do you know what, if anything, Mr. Innes did with that telegram when it was received by him?

A. He presented it to the Strike Committee as credentials, and it was received as a regular credential. He was ordered seated by a vote of the Committee on that occasion.

Q. Were others who were seated in the Strike Committee also required to present credentials from their unions?

A. They all were required to present official credentials.

Q. I show you a telegram, dated October 29, 1936, purporting to be from Joe Curran to Peter Innes, and I will ask you whether that was the telegram which was presented by Mr. Innes as his credentials to entitle him to sit as an East Coast representative with the West Coast Strike Committee?

A. (Examining telegram). It is. Ordinarily we wouldn't accept a telegram, but inasmuch as it has the code on it we knew it was authentic and we accepted the telegram and seated him under those credentials.

Mr. Gladstein: I offer it in evidence.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to it.

Presiding Inspector: I will receive it over the objection.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

(The telegram referred to was received in evidence and marked Alien's Exhibit No. 39.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Will you state whether, prior to October 29, the date [5655] of the last exhibit, Alien's 39, there was ever shown to you, or ever came to your attention or knowledge, any other credentials of any character by Mr. Innes?

A. Nothing, except his union book or strike card from the 1936 strike. That was all he had.

Q. Now, Mr. Bridges, at the Madison Square Garden meeting you spoke, did you?

A. I did.

Q. Did you have any meetings, either before or after that mass meeting, in which any of the following persons were present: David Leeds?

A. Never met him in my life.

Q. Tom Raye? A. No.

Q. Roy Hudson? A. No.

Q. What, if anything, did you do after the mass meeting was over?

A. As soon as I stepped off the platform there was an old friend of mine that I had sailed with in Australia, and in the islands, and he was standing at the foot of the stairs. I recognized him immediately. He came along with me. We went back, and I spoke to the newspaper reporters for a while, and then we left, and we went to some place where we spent three or four hours having some drinks, and talking about [5656] our old times together. His name is George Maynard—M-a-y-n-a-r-d. He came from Rhode Island. He was formerly a shipmate of mine and he came up with me from Australia on the Ysabel. That was the first time I had seen him since that time. That is all we done until about four o'clock in the morning. The meeting didn't get through until around 12:30 at night. It was around 4:00 in the morning when he went home. I invited him to come to the hotel and see me the next day. I don't recall whether he did or not.

[5657]

Q. Now, Mr. Bridges, at any time prior to that meeting at the Madison Square Garden in December of 1936 did you speak on the long distance telephone between San Francisco and New York with Thomas Raye? A. No.

Q. Did you speak with anyone on the long distance telephone and receive orders from the Communist Party to appear at that Madison Square Garden meeting? A. No.

Q. Do you recall the testimony of Mr. Innes that while he was in your office or in the office that was shared by you and Mr. Rathborne a telephone call came in, as a result of which he said he and you went downstairs to a public phone and made a telephone connection with New York City? Did any such incident occur?

A. Not at all. The idea was ridiculous.

Mr. Del Guercio: I move that the last part of the answer be stricken.

Presiding Inspector: Strike it out.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Before you went East—withdraw that.

Presiding Inspector: Not the part that no such thing occurred.

Mr. Del Guercio: No, just the last part.

By Mr. Gladstein: [5658]

Q. Can you recall what the indication was to you to attend the Madison Square Garden meeting with respect to the payment of your traveling expenses?

A. East Coast—the East Coast Seamen's Committee said that they would pay the expenses.

Q. Did they arrange for your airplane passage?

A. My airplane ticket was arranged for in New York City; a round trip ticket.

Q. Did you receive any of your other expenses or any expenses at all in New York when you got to the meeting?

A. They drove me to Philadelphia; they furnished the plane ticket to Boston; I paid my own train fare, I think, to Baltimore, and then from Baltimore I went to Washington and came back.

Q. Was that the extent of the expenses which the East Coast discharged in connection with your trip?

A. They paid most of the expenses of the trip; that is, at that time.

Q. Did they pay you any sum of four or five hundred dollars?

A. That is not so. They just paid the expenses and—well, the way it happened was this: When the invitation was made and the offer to pay all expenses was made our Strike Committee on the West Coast, we didn't exactly know their financial condition there and, of course, our Strike Committee said "Well, [5659] as long as they are offering to pay it, why, we'll turn nothing down". And I went back under those conditions.

After I went back there and seen the financial situation, as soon as I returned to the West Coast I got into action and seen that there was a thousand dollars sent back to them immediately. They needed it much more than we did and much more than paying my expenses.

Q. At any time while you were back East on December 14th, 15th or 16th, 1936 or in that vicinity was any sum of cash given to you by any person from the East Coast Seamen's Committee or anyone representing them or anyone having anything to do with the strike?

A. I never received a nickel in actual cash.

Q. Or any other person?

A. Or any person.

Q. Did you ask for any money from them?

A. I did not. I had enough money in so far as expenses were concerned. I was getting a salary at that time, but my salary was turned in weekly to the Strike Committee and I didn't need to take any money from them if I didn't want it, and I didn't need it. As far as any nominal expenses was concerned, my own Union had money.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Myron: Now, is this responsive?

Presiding Inspector: No, I don't think it is.

Mr. Gladstein: I think it is, and I think——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): No. [5660]

Mr. Gladstein (Continuing): ——I think it would be much better——

Presiding Inspector (Interposing): No. I think there is a good deal in there that wasn't material.

Mr. Gladstein: I think it would be much better procedure to allow the witness to answer the question, and if there are parts which counsel feel are not responsive they can always move to strike rather than break in the middle of the answer, because there may be something which is about to be said which is responsive.

Presiding Inspector: He has fully answered the question.

Mr. Del Guercio: The witness is intelligent enough to answer the questions asked.

Presiding Inspector: He has fully answered the question and a good deal more. I don't mean that it isn't natural to say what he did, if it is true.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Were you ever advised by any person at all that it was a Communist Party decision for you to speak at the Madison Square Garden meeting on December 16, 1936?

A. I wasn't advised. I knew it wasn't.

Q. I want to refer for a moment—I think in a general way you have covered this subject matter.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Do you recall the testimony of Mr. Cuistion to the effect that in the spring of 1935 you arranged for Mr. McCuistion to be shipped out, although Mr. McCuistion did not hold a Union card in the Sailor's Union [5661] of the Pacific?

Mr. Del Guercio: Before the question is answered, your Honor, I object to counsel making a statement. He was warned yesterday about doing the same thing and it is very objectionable to call attention to previous testimony.

Presiding Inspector: I suppose he knows what happened in that respect.

Mr. Gladstein: He has already testified that the first time he met McCuistion was in 1936 at the Madison Square Garden meeting, but I want specific reference to this particular incident.

Presiding Inspector: It doesn't make any difference about who testified or anything of that kind. Ask him the question.

Mr. Gladstein: All right.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did you, Mr. Bridges, make any arrangements of any kind at all for Mr. McCuistion in the spring of 1935 or the early part of 1935 to be shipped out from San Francisco? A. No.

Q. Mr. Bridges, did you ever attend any top fraction meetings of the Communist Party with a man named Nathaniel Honig or Nat Honig or Nat Davis?

A. No. I never met him until he come into the Court room. [5662]

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Did you ever receive orders at any meeting during the 1936-7 strike to take the ILA—that is, the International Longshoremen's Association Unions—into the CIO?

A. Never received orders to do that at any time.

Q. What in fact was your position on the question of whether the ILA should affiliate with the CIO as of the period during the 1936-7 strike and for several weeks thereafter?

A. I was opposed to it.

Mr. Del Guercio: Just a minute. I object to the question, if your Honor please. "What in fact". He is asking for the witness' testimony.

Presiding Inspector: That's what he is asking for.

Mr. Gladstein: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: I don't understand the objection.

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, that indicates that there might be some contradictory testimony as to what his position was.

Presiding Inspector: Oh, I think that is a mere form of speech. I will take the answer.

A. (Continuing): I was opposed to affiliation.

[3663]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What was your position on the question of the CIO during the period beginning, let us say, with the 1936-'37 strike, that is October 28, 1936 to and including the time of the ILA convention in the year 1937?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. To stay in the AF of L, and still support the CIO.

Q. In what way could you support the CIO and still insist that the ILA stay in the AF of L?

A. At that time the CIO had been ordered suspended, the CIO unions. It was merely a committee. It wasn't an organization as yet. It was a committee of organizations that decided to follow a program of organizing workers on the industrial union basis. They had been suspended illegally by the American Federation of Labor. Those unions that were CIO, or comprised the CIO at that time, they still claimed that they were still affiliated to the AF of L and were fighting for reinstatement on the basis that they had been illegally suspended. Our position was to remain, the large body of the CIO, and to fight for the proper reinstatement of those unions and for the adoption of the entire CIO program by the American Federation of Labor. We were strongly advocating and opposing any move toward affiliation with the CIO and the breaking off with our American Federation of Labor affiliate. At the same time we were supporting the program of the CIO in so far as their organizational program was concerned; and [5664] that was simply a program to organize on an industrial union basis.

Q. With specific reference to whether the ILA should be taken into the CIO, when is the first time that you took the position that the ILA should so affiliate? A. June, 1937.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Did you make your position, prior to June 1937, to the effect that you were opposed to the ILA affiliating with the CIO, known publicly?

A. Yes.

Q. Where and under what circumstances?

A. There was many talks before my own union meetings, many similar talks before union gatherings and conventions. I had done it while I was still a Vice President of the American Federation of Labor in the State of California, and in our convention, and in our various union publications.

Q. When was the ILA convention held in 1937?

A. May 1937.

Q. And at that convention did you publicly, before the convention, state your position on whether the ILA should go into the CIO? A. I did.

Q. And what was your statement in substance?

Mr. Del Guercio: Your Honor, I object to that as immaterial and irrelevant. [5665].

Presiding Inspector: How is that pertinent? How is it any better than his statement now?

Mr. Gladstein: I will withdraw that question.

Presiding Inspector: It may come out on cross examination.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Do you know, Mr. Bridges, whether the Voice of the Federation has ever carried statements of your position in the early part of 1937 on whether the ILA should affiliate with the CIO, or seek such an affiliation?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I think we should leave that to Mr. Del Guercio's cross examination. I don't think it is any better than his statement, that is, at this time.

Mr. Gladstein: All right.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Will you fix the date when the 1936-'37 strike ended?

A. I am not sure but I think it was February 4, 1937. I might be mistaken on that date. It might be March 4; either March or February 4th.

Presiding Inspector: Of course, you can show him the document to refresh his recollection when his recollection is not complete.

Mr. Gladstein: All right.

Presiding Inspector: That is, on a thing of that kind.

(Whereupon Mr. Gladstein passed to Mr. Del Guercio a file [5666] of the Voice of Federation.)

Presiding Inspector: He says he isn't sure as to the date.

The Witness: I am sure it was February 4, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: He said he is sure it is February 4.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. The date of the end of the strike?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Yes.

Mr. Gladstein: I am now showing counsel something else.

Mr. Del Guercio: The article that counsel has shown me has to do with a matter the Court has already ruled on regarding the witness' stand on the CIO.

Presiding Inspector: He hasn't asked a question about it.

Mr. Gladstein: I will withhold it. It is simply my position that as of the time, you see, in 1937, when the—when Mr. Bridges took the——

Presiding Inspector: I don't think it adds anything at this time.

Mr. Gladstein: All right, your Honor.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Now, Mr. Bridges, as of the period of the 1936-'37 strike I want you to tell me what union positions, if any, were held by the following persons, if you know: Henry Schmidt? [5667]

A. President of the San Francisco Longshore Local.

Q. Bjorn Halling?

The Reporter: Spell it, please.

Mrs. King: B-j-o-r-n.

Mr. Gladstein: Halling, H-a-l-l-i-n-g.

A. Halling was a member of the Executive Committee of the local, and he was also Chairman of some SubStrike Committee, as well as a member of the Joint Strike Committee.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did he have any connection with publicity?

A. Possibly that is the committee that he was Chairman of; I am not sure.

Presiding Inspector: What local?

The Witness: Of the San Francisco Longshore Local.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Revels Cayton?

A. He was a member of the Marine Cooks and Stewards Association Strike Committee in San Francisco; and also on the Coast Committee.

What makes it so complicated is that there were three committees: Your own local union strike Committee and the San Francisco area Joint Strike Committee and the Coast Joint Strike Committee.

Q. Louis Goldblatt?

A. He was Vice President of the ILA Warehousemen's Union [5668] at that time, San Francisco.

Q. Roy Pyle?

A. Pyle was an official of the American Radio Telegraphists Association, San Francisco.

Q. Mervyn Rathborne?

A. He was Secretary of the San Francisco Council of the Maritime Federation, and Secretary of the Strike Committee.

Q. Z. R. Brown?

A. I think he was Secretary of the San Francisco Local of the Radio Telegraphists.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Matt Meehan?

A. He was the Pacific Coast District Secretary of the ILA.

Q. Al Quittendon?

The Reporter: Spell it, please.

Mr. Gladstein: Q-u-i-t-t-e-n-d-o-n, I think it is.

A. The Assistant Secretary of the Sailors Union of the Pacific.

Q. John Schomaker?

A. I think he was Chairman of the Publicity Committee, of the Joint Strike Publicity Committee, part of the Joint Strike Committee.

Q. When did the longshoremen actually begin to take a vote on whether or not they should become affiliated with the CIO? [5669]

A. June, 1937.

Q. Did that vote have anything to do with any convention that was being held at that time or just prior to that time?

Mr. Del Guercio: I object to the question as leading and suggestive.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

A. It was during the 1937 convention of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific. [5670]

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Where and when was it held?

A. Portland, Oregon, beginning the first week in June, I believe; June 3rd, 4th or 5th; something like that.

Q. What was the result of the vote as far as the longshoremen were concerned?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Overwhelming majority to affiliate with the CIO, except a few disrupters and such people as that.

Q. When did the affiliation actually become complete?

A. August, 1937; August the 9th, I think we were chartered.

Q. Now, you have testified that you held a position known as West Coast CIO Director.

When did you achieve that position?

A. The middle of July, 1937.

Q. In what manner?

A. Appointed by the President or the Chairman at that time of CIO, later on approved by the Executive Committee or the Conference—the first conference that the CIO held, which was in October, 1937 in Atlantic City.

Q. Who was the then Chairman by whom your appointment was made? A. John L. Lewis.

Q. Did you—withdraw that. What general instructions did you receive from the CIO after your appointment as West Coast Director? [5671]

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that as being immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: I don't think I grasped the question. Will you read the question.

(The question referred was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

Mr. Gladstein: I will withdraw the question, your Honor.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What instructions, if any, did you receive from the CIO at your appointment as West Coast CIO Director with respect to the affiliation of A. F. of L. Unions, Local Unions or International Unions, with the CIO?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, your Honor, as not being material.

Presiding Inspector: Perhaps the witness understands the question. I don't understand it. "What instructions". You mean what legal advice or——

Mr. Gladstein: (Interposing) No; what instructions he received, if any.

Presiding Inspector: How is that material?

Mr. Gladstein: This is as to the question of how and under what circumstances or conditions the CIO would advocate or would permit the affiliation with it——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) How is that [5672] material?

Mr. Gladstein: (Continuing) ——of A. F. of L. Unions. This goes, your Honor, in a preliminary way to the meeting concerning which Mr. Chase testified. I am coming to that, you see.

Mr. Del Guercio: I don't think it is material, if your Honor please.

Mr. Gladstein: Well, I can go at it this way. I will withdraw that question.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Bridges, do you recall whether or not you spoke at any meetings on West Washington Boulevard in Los Angeles in the fall of 1937?

A. I did.

Q. Do you recall a meeting at which there was, among others, a man by the name of John Horn?

A. I do.

Q. When approximately was that meeting held?

A. August or September, 1937. My best recollection is that it was early in September.

Q. Do you know how that meeting was called?

A. I called it through the Southern California Regional Director at that time, J. R. Robertson.

Presiding Inspector: CIO Director?

A. (Continuing): He was—that's right. He was a CIO Director of Southern California, and the meeting was called [5673] through him. He put out the publicity.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. What was the purpose of having this meeting called?

A. To convey—I had just returned from Washington and I called a series of meetings on the Pacific Coast to report on the discussions I had with the National officers of the CIO at that time and convey them to the officials locally.

Q. At the meeting, the particular meeting that was attended by Mr. Horn, did you discuss the question of A. F. of L. Unions affiliating with the CIO?

A. I did.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. What did you say?

Mr. Del Guercio: If your Honor please, I object to that as not being material.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

Mr. Del Guercio: What?

Presiding Inspector: I will take it. We have had some evidence in a way as to the character of Mr. Bridges' speech.

Mr. Del Guercio: Then we should have the whole speech and not just a portion of it.

Presiding Inspector: That is what he is going to ask him, what did he say. That calls for the speech.

Mr. Del Guercio: Just the one particular part as to the affiliation with the A. F. of L.?

Presiding Inspector: No. We are going to get the rest. Perhaps he has the manuscript. [5674]

Mr. Gladstein: I will ask him.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Do you have the verbatim report of what you said?

A. No. I have looked for it, but I can't find it.

Q. Do you have a recollection of what you said?

A. Fairly good one.

Q. All right. Will you state what you did say?

A. At that time there was quite a lot of misunderstanding not only in Los Angeles but elsewhere as to——

Mr. Myron: (Interposing) Is that what he said?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that as not answering the question.

Presiding Inspector: Never mind the preliminary. Just tell us what you said.

A. (Continuing) I said that, too, your Honor, because that is the way I opened up by saying that there is quite a little bit of misunderstanding down here as to what the role of the CIO is in swinging over Unions to it. And that's exactly what I said. That is what the meeting was about.

Presiding Inspector: You are entitled to say that.

Mr. Myron: We have no objections if that is what he said.

The Witness: That is what I said and then I followed it up by explaining why the misunderstanding and what the program should be, and that the program was correct because I had discussed this particular matter with the National officers of [5675] the CIO, and we worked out a complete understanding on the whole thing.

I pointed out that the basic program of the CIO was to affiliate to the actual CIO Committee Unions on a national scale, generally speaking. There were certain fields that should not be penetrated or molested in so far as organizing was concerned; that the main concentration should be on the unorganized fields, of which there was certainly plenty in Los Angeles, without moving in or fooling around with the Unions regardless of affiliation that were already in the field.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

I warned against what was going on at that time, and that was that in many cases small groups of individuals that collected a small group or a following in a Local Union would seek a CIO charter for that small group, even though it might be less than a majority of a small Local Union, and in that way there was quite a bit of disruption and destruction going on in the trade union movement in Los Angeles. There was charters being issued that it took us six months to even find some of them. And this was the address that I made there.

I went on to say that they should disregard the campaign and the slander and the publicity that was going on in Los Angeles at that time through the press, through the various employer associations and, of course, coming from all the oppositionists to CIO in the Local A. F. of L. Unions and, in some cases, CIO Unions to the effect that the CIO was a Communist organization; that it was inspired from Moscow; that [5676] John J. Lewis was a Communist, as he was roundly and nationally being called at that time, John Brophy, many of the leaders of the CIO. And, of course, I didn't escape myself and many of the officials of the National Government. And I went into that and told them the purpose of such a thing was to confuse the issue and that they should not only disregard the statements such people made but treat them with suspicion and distrust. And then we laid out the program for further meetings where the whole thing could be gone at in an organized way with no more charters to be granted in the Southern California area unless the situation was thoroughly investigated as to where the charter was going, whom it was going to, and what purpose it was going to be used for. And we also made arrangements to collect a few charters.

Mr. Myron: May I interrupt at this time? He is mentioning "we". I suppose he means himself.

The Witness: All right. We will say me. I was the boss at that time as far as the question of charter was concerned. Charters couldn't be issued without my authority and approval. So in this case we can say "I".

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Mr. Bridges, at that meeting——

Mr. Del Guercio: (Interposing) Wait a minute! He hasn't finished the speech yet, have you?

The Witness: Just about. Simply by winding up, we [5677] laid plans for more meetings of the same type and meetings of the same type were held regularly, every week or two.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. At that meeting or at any meeting did you lay down or intend to lay down any policy to govern the conduct of Communist Party members on the question of CIO affiliation?

Mr. Del Guercio: I will object to that, if your Honor please, to the form of "did you intend to". The speech speaks for itself, those who heard him, as to whether it did lay down the Communist Party line.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: You mean as separated from other members?

Mr. Gladstein: Yes, yes.

The Witness: The line we laid down was to govern all members of the CIO——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) I will take it.

A. (Continuing) ——egardless of affiliation.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Were the remarks that you made at that meeting in any way ordered or suggested by the Communist Party or any of its representatives?

A. It came straight from John J. Lewis and John Brophy. Now, I have no definite knowledge as to—I have only heard some testimony around here.

Mr. Del Guercio: Now, just a minute! Is that your complete answer, "only heard some testimony"? [5678]

The Witness: Well, the only knowledge I have got of John L. Lewis being a Communist is the testimony that I hear.

Mr. Del Guercio: Brophy?

The Witness: Brophy; John Brophy?

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes.

The Witness: Yes. I have heard that, too, but I don't believe it.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. To your knowledge did the Communist Party or its members make any arrangements or have anything to do with the arrangements that were made for the holding of this particular meeting or any of the other meetings that were held in Los Angeles on this organizational question?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. No. The notice of the meeting was published in the press.

Q. As coming from whom?

A. Coming from the Southern California CIO Office.

Presiding Inspector: Was it an open meeting?

The Witness: No. It wasn't exactly an open meeting. It was a meeting confined to CIO and A. F. of L. Unions. It wasn't completely a CIO Union meeting. A. F. of L. Unions were also there.

Presiding Inspector: Trade unionist meeting?

The Witness: It was closed to anybody but the trade unionists, yes.

Presiding Inspector: Admitted on cards of the Union, I [5679] suppose, or perhaps by people who knew them? There must have been some kind of recognition.

The Witness: I don't exactly recall that. The actual mechanics of the meeting was not in my hands. The Regional Director down there handled all that.

By Mr. Gladstein:

Q. Did you ever have any private conversation or personal conversation or private meeting with Mr. Ezra Chase? A. Yes, I have.

Q. When?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. I can't recall; around that time or prior to that time. I have had conversations with him and I have had communications with him, letters.

Q. On what subject matter?

A. About going into the CIO.

Q. Anything else?

A. I think, yes, also on the question of negotiations down there at one time, the various negotiations and contracts and certain difficulties that they were in.

Q. Was Communism or the Communist Party or Communist Party policies discussed in any of these conversations or in any of this correspondence? A. No.

Q. Do you know whether or not Ezra Chase was a Communist?

A. I did not. I didn't even know he was a labor spy. [5680]

Mr. Del Guercio: Well, I move that that last answer be stricken, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Strike it out.

Mr. Gladstein: You can cross examine.

Presiding Inspector: The witness is yours, Mr. Del Guercio.

Cross Examination

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, Mr. Bridges, don't you attribute your success as a great labor leader even in a small way to the support given to you by the Communist Party?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Oh, I think I might attribute it more to the attacks made on me by the Hearst press.

Q. But you have received support from the Communist Party and members of the Communist Party, have you not?

A. I wouldn't doubt that that's correct. I have received support from other parties.

Q. And you have supported the Communist Party and Communist Party leaders, have you not, throughout your so-called career?

A. Yes and no.

Q. Now what do you mean "yes or no"?

A. I have supported certain things regardless of what political party might have also supported them, and I have supported individuals and certain policies of all political parties, [5681] Democratic—

Q. (Interposing) Let us confine ourselves to the Communist Party. We are not concerned with the Republican Party and we are not concerned with the Democratic Party or any other party excepting the Communist Party.

A. So long as it is——

Q. (Interposing) When did you support the Communist Party?

A. I don't know. You would have to be specific and you would have to nail it down.

Q. Now, you have made the statement that you have supported the Communist Party. Now tell us, tell the Court here when and under what circumstances you supported the Communist Party.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. I was asked a general question. I gave you a general answer. If you will be specific and nail it down to any specific question I will give you a yes-or-no answer.

Q. You mean you refuse to answer the question as to when and under what circumstances you supported the Communist Party?

A. No. I am unable to answer the question in the form it is put.

Q. Now, when and under what circumstances did you support members and leaders of the Communist Party?

A. I can't say off-hand, I haven't stated that I have supported members and leaders of the Communist Party. [5682]

Q. Now, your testimony here has been that you did support leaders of the Communist Party.

A. I don't think that was my testimony.

Q. Now, you left Australia when?

A. You mean the last time?

Q. I mean the first time.

A. I left it dozens of times.

Q. The first time. When did you start going out to sea?

A. I can't quite recollect that. It was early in the war; around 1915.

Q. How old were you at that time?

A. Fifteen. I might say that I juggled my age around a bit. I was a little anxious to get away and I shoved it a few years ahead and later on I shoved it back a few years.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. What do you mean you "juggled" your age?

A. Well, I might have said I was sixteen or seventeen when I wasn't that old.

Presiding Inspector: When you signed on?

The Witness: When I signed on. My folks were kind of opposed to it.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Have you juggled your age continuously since?

A. No. I have had a tough time catching up to how old I really was.

Q. For how long a period of time did you ship in and out of Australia? [5683]

A. Until I came up here: 1920. I didn't go back. Four or five years.

Q. Now, how many trips or voyages did you take out of Australia approximately during that period of time?

A. Oh, I couldn't say; fifteen or twenty. It depends on what you call a "voyage". I made many short ones. Some long ones, some fast ones.

Q. Would you say that you spent most of the time in Australian or on ships during that period of time?

A. On ships. I was getting around plenty.

Q. You have testified, I believe, that you were familiar with the labor situation in Australia at that time?

A. I was, in this way: That it didn't make much impression on me. I kind of remembered it more later on and I remember it now, but I wasn't familiar because of my own active participation, but I had some relatives that were very active.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Haven't you given interviews to the effect that you were familiar with the labor situation in Australia during that period of time?

A. Nobody can be in Australia and be a working person without being familiar with the labor movement.

Q. And then you were also familiar with the movement of the IWW in Australia about that time, were you not?

A. Yes. I was opposed to it.

Q. You were opposed to them? [5684]

A. The way it was down there, yes.

Q. You knew what the IWW was doing in Australia, did you not? A. Oh, yes.

Q. You knew that they were burning docks?

A. I did not. Never heard it yet.

Q. And you knew that they were sabotaging property in Australia? A. No.

Q. You knew that the IWW had been outlawed in Australia? A. At what time?

Q. During that period of time.

A. What period of time?

Q. Well, you are a trade unionist, aren't you? You are familiar with all these trade union matters?

A. I am familiar with quite a few of them.

Q. You tell me the time that the IWW was outlawed in Australia.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. I don't know. I never heard of it. As far as I know it never was.

Q. Was it a legal Union in Australia, considered as such?

A. Yes. There was very little difference between the IWW in Australia and the Australian Workers' Unions in there. They closely follow the pattern of the IWW yet. Now, you have to differentiate when you are talking about the Australian labor movement because it is complicated. [5685]

Q. Is your testimony, Mr. Bridges, that the IWW was not engaged in sabotaging and the destruction of property in Australia during the period of time that you were out to sea and shipping in and out of Australia?

A. It is my testimony, within my knowledge, and from everything I know—I have heard that the IWW engaged in sabotage in the United States, but know not one case of sabotage that has ever been proven.

Q. You knew then, did you not, that the IWW was engaged in sabotaging and in the destruction of property in Australia?

A. I did not; I don't now. I have heard of it.

Q. And you knew the nature and character of the IWW at the time you arrived in the United States in 1920?

A. I knew what I thought it was. It was a trade union to me, and a little better than some I seen around.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Didn't you testify that you were in the general strike in Australia?

A. In the 1917 general strike, yes, sir, of the seamen.

Q. Who called that strike?

A. The Australian Seamen's Union, the Miners' Union, the Railway Union, and we were in a supporting position.

Q. Were you a member of any union at that time? A. The seamen's Union.

Q. Were they on strike?

A. They certainly were. [5686]

Q. Was the IWW on strike?

A. Not so much. I don't recall that particular phase of it, but the unions on strike were the bona fide labor unions of Australia and they struck the whole country.

Q. What do you mean by "Not so much?" Was the IWW on strike at that time?

A. I don't know. Everybody was on strike, whether the IWW or anything else. The whole country was on strike. It was a general strike. And the IWW, while I might not agree with them, I never found them strike breakers.

Q. Did I ask you that?

A. Well, it is in answer to your question. No.

Q. Please don't volunteer anything I don't ask.

A. I am only trying to be helpful.

Mr. Grossman: It was obviously in reply to the question asked as to whether they were on strike.

Presiding Inspector: Just reply to his questions.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

The Witness: All right.

Mr. Del Guercio: Your Honor, I have some material that I don't have here. May we have a short recess?

Presiding Inspector: Yes. We will take a short recess.

(Whereupon a short recess was taken.)

Presiding Inspector: You may proceed, Mr. Del Guercio.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Going back to Australia, in this 1917 strike who did you say called the general strike in Australia at that time? [5687]

A. It began in the railroad work shop in Newscastle, New South Wales, over the speed-up system. Certain men were fired and the union in the yards demanded their reinstatement. It was refused and the yard struck.

The railroad unions struck in sympathy with the yards.

The Miners struck in sympathy with the railroads.

We struck in sympathy with the Miners.

Q. Did anybody else strike?

A. Everybody struck.

Q. Including the IWW organizations?

A. I don't recall that. They were not engaged in this particular——

Q. (Interposing): Is that the only portion of the general strike in Australia that you don't recall, the part that the IWW played in it?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. I don't recall what part they played in it. There was enough other people to play a big part without considering them.

Q. As a matter of fact, you know that the IWW played the leading role and the leading part in that strike in Australia?

A. I know something exactly to the opposite.

Q. Now, was not the IWW active in Australia at that time?

A. The IWW was active almost in every part of the world I ever went.

Mr. Del Guercio: I move that that last answer be stricken [5688] and that the witness be instructed to confine himself to the questions that I am asking and not to wander all around.

Presiding Inspector: Yes; that is the rule.

A. I believe the IWW was active in Australia as well as everywhere else.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. And isn't it a fact that about that time, just prior to the strike, they had a membership of about 15,000 throughout Australia?

A. I don't know.

Q. Aren't you familiar with the labor movement in Australia? A. I am.

Q. And isn't it a fact, and don't you know, and didn't you know at the time you arrived in the United States in 1920, that during the general strike in Australia, in 1917, the town of Sidney had been set on fire? A. No. I don't know it yet.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. And didn't you know that it had been set on fire by fire bombs?

A. I don't know it yet. I don't believe it.

Q. And cotton waste?

A. No. Who did they blame it on?

Q. Don't you know?

A. No. I know who was on strike, and it wasn't the IWW. [5689]

Q. And didn't——

A. (Interposing): There was a lot of that talk.

Q. Didn't you know at that time that the Steamer Cumberland, which was loaded with meat and supplies for England, was wrecked by an explosion of a bomb while en route between South Wales and Victoria?

A. If she was en route she was filled with strike breakers and anything could happen in that case.

Q. Didn't you know that the IWW were accused of causing that explosion—you knew that, didn't you?

A. I don't know it, but I can quite believe it. I know that the IWW were always accused of a lot of things; and not only the IWW, but I remember the trade union movement down there, the bona fide trade union movement that was on strike, was certainly accused of everything.

Q. Is that in answer to my question?

A. Yes.

Q. My question was, did you know whether or not the IWW were accused of causing the explosion on the Cumberland?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. And I said everybody on strike was accused of doing a lot of things.

Q. Was the IWW accused of causing the explosion on the Cumberland?

A. I don't recall that specific case; but it is within my knowledge that I have heard the IWW accused of many, many [5690] things. I don't believe it.

Mr. Del Guercio: I move that the witness' answer be stricken, if your Honor please.

Presiding Inspector: It will save time to let it stand because immediately it will be followed by other questions along that line. I think I will let it stand.

You must confine yourself to the questions and not volunteer.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Isn't it true that two docks at Sidney were destroyed by fire and that the IWW were accused of starting that fire?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. You do know that two docks in Sidney were set on fire, don't you?

A. No, I don't. Sidney—Australia is a big country. I was a long way from Sidney at that time. I was in Melbourne.

Q. Is that in answer to my question?

A. Yes. I think you asked me if two docks in Sidney were on fire. I would have to be there to know it. I was in Melbourne.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: You are asking for knowledge here. He couldn't——

Mr. Del Guercio (Interposing): Answer "Yes" or "No".

Presiding Inspector: Listen—he couldn't know it unless he was there. If you want to insist on the word "Knowledge" [5691] in that sense—that is what he is trying the explain to you, the sense in which he takes your question in respect to "knowledge."

Mr. Del Guercio: If the Court please, the witness has already testified that he was participating in the 1917 strike and all these events are events in the 1917 strike.

Presiding Inspector: But that is a large country and he may not have been there.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Where, in Australia, were you at the time of the 1917——

Presiding Inspector: I think you mean personal knowledge.

Mr. Del Guercio: Any knowledge, wherever he may have gotten it, from newspapers or otherwise.

Presiding Inspector: He was trying to explain that.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Where in Australia were you at the time of the 1917 general strike?

A. Melbourne, Australia, living at home.

Q. Did you remain in Melbourne throughout that time——

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. (Interposing): For the duration of the strike.

Q. (Continuing): ——the duration of the strike? A. Yes.

Q. Did you participate in the strike?

A. As a rank and file member; yes.

Q. Were you on the picket line, or did they have picket [5692] lines?

A. They had picket lines, yes; but in a little different sense than what they might have them here.

Q. Did you participate in the picket lines?

A. Yes.

Q. Where? A. Melbourne.

Q. On the docks? A. Yes.

Q. Now, did you know that at the time of the general strike in Australia, in which you say you participated, that the Schooner Miranda—M-i-r-a-n-d-a—was destroyed by fire?

A. Numerous schooners were destroyed by fire.

Presiding Inspector: Do you know about that schooner?

The Witness: I used to follow very closely anything like that because I was sailing in those ships. It is possible I knew about it at the time, but I don't have any recollection now.

Was it during the strike?

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes.

The Witness: Those ships were manned by scabs and they were pretty dangerous. They carried case oil and they used to blow up every once in a while.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you know, did you have any information at that time that the IWW were accused of causing the burning of the Schooner [5693] Miranda?

A. I have a pretty extensive knowledge of those ships because I sailed on them and the IWW was not active on those ships at all. I have no knowledge of the incident you are talking of.

Q. How far is Sidney from Melbourne, Australia? A. 500 miles, roughly.

Q. Did you read the newspapers during the 1917 strike? A. Sure.

Q. Did you read an article during that time headed "Australia IWW Try to Burn Sidney?"

A. No; but I have no doubt that articles like that appeared in newspapers. The newspapers are as bad in Australia as they are here.

Q. Did you read the papers around that time?

A. Sure.

Q. Did not the Government of Australia, because of the activity of the IWW in the 1917 strike, take action, legislative action, to outlaw the IWW in Australia?

A. They took legislative action, but not because of the IWW. They took legislative action the bona fide trade union movement to outlaw strikes, and a lot of other things.

Q. Didn't they pass a law providing for the deportation of any person, not a citizen of Australia, if he belonged to [5694] or was affiliated with the IWW? A. Not that I know of.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. You have no information on that point?

A. None at all. I have relatives in Parliament down there. I know the acts they did pass. They passed a Transport Act requiring the licensing of seamen and longshoremen.

Q. With reference to the IWW, do you know what legislation they passed?

A. None to my knowledge.

Q. Would you say they didn't pass any?

Mr. Gladstein: I think the question has been asked and answered two or three times.

Presiding Inspector: I am not sure what he meant by "my knowledge."

The Witness: Meaning that this was a long time ago and it is pretty complicated. I left shortly after that, and they might have passed legislation shortly after, or at that time, and I wouldn't know about it. But I don't recall any, or know of any.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you know a man by the name of Mark Sheldon—M-a-r-k S-h-e-l-d-o-n? A. No.

Q. Commissioner for Australia?

A. No. Commissioner from where? [5695]

Q. From Australia, I suppose; from the Commonwealth of Australia.

A. Commissioner in the United States?

Q. Yes; Commissioner in the United States.

A. No. I hadn't come here then.

Q. Isn't it a fact, Mr. Bridges, that a law was passed in Australia about 1918, or 1917, making it illegal for any organization, such as the IWW, to exist? A. Not that I know of.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Isn't it a fact that a law was passed in Australia——

Presiding Inspector: He says he doesn't know.

Mr. Del Guercio: This is another question.

Presiding Inspector: Another law?

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: All right. Go ahead. I supposed his answer was quite full; that he didn't know about that.

Go ahead.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. That a law was passed providing for the imprisonment or fine, and fine, of any person belonging to the IWW?

A. No, not that I know of. I know what was done, but it is not the way you express it.

Q. Will you explain what was done in regard to the IWW?

A. You can't separate the IWW from the rest of the labor movement because the laws applied to all unions. Strikes were [5696] illegal in Australia. It was under a system of compulsory arbitration. During the 1917 strike they had our President in jail, Tom Walsh. I went to see him in jail.

Q. Was he an IWW?

A. He was not. He was President of the Australian Seamen's Union.

Q. Was he also an IWW? A. No.

Q. We are only talking about the IWW.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. And I point out that a strike was illegal, and they could throw you in jail for striking. So I can't see why they needed any such law, because that law applied to all unions. Our President went to jail, and a lot of other trade unionists went to jail.

Q. Where were you in 1919?

A. What part?

Q. Oh, for the period—the latter part of 1919, October, November and December.

A. I was on a ship called the Valmarie that sailed from New Zealand to Australia. She was wrecked on the coast of Australia. She went ashore at a place called "90 Mile Beach", 150 miles from Melbourne.

Q. Was that in 1919?

A. November, 1919.

Q. How long did you remain ashore then?

[5697]

Presiding Inspector: The ship?

Mr. Del Guercio: No. I am asking how long he remained ashore there?

A. I sailed again on that ship. We left Melbourne shortly before Christmas on this same ship bound back for New Zealand.

Q. And you remained ashore about a month?

A. More than that, I think. She went ashore in October or November, 1919. She stayed ashore for quite a while. She was towed off and taken to Melbourne to be refitted, and I worked on her while she was being refitted.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Did you hear anything about that time as to what action the Government of Australia had taken toward the IWW?

A. None as far as I know.

Q. I believe you said that your second arrival in the United States was in 1920?

A. Well, if you call it an arrival. The first time I was here I was here with the crew of a ship. I went ashore as a member of the crew. [5698]

Q. Well now, you arrived in the United States as a member of the crew of the SS Ysabel, did you not?

A. I arrived here and left the ship here. That's what I call my "first" arrival, really.

Q. That's on the Ysabel?

A. Ysabel, yes.

Q. And when was that? A. April, 1920.

Q. Was it April 12, 1920?

A. I believe so; sometime around there. I am not sure of the date.

Q. Where did you arrive?

A. San Francisco.

Q. And did you desert the ship at that time?

A. Under British law I deserted. Under American law I quit.

Q. Did you desert the ship at that time?

A. Under British law I deserted. Under your American law I quit.

Q. Was the Ysabel an American registry or British registry? A. New Zealand registry.

Q. New Zealand registry? A. Yes.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. And you were employed as a seaman there under [5699] British law, were you not?

A. Under New Zealand law; British.

Q. Under New Zealand law? A. Yes.

Q. You weren't paid off, were you?

A. I was. I left half my pay behind, or some pay behind I know.

Q. Then you weren't paid off. Were you discharged? A. It depends what you mean.

Q. Did the Captain tell you that you could go off the ship? A. No. I quit. I walked off.

Q. And where did you go after you left the SS Ysabel?

A. Do you mean when I went to sea next or what I had done next?

Q. Yes. Did you remain in San Francisco?

A. For a short while.

Q. For how long?

A. I can't recall; not very long. I shipped out again very shortly after.

Q. On what ship was that?

A. I think a Shell Oil tanker, the Silver Shell.

Q. Where did you go on it?

A. Oh, I can't recall now.

Q. Was it for a foreign trip?

A. I think it was. I think we—I think we went to [5700] China and Manila.

Q. Did you sign up for a round trip?

A. I guess I would.

Q. Huh? A. I believe I would in that case.

Q. As what? A. Able seaman.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. And when did you return to the United States?

A. I'm not sure. We returned in about a month or two, I think.

Q. And I believe you testified that you shipped in and out of San Francisco a number of times?

A. Yes.

Q. In 1920?

A. Well, not very many times that year. I think only once or twice more. For a few times towards the end of the year I think that I was sailing on the Coast for a short while. I can't recall how many times.

Q. Well, did you sign on the tanker Silver Bell in 1920? A. Silver Shell?

Q. Shell, I mean. A. Yes.

Q. That was in what? May, 1920?

A. I'm not sure. It could have been.

Q. It could have been. Did you sign on the SS [5701] Delisle? A. Yes.

Q. Did you ship on it in San Francisco?

A. Yes.

Q. About when? After you returned from the Silver Shell?

A. Yes. It was afterwards. It might have been before the Silver Shell. I'm not quite sure of which one I took first.

Q. Did you also sign on the Fred Baxter?

A. Yes.

Q. From where?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Either San Pedro or San Francisco.

Q. And when were you paid off of the Fred Baxter? A. I don't recall.

Q. Would it be the latter part of 1920?

A. It could have been. I am not sure.

Q. These trips that you were on, the SS Delisle, Silver Shell and Fred Baxter were all foreign, were they not? A. Yes, I think they were.

Q. And I believe you also testified that during the latter part of 1920 you shipped on coastwise ships?

A. Yes. That is as far as I remember.

Q. Do you know the names of any of those coastwise ships? [5702]

A. Oh, I was on numerous runs for short periods of time. I can't remember now.

Q. Were you on the Charles Christensen?

A. I shipped on the Charles Christensen. I can recall that for a specific reason.

Q. Gray's Harbor?

A. Yes, I was on her too.

Q. When did you leave the West Coast in 1920, if you did leave in 1920?

A. I'm not sure. It might have been late in 1920 or—I am not sure. I can't remember that.

Q. Well now, directing your attention to your testimony regarding your joining the IWW in New Orleans—— A. (Interposing): Yes.

Q. (Continuing): ——you testified that you joined the IWW when? A. In 1921.

Q. What part?

A. The latter part of the year. It may be anywhere from July on. July, August or September is my best recollection.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Now, when did you arrive in New Orleans with regard to the date of your joining the IWW?

A. Oh, I think about six or seven months before, maybe; somewhere between, say, four and seven months I think. [5703]

Q. As what? How did you arrive?

A. I went down by Morgan Line steamer from New York.

Q. Morgan Line steamer from New York?

A. Yes, as a passenger.

Q. As a what? A. As a passenger.

Q. As a passenger? A. Yes.

Q. And do you remember the date you arrived in New Orleans? A. I do not.

Q. The month?

A. I think it was in the early part. I think it was January or February; something like that.

Q. January or February of 1921?

A. Yes.

Q. And——

A. (Interposing) I know it was prior to the '21 strike. I made two or three short trips out of New Orleans.

Q. I am coming to that now. You arrived the first part of 1921 in New Orleans as a passenger on this boat, this Morgan Line boat?

A. That's right, I think.

Q. And how long did you remain in New Orleans before you shipped out?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. I don't know; a few weeks, I think. [5704]

Q. And when was the first boat on which you shipped out? A. I can't remember.

Q. Well, now, did you ship out before the strike?

A. Yes.

Q. On how many boats did you ship out on before the 1921 strike in New Orleans?

A. My best recollection is two or three, the last one getting back to port about 10 or 15 days after the strike started. I can remember that one. That was the James Timson, a mahogany packet that run down to Central America.

Q. Now, you said you arrived in New Orleans as a passenger and that you got on at New York?

A. I paid my passage from New York to New Orleans.

Q. Just prior to your going to New Orleans hadn't you been employed as a seaman?

A. Yes.

Q. And what was the last ship that you were on before your departure for New Orleans?

A. I think I made a second trip on the Delisle. No, it was a Luchenbach steamer and they laid her up in Boston.

Q. And when did you arrive in Boston?

A. I don't know, but I know the snow was about six feet deep.

Q. Well now, if the records of the Immigration office there show that you arrived there and paid off in February 5, [5705] 1921 would that be correct?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. That could easily be correct, yes.

Q. So that you were in Boston on about February 5, 1921?

A. That's possible, yes. I am not too sure. If that's the case, of course I arrived in New Orleans much later. I am not too sure. That's a long while ago.

Q. Now, did you go from Boston to New York?

A. From Boston to New York by the small steamer that run down there, yes.

Q. If the records at the New Orleans office show that you signed on the SS James Timson on April 21, 1921 for a trip to Belize, British Honduras, would that be correct?

A. That would be correct.

Q. So you were not in New Orleans after April 21, 1921; is that correct?

A. I was in New Orleans. The records——

Q. (Interposing): You signed on this SS James Timson on April 21, 1921? A. Right.

Q. For a trip to British Honduras?

A. All right.

Q. Did you go on that trip to British Honduras?

A. I did.

Q. And was it on April 21, 1921?

A. I can't recall, but if the records—— [5706]

Q. (Interposing): If the records so show, would that be correct?

A. I'm sure they would.

Mr. Del Guercio: All right. I don't know whether I can assure him or not that the records so show.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: It isn't very material, is it?

The Witness: I came back and paid off that ship and went to the Marine Hospital in New Orleans for a few days.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. All right. When did you return to New Orleans on the James Timson?

A. Very shortly afterwards. It was a short trip.

Q. If the records showed that you returned on May 25, 1921—no, wait just a minute, please! How many voyages did you go on the SS James Timson?

A. I don't recall, but I think it was only one.

Q. Well now, didn't you also go to Nicaragua on it? A. Yes.

Q. And wasn't that also in 1921?

A. Yes.

Q. And didn't you return from a trip to Nicaragua on the James Timson on February 25, 19—May 25, 1921 A. It's possible.

Q. And weren't you at that time held at the Immigration Office? [5707] A. No, I was——

Q. (Interposing): Weren't you detained at the Immigration Office after your arrival from Nicaragua?

A. No. We were detained in quarantine on account of fever. I went to the hospital for a check-over. In quarantine the doctor looked us over and it was something that they looked us over for, and a half a dozen of us, I think, were told to report to the hospital for further observation. I believe it was a preventive measure because of some fever that was raging down in Nicaraugua at that time or in Belize.

Q. Well, that was immediately upon your return from this trip to Nicaraugua?

A. That was when I came off the SS James Timson. I went to the hospital, I know that, and was discharged immediately.

Q. Where is Bluefields?

A. Bluefields is in Nicaraugua.

Q. Well, would you say that that is the correct date when you returned from Nicaraugua? About May 25, 1921?

A. I think so. I think that would approximately be it.

Q. When did the strike in New Orleans start?

A. The beginning of May. I am not sure of the exact date. It may have been the first or the fifth or something like that.

Q. It might? [5708]

A. Yes. I know I came back in the middle of the strike.

Q. You were at sea when it started?

A. I was at sea when the strike was declared.

Q. As a matter of fact, you shipped out just before it was called, did you not?

A. Not "just before."

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. A short time before?

A. Two or three weeks before.

Q. Two or three weeks before?

A. Yes; shipped out in turn from the Union hall.

Q. Were you a member of any union at that time?

A. I was a member of the Sailor's Union of the Pacific and the Eastern Gulf Sailors' Association. I shipped out from their Union hall on my regular turn on the list.

Q. Did you vote on the question as to whether a strike should be taken? A. I did.

Q. Where?

A. I don't recall, but I voted.

Q. Well, when was the strike called? Or when was the discussion had as to calling a strike?

A. Discussions extended all the way back into the time I was on the West Coast in the Union meetings.

Q. And then you were a member of a union at the time the strike was called and during the strike?

[5709]

A. Certainly.

Q. And the strike was called by whom?

A. The International Seamen's Union of America.

Q. Any other unions participate?

A. Yes. The Marine Engineers Union participated and the others were in and out all the time.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. And you remained a member of the union there throughout the strike, did you not?

A. I did until after the strike.

Q. You did until after the strike?

A. That is, in so far as that I was in good standing. My dues were paid up, I was on the picket line and all the rest of it during the strike.

Q. How long did the strike last?

A. I'm not sure of the exact date. It lasted a couple of months and it kind of petered out on the East Coast. Nobody knew when it was off and when it was on. We would be told one day it was off and the next day it was on.

Q. Did it end—was it ended in June, 1921?

A. On the East Coast?

Q. No, in New Orleans. You were in New Orleans all this time?

A. That's right. That is what I mean. There was a division. The West Coast stayed on strike sometime after the East Coast went back to work.

[5710]

Q. Well now, was the strike ended in New Orleans in June, 1921?

A. I am not sure. It is possible.

Presiding Inspector: You count the Gulf as part of the East Coast?

The Witness: Eastern Gulf. That was the name. There were two divisions.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Why did you join the IWW?

A. When?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Why?

A. Why? Well, the strike was being sold out. It had gradually got to where it was nothing more than a racket. The leaders of the strike itself, the leaders of the International Seaman's Union at that time, although we had the lonshoremen lined up to support us in New Orleons, and they were perfectly willing to support us, the leaders of the International Seamen's Unions told them that we didn't need any support.

Q. But the strike was over, was it not, when you joined the IWW?

A. No. I joined during the strike.

Q. Huh?

A. I joined during the strike.

Q. Your testimony is that you joined in July, 1921. [5711]

A. I might be a little wrong as to dates. After all, you have got the record there.

Q. Well, your testimony is that you were a member of a union during the entire time of the strike.

A. I was a member of the——

Q. (Interposing): Of the Seamen's Union?

A. That's right.

Q. Could you be a member of two unions at the same time? A. I was.

Q. Huh?

A. I was a member of both of them, and I can tell you why I joined the IWW at that time and what——

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. (Interposing): How long did you remain a member of the IWW? A. A few months.

Q. Well now, as I get your testimony here, at one time you testified that you remained a member two months and another time you testified that you remained a member until the latter part of that year or the early part of the following year. Now which is correct?

A. I can't say which is correct. I am doing the best I can on dates. It's twenty years ago.

Q. Well, is it possible that you were a member of the IWW for more than two months? [5712]

A. Yes, it is.

Q. Is it possible that you were a member of the IWW for more than six months?

A. I don't think I would put it more than six months.

Q. Did you ever drop out of the IWW?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Now, how, when and where?

A. I dropped out very definitely. I notified—I was on one ship when they had an organizer aboard there and he came around and tried to solicit me again, and I told him, for example, "No, I was in once. I'm out." And I told him the organizer in that field at that time that I was through.

Q. Now, what ship was that?

A. That was the Eldorado, the early part of '22.

Q. The early part of—and where did you ship on the SS Eldorado? A. New Orleans.

Q. Foreign?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Yes. That was a foreign ship.

Q. And where did it go? A. West Coast.

Q. And who was the organizer of the IWW that you told?

A. I can't recall. I remember him when I was ashore. I remember him as being one of the organizers and I don't know his name.

Q. Well, would the manifest of the crew of the SS [5713] Eldorado refresh your memory?

A. It might.

Q. It might?

A. It might. You mean as to whom the IWW organizer on that ship was?

Q. Well, you said he was on the ship, didn't you?

A. The manifest might refresh my memory. I am not sure if it would.

Q. And just what did you tell this organizer of the IWW?

A. We used to talk about the IWW. I used to——

Q. (Interposing): With regards to your dropping out?

A. I told him I was through.

Q. Huh?

A. I told him that I had dropped out sometime prior to that.

Q. And what did he say?

A. And I dropped out in the official fashion.

Q. No, no. What did the organizer say?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Oh, I think he worked pretty hard on me to get me back.

Q. Did you give him—did you surrender your book to him at that time?

A. No, not to him. My book had already gone back. I am not sure about my book. I don't know what happened to that. [5714] As a matter of fact, I think I kept my book for quite a while.

Q. Can you drop out of any Union by just telling an organizer of the Union that you are dropping out?

A. You can drop out of any Union if you don't pay your dues over a certain period of time.

Q. Were you ever expelled from the IWW?

A. I never was.

Q. Huh? A. Never was.

Q. So that if I give you an opportunity now to refresh your memory would you be able to say exactly how long you remained a member of the IWW? A. I might.

Q. Huh? A. It is hard to say.

Q. How much time do you want?

A. Oh, do you mean just sit up here and think it over?

Q. Yes.

A. I don't think I could do any better than I have done.

Q. That's the best?

A. Well, it's not bad after twenty years.

Q. Did you—now, Mr. Bridges, didn't you testify at your previous deportation hearing in 1939 that you joined the IWW during the strike in New Orleans? A. Yes.

Q. Was that correct? [5715]

A. I testified to the same thing here, and it's correct.

Q. You mean that your present testimony is also to the effect that you joined the IWW during the strike in New Orleans?

A. I am sure I said that yesterday or the day before and today. It's the truth.

Q. Did you have an interview with Theodore Dreiser of Los Angeles on October 4, 1940?

A. I did.

Presiding Inspector: The novelist?

The Witness: Yes.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. And did you tell Mr. Dreiser that you joined the IWW after the 1921 strike because you saw how the A. F. of L. had sold out the strike?

A. I don't think so. I wouldn't tell him that. After all, putting it after the strike or before or during the strike wouldn't make any difference.

Q. To whom.

A. To Mr. Dreiser. And he might make a little slip here or there, if you know him.

Q. Well, is it possible that you did in fact join the IWW after the strike in 1921?

A. The best of my memory is during the strike.

Q. What became of your membership book in the IWW? A. What was that? [5716]

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. What became of your membership book?

A. I don't know. I don't know. I wish I had it now.

Q. Who signed your membership book?

A. I don't remember that either.

Q. You have seen the membership book in the IWW that the Government has introduced in this hearing? A. Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: Do you have that here?

The Witness: I had a similar one.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. You had a similar one? A. Yes.

Q. And if I showed you this Government's Exhibit, the IWW book, you would say that you had a book similar to that?

A. As far as I remember, very similar.

Q. Were you ever in Mexico?

A. Yes.

Q. When?

A. Oh, I don't know. I think it was either—I was down there in 1920, I was down there in 1921 sometime for a while.

Q. Did you ever work in Mexico?

A. Tried to. I was out of luck.

Q. Doing what?

A. Oh, I was almost willing to do anything. I was [5717] hungry.

Q. Did you ever work in any oil field in Mexico?

A. No, I tried to.

Q. You didn't succeed in obtaining work?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. No. They didn't need any riggers. I was looking for a rigging job.

Q. Did you tell Mr. Dreiser in the same interview that you had obtained work as a rigger in the oil fields in Mexico?

A. Well, he might have picked up the expression "As a rigger."

Q. Well, did you tell him that you had done work, had worked as an oil rigger in Mexico?

A. Possibly.

Q. That was not a true statement, was it?

A. It was.

Q. Well, isn't it your present testimony that you did not work in Mexico?

A. That isn't what you asked me. I have worked in Mexico in more ways that one. I am just trying to be clean on it.

Q. Did you ever work as a rigger in an oil field in Mexico. A. No.

Q. Did you tell Mr. Dreiser that you worked as a rigger in an oil field in Mexico? [5718]

A. Oh, we had a long conversation about that. He might have used the term "rigger."

Q. Did you tell Mr. Dreiser that you had worked as a rigger in an oil field in Mexico?

A. I don't think so. I told him what I did work at.

Q. Did Mr. Dreiser correctly quote you in the magazine "Friday" for October 4, 1940 when he said that you had told him that you had worked as a rigger in an oil field in Mexico?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. That might be what you call a correct quote. He mightn't have got the technical term correct.

Q. Did Mr. Dreiser quote you correctly in this magazine "Friday" for October 4, 1940 when he quoted you as saying that you joined the IWW in New Orleans after the 1921 strike?

A. He might have quoted me correctly. He quoted me correctly on every substantial point. On minor points, such as dates or technical terms, it is entirely possible that there is a mistake here or there. That would possibly be my language instead of Dreiser's.

Q. Did Mr. Dreiser quote you correctly when he said that you joined the IWW because the A. F. of L. had sold out the strikers?

A. That was one of the main reasons I joined, whether he said it or not. If he said it, it's true. I mean, in that case the particular leaders involved.

Q. Is this in explanation of the——

A. (Interposing): Yes. I say I mean in that case the [5719] particular A. F. of L. individuals involved. I can name them.

Q. Now, you testified that you knew at the time you joined the IWW that it had anarchistic doctrines?

A. I didn't. I didn't testify to that. You mean at the time I left, I knew that?

Q. You left because they were anarchistic?

A. One of the reasons, yes.

Q. Now, what do you mean by "anarchistic"?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Disorganized, leads to disruption, too fertile a field for provocative agents, and there were—too fertile a field for labor spies to work in, employers' agents. The place was full of them.

Q. How old were you at this time?

A. I was old enough.

Q. How old were you?

A. About twenty, nineteen.

Q. Had you ever heard the word "disrupter" at that time?

A. No only heard it. I knew some.

Q. Huh?

A. It wasn't a question of words. I knew one when I seen one or heard one.

Q. I believe you also used the word "syndicalist"?

A. "Syndicalist," yes.

Q. Do you know what it means? [5720]

A. I did and do now.

Q. And is that the reason you dropped out, because there were syndicalists and anarchists?

A. It wasn't a question of words. It was a question of tactics. But you're right. I didn't agree with syndicalistic views.

Q. No, I didn't say you didn't agree.

A. All right.

Q. Are you in favor of laws against syndicalism or regulating syndicalism?

A. No. It depends upon how you use the term. You might mean something different than what I do. Explain what you mean by "syndicalism" and I will tell you.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. I would rather have you explain.

A. To me it simply means a trade union or an organization of workers that favors direct action at all times and with a complete disregard, and not only disregard but opposition, to any form of political action. That's what I mean by "syndicalism." And I am not in favor of laws to prevent a union being syndicalistic if they want to.

Q. And is it your testimony that all the laws, state syndicalism laws are directed against only organizations such as you describe?

A. Oh, no. Those laws were directed against all organizations.

Q. And what is your position with respect to those [5721] laws?

A. A hundred per cent against them, and I worked hard to get rid of some of them.

Presiding Inspector: What do you mean by "direct action"?

The Witness: "Direct action" means the use of economic action as against—that is, without any attention or resorting to the processes of mediation, arbitration, negotiation. In other words, you settle your disputes by walking off the job. You get everything by walking off the job. And that was generally the IWW policy. That works all right up to a point, but there comes a time when something has to be settled and a contract has got to be negotiated and signed and lived up to.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Is the Court through?

Presiding Inspector: Yes. I wanted to get his understanding of the phrase.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you in 1921 file a Declaration of Intention in the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Louisiana in New Orleans?

A. A Declaration of Intention for citizenship you mean?

Q. Yes. A. Yes.

Q. And was that under oath? A. It was.

Q. And was all the information contained in that decla- [5722] ration true and correct?

A. To the best of my knowledge it was.

Mr. Gladstein: May I see it?

(The document referred to was passed to Mr. Gladstein.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, I will show you a certified copy of the Declaration of Intention filed in the United States District Court, Eastern District of Louisiana in New Orleans, on May 7, 1920 by one Harry Renton Bridges, and ask you if that is your declaration?

Presiding Inspector: A copy of it.

Mr. Del Guercio: A carbon copy of the original.

A. That's right. This is my signature, and—— that's right.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you at that time state under oath that you were born at Melbourne, Australia?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Yes.

Q. On the 28th day of July, 1899?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that the correct date of your birth?

A. No.

Mrs. King: If your Honor please, I think it is all immaterial.

Presiding Inspector: Well, of course, it's importance may be slight or great, but I think it is material. Contra- [5723] dictory statements made by the witness.

Mrs. King: The only thing is this, if your Honor please. It was some time ago when we offered character evidence in this case and you said there had been no attack on character evidence. If this kind of testimony——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) This isn't an attack on character.

Mrs. King: Certainly it is.

Presiding Inspector: No, not a direct attack. That doesn't open the door to proof such as you have suggested.

Mrs. King: Because it certainly is an attack on his veracity.

Presiding Inspector: An attack on his veracity in that particular.

Mrs. King: Yes. That seems to me under the—

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Oh, no.

Mrs. King: (Continuing) ——rules laid down in Wigmore, that is exactly the thing which opens up the door.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Presiding Inspector: I think not. I won't dispute you about Wigmore, but I am confident——

Mrs. King: (Interposing) I have it here.

Presiding Inspector: (Continuing) ——that that is not the general rule. There may be all kinds of contradictory statements and you may claim, or the other side may claim that it does affect his character but that doesn't open the door to character witnesses to show by general reputation——[5724]

Mrs. King: (Interposing) What his reputation for truth and veracity is when there is an attack on his veracity?

Presiding Inspector: No, not unless there is proof that his reputation is the contrary.

Mrs. King: I don't believe—I would like your Honor to stop at this time, if I may, to discuss this whole problem, because apparently there is an intention to attack it in this way. And it seems to me that it does open the door under the rules as laid down by Wigmore, that that is definitely the way not because there is a general attack on his reputation, but where there is an attack on him for contradictory statements.

Presiding Inspector: I will examine any authorities that you may submit to me. It is not the rule that I am familiar with.

Mrs. King: And it says here——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) It won't make any difference anyway. We would be entitled to take this. I would be entitled to take this.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mrs. King: All right. But I just wanted you to realize that we are going to raise the contention——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Oh, certainly.

Mrs. King: (Continuing) ——if this type of evidence is introduced.

Presiding Inspector: I should think you would.

Mrs. King: That there has been an attack on Mr. Bridges' credibility, and that we will have to bring in a large number [5725] of character witnesses if this kind of thing is indulged in.

Presiding Inspector: If you are permitted to.

Mrs. King: Yes, if we are permitted to, of course, your Honor. But we feel that this is entirely outside the issue and it is an attempt to——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Oh, this witness' credibility, of course, will be subject to attack.

Mrs. King: Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: Of necessity it must be, if your Honor please.

Mrs. King: For truth and veracity.

Presiding Inspector: You don't need to say anything.

Mrs. King: As I say, these efforts to just whittle away on this kind of thing seems to us——

Presiding Inspector: Just exactly the same as you have done in certain of the witnesses.

Mrs. King: This does, though, as——

Presiding Inspector: (Interposing) Of course, the Government hasn't attempted to prove any good reputation. We haven't allowed it. There hasn't been any such thing suggested except in the case of Mr. Horn. But this is the first that we have heard of any contradictory statements with respect to Mr. Bridges.

I think we had better get along. When we come to your matter that can be taken up then. I would be very glad to see [5726] any authorities that you wish to submit.

Mr. Del Guercio: I want to make a correction there for the record.

Presiding Inspector: Go ahead.

Mr. Del Guercio: I have stated the wrong date that this declaration was filed. It was filed on July 3, 1921.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Is that correct?

A. That's the date, if that's the correct date on there. I didn't notice it.

Mr. Del Guercio: I offer this in evidence as Government's Exhibit next in order.

Mr. Gladstein: We object to if as immaterial, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: I will receive it.

(The document referred to was received in evidence and marked Government's Exhibit No. 277.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Do you have your discharge papers from any of the vessels on which you shipped?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. I have some. I don't know exactly where they are. I could search for them and see what I can get together.

Q. You don't have them with you? A. No.

Q. Do you know what employment you had for the period [5727] from July, 1921 to March, 1922?

A. From when? July what?

Q. July, 1921 to March, 1922?

A. No. I can't recall offhand.

Q. Did you ever sign on the Chickasaw City?

A. Yes, I was on her for a while, anyway. I can't——

Q. Was it in July or August, 1921?

A. It might be around that time, yes.

Q. If the records show that you did, would that be correct or incorrect?

A. I was on the Chickasaw City during '21 and I would not dispute the record as to the month.

Q. You know, do you not, that a record of your arrival as a member of the crew is kept at the Immigration and Naturalization Office at the port of arrival? A. That's right.

Q. And that is made at the time of your arrival?

A. And it is noted on your passport, on your seaman's passport.

Q. And you were examined and inspected by an Immigration Officer upon each and every arrival from a foreign ship?

A. As far as I recall, yes. The ship wasn't allowed to dock.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. What?

A. The ship wasn't allowed to dock, as far as I recall, [5728] and no trip that I was ever on, the ship wasn't allowed to dock until that inspection had been made. [5729]

Q. Did you sign on the Lake Falama—F-a-l-a-m-a? A. I think I did.

Q. What? A. I think I did.

Q. And where did you ship on it?

A. I don't—it may be New Orleans, it might have been Mobile, it might have been Vera Cruz.

Q. If the records show that you shipped on this vessel at Galveston, Texas, September 6, 1921, would you say that is correct?

A. It might be; although my recollection is it was at Vera Cruz.

Q. Vera Cruz, Mexico?

A. That might be the period of signing on. I might have been on the ship before—at the termination of the articles. It is my recollection that I picked her up in Vera Cruz.

Q. Were you paid off from this ship, the Falama on September 28, 1921, at New Orleans?

A. It is possible.

Q. So that you were not in New Orleans, were you, in July or August, 1921?

A. If the report shows I was on those ships, I was on the ships; I was not in New Orleans.

Q. Then you were not in—but you were in New Orleans the early part of July? [5730]

A. It is possible.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Say, about the 13th of July?

A. It is possible.

Q. And you had been arrested in New Orleans, had you not? A. During the strike?

Q. During the strike. A. Yes.

Q. And do you know the date of that arrest?

A. No, I don't remember.

Q. Have you ever checked it?

A. No, I can't say I have.

Q. Have your attorneys checked the date of your arrest in New Orleans? A. I don't know.

Q. Do you know that there is a record of your arrest?

A. I don't think there is. We were released without being booked.

Q. Well, Mr. Bridges, as a matter of fact you were booked, were you not? A. I was booked?

Q. Yes.

A. I might have been; I am not sure.

Q. Do you know what you were charged with?

A. We were charged with loitering. We were on the picket [5731] line.

Q. I said "July". My records show you were arrested on June 11, 1921. A. June 11?

Q. Yes. A. It could be correct.

Q. You were in New Orleans on June 11, 1921?

A. I was arrested, sure, on the corner—I know the street.

Q. Were you a member of the IWW at the time of that arrest?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. I was a picket captain at that time.

Q. Were you a member of the IWW at the time of that arrest?

A. I could have been; I am not sure.

Q. Was it because of your activities in the IWW that you were arrested?

A. It was because of my activity on the picket line.

Q. Was it because of your activities in the IWW—"Yes" or "No"?

A. No. I can recall the circumstances. The Mayor issued an order——

Q. (Interposing) I didn't ask for the circumstances, unless it is to qualify your answer.

A. It does qualify the answer. [5732]

Q. You mean it might not be "No"?

A. "No"—with qualifications.

Q. Were you ever employed on the SS Eldorado? A. Yes.

Q. Where did you sign on?

A. New Orleans.

Q. When? A. I don't know.

Q. Could it have been October 11, 1921, if the records so show? A. It could be.

Q. And where were you paid off?

A. San Francisco, I think; maybe Seattle—maybe some—I was paid off on the Pacific Coast.

Q. If the records show that you were paid off in San Francisco, California, on November 12, 1921, would that be correct?

A. I would not dispute it.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. The records show that you signed on the SS Eldorado at Anacortes, Washington, November 30, 1921, and that you were paid off in San Francisco February 22, 1922, is that correct?

A. It is possible.

Q. I mean February 26, 1922, is that correct?

A. It is possible.

Q. Were those all of the vessels upon which you were employed [5733] during the period from July 1921 to March 1922, and I will list them again for you: The Chickasaw City, the Lake Falama and the SS Eldorado.

A. As far as I recall. I remember—I am not sure if I made any trips, or if I worked on them, but I know I tried to ship on other ships; one Norwegian and one British, two British ships. I am not sure if I sailed on them or made any trips. As far as I know, I can't recall any others than you have outlined there.

Q. Now, the records show that you signed off the Lake Falama on September 28, 1921, and then signed on the next ship, SS Eldorado, on October 11, 1921. From September 28, 1921 to October 11, 1921, where were you? A. I don't know.

Q. Were you in New Orleans?

A. Possibly.

Q. If you signed on in New Orleans on October 11, 1921, would that refresh your memory?

A. If I signed off in New Orleans and I signed on another ship three weeks or a month later, the possibilities are I was in New Orleans. I can't remember.

Q. Now, were you ever employed on the SS Lydonia—L-y-d-o-n-i-a? A. Yes.

Q. That was a Coast Geodetic Survey about which you [5734] testified on direct examination?

A. That is right.

Q. And when did you sign on it?

A. I don't remember.

Q. If the records show it was on March 3, 1922 would you say that that was correct?

A. I wouldn't dispute it.

Q. And you were employed as what on the ship?

A. Quartermaster.

Q. You didn't sign on as Quartermaster, did you? ?A. I think I did.

Q. Did you sign on as an able bodied seaman?

A. That might be. I might have signed on as an able bodied seaman and was transferred, or given the Quartermaster's job a little later on.

Q. How long did you remain on that ship?

A. A few months; six or seven months, I think.

Q. And were you discharged?

A. I left; I quit. I have got an honorable discharge.

Q. Were you discharged because you needed hospitalization?

A. No—oh, yes. I was not discharged. Shortly after I went on there I had to go to the hospital for spinal meningitis. Then I went back to my ship.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Was that at the Marine Hospital in Los Angeles? [5735]

A. San Francisco. But I went back to the ship after that.

Q. It was after that that you were promoted to Quartermaster?

A. I am not sure. I was acting Quartermaster before I went to the hospital.

Q. When did you say you were discharged?

A. From what?

Q. From the Lydonia?

A. I wasn't discharged.

Q. Wasn't it a fact that you were discharged at Oakland, California, October 4, 1922?

A. Discharged at my own request; yes. I left at my own request.

Q. You were discharged, weren't you? Isn't that the usual expression? A. All right.

Q. Seamen are discharged, aren't they?

A. No. That is not the way. They pay off.

Q. And are discharged?

A. And they get a discharge; a paper.

Q. And did you serve on that vessel while it was stationed at Coos Bay, Oregon?

A. Eureka and Coos Bay; yes.

Q. Now, on direct examination you stated that you couldn't [5736] recall your earliest employment on the west coast?

A. Not all that I had. I had short periods of employment. My earliest recollection, of course, would go back to my longshore work. After I quit going to sea there were spaces in between, even during the time that I was working on the waterfront, that I had other employment for a short while.

Q. When did you first begin working as a longshoreman?

A. To the best of my recollection it was late in '22 or maybe early in '23.

Q. What does a longshoreman's work consist of?

A. A lot of hard work sometimes; but in general it is the work of loading ships, or loading cars on the docks; or discharging ships and discharging cars on the docks, generally speaking.

Q. Stevedore work?

A. Stevedore work; yes.

I think now I recall that at Christmas, 1922, I was working as a lumber piler in San Francisco, at Van Arsdale and Harris, Fifth and Brannon Streets.

Q. It was after that that you began working as a longshoreman?

A. No. I put in a little time before that. After I got through there, if I am correct, I worked for a while as a longshoreman and then I had other employment for a little while. [5737] I made a couple of trips here and there.

Q. Did you go to sea?

A. Not to sea, no. I went up to Oregon.

Q. Where?

A. I went up to Oregon for a few days, or a week, or something like that, and came back.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. When was that?

A. I don't know; some time in '23.

Q. It was after you were discharged from the Lydonia?

A. Yes. The last time I went to sea was on the Lydonia.

Q. What part of Oregon did you go to?

A. Portland and Coos Bay.

Q. After you began working as a longshoreman, what was the first employment you had as a longshoreman, and with whom, if you know?

A. I don't know.

Q. Was it with the California Stevedoring Company? A. I don't know.

Q. Could it have been?

A. It could have been. I have an idea it was. I am not sure, though.

Q. Was there any union at that time?

A. No.

Q. In 1923, any longshoremen's union?

A. No; not a bona fide union. A company union. [5738]

Q. Was there a company union?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. What was the Company union known as?

A. The Longshoremen's Association of San Francisco; commonly known as the Blue Book.

Q. Was that the same Blue Book Union that was in existence in 1933? A. Yes.

Q. That was in existence, you say, in 1923 also?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Yes. It was formed following the 1919 strike in San Francisco.

Q. Now, was that an A F of L Union?

A. No; it was a company union.

Q. Now, was there any effort made in 1924 to form a longshoremen's Union?

A. There was one formed; yes.

Q. By whom?

A. Lee J. Holman at that time——

Q. (Interposing) In 1924?

A. In 1924. I can only recall a few of the people. I recall Lee J. Holman; yes.

Q. Holman was active as a longshoreman at that time?

A. No; he was active in this particular union. He is the only one I can recall. There were others.

Q. Did you participate in an attempt to form a longshore- [5739] men's union?

A. I became a member at that time.

Q. Did you become a member of it after it was formed or were you one of the organizers?

A. Well, it was never really formed. I mean it never got established to any great degree. The membership, I think, grew to around 500; and we were all, in a way, organized, as far as individuals was concerned.

Q. Did you work with Holman to attempt to organize this union? A. Not very closely.

Q. Did you work with anyone?

A. No; not to any great degree.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. As a matter of fact, you had nothing to do with the forming of that union, did you?

A. No, in that sense I wouldn't. If you mean to say was I a charter member, or active when the thing began, not at all.

Q. A charter had been given this union in 1924, had it not?

A. Oh, sure. It had been going for some time.

Q. By the A F of L? A. Right.

Q. And you were not one of the charter members, were you?

A. No. I never said I was at any time. [5740]

Q. Didn't you testify in your previous hearing that—strike that. Now, what was that union called that was formed in 1924, the A F of L union?

A. I don't remember the exact designation, or the number of the charter. It was what was called the Red Book. It was a re-establishment of the old union that had existed in 1919. It had a number, but I just don't recall it now.

Q. Well, now——

A. (Interposing) I can check up and find out.

Q. Was it known as Local 38-33?

A. That is right; that was the number.

Q. Of the International Longshoremen's Association? A. Right.

Q. And that was an American Federation of Labor Affiliate? A. Right.

Q. And isn't it a fact that it had been on the waterfront since 1919?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. No—well, it all depends. If you mean that somebody——

Q. (Interposing) This Local 38-33?

A. That is right; that is correct. The charter had been kept in existence, maybe, by a small group of men. But when you say it had been on the waterfront, that simply means that a group of men got together, and paid dues, and talked to themselves—that is all it meant. [5741]

Q. Were you a member of 38-33?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, was there another local of the ILA in 1925 in San Francisco? A. Of the ILA?

Q. Yes. A. No.

Q. There was 38-33?

A. As far as I recall that was the only one.

Q. Was there also a 38-69?

A. I don't think so; not that I recall. I might be mixed up in the local numbers. I don't recall any such local in 1925.

Q. Well, which one did you belong to, 38-69 or 33-38—I mean 38-33?

A. Well, I wouldn't be sure as to what the number was.

Q. Have you any way of checking?

A. I think I could check. I have a recollection—I am thinking now whether there was an ILA charter among the lumber workers, lumber clerks. I have some kind of a recollection there was.

Q. Did you have anything to do with obtaining of the charter for either 38-33 or 38-69?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. No, actively, no.

Q. Were you a charter member of either one of those two [5742] locals?

A. In the sense that you only have to have ten members to get a charter, I was not one of them. I was one of the original members; that was all.

Mr. Del Guercio: I am going into a new subject. I don't want to go into it before lunch.

Presiding Inspector: We have seven minutes.

Mr. Del Guercio: I won't be able to complete it.

Presiding Inspector: You want to recess at this time?

Mr. Del Guercio: Yes.

Presiding Inspector: Two o'clock this afternoon.

(Whereupon, at 12:25 p. m. a recess was taken until 2:00 p.m. of the same day.) [5743]

After Recess
2:00 o'Clock P. M.

Presiding Inspector: You may proceed, Mr. Del Guercio.

HARRY RENTON BRIDGES

called as a witness in his own behalf, having been previously duly sworn, testified further as follows:

Mr. Del Guercio: May I have the last question, please?

(The question and answer referred to were read by the reporter as recorded.)

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Cross Examination (Resumed)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, did you, on June 15, 1928, prepare and file with the United States Immigration and Naturalization Service, here in San Francisco, a Preliminary Form for Petition for Naturalization?

A. I did, around that time.

Q. And did you prepare it in your own handwriting? A. I think I did.

(Whereupon Mr. Del Guercio passed a document to Mr. Gladstein.)

By Mr. Del Guercio?

Q. I will show you Form 2214; Preliminary Form for Petition for Naturalization submitted by one Harry Renton Bridges, 37 Alpha Street, San Francisco, California, and ask you if that is the petition you prepared and filed? [5744]

A. (Examining document): Yes, sir; this is it.

Q. Is that filled out in your own handwriting?

A. It is; and signed by me.

Q. Did you answer all of the questions on this petition? A. I did.

Mr. Del Guercio: I offer this in evidence as Government's next exhibit in order.

Presiding Inspector: It may be received.

(The document referred to was received in evidence and marked Government Exhibit No. 278.)

(Whereupon Mr. Del Guercio passed a document to Mr. Grossman.)

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, did you, on the 9th day of August, 1928, file another Declaration of Intention in the U. S. District Court in San Francisco?

A. I did; about that time.

Q. And that was under oath? A. It was.

Q. Before the Clerk of the U. S. District Court here in San Francisco? A. That is right.

Q. I will show you a certified copy of a declaration of intention filed in the U. S. District Court at San Francisco on August 9, 1928, by one Harry Renton Bridges, and ask you if [5745] that is your Declaration of Intention, or a certified copy of your Declaration of Intention?

A. (Examining document).

Mr. Del Guercio: That is certified to as being a true copy by the Clerk of the Court.

A. (Examining document): That is correct.

Mr. Del Guercio: I offer this in evidence as Government's Exhibit next in order.

Presiding Inspector: It may be received.

(The document referred to was received in evidence and marked Government Exhibit No. 279.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, you said—you testified, I believe, that you continued working on the waterfront in San Francisco up until the time you became an official of the Union in about 1934, is that correct?

A. That's right, with the exceptions that I mentioned: That there were spells or short periods in which I might have had other employment, but they were very brief.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. But your main employment was that of a waterfront worker in and around San Francisco?

A. Yes. I had no other employment that would last, say, more than five or six months during the entire time if you put it all together.

Q. Now, when did the Communist Party as such appear on [5746] the waterfront in San Francisco?

A. I don't know. I remember when I first saw Communist Party speakers on the waterfront.

Q. Well, you spoke of Communist Party speakers. A. That's what I mean.

Q. In your previous testimony. Now, when was that? Around what period of time?

A. Around 1931 or '32 is my best judgment.

Q. Now, was the Marine Workers Industrial Union in existence at that time?

A. Not that I remember.

Q. Now, when did the Marine Workers Industrial Union come into existence here in San Francisco?

A. My earliest recollection of that is through Harry Jackson and I first recall meeting Jackson in 1932, I think. It might have been '33.

Q. Well, now, do you remember your testimony in the previous hearing regarding that?

A. Not specifically. I have read my testimony in the last hearing. I can't remember it all. But my testimony will be the same this time—I hope.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. That what?

A. I hope my testimony will be the same this time.

Q. Well, I hope, too, for your sake.

Mr. Gladstein: It is obvious that this is a question of [5747] recollection, your Honor.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Did you say you came in contact with Harry Jackson about that time? A. Yes.

Q. Now, that's the Harry Jackson whom you knew as a member of the Communist Party, is it not? A. Later on, yes.

Q. Well now, you knew at the time you first met him on the waterfront that he was a member of the Communist Party, did you not?

A. I don't think so.

Q. Now, you don't think so. What do you mean, you "don't think so"?

A. I connect him up at that time with the Marine Workers Industrial Union. There were Communist Party speakers there also and I have a distinct impression that I have got them separate.

Q. Well, Harry Jackson was one of those Communist Party speakers around that period of time, was he not?

A. That's not my recollection.

Q. Well, what is your recollection?

A. Well, there used to be speakers there——

Q. (Interposing): Well now, who were some of the speakers?

A. I can recall Sam Darcy, I can recall Jim

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Branch, I [5748] can recall a young fellow named—no, a young fellow named Shannon used to speak on behalf of the Marine Workers Industrial Union.

Q. All right. You knew then that Sam Darcy was a member of the Communist Party at that time?

A. Yes, I did, I think.

Q. You knew that Jim Branch was a member of the Communist Party at that time?

A. They used to speak in the name of the Communist Party. That's how I knew it.

Q. That's how you knew that they were members of the Communist Party?

A. Well, when somebody gets up and says "Speaking on behalf of the Communist Party we advocate this, that and the other thing," I take it——

Q. (Interposing): Harry Jackson in the same manner also?

A. No. I don't recall Jackson doing that. I recall Jackson soap-boxing down there advocating and outlining the program of the Marine Workers Industrial Union.

Q. Now, was Harry Jackson connected with the Marine Workers Industrial Union?

A. I think he was, definitely.

Q. In what connection?

A. I think he was an official or an organizer.

[5749]

Q. Who was—the Marine Workers Union had a local there in San Francisco, didn't they?

A. I don't know about that time. I know they did later on. My first recollection of them having any tangible office or anything was much later.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. When? How much later?

A. Oh, I would say around the end of 1933 or the fall of 1933.

Q. And who did you know at that time that were connected as officials of the Marine Workers Industrial Union?

May I have that question?

(The question referred to was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

A. Specifically that I am sure of there were Sam Telford——

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. (Interposing): Sam Telford?

A. There was Harry Hynes; a young fellow named Jim Shannon and Harry Jackson.

Q. Now, you knew that Sam Telford was a member of the Communist party, did you not?

A. I did not.

Q. When did you find out that he was?

A. I couldn't exactly remember. I found out eventually—I think he told me, but I can't remember exactly when it was. [5750]

Q. It might have been around this period of time?

A. I think it was a little later. I didn't meet Sam Telford, until much longer after I met Jackson. I didn't meet Telford, to my best recollection, until 1933.

Q. Telford was around here in San Francisco

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

during that period of time, was he not? '32 and '33?

A. He might have been; I don't know.

Q. Was he active on the waterfront at that time?

A. My first definite recollection of Telford was just prior to the 1934 strike.

Q. How about Shannon—you knew him to be a member of the Communist Party, did you not?

A. I am a little hazy on Shannon. My impression is that he spoke for the Marine Workers Industrial Union, but I am not sure; he might have been speaking for the Communist Party.

Q. Who was the other person you mentioned?

A. Hynes.

Q. You knew him to be a member of the Communist Party? A. No, I didn't.

Q. When did you find out that he was a member of the Communist Party? A. I never did.

Q. Huh? A. I never did. [5751]

Q. Now, you said in the last hearing that the Marine Workers Industrial Union and the Communist Party became active on the waterfront about the fall of 1932, is that correct?

A. Substantially; a little difference in the dates, that is all.

Q. And that you cooperated with the Marine Workers Industrial Union?

A. In the way that I have stated.

Q. When did your cooperation with the Marine Workers Industrial Union begin?

A. During the strike of 1934.

Q. Wasn't it in fact prior to that time that you started cooperating with the Marine Workers Industrial Union, prior to the 1934 strike?

A. No; I opposed them.

Q. When did you first meet Jackson?

A. To the best of my recollection, in '32; or it might have been '33.

Q. Where did you meet him?

A. On the waterfront.

Q. Did you have any meetings with Jackson about that time?

A. No more than standing on the curb and talking.

Q. You spoke to him? [5752]

A. On the curb, right on the waterfront.

Q. What did you talk to him about?

A. Millions of things.

Q. With reference to the Marine Workers Industrial Union and the Communist Party and their activities?

A. We argued all those things.

Q. Did you argue Communism with him?

A. I argued against it generally.

Q. You talked about Communism with Harry Jackson? A. Oh, sure.

Q. What stand did he take on Communism?

A. Favored it.

Q. He favored it? A. Yes.

Q. That was in '32?

A. At that time, '32 or '33; I can't be exactly clear on the date.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Then you knew in 1932 that Harry Jackson was connected with the Communist Party?

A. Not necessarily.

Q. What else did you talk about?

A. We talked about the waterfront, about conditions, about this union, that unoin and the other union, about seamen, about the MWIU, the "Wobblies", and everything.

Q. Did you talk about the activity of the Marine [5753] Workers Industrial Union on the waterfront?

A. Jackson was doing that most of the time that I can recall; that was his job.

Q. Was he talking to you all the time about this?

A. No; not all the time. He spoke to many others.

Q. Who was with you—were you alone with Jackson there?

A. No. We always used to gather around there; there were hundreds of us there.

Q. "We used to gather around there,"—who do you mean?

A. The waterfront longshoremen.

Q. The waterfront longshoremen gathered around Harry Jackson?

A. No; gathered around the waterfront trying to get a job.

Q. And Jackson was there and spoke to you about Communism and about the Marine Workers Industrial Union?

A. He spoke to me and hundreds of others.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Did Jackson ever try to get you to join the Marine Workers Industrial Union?

A. Plenty of times.

Q. How many times?

A. I can't say off-hand; but numerous times.

Q. Now, during this period, prior to the 1934 strike, [5754] did you solicit members to join the Marine Workers Industrial Union?

A. No; just the opposite—I advocated that they join the Seamen's Union.

Q. Did you, during the 1934 strike, solicit anyone to join the Marine Workers Industrial Union?

A. To some extent, yes, but under different circumstances.

Q. I am not speaking about the circumstances. I am asking you whether you solicited anyone to join the Marine Workers Industrial Union during the 1934 strike.

A. If you mean that I took people up and urged them join it, I think you are right; I did.

Q. You know what I mean.

A. I am not sure I do.

Q. You took people up where?

A. To the Marine Workers Industrial Union hall and had them join the MWIU.

Q. How did you have them join—who did you take them to?

A. Well, I can tell you the whole story.

Q. Just a little at a time, and it might come out better.

A. I took them up to the MWIU headquarters.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Who was at their union headquarters at that time? [5755] A. I forget.

Q. This is the early part of the 1934 strike, is that correct? A. The month of May.

Q. The month of May? A. Yes.

Q. How many people did you take up to the Marine Workers Industrial Union and urge them to join the Marine Workers Industrial Union?

A. Might be quite a few; anywheres from 20 to 100; might be.

Q. Would you say there were more than 100?

A. It is possible.

Q. 200? A. Might not be that many.

Q. And who would you take them to, any particular person in the Marine Workers Industrial Union Hall?

A. No; just the person that was in the union hall that had authority to sign members up.

Q. Would Harry Jackson be there?

A. It is possible.

Q. And it is possible also that you took a number of them to Harry Jackson, isn't it?

A. It is possible that he was up there on duty at that time. I don't specifically recall it, but I wouldn't say it [5756] wasn't possible.

Q. You wouldn't say that you didn't take anybody up to Harry Jackson and urge them to join the Marine Workers Industrial Union?

A. I don't remember it specifically.

Q. You knew then at that time, did you not, that Harry Jackson was a member of the Communist

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Party and active in Communist Party matters on the waterfront? A. I am not sure if I did.

Q. Your recollection fails you?

A. No; my recollection is pretty good.

Q. Now, you also testified that you went to 37 Grove Street, the headquarters of the Communist Party, and purchased literature, did you not?

A. Yes, I have been at 37 Grove Street.

Q. How much literature did you purchase there?

A. Oh, I can't recall. I did purchase some pamphlets and other things there.

Q. With your own funds?

A. With my own hard-earned money.

Q. How much literature did you purchase?

A. I couldn't say; I really couldn't say.

Q. What kind of literature was it that you purchased?

A. I wouldn't be too sure as to that now.

Q. But you are sure that it was Communist literature, [5757] are you not?

A. I am not even sure as to that.

Q. What are you sure about?

A. I am sure there was a book store there, and it was on my way home from work, and many times I passed it, and many times I stopped, and they had books and pamphlets of all descriptions on display in the window; and certain ones that took my eye I went in and bought them.

Q. And you can't remember at this time, of course, which ones caught your eye at this time and that you purchased?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. No, I can't. I mean——

Q. (Interposing): Huh? A. No, I can't.

Q. What did you do with that literature?

A. I read it.

Q. And did you get anything out of it?

A. Well, I can't exactly remember that, but I possibly did. Otherwise I don't think I would have purchased it.

Q. And you retained since then most of the stuff you read in it and applied it?

A. I don't know how to answer that one.

Q. You knew, did you not—strike that. You had been on the San Francisco waterfront, you said, since about 1923? [5758] A. That's right.

Q. And you had heard Communist Party speakers there on the waterfront? A. I had.

Q. And you knew, did you not, that 37 Grove Street at that time was the headquarters of the Communist Party?

A. I'm not sure that I did.

Q. Would you say that you didn't know?

A. No, I wouldn't say that either. I have no distinct recollection. I know there was a book store there. That's what I was doing there.

Q. Did you take anybody to that book store to purchase literature with you?

A. Not that I know of. I don't think I did.

Q. To whom did you distribute the literature, the Communist Party literature that you purchased at 37 Grove Street?

A. No one. I read it myself. That's what I bought it for.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Did you retain it?

A. I think I did for some time. I might still have some of it yet. I am not sure.

Q. Oh, you have some of the literature that you purchased at 37 Grove Street? Still have?

A. It's possible. I have a lot of—— [5759]

Q. (Interposing): What are the names of some of the books and pamphlets that you purchased?

A. I have a great many books that you might think are Communistic but I might disagree with you.

Q. Let me be the judge of that. Show them to me.

A. I haven't them with me.

Q. What are the names of some of them?

A. I have Marx' "Capital".

Q. You purchased that at 37 Grove Street?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. Well, those that you purchased at 37 Grove Street.

A. I am trying to think. I can recall purchasing some books or pamphlets giving the stories of certain strikes, or something. It seems to me that one of them was the story of the Passaic, New Jersey strike.

Q. By whom?

A. I can't recall. That book shop used to have all kinds of books and literature.

Q. Well now, you knew that it had nothing but Communist Party literature in that book store, don't you?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. No, I know nothing of the kind and that is not correct.

Q. That book store was run by the Communist Party, was it not?

A. Well, if I am going to keep out of places because [5760] of who they are run by, I won't be able to do much shopping in this city.

Q. I didn't ask you that. You knew that that book store at 37 Grove Street was run by the Communist Party?

A. Not particularly I didn't.

Q. What do you mean "not particularly"?

A. I was up there purchasing a book.

Q. Well, I asked you if you knew that it was run by the Communist Party?

A. And I have no distinct recollection that I knew it.

Q. When did you find out that it was?

A. I don't know that either.

Q. Huh?

A. But I presume, looking back, that maybe some time in '34; early in '34. That's the best I can do.

Q. You knew, of course, that it did sell Communist Party literature at that book store, did you not, at that time?

A. I think that would be natural. I am pretty sure that if I was in there—after all, I can read English. I have a general idea of what Communist Party pamphlets are, and if I was in there purchasing other pamphlets I believe I would know that they had Communist Party books on sale. I have no recollection of it maybe right now, but I wouldn't [5761] be that stupid, maybe.

Q. Didn't you testify—didn't you at the last hearing testify that you knew that they did sell Communist Party literature at that book store?

A. I don't know. I might have. I don't remember what I testified to at that hearing. I haven't testified differently now.

Q. Well, is your testimony now that you knew in 1934 that they sold Communist Party literature at the book store at 37 Grove Street?

A. No. I have already told you my recollection. Of course, two years ago—that testimony is a couple of years ago.

Q. Without referring to what you have already said, what is your testimony now?

A. My testimony is that I have no distinct recollection right now that I knew that it was the Communist Party headquarters. Or that—I also said that if I was up there purchasing books I would know enough to know a Communist Party pamphlet if I seen one, and if they was in that book store I would see it and know what it was. And it might have been early in 1934. That's the way I remember it now.

Q. Now, you knew—you say you could distinguish in 1934 between Communist Party literature and non-Communist Party literature, is that right?

A. I think that's correct. [5762]

Q. Now, having that in mind, that distinction in mind, what kind of literature did you purchase at 37 Grove Street?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. I could purchase many kinds of literature.

Q. I am not asking you what you could purchase. I am asking you what you did purchase.

A. If I can remember, I'll tell you.

Q. Now, you have retained some of the books, you have testified. You still have some of the books?

A. I have many books. I am just trying to see if I can get any sorted out that I got at that time from that store. I'm not quite sure what they are. I have many books and pamphlets. I couldn't——

Q. (Interposing): A little hazy on that subject?

A. Well, for example, I could guess. I don't want to do that. At that time there were a lot of pamphlets floating around. There was a pamphlet, for example, explaining the workings of the NRA. I might have picked——

Q. (Interposing): I am not asking you about pamphlets of the NRA. I am asking you about Communist Party literature. You understand me, of course, don't you?

A. You mean what I think is Communist Party literature?

Q. Yes.

A. No. I don't know what—I don't think I have got what I think is Communist Party literature that I purchased at that book store.

Q. How many times did you visit that book store? [5763]

A. Not very often. I can't recall definitely, Maybe two, three times or so.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Did you ever walk in there with Harry Jackson?

A. I don't recall ever seeing him there.

Q. Huh? A. No.

Q. You might have? A. I don't think so.

Q. Did you ever go in there with Sam Darcy?

A. No.

Q. With Telford?. A. No.

Q. Sam Telford?

A. My recollection is that I didn't meet Telford until around the '34 strike. I had a lot of time on my hands. I used to do a lot of reading.

Q. Is that an answer to the last question? I thought you were a hard worker at that time.

A. Ah, I was. But——

Q. (Interposing): What is a "star gang", Mr. Bridges?

A. A star gang used to be a gang that got the preference of the work on the waterfront. In other words, they got more work, literally speaking, too, than the general run of the men on the waterfront.

Q. Did you ever belong to the star gang?

A. Much too long I did. [5764]

Q. Now, how many times did you meet Tom Raye? A. Tommy Raye?

Q. When you took these men here to join the Marine Workers Industrial Union?

A. Never met him.

Q. Never met him? A. Not——

Q. (Interposing) Prior to the 1934 strike?

A. Never met Tommy Raye until 1937.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Did you ever meet Roy Hudson?

A. In 1936 I met Roy Hudson for the first time that I recall.

Q. How can you say—what fixes the date 1937 in your mind as meeting—Roy Hudson, was it?

A. No, Tommy Raye.

Q. Tommy Raye. What is it that occurred at that time that fixes that date so definitely in your mind?

A. A conference of longshoremen and seamen in New York in June, 1937 that Tommy Raye attended.

Q. Tommy Raye was there?

A. Yes. And Tommy Raye——

Q. (Interposing) And you spoke to him?

A. What?

Q. And you spoke to him? [5765]

A. Yes.

Q. Were you introduced to him? A. Yes.

Q. By whom? A. I forget.

Q. Oh, you——

A. (Interposing) I do meet a lot of people.

Q. You do? A. Yes.

Q. Like Tommy Raye and Sam Browder?

A. Well, I don't know. It depends. You mean they look alike?

Q. You can't remember, then, who introduced you to Tommy Raye?

A. Not the particular individual, no.

Q. What was your position at that time in 1937?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. President of the Pacific Coast District of the ILA.

Q. What was Tommy Raye's position, if any?

A. I think, if I am not mistaken—I think he had some official position, if not the Secretary of a New York Marine Council.

Q. New York Marine Council?

A. Or New York Marine Committee of some kind.

Q. You don't know, do you? Are you sure about that?

A. Yes, I am sure. If you mean on the marine—— [5766]

Q. (Interposing) No, as to whether Thomas Raye had any connection with any Union at that time?

A. Sure, I am sure. I am positive. There was a functioning committee, a marine committee that Tommy Raye was either the Secretary or the Chairman of at that time. And I am positive.

Q. What was he connected with?

A. This Council or this Committee. There was a committee formed in New York on the same pattern as our Maritime Council in San Francisco and the other West Coast ports.

Q. And you were attending this conference?

A. Oh, no.

Q. What were you doing?

A. I was back East in Washington and New York conferring with the leaders of the CIO.

Q. Well, what were you doing at this particular conference where you met Tommy Raye, where you were introduced to him?

A. Oh, we were discussing the possibilities of the East Coast longshoremen affiliating with the CIO.

Q. Well, was it an arranged meeting?

A. Yes.

Q. Who arranged it?

A. I'm not sure. It was arranged at my request. I forget [5767] who I asked to arrange it now. I think it was arranged by Rathborne.

Q. Mervyn Rathborne? A. Yes.

Q. And when did he arrange it?

A. At that time.

Q. Was he with you?

A. I'm pretty sure he was.

Q. You had nothing to do, then, with the arrangements? You left that all to Mervyn Rathborne? A. Yes.

Q. And with whom did he arrange this meeting or conference?

A. With all the people that attended.

Q. That attended what?

A. The conference.

Q. Where did he go? Whom did he contact?

A. He contacted the people I wanted him to contact: seamen and longshoremen.

Q. Did you give him particular persons you wanted contacted?

A. No, I didn't know them. He knew them. I asked him to get me a delegation from Boston, from Philadelphia, from New York, from Newport News, from Norfolk, from Brooklyn and some from New York as well as some of the seamen there, [5768] because I wanted to talk over the possibilities of CIO.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. And Mervyn Rathborne went out and got those delegations?

A. He was stationed in New York. I worked out of his office at that time. He was much better acquainted than I am.

Q. Where was Mervyn Rathborne's office at that time?

A. 10 Bridge Street in New York City. He was president of the ARTA.

Q. And you went out there and met him. Now, what were you doing on the East Coast at that time?

A. I was back East to—I was back East on something or other. I think that it was to confer with John L. Lewis and John Brophy of the CIO.

Q. Had you conferred with John L. Lewis prior to going to New York to attend this conference?

A. Yes. I had to go to New York, I think, from Washington.

Q. And you say Mervyn Rathborne arranged for all these people to come there? A. Yes.

Q. And you didn't tell him what people to contact? A. Oh, I mentioned some of them.

Q. Did you mention Tommy Raye?

A. No.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. He went out and got Tommy Raye himself? [5769]

A. Tommy Raye, as I say, had the official position in this committee, as I recall it.

Q. What committee? Did the conference have a committee, too? A. No, the conference——

Q. (Interposing) What committee was there?

A. Tommy Raye's position at that time was in an official capacity with this Maritime Committee or Maritime Council.

Q. Well now, this was just a conference that you attended? A. That's right.

Q. And it was called for what purpose?

A. For me to talk with them.

Q. Just for you to talk with them? Nothing else?

A. No, that's all. And for them to talk to me.

Q. About what?

A. About CIO affiliation of East Coast longshoremen.

Q. Now, can you tell me the names of some of the other persons that attended that conference?

A. I can't.

Q. Huh?

A. I can't. Most of them were strangers to me, after all.

Q. What? [5770]

A. Most of them were strangers to me.

Q. Tommy Raye wasn't strange to you, was he?

A. Tommy Raye wasn't strange to me?

Q. Yes. A. First time I ever met him.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. And you remember Tommy Raye?

A. Oh, well, I saw him later.

Q. And you can't remember anyone else that you saw at that conference but Tommy Raye?

A. Well, they haven't played such an important part. The fact that Tommy Raye is mentioned here, in the Dies Committee and all over the country. The other fellows I met with them were either just minor officials or ordinary rank and file longshoremen.

Q. The reason you mentioned Tommy Raye is because you know that he has played a very active part in Communist Party activities since 1932?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Huh? A. No, I don't.

Q. You remember Thomas Raye because you know he went to Moscow, to Soviet Russia there in 1932 and returned about the time that the Marine Workers Industrial Union was formed on the West Coast here? A. No, I don't. [5771]

Q. Is that the reason you remember——

A. (Interposing) No.

Q. (Continuing) ——Thomas Raye?

A. No. The reason is what I told you.

Q. And he is the only person that you remember at that conference?

A. Oh, no. I never said that.

Q. Who else was there?

A. Rathborne was there.

Q. Your friend Mervyn Rathborne?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Yes. I think Joe Curran was there.

Q. Your friend Joe Curran was there?

A. Yes. And that is not the only reason I remember Tommy Raye. I never said that that was the only reason I remember him. I have a distinct recollection of why I remember him.

Q. Did he urge you to join the Communist Party at that time or had you already told him that you were a member?

A. I don't think either thing happened.

Q. Huh?

A. But I can still remember why I remember him.

Q. Where did you meet Roy Hudson?

A. My first recollection is 1936.

Q. Where? A. San Francisco. [5772]

Q. Under what circumstances?

A. He come up to my office.

Q. Roy Hudson came up to your office?

A. Yes.

Q. Your office was where at that time?

A. 112 Market Street. [5773]

Q. Was he alone?

A. As far as I remember; yes.

Q. And was there anyone in your office at the time? A. Not that I remember.

Q. All right. What did he come up there for?

A. Oh, just for a general talk; came in and said "Hello."

Q. To renew acquaintances?

A. No; I had never met him before.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. What did he talk about?

A. The Maritime situation, possibilities of the strike—all that—the situation on the east coast.

Q. Anything else?

A. Not that I can remember.

Q. Of what union was Roy Hudson an official at that time?

A. I don't know—that is, I forget—I don't know if he was a member of any union at that time.

Q. As a matter of fact, you knew that he wasn't a member of any union?

A. I didn't; I didn't.

Q. Did he tell you that he was?

A. I can't remember that.

Q. Well, you were an official of a big union at that time, weren't you?

A. That doesn't say that I can't talk to people not members of unions. [5774]

Q. What else did you talk about?

A. I can't recall anything else than what I have told you. We discussed the Seamen situation, both east and west, and we discussed——

Q. (Interposing) Let's stay with the Seamen's situation. What did Roy Hudson say about the Seamen's situation?

A. That it had improved a great deal by their organization of the CIO——

Q. (Interposing) By the organization of the CIO?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Not into the CIO, but their organization into the Defense Committee, and a drive against, at that time, a drive was on against the ISU.

Q. What did Roy Hudson have to do with that?

A. Well, I don't think it was on the basis of what he had to do with it. He had, as I recall it, recently came from the east and he was telling me about this in a general way.

Q. Telling you about the situation in the west?

A. He didn't have to; I knew more about that than he did.

Q. What?

A. I knew more about that than he did.

Q. He came up to talk to you about it?

A. Yes.

Q. What did he say about it—is that all he said? [5775]

A. About the situation in the east?

Q. In the west.

A. I can't recall him telling me anything about that. We discussed it, of course. We discussed the west coast situation. But the main emphasis, I think, was on the east coast situation, the activities of the CIO, and things like that.

Q. Was the CIO active at that time?

A. Oh, yes; oh, yes.

Q. That was in 1936? A. In 1936; yes.

Q. Was Roy Hudson connected with the CIO movement at that time?

A. I don't think he was; not that I remember.

Q. You knew, did you not, at that time that

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Roy Hudson was on a committee, but it was the Central Committee of the Communist Party, did you not? A. No; no.

Q. That is the reason he came out to see you in 1936? A. I don't think so.

Q. You knew he wasn't connected with any union? A. I did not.

Q. You knew he was not a trade union man, didn't you? A. I did not.

Q. Didn't you? [5776] A. No, I did not.

Q. You knew he was known as the "Bishop", did you not, even at that time?

A. No. I heard that expression here.

Q. For the first time? A. Yes.

Q. Did Roy Hudson tell you that he was coming over to see you as one trade union man to another?

A. No; I don't think he put it that way. My girl came in and said Roy Hudson was outside and would like to see me. I said "Show him in." I am not too fancy to speak to anybody.

Q. Did you know of Roy Hudson at that time?

A. Did I know of him?

Q. Yes. A. Oh, yes.

Q. What had you heard about him?

A. I had heard that he had been active in maritime affairs.

Q. What kind of maritime affairs?

A. Trade Union maritime affairs.

Q. Was he a Trade Union man?

A. As far as I know he was.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. You said you had heard of him. Tell me all you heard about Roy Hudson?

A. I heard he had been active in trade union affairs; [5777] that during the early days of the NRA that he was trying to organize the West Coast seamen and longshoremen—I mean the East Coast seamen and longshoremen, not the West Coast.

Q. I don't want you to get mixed up.

A. I won't.

Q. Was it the East Coast?

A. The East Coast seamen and longshoremen.

Q. Not the west coast? A. East coast.

Q. What else did you hear?

A. That is about all.

Q. You hadn't heard about his Communistic activities, had you? A. Such as what?

Q. Such as anything?

A. Well, I don't know what you mean by "such as anything." You have got to understand that at that time, or for two or three years prior to that time, everybody that was active as a unionist was a Communist almost, and still are.

Q. Had you heard that Roy Hudson was connected with any union, any legitimate union?

A. My distinct impression is that I did and had.

Q. With what union?

A. I can't remember. I think it was the Marine Workers [5778] Industrial Union that attempted to organize both longshoremen and seamen on the east coast.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Now we are getting somewhere. You had heard that Roy Hudson was associated with the Marine Workers Industrial Union?

A. I never said that.

Q. As a matter of fact, that is the only union, if it is a union, or if it ever was a union, that Roy Hudson was connected with?

A. I don't know; I don't know.

Q. Had you heard he had been connected with any other union?

A. I can't remember; not that I can recollect.

Q. And how long did Roy Hudson remain in your office?

A. I don't know. I wouldn't remember that.

Q. Could you state approximately?

A. Could I guess?

Q. Approximately?

A. Well, approximately is another word for "good guess". I would say from half an hour to an hour, or from 15 minutes to an hour.

Q. What time of day did he go there?

A. I don't remember. I know the girl was working so it was within the regular working hours.

Q. It was during working hours?

A. Yes. [5779]

Q. So it must have been on business that Roy Hudson was coming up to see you about?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Well, if everybody came up to my office on business I would get more work done than I do.

Q. Give me your best estimate on how long Roy Hudson was up in your office?

A. Anywhere from ten or fifteen minutes to an hour.

Q. Did you talk about the times that you and Roy Hudson had during the 1934 strike?

A. No; he wasn't here in 1934.

Q. You are sure that Hudson was not in San Francisco at any time during the 1934 strike?

A. If he was he had no active part in the strike. Anybody that had any active part in the strike I knew.

Q. Didn't he have an active part in the strike, and particularly during the time that the general strike was called?

A. Not that I remember. What part?

Q. Didn't you play a leading part, or didn't you want to have this Court believe that you played a leading part in the 1934 strike?

A. I done my share.

Q. Don't you know all of the persons that were active and playing a leading part in the 1934 strike?

A. As far as I know I think I do. [5780]

Q. Well, now, having that in mind, didn't you meet Roy Hudson——

A. (Interposing) No.

Q. (Continuing) ——in San Francisco in 1934?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. No; and he had no active part in the strike whatsoever.

Q. And pa.ticularly in July of 1934?

A. No; definitely not.

Presiding Inspector: There was an answer you gave some time ago in which you said that in those days every longshoreman was a Communist. Now, what did you mean by that?

The Witness: In 1934, your Honor, and especially during the 1934 strike, although the strike was under the leadership of the San Francisco Labor Council, the entire strike leadership, and practically the entire rank and file on strike, were attacked as Communists. So the accusation of being a Communist doesn't, or at that time didn't mean a great deal to any of us. It was passed off as a little more employers' propaganda. The same thing has generally been true, as far as our experience has been, since.

That is all I meant.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. What was the official organ of the 1934 strike? A. What part of it? [5781]

Q. Any part. A. Any part of it?

Q. The first part, the first part of the 1934 strike.

A. Let me see—I will have to break it down. What do you mean—do you mean the official organ of this or that union?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Of the one you were connected with, your strike committee.

A. The official organ of the longshoremen's strike?

Q. Now, you are asking me.

A. I am asking you what you mean.

Q. Strike that last question. I will put it this way: Was the Western Worker ever the organ of the Strike Committee, or of your union?

A. You mean the longshore Strike Committee?

Q. Yes. A. No.

Q. Of what was it the organ?

A. The Communist Party.

Q. And did you adopt it, did you have anything to do with adopting the Western Worker as the organ for the Strike Committee? A. No.

Q. At any time?

A. No. We never did. [5782]

Q. Now, to go back to the "Bishop".

A. To who?

Q. Roy Hudson. Didn't he make a speech here in San Francisco during the 1934 strike?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. If he had would you know about it?

A. If it had anything to do with the strike I think I would.

Q. If it had anything to do with the 1934 strike you would have known about it?

A. It all depends on where he made it. If he made a speech up in some room by himself I wouldn't; if he made a speech before any large group of people I would.

Q. Do you know if he is in the habit of making speeches in his own room?

A. I don't know him well enough to know. But if he made a speech before any large group during the 1934 strike I would know about it.

Q. You would know about it? A. Yes.

Mr. Del Guercio: May we have a recess?

Presiding Inspector: We will take a short recess.

(Whereupon a short recess was taken.)

Presiding Inspector: You may proceed, Mr. Del Guercio. [5783]

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Didn't you testify at the last hearing that the Communist Party made an offer to make the Western Worker available to you? A. Yes.

Q. To whom was the offer made?

A. There was an offer made to the Strike Committee that they would print for us a daily bulletin and we accepted that.

Q. You were the Chairman of the Strike Committee at that time?

A. And under its orders: yes.

Q. You were the Chairman? A. I was.

Q. And who made the offer, who with the Communist Party made the offer to make available the Western Worker?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. They sent a delegation down there that appeared before the Strike Committee.

Q. More than one person?

A. Two or three, if I recollect right.

Q. Who were they?

A. Darcy, Lawrence Ross, and I am not sure whether Hanoff was there or not.

Q. Darcy, you are sure of Darcy?

A. I am pretty sure of Darcy, and I am pretty sure of Ross. He was the editor of the Western Worker. [5784]

Q. You are not sure of Hanoff—was it Elmer Hanoff?

A. I am not sure of the third man.

Q. He, Hanoff, might have been there?

A. He might have been.

Q. And who requested them to come down to the Strike Committee?

A. I think they thought it up themselves.

Q. And you presided at that meeting?

A. I did.

Q. Now, when, during the 1934 strike, did this occur?

A. I think shortly after it began.

Q. And this was before the General Strike Committee of which you were,—not the General Strike Committee, but the Strike Committee of which you were Chairman?

A. I was Chairman of two Committees.

Q. Which one was it that they appeared before?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. The Longshore Strike Committee of Local 38-79, ILA.

Q. And during what portion of the 1934 strike did they come down there?

A. The early part; some time during the first week of the strike is my best recollection.

Q. And who spoke on behalf of this delegation, as you called it, Darcy, Hanoff, or Ross?

A. I don't recall. I think it was Ross.

Q. What did he say? [5785]

A. Offered us, said that the Western Worker Publishing Company, or the publication, had printing facilities and paper, and that in order that a Strike Bulletin would be available daily to the workers, and people interested in the strike, and inasmuch as they had heard that we were very short as far as finances were concerned, they made us an offer that their printing facilities——

Q. (Interposing): They made who an offer?

A. The Strike Committee.

Q. Sitting as a whole?

A. Sitting as a whole—made an offer to the Strike Committee that they would print a bulletin every day, composed of material furnished them by the Strike Committee.

Q. Was the offer accepted?

A. Officially by the Strike Committee; yes.

Q. Was a vote taken?

A. A vote was taken.

Q. Who took the vote?

A. The Strike Committee.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Did you vote?

A. No; the Chairman doesn't vote.

Q. Were you in favor of accepting it?

A. I believe at that time I was.

Q. There is no question about that, is there?

A. I don't think so. I didn't give it much thought. [5786] We took anything we could get at that time for nothing.

Q. Did you speak before the Strike Committee?

A. At that time?

Q. Yes.

A. No. They used to kind of hold me down. I was the Chairman.

Q. Even at that time? A. What?

Q. Skip it. Did you advocate the acceptance of the offer made by Sam Darcy, Lawrence Ross, and possibly Elmer Hanoff?

A. I don't specifically remember. I think that at that time if I was asked was I in favor of it my answer possibly would be "Yes."

Q. Was your recollection better at the last hearing than it is now?

A. I am only human after all.

Q. You are what?

A. I think my recollection was better two years ago than it is now.

Q. Did you testify at the last hearing, in answer to this question—strike that and I will put it this way. Was this question asked you at the last hearing: "Did you advocate the acceptance of that offer to the members of the Strike Committee?"

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. I think such a question was asked. [5787]

Q. Did you reply:

"Certainly I advocated that, and also the other paper."

A. If the record shows that I said it.

Q. The record does so show.

A. Then I said it.

Q. Is it true?

A. Yes. I might not remember it now, but that would be my position at that time. I mentioned the other paper too.

Q. I haven't asked you about the other paper. I asked you about the Western Worker.

Presiding Inspector: Don't scold the witness.

Mr. Del Guercio: Sir?

Presiding Inspector: Don't scold him.

Mr. Del Guercio: He couldn't be scolded by me. I am just a—well, I am not a "big shot". [5788]

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Now, the Western Worker then did become the organ of the Strike Committee after you accepted the offer? A. No, it didn't.

Q. It printed a bulletin for you?

A. A——

Q. (Interposing) For the Strike Committee?

A. The Western Worker kept on publishing in its usual form. We had a full, one-single sheet, "Strike Bulletin" it said on the top, "ILA Strike Bulletin", "Donated by the Western Worker" underneath it.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Did it also say "Western Worker, official organ of the Communist Party"?

A. I don't think it did.

Q. Huh? A. No.

Q. Would you say it didn't?

A. I would say it didn't.

Q. Did you subscribe to the Western Worker at that time? A. No.

Q. Huh? A. No. I read it.

Q. Did your office—or did you have an office then? A. No; had no office. [5789]

Q. Now, you said that if Roy Hudson spoke in San Francisco at any time during the 1934 strike you would know about it?

A. I never said that.

Q. What did you say?

A. I said, if he spoke before any sizeable gathering on the strike in 1934 I would know about it.

Q. Do you know where Eagle's Hall is?

A. Yes.

Q. Where is it?

A. Golden Gate Avenue. We meet there every Monday night, my own Union.

Q. Is that a sizeable hall?

A. It holds about 2200 people.

Q. That would be one of the places then you would know if Roy Hudson spoke?

A. I said a "sizeable gathering". You can have a big hall but few people in it.

Q. Oh, the gathering too now. There must have been a sizeable gathering and there must have been a sizeable hall for you to have known where Roy Hudson spoke at any time during the 1934 strike?

A. In connection with the strike. That was the question you asked me before.

Q. Yes. Now, as a matter of fact, you know that Roy Hudson spoke at the Golden Gate—at the Eagle's Hall [5790] Golden Gate Avenue, San Francisco, on July 2nd, 1934 and advocated a general strike? A. Who was he talking to?

Q. I will ask you that.

A. I don't know. Never heard of the meeting.

Q. Huh?

A. I dont' know. It's news to me.

Q. News to you? A. Yes.

Q. And you were active in the 1934 strike?

A. I had a little to do with.

Q. If the Western Worker for July 16, 1934 printed the speech of Roy Hudson, made on the date I mentioned, you would know about it, wouldn't you? A. No.

Q. Huh? A. No. Why would I?

Q. Why wouldn't you?

A. I don't know, but I don't.

Q. You still want this Court to believe that you didn't know or hear about Roy Hudson during the 1934 strike? A. Definitely didn't.

Q. And that the first time you met him was or heard about him—well, you heard about him before. But the first time you met him was in 1936, was it?

A. I can't help what the Court believes. That's the [5791] truth.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Huh?

A. And I certainly want the Court to believe it. We were holding meetings at that time. The Civic Auditorium wasn't big enough for us. We needed a little more room than that had.

Q. Was the Eagle's Hall?

A. No, sir. That wasn't big enough to hold our local membership meeting. We overflowed out of that all over the street.

Q. Let us stay with Roy Hudson for a little while without meandering. I believe you testified at the last hearing that you saw membership books in the Marine Workers Industrial Union, did you not?

A. Yes.

Q. You know what they look like?

A. Yes. I saw one in the last hearing.

Q. Let me show you a membership book in the Marine Workers Industrial Union. Did you ever see similar books? A. Yes.

Q. Is that the kind of books you saw while you were soliciting members for the Marine Workers Industrial Union?

A. I think that's the kind of books they—no, they weren't giving out books at the time I was taking members up there or sailors up there. They didn't give them books. [5792]

Q. But you can say, can you not, that this is the official book of the Marine Workers Industrial Union? A. As far as I know it is.

Q. And who signed—or, when did you see these books, Mr. Bridges?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. Oh, I saw them at that time on the waterfront.

Q. Who were they signed by?

A. I don't know.

Q. Huh? A. I don't remember.

Q. Is it possible that they were signed by Roy Hudson?

A. It is possible. It is possible.

Q. Is it possible that you saw Marine Workers Industrial Membership books in 1934 signed by R. B. Hudson?

A. If he was signing them at that time it is possible.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will offer this book in evidence, if your Honor please, as Government's Exhibit next in order.

The Witness: You must understand that in 1934, if you took a walk along the waterfront you would be stopped on every block and somebody would ask you to dig up your union book and I have done as much asking as anybody.

Presiding Inspector: I will take it.

Mr. Gladstein: I still don't think that the proper foundation has been laid for its introduction in evidence.

Presiding Inspector: He said that he recognizes it, not necessarily at that time. But that was a book of the [5793] Marine Workers Industrial Union.

(The book referred to was received in evidence and marked Government's Exhibit No. 276.)

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. You knew at that time that the Marine Workers Industrial Union was affiliated with the Trade Union Unity League, did you not?

A. I'm not sure that I did or give it much thought either.

Q. You read the Waterfront Worker, didn't you? A. Yes.

Q. Huh? A. Yes.

Q. Well now, having read—having in mind that you read the Waterfront Worker would you say that you knew at that time that the Marine Workers Industrial Union was affiliated with the Trade Union Unity League?

A. I said it's possible. I am not sure of it now.

Q. Was it ever printed in the Waterfront Worker that the Marine Workers Industrial Union was affiliated with the Trade Union Unity League?

A. I don't know.

Q. Well, you printed the Waterfront Worker, didn't you? You were one of the editors, you say?

A. I can't remember. I doubt it. At the time we [5794] were putting it out I don't know if we did or not.

Q. And if I showed you a copy of the Waterfront Worker during the time that you were putting it out, wherein it was stated that the Marine Workers Industrial Union was affiliated with the Trade

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Union Unity League, would that refresh your memory?

A. Possibly it would. I wouldn't deny it. We were kind of proud of the paper.

Q. And you would remember then that you knew at that time that the Marine Workers Industrial Union was affiliated with the Trade Union Unity League?

A. No. I would remember that we printed it in the Waterfront Worker.

Q. Did you print anything in there that wasn't true?

A. No, not as much as we could do to stop it. We printed a few things that were not true.

Q. Did you print lies?

A. In some cases that even happened. It wasn't exactly our fault. We used to print the material as it was sent in and sometimes it turned out that one particular person wanted to take a rib at somebody else, and he might have actually not told the truth. When we found those things we corrected it in the next issue.

Q. Did you print falsehoods in the Waterfront Worker?

A. In the way I stated it actually happened.

[5795]

Q. And you caused them to be printed?

A. No.

Q. Mimeographed?

A. They way I stated: That we were not able to check the complete truthfulness of every story.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

When it did happen that some errors appeared in a story it would be corrected in the next issue, which, after all, is something that is pretty difficult to have that done in any newspaper.

Q. Was the Waterfront Worker a newspaper?

A. Yes.

Q. Was it registered as a newspaper?

A. Well, it might not be in the technical sense. It was a waterfront newspaper.

Q. Was it registered in the Post Office?

A. No. I didn't know that was a requirement of a newspaper.

Q. Was it sent through the mails?

A. Yes.

Q. As what?

A. As the Waterfront Worker.

Q. As a newspaper?

Presiding Inspector: I think he means at newspaper rates.

The Witness: Oh, no. Oh, no. We mailed them in the regular style.

Mr. Del Guercio: We have introduced a number of these [5796] Waterfront Workers in evidence here, your Honor.

Presiding Inspector: Yes, I think you have.

By Mr. Del Guercio:

Q. Let me show you Government's Exhibit 205, which is an issue of the Waterfront Worker for July, 1933. That's the time you had a hand in the Waterfront Worker, is it not? A. No.

Q. Huh? A. No.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. When did you begin? A. Later.

Q. Later? A. Yes.

Q. Did you testify at the last hearing in 1939 that you became associated with the Waterfront Worker in 1932?

A. I think I made that statement.

Q. Huh? A. Yes.

Q. Was that correct?

A. No, I don't think it was.

Q. It wasn't true?

A. I have found out since that that was an incorrect date. I said in the last hearing—I said we became associated with it in September or October, 1932. At the same time I said I could check the date and check the issues. [5797]

Q. Well now, what have you checked?

A. As a matter of fact, the Waterfront Worker didn't start until June, 1933. So I was just a year out, and we started operating it around September or October of 1933.

Q. So that this group of longshoremen that you have been talking about had no connection with the Waterfront Worker in July, 1933?

A. No. I think it went out of business around July, '33.

Q. The Waterfront Worker——

A. (Interposing) Yes.

Q. (Continuing): ——went out of business in July, 1933? A. Yes.

Q. What issue is this, Government's Exhibit 205?

A. The first issue we put out changed the name

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

here. It said, "Issued by a group of ILA longshoremen".

Q. Now, this is Government's Exhibit 205. You will note it is for July, 1933. A. Yes.

Q. And on the masthead, notwithstanding what you have said, it says "Issued by a group of longshoremen". Now, regardless of the checking that you have done you were connected or associated with the Waterfront Worker in July of 1933, weren't you? A. No.

Q. Huh? [5798] A. No.

Q. Well, to what group of longshoremen does this refer to in the July, 1933 issue of the Waterfront Worker?

A. I think there was a group of seamen-longshoremen.

Q. Huh?

A. I think there was a group of seamen-longshoremen, if not in the Marine Workers Industrial Union possibly closely affiliated. It was not our group.

Q. You were not one of them?

A. No. When we took it over and put it out we changed it, and if you will look through some of those issues you will find, I think, maybe some statement to the effect that it was going to be discontinued for lack of funds or something.

Q. Now, in this same issue, Government's Exhibit 205, appears this, notwithstanding what you have testified to, on page 6 in the bottom of the last column: "As in the past, the Marine Workers Industrial Union has given us their cooperation and help in issuing this paper. The next issue of the Waterfront Worker will contain the report of the Unity Convention being held in New York July 16, 17 and 18".

Well now, Mr. Bridges, doesn't that refresh your recollection a little bit? A. No.

Q. Huh? [5799]

A. No. It's fresh enough.

Q. Now, to whom did they refer? What did this refer to: "As in the past, the Marine Workers Industrial Union has given us their cooperation and help in issuing this paper"? What were they talking about? A. I don't know.

Q. You don't know? A. No.

Q. Huh? A. No.

Q. What checking did you do between the last hearing and this hearing with reference to the——

A. (Interposing) In the——

Q. (Continuing): ——with reference to the time you became connected with the Waterfront Worker?

A. In the last hearing I promised that I would try to search and get all the old issues of the Waterfront Worker that I could. I was unable to do that. I never had any old issues. These are the first time I have seen issues like this since 1933 or 1934, but as soon as I saw them I knew the difference because I remember when the change-over was made, what the change-over was, and that is that it was definitely put out by a group of union longshoremen. One of the arguments against the paper and why it wasn't successful was that it was not being put out by the union longshoremen on the waterfront, [5800] and complaints were made that it was disrupting or splitting the union. And we agreed with those complaints. I was one of the ones that raised it. And when we started to put it out, either in September or October, 1933, after it had been out of business a couple of months, we stated that "This is a new Waterfront Worker being put out by a group of ILA union longshoremen to build the ILA".

Q. Well, let's see how correct you are, Mr. Bridges. I have in my hand here again this Government's Exhibit No. 205. I am reading now the first article that appears on the front page below the masthead there, below this "Issued by a group of longshoremen".

"What Does 'The News Letter' Mean?

"Like the rest of the stevedores we have signed up in the I.L.A. and paid the 50c. Like the rest of the stevedores we are fed up with the B.B. and have organized to finally smash it. It is now up to us to make the new union a real fighting weapon of the stevedores able and ready to win better wages and working conditions and to protect all our interests. To do this we ourselves must take control of our organization. The 'News Letter' issued by a self appointed executive board has convinced us that we must start doing this immediately. What does this letter contain? And what does it mean to us?"

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Do you want to change your testimony now, Mr. Bridges?

A. Not at all. Anybody that is familiar with the [5801] waterfront can just judging by that terminology alone—could see what complaint we had.

Q. You don't want to change it yet?

A. "Stevedore" is a word never used on the waterfront by anybody who works down there or everybody down there. That's one of the complaints we had. Any longshoremen any length of time on the waterfront reading that alone, that paragraph that you just read, would know that it was never put out or written by a longshoreman.

Q. Let me show you, then, Government's Exhibit No. 204, which is the June issue, June, 1933 issue of the Waterfront Worker, and on the masthead appears this "This paper is issued by a group of organized longshoremen. We acknowledge the help given us by the M.W.I.U.". Does that help you refresh your memory? A. Sure it does.

Q. Huh? A. It sure does.

Q. Do you now want to——

A. (Interposing) Sure! Some of the complaints we were raising began to work on these fellows and instead of putting the bulletin out in the name of the M.W.I.U. they began to put it out in the name of a group of longshoremen, but they still couldn't make a job of it.

Q. Now, your testimony was that you took over the [5802] Waterfront Worker after the Marine Workers Indust ial Union couldn't make a go of it?

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A. That's right.

Q. Huh? A. That's right.

Q. Nobody else had taken it over between that time and the time you had it? A. No.

Q. Did they? A. No, no.

Q. No group of longshoremen? A. No.

Q. Had taken it over before your group of longshoremen had taken it over, had they?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. Huh?

A. Not that I know of. My best recollection is that we took it over at the time of the October s[illegible]ke in 1933 and it had been out of business for a couple of months then. Now, if you have enough issues there you can follow them right down the line and see the issue. If you have got all the issues you will see the issue in there, the first issue we put out, where we explained what we were doing: That we were taking the paper over and it was going to be put out by a group of organized union longshoremen. Now, if you have [5803] got them all you have got that one, too.

Q. You would be surprised what we have got. You will get some more surprises before it is over. Now, I have here—excuse me, your Honor, for the remark. It was not said with any offense.

Now, I have here the August 15, 1933 issue of the Waterfront Worker. A. Yes.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Q. Did you have anything to do with it at that time?

A. The only way I can go by is if the masthead changed.

Q. Huh?

A. That is the only thing I can go by.

Q. Haven't you checked that between your testimony at the last hearing and your testimony now?

A. No. I have no way to positively check it. I have checked it the best way I was able to. But the best thing to go by is when the name on the masthead changed and that indicated a change in ownership.

Q. Would you say that you had nothing to do with it in August, 1933?

A. To the best of my recollection I did not.

Q. Let me show you this copy of the Waterfront Worker for——

A. (Interposing) No, we had nothing to do with it then. [5804]

Q. Huh?

A. We had nothing to do with it then.

Q. Let me call your attention here to the masthead here "Issued by a group of Longshoremen with the cooperation of the Marine Workers Industrial Union". Now, my voice is getting a little hoarse. Would you mind reading that article on the front page. [5805]

A. The article is headed "Tonight"—the article is headed "For the I.L.A. Meeting Tonight".

"Tonight the I.L.A. meets for the second time since its beginning here two months ago. What has the I.L.A. done for us in this two months? What has been done to immediately better the conditions on the waterfront?

"For Complete Rank and File Control in the I.L.A.!!

"For Immediate Organized Action Against the B.B.!!"

Q. Well, you recall your testimony here about this Albion Hall group? A. Yes.

Q. Huh? A. Yes.

Q. Now, having in mind your testimony regarding the Albion Hall group and this article that you have just read, would you say that you weren't connected with the Waterfront Worker at that time?

[5807]

A. Since reading the article now I am positive. And I can say why.

Mr. Del Guercio: I will offer——

The Witness (Interposing): We put out a leaflet along the same line.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Mr. Del Guercio: Wait a minute! I didn't ask you yet.

I will offer this Waterfront Worker for August 15, 1933, in evidence.

Things are daily happening on the Front. The waterfront is going to be astir from now on. Difference of opinion is going to be common. Fight it out in the Waterfront Worker.

The Mail Bag

HOLMAN & CO. AND THE B.B.

Dear Editor:

On August 7th a stevedore employed by the Matson S.S. Co. was ordered off Pier 32 by Capt. Russel and instructed not to return until he had paid up in the Blue Book. A demand was made upon Lee Holman and his associates by a number of interested stevedores that some action be taken, and support given to men who are being knocked off on account of not paying dues in the B. B.

Lee Holman's reply to this was for workers not to pay their dues in the B. B. That he would take the matter up with Rayn and Dept. of Justice. Stevedores are daily becoming more impatient with Holman and his policy of watchful waiting.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

A real leader would declare his policy so the workers would know what course to follow. The Matson Co. and other shipowners, if not curbed will knock off individually, men who refuse to pay up in the B. B. Stevedores will be intimated and forced to join the Blue Book.

It is now almost two months since Lee Holman appeared on the Waterfront and signed up men in the I.L.A., Men who signed up were promised a militant union: A union that would fight for their interests. When it comes to fighting for the interests of the workers, Lee Holman can't make a decision without his shadow, McNulty who has not been active on the Waterfront for many years.

Striking workers in the Eastern industrial belt during the past few months have had to develop leaders from the rank and file. Our way out is the same.

It [illegible] coming clear that militant and intelligent leadership cannot be expected from the old line AFL leaders and politicians.

A Waterfront Worker.

Editors Note: The writer shows a tendency to depend on a few "leaders". The sooner we forget about individual leaders and depend on ourselves, the better.

WHEN TWO OF A KIND BEATS A FULL HOUSE

Fellow Stevedores & Editor:

We all know how to play poker, but we don't all know how a membership meeting in our union should be carried out. I witnessed that at our first meeting in the Labor Temple on July 27th.

Once in a great while those of us who play poker see a deal where two of a kind beats a full house by bluffing. If the full house doesn't call the two of a kind, the full house loses. That is just what happened at our meeting.

We had a full house at the Labor Temple that night—Lee Holman and Tom Hern were the two of a kind. They bluffed and got away with it. Why didn't we call their bluff? Was it because they had two gunmen at the door or didn't we know how to carry out our meeting? I think we did not know how to carry out our meeting and hope that the Editor of the Waterfront Workers will explain in the next issue of the paper how a Union meeting should go about so the two of a kind won't have a chance of bluffing a full house again.

WATER CANS AND RATS

The water cans which the men use to drink from on pier 40 (McCormick) are old and rusted, and filthy with slime and scum. The Company is too busy piling up profits to have the cans scalded out or replaced with new ones. The cans are left in the hold at sea partly filled with water and as the holds are infested with rats it is not an uncommon occurance to find one or more of them drowned when the hatches are opened. It is time to take serious notice of this condition & take immediate active steps to remedy it. Unless something is done we can expect a virulent epidemic to set in.

UNDER BELOW
HUNGRY GUS AGAIN

By a correspondent

Recently on Pier 22 the gang was handling sugar —26 sacks on a flat ton (one ton)—Hungry Gus seeing that they could pull that hollered for 25 sacks.

Looks like if the gang don't take action soon, Hungry Gus's ambition will bellow for 30 sacks next.

TRITTON IN TROUBLE

By a correspondent

One of the McCormicks East Coast boats was working all night at Pier 40. Tom Tritton had a gang there with several more windbags like himself shouting and banging things trying to outnoise every thing else.

The ship had a high deckloas of lumber which they were discharging. The winch driver not able to see, sent a load of lumber crashing into a warehouse, tearing everything away before it glass and all. It was a grand spectacle to behold, to see the sling of lumber sailing thru the air. The Walker came along and sent Tritton home with his gang.

SAFETY SECOND

By a correspondent

In the SS Brookings and other vessels of the McCormick Line there are but two ladders for the four hatches—no bulkhead between No. 1 and No. 2 or between No. 3 & No. 4.

The shipowners have conceived this idea as a way to save a little steel and weight regardless of their jepardizing the lives of the men who are piling up their enormous profits.

When a vessel arrives at it's terminus the exit to the ladder in the adjoining hatch is blocked off with lumber or other cargo. In case of fire or of the ship taking a heavy list, the men working below would have little chance for escape—being caught like rats in a trap.

INTERNATIONAL NEWS

Stockholm, Aug. 10.—A strike of 90 sailors and 400 recruits in a barracks at the Swedish naval base at Kariskrona, in protest against bad food, was followed almost immediately by a strike of 800 more sailors in another barracks.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

All refused to drill until better food was guaranteed. The strike was won.

New York. Aug. 6—A cable from the International Seamen's and Harbor Workers' Union yesterday announcing that Polish seamen had gone out on strike and calling on the Marine Workers' Industrial Union to stop all Polish liners in port, was followed by a cable story announcing that the strikers had won all demands and gone back to work. The I. S. H., which is working illegally in Poland, has succeeded through leading a series of militant strikes in isolating the strike-breaking reformists and building democratically elected rank and file committees among the Polish seamen which have carried through many successful strikes.

Canton, China. Aug. 7—A boycott of the British owned China Navigation Company, biggest shipping firm in China, by striking seamen of Canton has completely tied up the company's docks. Picketing is so successful that the company's ships are not calling at Canton. Over $2,000,000 worth of goods is deteriorating in the warehouses.

AT LAST WE MEET

By a correspondent

With Leo Holman presiding the long delayed meeting of I. L. A. came to order July 27 at 8 P.M. & so to assure himself that said order would be maintained, Holman called upon S.F. police for help by having two officers stationed within the door, and not outside where they belonged as a member of the meeting pointed out from the start.

This motion however met with no approval from the chair for a mighty good reason as I saw a few minutes later. A member seconded the motion that a chairman be elected from the floor as suggested by the Waterfront Worker. Holman had him removed by the cops. Although I do not know the men myself, I ascertained that he has been working on the front for years and is well known.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

If such high hat methods are going to be used against any one who dares to voice an opinion contrary to the ideas of Holman I forsee a quick end to the enthusiasm and interest in the I.L.A. that now prevails on the front.

Another feature of the meeting that I have heard discussed with much ill feeling was the way that the two delegates for the Portland Convention were selected—(certainly not elected) Holman was nominated by T Hern to present the code at Portland and the latter was in turn nominated by Holman in the event that he(Holman) was unable to go. Both motions were rapidly carried—steamrollered I should say, in short order, without the customary question being put. I noticed at least four members who tried to get the floor at this time which was their absolute right, by all the rules of order, but the floor was denied to all for fear that the motion may have been exposed by debate and not carried. Holman was certainly afraid that some member would move that a delegate be elected from the rank and file, but by this method Holman secured the job for himself and T. Hern in face of a great deal of protest.

Viewed from the two main angles, wages and hours, the proposed code was all that could be desired. The dimensions of the loads was another mat ter. 20 cases of oil, 6 drums of oil & asphaltum, 60 & 40 cases of canned goods, etc. with only 8 men in the hold is no reduction on any dock except Matson or Swayne & Hoyt. Again no discussion was allowed nor did I hear the question of a list system with an accompanying flat rate for hour mentioned. The lat ter method found much favor among men on the front.

After waiting patiently, and being confident that something would be done, when hearing McNulty denounce the Blue Book and being told how the San Pedro men had run Scabby Peterson out, imagine my surprise whereupon it was moved that every man on the Waterfront who is a member of the ILA refuse to pay dues to the B.B. and said motion was seconded by three or four different members and also meeting with undisguised approval of the majority of the members present, the chairman had the adacity to adjurn the meeting thus sidetrack. ing one of the most important issues on the front today. Why was this important issue sidetracked? It was also too bad that the chair dared not to have the police throw out the member making this motion and so had to resort to the adjournment as a last resort. I gave the chair credit for quick thinking.

In conclusion I would urge all longshoremen attending the next meeting to see that the chair al lows a member to voice an opinion from the floor without his being thrown out, and so let all of us on the front have a say in such matters as 1. How big shall the loads be. 2. Who shall represent us at the conference. 3. How shall we combat the black-listing tactics of the Blue Book.

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

N R A COMES TO PIER 40

By a correspondent

Recently, while working on a McCormick vessel, the discharging load was three half rolls of new sprint paper on a board sling, making a hoist of some twenty one hundred pounds to a lift.

With his usual majestic display of authority, the dock captain came over to the hatch and ordered the size of the loads to be increased to six rolls.

Now the question arises, considering the fact that the McCormick Line is the first outfit on the front to display the NRA Blue Eagle flag,—is this what Roosevelt had in mind when he spoke so encouragingly to us of the New Deal.

The Sales Tax . . .

Rolph's veto of the income tax leaves no doubt the policy of the state government is to exempt the rich from taxation. As a matter of fact the 2½ % tax is closer to 7%. The average purchase that working class housewives make is far less than 59 cents

(Testimony of Harry Renton Bridges.)

Probably 3 pennies are drawn out of a worker thru 15 and 20 cent purchases for every 59 cents spent. The tax is the same as if the workers wages were cut, and it was quite fitting that it began on the very day when the Blue Eagle policy, supposedly a symbol of more wages went into effect. The tax is on top of increases in prices of products most commonly consumed by workers, averaging already at least 20%. As a matter of fact the NRA ballyhoo to date has only served as an excuse to increase prices and impose such taxes.
